

3 1761 11649942 7

CA1XC26

F59

Canada. Parliament House of Commons
Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic affairs.

Proceedings 1968-69, No. 1-22

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2023 with funding from University of Toronto

<https://archive.org/details/31761116499427>

150c
HOUSE OF COMMONS
First Session—Twenty-eighth Parliament

1968-69

NOV 13 1968

LIBRARY
GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS
UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

STANDING COMMITTEE

ON

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. GASTON CLERMONT

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

No. 1-22

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1968

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1968

Respecting

BILL C-101

An Act respecting London and Midland General Insurance Company.

WITNESSES:

Mr. David F. Alexandor, Parliamentary Agent; Mr. H. Humphrys, Superintendent of Insurance; Mr. H. P. Paterno, President, London and Midland General Insurance Company.

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
QUEEN'S PRINTER AND CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY
OTTAWA, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON
FINANCE, TRADE, AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. A. Gillespie
and Messrs.

Blair,
Breau,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
De Bané,
Downey,

Émard,
Flemming,
Gauthier,
Gray,
Hales,
Harkness,

Lambert (*Edmonton
West*),
Latulippe,
Roberts,
Saltsman,
Trudel—(20).

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

ORDERS OF REFERENCE

HOUSE OF COMMONS
TUESDAY, October 8, 1968.

Resolved,—That the following Members do compose the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs:

Messrs.

Blair,	Downey,	Harkness,
Breau,	Émard,	Lambert ( Edmonton
Burton,	Flemming,	West ),
Clermont,	Gauthier,	Latulippe,
Comtois,	Gillespie,	Roberts,
Danson,	Gray,	Saltsman,
De Bané,	Hales,	Trudel—(20).

TUESDAY, September 24, 1968.

Ordered,—That Bill C-101, An Act respecting London and Midland General Insurance Company, be referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

ATTEST

ALISTAIR FRASER,
The Clerk of the House of Commons.

REPORT TO THE HOUSE

THURSDAY, October 24, 1968.

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs has the honour to present its

FIRST REPORT

Your Committee has considered Bill C-101, An Act respecting London and Midland General Insurance Company, and has agreed to report it without amendment.

A copy of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence relating to this Bill (Issue No. 1) is tabled.

Respectfully submitted,

GASTON CLERMONT,
Chairman.

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

THURSDAY, October 10, 1968.

(1)

(Text)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 11:08 a.m. this day for purposes of organization.

Members present: Messrs. Blair, Breau, Burton, Clermont, Comtois, Danson, Downey, Émard, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Roberts, Saltsman and Trudel (15).

The Committee Clerk attending and having called for nominations, Mr. Gray, seconded by Mr. Trudel, moved that Mr. Clermont do take the Chair of this Committee as Chairman.

The motion was carried unanimously and Mr. Clermont, having been declared elected, took the Chair and thanked the Committee for the honour conferred upon him.

The Chairman paid tribute to the late Colin Cameron, who had been a faithful and active member of this Committee for many years.

On motion of Mr. Gray, seconded by Mr. Comtois.

Resolved,—That Mr. Gillespie be elected Vice-Chairman of this Committee.

On motion of Mr. Trudel, seconded by Mr. Comtois.

Resolved,—That nominations be closed.

The Chairman having declared Mr. Gillespie elected as Vice-Chairman, Mr. Gillespie thanked the members and promised to do his best to serve the Committee.

It was moved by Mr. Gray and seconded by Mr. Harkness that the Chairman, the Vice-Chairman and six members appointed by the Chairman do compose the Sub-Committee on Agenda and Procedure. After considerable discussion, the motion was carried.

In the general discussion which followed, the Chairman informed the Committee that a private bill, C-101, An Act respecting London and Midland Insurance Company, has been referred to the Committee. Other matters which it is expected will be referred to the Committee were also noted briefly.

At 11:35 a.m. the Committee adjourned to the call of the Chair, on motion of Mr. Comtois, seconded by Mr. Downey.

TUESDAY, October 22, 1968.

(2)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 11:08 a.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Blair, Breau, Burton, Clermont, Danson, Downey, Énard, Gauthier, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton West), Latulippe, Saltsman, Trudel (16).

In attendance: Mr. David F. Alexandor, Parliamentary Agent; Mr. R. Humphrys, Superintendent of Insurance; Representing London and Midland General Insurance Company: Mr. H. P. Paterno, President; Mr. Ralph Green, Vice-President and General Manager and Mr. F. W. Rhodes, Secretary.

The Chairman announced that, in addition to the Chairman and the Vice-Chairman, he has appointed the following to be members of the Sub-Committee on Agenda and Procedure:—Messrs. Comtois, Gray, Harkness, Lambert, Latulippe and Saltsman.

On motion of Mr. Harkness, seconded by Mr. Danson,

Resolved,—That the Committee print 750 copies in English and 350 copies in French of its Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence.

The Committee then proceeded to consideration of Bill C-101, An Act respecting London and Midland General Insurance Company.

On the preamble

The sponsor of the Bill, Mr. Lind, introduced the Parliamentary Agent, Mr. Alexandor and the witnesses. Mr. Alexandor made a statement concerning the purpose of the Bill.

Messrs. Paterno, Rhodes and Humphrys were questioned.

The preamble, clauses 1 and 2, the title and the bill were carried.

Ordered,—That the Chairman report the bill without amendment.

At 12:00 noon the Committee adjourned until 11:00 a.m. on Thursday, October 24, 1968.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Tuesday, 22 October 1968

• 1110

• 1109

The Chairman: Gentlemen, I see a quorum.

After consultation last week with the whips of the different parties represented on this Committee, here are the following members on the Steering Committee: Mr. Comtois, Mr. Gray, Mr. Harkness, Mr. Lambert, Mr. Latulippe, Mr. Saltzman as well as the president and the vice-president.

I will now receive a recommendation for the number of copies to be printed in English and in French. We have received a suggestion from the Speaker of the House of Commons that the number should be 750 in English and 350 in French.

I ask for a formal motion in this respect.

Mr. Harkness: I so move.

Mr. Danson: I second the motion.

Motion agreed to.

The Chairman: The third item is Bill C-101, An Act respecting London and Midland General Insurance Company. The sponsor of the bill is our colleague, Mr. James Lind. Will Mr. Lind introduce the parliamentary agent and the witnesses?

Mr. Harkness: Do we have copies of the bill?

The Chairman: Yes, sir.

Mr. Lind: Mr. Chairman, I would like to introduce to the Committee Mr. H. P. Paterno, the president of the company. Mr. Paterno, would you like to take a seat? The vice-president and general manager is Mr. Ralph Green, the solicitor for the company is Mr. F. W. Rhodes and Mr. David Alexandor is the solicitor who is handling it at the Ottawa end.

The Chairman: That bill came before our Committee last year and it was reported to the House of Commons, but it was not approved by the House of Commons. Does the parliamentary agent have any statement to make?

Mr. David F. Alexandor (Parliamentary Agent): Mr. Chairman, the sole purpose of this bill is to seek a change of name of the company. By way of explaining the corporate structure of the company, I would point out that Delta Acceptance Corporation Limited was incorporated as a public company under the laws of Ontario by letters patent dated March 26, 1954. In July of 1962 Delta Acceptance Corporation Limited acquired the whole of the outstanding share capital of London and Midland General Insurance Company, a company which was incorporated by an act of Parliament, on July 17, 1947, under the name of the Progressive Insurance Company of Canada and which subsequently changed its name to London and Midland General Insurance Company by an act of Parliament on April 12, 1957. Subsequently Delta Acceptance Corporation Limited changed its name to Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited.

London and Midland General Insurance Company carries on a general insurance business in most of the provinces of Canada. The main reason for the proposed change of name is that it is the policy of the parent company to foster a sense of cohesion amongst all its subsidiary organizations by arranging for the word "Avco" to appear in the corporate titles of the various companies in the group.

In addition to London and Midland General Insurance Company the following companies are also subsidiaries of Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited. Avco C.F.C. Limited which was formerly C.F.C. Finance Corporation Limited, Avco Delta Dominion Limited which was formerly Delta Acceptance Canada Limited, Avco Delta Quebec Limited, which was formerly called D.A.C. (Quebec) Ltd., Avco Finance Limited, which was formerly The Crescent Finance Corporation Limited, Avco Highland Plan Limited, which was formerly called Highland Trial Plan Limited, Avco Delta Realty Limited, which was formerly Grand Prairie Investments Limited, Adanac General Insurance Company of Canada, Avco Delta Realty, Manitoba, Limited, which was formerly called The North West Mortgage and Finance Company Limited, Consolidated Finance Western Limited, Empire Acceptance Corporation Limited, General Finance Company Limited, Lorne-Bruce Motors Limited and Waverly Finance Company Limited.

This latter company is presently making application for a change of name to Avco Security Canada Limited.

Since Adanac General Insurance Company of Canada conducts a very limited operation, this Company may be wound up in due course.

Mr. Blair: Which company is that, Mr. Alexandor?

Mr. Alexandor: That is Adanac General Insurance Company of Canada.

Four out of the last five companies named which were Consolidated Finance Western Limited, Empire Acceptance Corporation Limited, General Finance Company Limited and Lorne-Bruce Motors Limited are non-operating and it is intended to wind most of them up in the near future pending, for example, the distribution of a designated surplus, the maturing of debentures and the transferring of any old business still remaining. One or two of these companies are just corporate shells. Therefore, in effect, there are ten companies in this group which are operating at this time. All of these ten operating companies bear the name "Avco" in their corporate name except for Adanac General Insurance Company of Canada and London and Midland General Insurance Company.

I would like to point out that prior to the change of name of Delta Acceptance Corporation Limited to Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited that Company became an almost wholly owned subsidiary of Avco Delta Corporation which is a Delaware company. This occurred in 1964. In turn, Avco Delta Corporation is a wholly owned subsidiary of Avco Corporation of New York. There is one other Canadian company using the name "Avco" which is not a subsidiary of what we call the parent company, Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited. There is a company called Avco of Canada Limited. This company is a subsidiary of Avco Corporation of New York. In other words, the ultimate American parent. As I point out it is not related directly, but there is a very indirect relationship.

• 1115

The company's desire to change the name of London and Midland General Insurance Company has to some extent been enhanced by virtue of the publicity given to the insolvency in the United Kingdom of an insurance company, entirely unconnected with the applicant, but bearing the same name. One further reason for this application is that there are a considerable number of insurance companies in Canada bearing the word "London" as part of the corporate name.

By way of explanation of the ownership of the company, London and Midland General Insurance Company is a wholly owned subsidiary of Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited. Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited is almost wholly owned by its U.S. parent. Approximately 99 per cent of the outstanding share capital is owned by the U.S. parent. However, there still are approximately 1,800 Series A first preference shares and 42,000 Series D first preference shares of Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited which are outstanding in the hands of the Canadian public. Notwithstanding this ownership I believe the Committee should be aware that eight out of the nine directors of London and Midland are Canadian citizens and more than 50 per cent of the directors of Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited are Canadian citizens.

I would also bring to your attention that apart from Adanac and London and Midland there are no other insurance companies related to this group and when I say this group I am talking about the American parents and, therefore, the management policies of London and Midland are formulated and administered in Canada. As far as the investments are concerned, of course, these are fairly tightly regulated by Canadian legislation, but more than 75 per cent of the funds on deposit or on hand in the hands of London and Midland General Insurance Company are invested in Canadian securities.

Gentlemen, this is all the information I can give you. However, Mr. Paterno as President of London and Midland General Insurance Company, and President of Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited, Mr. Green as Vice-President of London and Midland General Insurance Company and General Manager of London and Midland General Insurance Company and Mr. Rhodes as Secretary of both London and Midland General Insurance Company and its parent, are prepared to answer any questions which you may wish to put.

Thank you.

The Chairman: We also have present with us Mr. R. Humphrys, Superintendent of Insurance. I will ask Mr. Humphrys to come to the table here.

Mr. R. Humphrys (Superintendent of Insurance): May I speak from here, Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: No, Mr. Humphrys, you have to come to the table. Would you care to make any comments on the application, Mr. Humphrys?

Mr. Humphrys: Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, the department has no objection to the proposed change of name. We have had a search of names registered with the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and we find no indication that this name would raise any conflict with existing names of insurance companies or companies in closely allied lines of business. I have nothing further to add to the comments that have been given by Mr. Alexandor.

• 1120

Mr. Harkness: What does "Avco" stand for?

Mr. Alexandor: It is an abbreviation of aviation companies and through the years has sort of dwindled down to Avco, an abbreviation then later adapted as the name for Avco Corporation in New York.

Mr. Lambert: Since the only matter that remains before us deals with the change of name and in the light of Mr. Humphrys' statement, is there on file a consent to the use of the name "Avco" by the related company, the other subsidiary in another chains that is owned by the parent company in the United States?

This is something that some registrars of companies always ask for and sometimes it is better to have it on file and then there is absolutely no question at some later date of any conflict or potential conflict.

Mr. F. W. Rhodes (Secretary, London and Midland General Insurance Company): I think I could answer that, Mr. Chairman. It is absolutely correct that consents are called for. The number of consents called for by the government departments seems to vary from application to application, but consents were undoubtedly asked for in this case and all those that were asked for were filed and any more that any department might want could easily be secured.

Mr. Lambert: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Gillespie: I am wondering about the nature of Avco's business. There is a list here of finance companies; there has been a manufacturing company mentioned and we are dealing here with a general insurance company. Could you tell us something about the over-all Avco Corporation itself and how its various interests divide between insurance, finance and manufacturing, and if there are any others, what they are?

Mr. H. P. Paterno (President, London and Midland General Insurance Company): Of course Avco Corporation, the parent company in New York, has become something along the lines that we now call a conglomerate to a very great extent, and the different types of manufacturing and businesses that it is in are very broad.

It starts with engines and airplane parts for both military and the new air bus and things of that nature, to research and development—quite extensively research and development—including the mechanical heart. One of our Avco research and development groups did the second heart transplant in the United States and in the world. It is also involved in ordnance, appliances, broadcasting.

In research it has the great piece of the re-entry vehicle which, incidentally, splashed down today. Part of that is part of Avco's research and development group. And of course it has very extensive financial holdings in such things as the Credit Card Company and Carte Blanche, savings and loan companies, the Avco-Delta group, which is 40 per cent in Canada and 60 per cent in the United States and which encompasses small loan companies, several life companies in the United States, automobile finance companies, home improvement finance companies and all related companies in the financial area.

In addition it owns Moffats, a manufacturer of appliances very heavily engaged in commercial appliances for apartment houses and commercial kitchens in Canada. It is also engaged in and owns Avco New Idea Farm Equipment Co., which manufactures farm equipment at Coldwater, Ohio, and Fort Dodge, and has a system of distributorships and dealers throughout Canada as well as the United States.

The financial area is pretty much under the Avco-Delta group of companies. The only casualty insurance company that Avco owns is London and Midland General Insurance Company at the present time. That is just touching on it. I am sure I have missed on several other areas, but that pretty much takes in the group of companies.

• 1125

Mr. Gillespie: With all due respect to single identification, related just to this group of companies, the insurance and finance companies?

Mr. Paterno: No, this is part of an over-all program that Avco instituted itself two years ago. It was brought about by the problem of motivating all of its employees and indicating to its employees that it was part of a very solidly built company. It was an attempt to give each employee throughout both Canada and the United States and several international areas, the feeling that they were part of a family, of a group, because with the acquisition of companies through the years the names no longer indicated any adherence to an over-all group. This is what instigated the move primarily.

The Chairman: Are there any other questions, gentlemen? Mr. Saltzman.

Mr. Saltzman: I was wondering if within the conglomerate there was the tendency to place this insurance with your agency. For instance, are the various companies within the conglomerate directed to place their insurance with the London and Midland?

Mr. Paterno: The amount of business that London and Midland derives from—

Mr. Saltzman: Would you like me to repeat that question?

The Chairman: I would suggest, gentlemen, that you address yourselves to the speaker because otherwise it is very hard to distinguish.

Mr. Saltzman: Do the members of your conglomerate place their insurance with the London and Midland General Insurance Company?

Mr. Paterno: The amount of business that London and Midland derives from other Avco-oriented companies is practically nil. All of the business that London and Midland is doing now—98 to 99 per cent of it—is the result of business that we obtained through an agency system throughout Canada.

Mr. Saltzman: Even though it may represent a small portion, do you direct your other companies to place their insurance with London and Midland?

Mr. Paterno: As of this point we have not. There would be very little of it if we so desired.

Mr. Saltzman: Could you tell me something about your investment policy? For instance, how do you collect your funds and where do you invest your funds?

Mr. Paterno: Our entire portfolio is under the jurisdiction of Fry and Company Limited which is a Canadian consulting firm that invests for you so that it is under management consultants in that regard.

Mr. Saltzman: Just a question to clear this up. Do you own this management consulting firm?

Mr. Paterno: No, we do not.

Mr. Saltzman: They are independent; they advise you.

Mr. Paterno: That is correct.

Mr. Saltzman: In other words they advise you how to invest your funds, but the responsibility for the investment of the funds is still yours.

Mr. Paterno: Of course, it is always ours.

The Chairman: Are there any more questions, gentlemen?

Mr. Paterno: I am going to add a little to that. The primary thing that dictates the investments is the requirement under the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act, which is quite comprehensive, which limits the amount of investments that may be made in any one area or a percentage of the company, things of that nature. That is the primary policy maker for the investment portfolio of any insurance company.

We try to spread our risks and our investments as best we can, keeping in mind that the number of areas where we would like to put more money are not allowed under the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act. Of course, this is for the protection of our policy holders, and something that we follow very, very closely.

I might add that in addition to our portfolio being 75 per cent invested in Canada securities, we have just recently made a $600,000 commitment in the NHA mortgage area.

Mr. Saltzman: So 75 per cent of your investments are in Canadian securities. Is that correct?

Mr. Paterno: That is correct.

Mr. Saltzman: And the remainder of 25 per cent is in what?

Mr. Paterno: It is in other international companies outside of Canada, predominantly in the U.S.A.

• 1130

Mr. Saltzman: How much of your capital is raised in Canada?

Mr. Paterno: I need an explanation of what you mean by that.

Mr. Saltzman: How much of your funds are accumulated here in Canada?

Mr. Paterno: For investment purposes?

Mr. Saltzman: For investment purposes.

Mr. Paterno: Oh, that would come from the policy holders money which would come from Canada.

Mr. Saltzman: So all your funds come from Canadian policy holders. And 75 per cent is invested in Canadian securities, 25 per cent in international.

Mr. Paterno: That is correct.

Mr. Saltzman: May I ask you this. There has been some criticism recently of the thinness of the Canadian market for stocks. A recent report of York University pointed out there were not sufficient stocks in Canada. What is your experience in this regard? Do you find any shortage of investments here in Canada?

Mr. Paterno: Yes, we do. That is one thing we have to keep in mind. When we start to deal in large numbers—and we are talking about a portfolio here of $12,600,000, and with that other $600,000 it will be in excess of $13,000,000—we must spread our risks for the benefit of the policy holders and just plain prudence. And the number of, for example equities, particularly the equity area, that you can entertain to any great degree is reasonably limited in Canada. We still find, though, that there is a sufficient amount to get a reasonable spread. In other words we have been successful in investing 75 per cent here without great difficulty.

Mr. Saltzman: Perhaps you can see the point of my question. Canada is supposed to be a capital-short country that tends to import a great deal of capital, and it is natural, I think, that there should be some concern expressed over raising capital in Canada and having 25 per cent of it invested elsewhere, even though it may be advantageous from the company's point of view.

Now the question that I would like to ask you is this. Is it possible for a company like yours to invest in this country all the capital you raise in this country? In other words, is it possible to invest here the capital you accumulate in this country?

Mr. Paterno: That is what we have done in the last several years. This portfolio three or four years ago was only $4 million to $5 million in size. It has now grown to $13 million, and we have been successful in investing it here.

Let me make one other point now. Of that present $13 million portfolio, $4 million is contributed surplus and surplus which came from the parent company.

Mr. Saltzman: Has your ratio of Canadian investments to American or international investments changed over the years, or have you maintained this ratio over a period of time? For instance, you were indicating to me that you are investing a great deal more in Canada. This, of course, may simply be a feature of your success, that you are accumulating a great deal more. What I am interested in is: have you changed your ratio of investments? Have you increased it or decreased it as against a few years ago?

Mr. Paterno: I am afraid I do not have those figures, and I hesitate to answer without knowing accurately just whether there has been a major change or not. I doubt whether there has been a major change.

Mr. Saltzman: Well, thank you Mr. Chairman, and thank you gentlemen.

The Chairman: Any more questions?

Mr. Hales: May I ask a supplementary question Mr. Chairman? Why do you not invest all your earnings in Canada?

Mr. Paterno: I think to do it at this stage of the game would be forcing us into—let me make my point this way. The shortage of capital revolves around new capital, which is very high risk capital for those corporations and endeavours that are new. Now the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act prohibits us from investing in any company that does not have a record of having paid dividends for five previous years, or so many years out of the last five, five of the last seven. So we are very severely restricted against investing in that particular area.

Mr. Hales: In other words, you have to abide by the regulations laid down by the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act.

Mr. Paterno: In some areas, yes, that is correct. In addition, we sort of put a limit on the amount of money we will put into any one investment as a precautionary move.

• 1135

Mr. Hales: May I ask another question Mr. Chairman: Has the London and Midland General Insurance Company offices in the Province of Quebec?

Mr. Paterno: Yes, we do.

Mr. Hales: What percentage of your business in Canada would come from there?

Mr. Green: About 33 per cent.

Mr. Hales: About one-third. Do you feel that the change of name is going to assist you in doing business in Quebec?

Mr. Green: I do not think it will have very much effect one way or the other.

The Chairman: Mr. Burton.

Mr. Burton: Mr. Chairman, I wanted to ask one or two further questions with regard to investments, and investment policy. I noted that the total investments in Canada, as I understood, amounted to about $13 million. On what basis do you decide what industries or what investments you are going to make? What is the basis for your decisions?

Mr. Paterno: Well, we pretty much leave that to our consulting firm.

Mr. Burton: I see, and could you give any breakdown of what industries or what areas of the economy you have your investments in?

Mr. Paterno: Let us see. Seven per cent are in cash or one year maturities which would be heavily invested in government treasury bills. In addition to that another 9.6 per cent in Government of Canada securities; roughly 7 per cent in provincial or guaranteed provincial securities; 2 per cent in other municipal or parochial securities; 14 per cent in corporations, and an additional 18½ per cent in corporations in the form of convertibles; these would be predominantly convertible bonds. Five per cent in preferred stocks, and an additional 15 per cent in convertible or participating preferred stocks, and 21 per cent in common stocks.

The type of industries that we are in would be aerospace, less than 1 per cent; agricultural equipment, 1 per cent; automation equipment, 2.4 per cent; automotive equipment, 3.4 per cent; banking and trust, 5.3 per cent; beverages, 1.4; building materials, roughly 1 per cent; chemicals, 1.36 per cent; construction, 1.25; electronics, 3 per cent; food, both distributors and things of that nature, 6 per cent investment companies themselves, which would be trust companies and things of that nature, 10 per cent; merchandising, 13.4 per cent; metals and mining, 5.1 per cent; oil and gas, 8.5 per cent; pipelines, 4.2 per cent; real estate, 6.78 per cent; recreation, 3.3 per cent; secondary manufacturing, 4 per cent; textiles 4.67 per cent; tobacco, 1 per cent; transportation, 1.4 per cent; utilities, 8.3 per cent; and miscellaneous, about 2.4 per cent. So there is a pretty good spread here of all of the things that we possibly can invest in.

Mr. Burton: I imagine we could obtain a copy of the company's most recent balance sheet through government agencies.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, may I raise a point of order here?

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert: I am concerned about the procedure we are following in this Committee on a straight name change. We are going into a corporate group's whole modus of operation which is quite irrelevant to the question before us. If we were incorporating this company, and we were seeing what it was, then I would say the questions with regard to operations and financing and so forth were germane, but, with the greatest respect to the gentlemen asking the questions, they are not germane to this discussion at all. The fact that you open a bill merely to change a name does not bring the whole kit and caboodle before us for examination. I would suggest that we confine ourselves to that.

• 1140

The Chairman: Yes, I was going to call this to the members' attention. You will note it is a very, very short bill, only to change the titles.

Mr. Saltzman: Mr. Chairman, on that point of order, I think it has been traditional and it has been accepted both in committee and in the House that when a bill of a company comes before committee or the House any questions a member may think are pertinent, from his point of view, are permitted. Any points he may think are pertinent are raised during those discussions. It has not been my experience that there has been any limitation on questions or discussion when a bill is before committee or before the House.

Mr. Lambert: The hon. gentleman has missed out on a lot in the past.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman I think that the rules of relevance are not abandoned here—

The Chairman: Mr. Gray will you address yourself to the microphone.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I do not think the rules of relevance are abandoned merely because we are considering a bill pertaining to a private company. In fact to some extent a standing committee, for purposes of deciding its rules of order is supposed to look at the rules followed in Committee of the Whole House. If I am not mistaken, perhaps Mr. Lambert with his experience could confirm or modify this, there is a stricter rule of relevance in Committee of the Whole House than there is in other forms of debate. As I understand, it therefore means that questions and comment, once you are in the equivalent of Committee of the Whole House, really must be rather strictly related to the clause that is being considered at the particular moment.

Now at the present time we are, I think, on the preamble. In fairness to the two gentlemen who have been asking most of the questions I think one could say that one could go slightly beyond the question of whether the name itself should be changed. Whether this means that any member can ask any question he likes, which is what Mr. Saltzman seems to be saying, I think is another matter. If Mr. Saltzman is right he can ask these gentlemen what they had for breakfast or what their views are on who is going to win the world series next year and so on, which is not, I think, what Parliament is asking us to do when we consider bills of this type.

The Chairman: Have you any more questions, Mr. Burton?

Mr. Burton: Yes, on the point of order. This is the first time I have served on a House of Commons Committee and it seems to me that it would be rather ludicrous if, in fact, in the examination of this bill before us we were restricted to an examination of the mechanical feature of the bill which is to request a change in the name. When you bring this bill before the Committee asking to change the name of the company I think it inevitably involves an examination of whatever questions the Committee may like to ask regarding the operations of the company and its continued existence under a new name. The gentlemen from the company were asked to make a statement to the Committee with relation to some of the affairs of the company. I want to compliment the officials who did make the statement on the information they voluntarily and quite willingly provided to the Committee. It seems to me that if we are asked to consider a matter such as the change in name of the company and the implications involved in this, we have some responsibility and some right to be able to examine some of the affairs of the company.

Mr. Lambert: I would like to make a comment since I raised the point. To argue that point all the way through, then every time there is a bill amending one section before the House—it is no different here than it is before the House—the argument as put forward would indicate that you would examine the whole bill—the whole law as it stands—and, of course, that is patently wrong. Therefore, we are examining here just item one of the bill that incorporated this company and I would put it to you Mr. Chairman, that that is our purpose. The information that has been given and is being asked is very interesting, but not germane to this particular purpose.

• 1145

Mr. Danson: Mr. Chairman, I want to preface my remarks with some of the remarks that Mr. Lambert has made that a lot of this questioning has nothing to do with the actual change in name. I think that the questions with reference to that have been quite well handled and Mr. Paterno has been very helpful to us.

I am new to this House and to parliamentary committees—I am just a businessman trying to become a politician—but a lot of the things that we will be discussing I would think would be in the range of investment and while there would be no obligation on Mr. Paterno's part or anyone to deal with these questions, I think they are very helpful to us, as a Committee, in gaining background. Certainly the Chair should rule on this sort of thing. So that it may be helpful to us in further discussions. I find, as a member of the Committee, this type of information rather helpful and I have some further questions more or less along these lines.

Mr. Lambert: I can go into the whole of the finance business. If you want to carry it that far I could ask the witnesses how they are conducting their financial operations and so forth and so on. It then would become interminable.

The Chairman: Were you finished, Mr. Burton?

Mr. Burton: I was just going to ask, Mr. Chairman, if the officials of the company would be prepared to lay before the Committee a copy of their most recent annual financial statement.

Mr. Paterno: Certainly, certainly.

Mr. Burton: Could I ask, Mr. Chairman—I could move the motion if necessary—to have this balance sheet printed as an appendix to the proceedings for this day?

Mr. Paterno: I would be very happy to. I might add that we are very much aware of the requirement—I call it a requirement, a personal requirement—to be good corporate citizens. I am a Canadian citizen; I am the president of the company. Being a good corporate citizen is not something that we talk about; we practice it and it is uppermost in our minds at all times.

Mr. Burton: I appreciate hearing that statement from an official of the company, Mr. Chairman. I just want to ask one further question. Has the company, either at a board of directors meeting or a shareholders meeting ever considered the code of good corporate citizenship that was publicized and set out by a former Minister of Trade and Commerce, Mr. Winters?

Mr. Paterno: Yes, we signed and returned that pledge. That was about a year ago.

An hon. Member: That was for motherhood and against sin.

The Chairman: It was moved by Mr. Burton that the financial statement of the company be printed as an appendix to these proceedings. Is it the wish of this Committee that this be done?

Mr. Lambert: I say, Mr. Chairman, it is not germane to this discussion; it is irrelevant and out of order and, therefore, I would oppose merely on that ground. I am trying to establish here a line of conduct for this coming year. It is not that I want to hold up these people or anything like that, but the appropriate place to bring this up is when a business is being incorporated—that is fine—but under this type of thing, no.

Mr. Saltzman: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Saltzman.

Mr. Saltzman: If the officials are willing to give this information then why are some of the members of this Committee not agreeable? I think the company realizes—I am very pleased to see that they do—that unless the Committee does get information there is always the possibility it is going to get hung up in the House. I really am pleased that the company is willing to give the Committee this information even though there may be some question of the exact relationship of this information to the bill itself. It is important to this Committee, it is important to the work this Committee is doing and I congratulate the company for their co-operation.

Mr. Danson: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate this co-operation too, but I doubt very much if some of the information we are discussing really has much relevance to the change of name. To ask that these be attached as an appendix to the report, I think, is irrelevant and is setting a bad precedent, too.

The Chairman: We had a motion, but it was opposed. Does this committee wish to vote on it or what? Do we decide it that way?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, may I offer a compromise suggestion? Why cannot copies of this financial report be...

The Chairman: ...distributed to the members of this Committee...

Mr. Gray: ...distributed to the members of the Committee? It is not necessary to have it printed.

The Chairman: If they wish.

• 1150

Mr. Gray: If this information is readily available and the company is quite willing to make it available then it could be distributed in the usual way without it being printed. I might just add that there are occasions when discussion of the corporate structure—the corporate relationships—of a firm are necessary to help the Committee come to a decision even in a matter of a change of name, but I would again repeat what I said before that a bill simply calling for a change of name does not give us the opportunity, under our terms of reference, to cover the whole gambit of the operations of the company even though this may be interesting and even though it may be useful under some other type of formal order of reference in learning more about the operations of this or other industries.

The Chairman: Mr. Gillespie on a point of order or on the...

Mr. Gillespie: Perhaps I could introduce my particular point through the point of order route. My concern is that I do not think we are talking only about a change of name. When you are changing a name to that of a very large corporation it seems to me that if this company is to be known as the Avco General Insurance Company it is going to carry a rather different reputation in many quarters. It is going to be regarded as a very much stronger corporation than it might have been when it was known as the London and Midland General Insurance Company. Therefore, for that reason I think it is important that we should know something about its assets. I think it is also important that we should have some comment from its president as to what responsibility, if any, the parent feels for the obligations of its subsidiary because I do not think there is any question that this company under a new name will be trading on this particular name, it being a part of a very large corporate group.

I would like to ask two questions, the first one of Mr. Humphrys.

The Chairman: I think we should settle...

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, perhaps we should settle this question before we start.

The Chairman: We will have to settle this first, Mr. Gillespie.

Mr. Gray: May I again offer my compromise suggestion regarding the balance sheet of the company or the annual report?

The Chairman: Mr. Gray, I was going to ask Mr. Burton if he would be agreeable to your suggestion.

Mr. Burton: I would be agreeable to that suggestion, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Is it agreeable to the members of this Committee that a financial statement be supplied to the members?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Gillespie: I will ask my two questions. First, to Mr. Humphrys, is there a precedent for this sort of request for a change of name from the name which has been associated entirely with an insurance company to a name identified with a very large conglomerate group? Perhaps after Mr. Humphrys has answered I could put my second question to the president, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Humphrys: Yes, there are precedents to this type of action, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Gillespie: The second question is, would the president comment on the value he feels that the company may earn as the result of its association with a large conglomerate?

Mr. Paterno: Of course, the first benefit to come from this is that we were severely embarrassed about 12 or 15 years ago when London and Midland General Insurance Company of London, England went into bankruptcy. In addition to many questions from some of our agents and some of our policy-holders we do feel, although it is very difficult to measure, that we lost some business as a result. That is one of the primary things. Yes we do wish to change the name in order to change the connotation. It puts it together with the Avco group of companies which is a very much stronger group. I do not think there is any question that the parent's obligation is much stronger than if the company were by itself. The financial resources available to the stronger parent are a great asset—a great asset—not only from a connotation to the public by using our company for its insurance needs, but also with the company's members of this Committee...

We have had several instances where the parent company has had investments in companies or acquired companies where the financial network and the management and financial strength were either severely impaired or in question, and the resources available to the subsidiaries under these circumstances of having a parent group were brought to bear and we were able to change the company around, make it a more solidly-managed company, and improve the financial condition of the company.

• 1155

In fact, London and Midland is a great example of that. When we acquired the company—and this goes back, I believe, to 1961 or 1960—it had a deficit in its surplus account in excess of a million dollars. We have very fortunately, as of the end of September, been able to erase that deficit, and I believe that finally we have got it down to $53,000, so this type of situation, I think, does lend great strength to it.

Mr. Gillespie: I think it is particularly important in view of certain things that have happened in this area amongst certain rather small conglomerates in Canada. There is a company that recently has been appearing on the front pages of business publications, in trouble, some of the companies are in this group.

Mr. Paterno: Of course, it is a very good point. Another point I thought of and failed to mention is that there are several companies that are on the weak side and have been, and have recently failed, and we feel that we have benefits to be derived here by changing the name to indicate the strength that is there.

Mr. Benson: Mr. Chairman, I think this brings back the question of relevance, then, because when you speak about using the Avco name, which is a highly regarded and respected name, we have had an experience where a great name like the Rock of Gibraltar was used and there was not a relationship. People assumed a relationship between Prudential and Prudential and here the question of financial stability becomes a matter of real concern.

The Chairman: Mr. Gray?

Mr. Gray: I have a point if Mr. Gillespie will permit me. I think Mr. Gillespie has shown us how questions about corporate structure, corporate relationships, can and should be related to the question of change of name. It is a rather different thing from a general inquiry into the corporate policies and attitudes of either the parent or the subsidiary in question. I think Mr. Gillespie has been most helpful in showing us how. The type of questions he has been asking are most cogent and most germane to the issues before us in this bill and in similar bills.

The Chairman: Mr. Saltzman.

Mr. Saltzman: I would like to ask a number of questions regarding US guidelines and their effect on the company. Is your parent subject to the US guidelines on foreign assessment?

Mr. Paterno: Yes, in some areas.

Mr. Saltzman: Last fall, during the balance of payments difficulties in the United States, do you have any information about whether your parent received requests to repatriate earnings from Canada?

Mr. Paterno: I cannot answer that. I really do not know. Not only was there no movement of funds from Canada to the US year, but throughout the last half dozen years there has been a great deal of movement of funds the other way. As President of Avco Delta, I am President of Avco Delta, the parent US company, also. It has not even been mentioned. We have had no pressures applied to us to transfer funds or move funds from Canada to the US. In essence, we moved some 20-odd million dollars up there last year.

Mr. Saltzman: From the United States?

Mr. Paterno: From the United States, yes.

Mr. Saltzman: This is in addition to the premiums you collected in Canada?

Mr. Paterno: Yes.

Mr. Saltzman: Fine, thank you.

The Chairman: Mr. Burton?

Mr. Burton: Mr. Chairman, I want to direct a question to Mr. Humphrys. What criteria does he have to examine and satisfy himself on before he could come before this Committee and state that his branch has no objections to the change in name?

The Chairman: Mr. Humphrys?

Mr. Humphrys: Mr. Chairman, we follow the practice of having a search made in the records of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in an attempt to locate and identify all companies that have a name that is at all similar to any name that is proposed for a change such as this. We obtain this search list, and if there are companies that have a name so similar as would be likely to or possibly cause confusion or difficulty we would ask the persons proposing the name to consult with these other companies to obtain their consent if there were a possibility of dispute, and if the companies are not in the same line of business and if the possibility of dispute has been so set aside, we feel that we could come before the Committee and say that the Department does not object to the proposed change of name.

If there is a possibility of conflict in name where the public might be confused, we would attempt to have the applicants select some other name. We try to follow two courses: one is to look at it from the public's point of view to see whether there would be confusion, whether there is consent or not, and from the other point of view we try to make sure that there will not be any dispute on the part of any companies that have a similar name.

Preamble carried.

Clauses 1 and 2 carried.

Title carried.

Bill carried.

The Chairman: Shall I report the Bill without amendment?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Thank you very much, gentlemen. For the members, our next meeting will be on Thursday, and we will start on the White Paper on anti-dumping. Mr. Grey will be the first witness.

I ask the members of the steering committee to stay for a while.

Mr. Gray: Are you referring to Mr. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance?

The Chairman: That is right. The meeting will take place at the same time but in Room 308.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF MINUTES
OF
PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

This edition contains the English deliberations and/or a translation into English of the French.

Copies and complete sets are available to the public by subscription to the Queen's Printer. Cost varies according to Committees.

Translations under the direction of the Bureau for Translations, Secretary of State.

ALISTAIR FRASER,
The Clerk of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS
First Session—Twenty-eighth Parliament
1968

---

STANDING COMMITTEE
ON
FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. GASTON CLERMONT

---

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE
No. 2

---

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1968

---

Respecting
WHITE PAPER ON ANTI-DUMPING

Including
APPENDIX A

Article XIX, General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

---

WITNESS:

Mr. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance.

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
QUEEN'S PRINTER AND CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY
OTTAWA, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON
FINANCE, TRADE, AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. A. Gillespie

and Messrs.

Blair,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
Downey,
Émard,

Flemming,
Gauthier,
<sup>1</sup> Givens,
<sup>2</sup> Gleave,
Gray,
Hales,

Harkness,
Lambert (Edmonton
West),
Latulippe,
<sup>3</sup> Perrault,
Roberts,
Trudel—20.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

<sup>1</sup> Replaced Mr. Breau, October 23, 1968.

<sup>2</sup> Replaced Mr. Saltsman, October 23, 1968.

<sup>3</sup> Replaced Mr. De Bané, October 23, 1968.

ORDERS OF REFERENCE

THURSDAY, October 10, 1968.

Ordered,—That the White Paper on Anti-Dumping tabled on September 20, 1968, be referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

WEDNESDAY, October 23, 1968.

Ordered,—That the names of Messrs. Givens, Gleave and Perrault be substituted for those of Messrs. Breau, Saltsman and De Bané on the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

ATTEST:

ALISTAIR FRASER,
The Clerk of the House of Commons.

REPORT TO THE HOUSE

THURSDAY, October 24, 1968.

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs has the honour to present its

SECOND REPORT

Your Committee recommends that it be authorized to sit while the House is sitting.

Respectfully submitted,

GASTON CLERMONT,
Chairman.

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

THURSDAY, October 24, 1968.

(3)

(Text)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 11.15 a.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Blair, Burton, Clermont, Comtois, Danson, Emard, Flemming, Givens, Gillespie, Gleave, Gray, Hales, Lambert (Edmonton West), Perrault, Trudel—(15).

Also present: Messrs. Alexander and Douglas.

In attendance: Mr. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance and Mr. C. D. Arthur, International Economic Relations Division, Department of Finance.

Also in attendance: From the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise): Messrs. R. C. Labarge, Deputy Minister; A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division; H. D. MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section; From the Department of Trade and Commerce: Mr. T. M. Burns, General Director, Office of Trade Relations; From the Department of Industry: Mr. V. R. St. Louis, Commercial Policy Division. And Mr. H. Calof, Solicitor to the Treasury.

The Chairman presented the First Report of the Sub-Committee on Agenda and Procedure which is as follows:

Your Sub-Committee on Agenda and Procedure met on October 22, 1968, and has agreed as follows:

- (a) To request permission to sit while the House is sitting;
- (b) To sit regularly on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, and in the afternoons as well when the House has granted permission;
- (c) To hear first government officials, followed by submissions from outside organizations and individuals;
- (d) Copies of briefs will be distributed in advance to members of the Committee for study prior to each meeting, and also to government officials concerned who may be asked to comment on them at the time they are presented;
- (e) The deadline for submission of briefs from outside organizations will be 12.00 noon, Tuesday, November 12, 1968, and organizations will be asked to submit 50 copies of their brief in English and/or French.

Mr. Gray, seconded by Mr. Lambert, moved that the Report be approved, but that paragraph (b) be deleted in order to permit more flexibility in arranging meetings.

After discussion, the report was approved, as amended.

At the request of the Chairman, the Clerk read some general rules with reference to procedure in dealing with briefs adapted from procedure followed earlier this year by this Committee when it studied the Kennedy Round of tariff negotiations. These are as follows:

- (a) Organizations or individuals who wish to present briefs in person are required to provide 50 copies of their brief in English and/or French for use of the Committee not later than 12.00 noon, Tuesday, November 12, 1968;
- (b) Briefs should be sent to: Miss Dorothy F. Ballantine, Clerk of the Standing Committee of Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, House of Commons, Ottawa, Ontario;
- (c) In order to give the members the opportunity of prior study, briefs will be distributed in advance of the appearance of the witnesses;
- (d) At the meeting the witness will be asked to summarize his brief rather than read it in full before the Committee proceeds to questioning;
- (e) Briefs shall be regarded as confidential until presented before the Committee; the Clerk, when distributing briefs to the members, will append an instruction stating that the briefs are not to be disclosed to the press or any other medium of communication until presented to the Committee;
- (f) The Committee reserves the right to decide whether an organization or individual submitting a brief will be invited to appear or whether his brief will be considered by the Committee simply in written form;
- (g) Each brief shall be printed as an appendix to the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of the day on which it is presented.

After discussion the rules of procedure were approved on motion of Mr. Gray, seconded by Mr. Comtois.

The Committee then proceeded to consideration of the White Paper on Anti-Dumping, and the Chairman called the witnesses, Messrs. Grey and Arthur.

Mr. Grey made a detailed statement on the international code on the application of anti-dumping duties and the proposed draft Anti-dumping Act included in the White Paper.

Mr. Grey was questioned by the Committee.

The Committee noted that Mr. Grey had referred to Article 19 of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade which was not included in the White Paper. Mr. Grey agreed to provide copies to the Committee and it was agreed that Article 19 be included as an appendix to this day's Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (See Appendix A)

At 12.50 p.m. the Committee adjourned until 11.00 a.m., Tuesday, October 29, 1968.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Thursday, October 24, 1968

• 1117

The Chairman: Gentlemen, I see a quorum. May we start our proceedings?

At our first meeting on the White Paper on Anti-Dumping I am pleased to welcome everyone, especially a group of students from Carleton University who seem to be very interested in this matter.

Before calling on Mr. Gray to give an extensive report on the White Paper, I would like to state that Tuesday after our regular meeting on Bill No. C-101 your Steering Committee met. I have here the first report of the Subcommittee on Agenda and Precedure.

(See Minutes of Proceedings)

Gentlemen, are there any comments on the report from your Subcommittee?

[Interpretation]

Yes, Mr. Énard.

Mr. Énard: Mr. Chairman, are the names of the members of the Steering Committee listed somewhere?

The Chairman: Mr. Énard, at our meeting on Tuesday your Chairman announced the names of the members on the sub-committee. Here is the list presented after consultations with the whips of each party represented on the Committee.

The representative of the Conservative Party are: Mr. Harkness, and Mr. Lambert; representing the NDP Party: Mr. Saltsman; and representing the Liberal Party: the Chairman and the Vice-Chairman, and Messrs. Comtois and Gray; and representing the "Ralliement des Créditistes" is Mr. Henri Latulippe.

[English]

Yes, Mr. Gray.

• 1120

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, with reference to the times of sitting of the Committee—

The Chairman: Mr. Gray, I understand from our Clerk that before we discuss that report I should receive a motion.

(See Minutes of Proceedings)

Mr. Gray: Speaking on the motion to adopt the report, my recollection of our discussions in the Steering Committee on times of sitting was that although we had discussed the idea of meeting on Tuesdays and Thursdays, in the morning and afternoon, we did not come to any final and firm decision on definitely fixing our meetings at those times.

Perhaps you as Chairman, would have greater flexibility in your work if our discussions along those lines were reported to the Committee but not made part of the formal report to be adopted by the Committee. I make this just as a suggestion, not as a major point for consideration.

The Chairman: You are referring, Mr. Gray, to Section B which calls for sitting regularly on Tuesday and Thursday mornings and in the afternoon as well when the House has granted permission? You suggest that we forget about that?

Mr. Gray: No, I do not suggest that we forget about it. I suggest that you do not put it in the report that you convey to the Committee. It is the view of yourself and the Steering Committee that, generally, these will be the times we should meet, but rather than make it a formal part of the report I suggest it be conveyed as information to the Committee, to give you greater flexibility in scheduling meetings.

Otherwise, if circumstances arise, making it impossible to follow this exact schedule, or making it necessary for it to be varied in one way or another, your hands would be tied.

The Chairman: I have no objection, Mr. Gray, if other members of the Committee think as you do.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Have you any other comments, gentlemen, on the report from your Steering Committee? Have you any questions? Is everyone agreed?

Mr. Danson: Mr. Chairman, I am new here and I not want to appear to be too eager a beaver, but certain of the procedures can sometimes be a little frustrating. I believe the meeting was called for 11 o'clock and the departmental officials took the time to be here promptly, as did members of the public. Perhaps some Members, realizing that these meetings all start late, do come late. Could we not set a precedent for starting on time, out of courtesy and for efficiency's sake?

Mr. Lambert: We have previous meetings, too.

An hon. Member: A little bit of experience will help you.

The Chairman: Yes, that is what happened, Mr. Danson. There were other meetings going on when our meeting started.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, perhaps we should place on the record the fact that generally, and if necessary, we begin our meetings promptly at 11 o'clock, on an unofficial basis, to take evidence.

The reason, Mr. Chairman, that I believe you waited for a formal quorum is that you wished to finish the business which required a quorum before proceeding to taking evidence, and certain members were involved in organizational committee meetings which required their presence to make quorums. Using our procedures of other years in this Committee I am sure that you will be starting the meetings in a prompt fashion and, if necessary, on an unofficial basis, to take evidence.

• 1125

The Chairman: Another reason, too, Mr. Gray, is that in the late hours of last night, or before 10 o'clock, three regular members were replaced and perhaps the replacements were not made aware of that. I will now ask our Clerk to read other general rules that were approved, or suggested, by the Steering Committee.

(See Minutes of Proceedings)

Before I call for any comments on these rules may I have a mover and a seconder?

(See Minutes of Proceedings)

Are there any comments on those general rules, gentlemen?

Mr. Gray: In explanation, these are basically the rules that we followed when we considered the Kennedy Round tariff resolutions, and they seemed to serve very satisfactory.

The Chairman: Are there any questions?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Thank you.

I will now ask Mr. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance, and Mr. C. D. Arthur, International Economic Relations Division, Department of Finance, to come to the front, please.

I understand that Mr. Grey has many comments to make on the White Paper, and I will ask him to start.

Mr. R. Y. Grey (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance): Mr. Chairman, I propose to make a fairly lengthy explanatory statement about the form of this proposed bill incorporated in the White Paper, if that is satisfactory to the Committee.

I would like to begin with the exposition of a rather obvious point. In representations to the Minister of Finance and to his officials it has become clear to us that it is not understood by everyone concerned why the government is proposing to proceed by way of this Bill, so if you will allow me, Mr. Chairman, I would like to talk about the problems that face various governments when they decide to implement international obligations.

We are concerned here with an international treaty and the question of how we can bring our law and administrative practices into conformity with that treaty.

In some countries there is a special procedure by which an international agreement is given force in domestic law. Students of the United States constitutional practice are familiar with that special procedure in the United States.

In relation to previous commercial policy agreements entered into by the Government of Canada, the Government has chosen occasionally to have those given the force of domestic law by a simple bill to which the agreement is annexed. An example is the Canada-Australia Trade Agreement which, a few years ago, was given the force of law by a fairly simply drafted statute which really incorporates the actual wording of that agreement. This, of course, would not be appropriate in relation to the so-called Anti-dumping Code because the language of the Code is, on many important matters, broad and, some might say, ambiguous because it has to cover the jurisprudence and the administrative practices of a number of different jurisdictions.

• 1130

Another technique by which a country can meet its international obligations is by its legislation being broadly permissive in character, and therefore officials can be directed by ministers to act in accordance with the obligation. That is the course being followed, as I understand it, by the United Kingdom Government in this connection. Its anti-dumping legislation is broad and discretionary and therefore it is open to that government to meet its obligations by merely directing its officials to behave in a certain manner.

We appreciate Mr. Chairman, that the obligation that Canada has assumed relates to what we do and not the words in our legislation, but the result of those words.

Another technique that is open to governments is the use of subordinate legislation, in that case by the issue of regulations drawing their force from the statute. That is what Canada did in carrying out a number of obligations to reduce tariffs prior to the Kennedy Round. There are a number of Orders in Council which draw their force from Section 10 of the Customs Tariff by which the government has reduced rates of duty which is an example of the use of subordinate legislative power, or delegated power, to meet an international obligation.

That is how the United States Government is carrying out its obligations under the Code. We have found that in an issue of the Federal Register published earlier this year a number of regulations are made which reform or change the procedures under which the officials of the United States treasury carry out their particular portion of the United States anti-dumping procedures.

Now the last technique I wish to cite is the one that is particularly relevant here and that is to proceed by way of a separate statute to bring the domestic law into conformity with the international obligation. That is what the United States Government proceeded to do in order to meet its obligations under the Canada-United States Automotive Products Agreement. It passed a separate piece of legislation which amended various existing United States statutes. So that the practice under those statutes met the agreement they had entered into with Canada. That was a choice which faced the United States administration, whether they would do that or use the treaty procedure.

The government has concluded, Mr. Chairman, the proper course here, because of the nature of the Code and the language of the Code, that it would be more appropriate to proceed by a separate bill in which the anti-dumping system in Canada would be considerably altered to bring it into conformity with the Code.

An additional reason for doing this is that there are a number of areas of importance in the administration of anti-dumping duties on which the Code is silent and it is also necessary to legislate on these matters.

Mr. Chairman, if that makes clear the reason why we are proceeding by a bill rather than simply bringing the convention into force for Canada by a simple enactment, I will now proceed to talk about the scheme of the proposed Bill.

Mr. Chairman, I do not propose to proceed on a clause by clause basis. I think that would probably be confusing to members of the Committee at this stage. I want to talk about the principal features of the draft bill as set out in the White Paper and the relationship of those main features to the various provisions of the so-called Code. I will draw attention from time to time to the features of the Bill, on which the Code is silent.

First of all, perhaps it would be helpful if I made a few comments of a very general character about the question of dumping and the background to the Code before proceeding in this schematic way to go through the Bill. Article VI of the General Agreement which is set out on page 9 of the White Paper has provided since 1947 and I quote:

• 1135

...that dumping, by which products of one country are introduced into the commerce of another country at less than the normal value of the products, is to be condemned if it causes or threatens material injury to an established industry in the territory of a contracting party or materially retards the establishment of a domestic industry,"

And that anti-dumping duties may be applied to offset the impact of dumping.

Now conversely, this provision in the GATT can be interpreted to mean that the practice of dumping should escape condemnation provided it does not cause or threaten injury or materially retard the establishment of a domestic industry. This Article of the GATT sets out only in very broad terms what constitutes dumping: it does not define the concept of injury and it does not define the word "material", although it should be noted that in another provision of the GATT, Article XIX, there is another adjective describing serious injury and these two words should be compared.

Article VI of the GATT was silent on the very important matters of procedures. It is possibly because of these deficiencies or silences in the GATT that differences have arisen over the years in the anti-dumping procedures of different countries and it is because of this and the growing importance of anti-dumping administration in the policies and practices of various governments that during the Kennedy Round the major trading countries agreed that they should work out a new convention that would ensure a degree of uniformity in the use of national anti-dumping legislation and in the procedures involved.

The Canadian Government decided that Canadian representatives should participate very actively in these negotiations because without such participation on the part of Canada there was some risk that a Code would be developed which would not reflect Canadian views or the rather peculiar needs of our economy. If this happened, obviously we would be under pressure then from some of our trading partners to adhere to the Code and I think it was the conclusion that in that situation our interests might be prejudiced.

As is stated by the Minister of Finance in the introduction to the White Paper the government authorized signature of the Code on behalf of Canada because it concluded that Canada's two principal objectives in the negotiations had been achieved. Namely that the Code when implemented by other countries would serve to protect Canadian exports against the unreasonable use of anti-dumping duties by other countries. At the same time it was drafted in such a way as to enable Canada to apply these duties when dumping caused or threatened injury to Canadian industry or materially retarded the establishment of industry in Canada. The other signatories to the Code have been under an obligation to apply it from July 1 last. Our obligation was modified so that we are to comply with its terms not later than January 1 next.

I think it is generally known, Mr. Chairman, that Canada was in fact the first country to establish legislation specifically dealing with dumping, that it was in 1904. Present legislation is set out in Section 6 of the Customs Tariff; it is reproduced in the White Paper and broadly speaking it is very little changed from the original law as introduced in the House by Mr. Fielding. It provides that if the actual selling price of the imported goods ruled to be of a class or kind made in Canada is less than the fair market value of the goods as determined under the Customs Act, then in addition to the normal duties under the Customs Tariff, a special or anti-dumping duty is to be levied equal to the difference between the selling price and the fair market value up to a maximum 50 per cent ad valorem. Almost every one of those phrases that I have used has been the subject of extensive jurisprudence since 1904.

• 1140

It is provided by an Order in Council which was passed many years ago under the authority of subsection (10) of Section 6 of the Customs Tariff that in order to obtain a ruling that a product is of a class or kind made in Canada, Canadian firms must produce an amount equal to at least 10 per cent of domestic consumption of that product—of that class or kind. It follows from these provisions that no protection under Canadian law can be given against dumping to producers who produce less than the required 10 per cent or to firms just starting out in business when, it may be argued, they require such protection most.

Until legislation along the lines contemplated in the White Paper is passed it is not possible for Canada to take advantage of the provision in the GATT that anti-dumping duties may be used against dumping which materially retards the establishment of a new industry.

It is also argued on the other side that because of the so-called automatic application of anti-dumping duties by Canada many Canadian consumers and business firms have to pay more than they should for imported materials and other goods and that Canadian producers who are not being injured or threatened by dumping get protection that they do not need.

Another most important point is that the existing anti-dumping provisions do not explicitly require a formal inquiry or determination by the government that injury has occurred or is threatened to a domestic injury because of dumping. Rather our law which appears possibly to be rather cumbersome because it has to be found by inspection of two separate statutes involves a set of general rules of law which are applied by officials of the Department of National Revenue to each import transaction. It is the lack of a formal and public inquiry into injury which has given rise to a number of complaints from our trading partners during the past few years.

• 1145

It is in the light of these various considerations, Mr. Chairman, that the government considered it would be appropriate to proceed by a separate bill which deals exclusively with the question of anti-dumping duties. We are following here the example of the United Kingdom and of the United States which have specific legislation on anti-dumping duties separate from their normal customs legislation.

This provides an opportunity to modernize certain features of the anti-dumping procedures on which the code is silent. It also makes it somewhat easier for officials applying the law to distinguish between the concepts of normal value and export price which for Canada, as for other countries, may differ quite sharply from the concept of selling price and fair market value under the usual customs legislation.

That is all I want to say, Mr. Chairman, at this time by way of background and I would now like to proceed by looking at the scheme of the proposed Bill.

Clause 8 of the draft act provides that goods are dumped if the normal value exceeds the export price and I would like to emphasize that these are the terms taken from the Code. This clause also defines the margin of dumping as the amount by which the normal value of the goods exceeds the export price of the goods.

Clauses 9 through to 12 of the draft act set out the criteria or the rules to be followed in the determination of both normal value and export price.

Taken together, these five clauses may be considered as the most important in the bill in that they outline the conditions under which goods can be held to be dumped into Canada and the basis in law for the measurement of the margin of dumping. It might mention, Mr. Chairman, that the concept of margin of dumping which is used in the Code and has been carried forward into the bill is quite a different concept than that which we now have in Canadian law. It relates to the difference between two numerical values—the normal value and the export price. Both of these are to be subject to a determination by the national authorities under the Code which will be carried out in our case by the Department of National Revenue. I should emphasize, Mr. Chairman, that unlike some other jurisdictions it is contemplated that the application of these provisions to each import transaction after there has been a finding of injury is to be subject to appeal to the Tariff Board on matters of fact and to the Exchequer Court beyond the Tariff Board on matters of law. That would incorporate in the anti-dumping provisions the same appeal procedures as are now in force in relation to the determination of value for duty and tariff classifications and so forth under the Customs Act.

Clause 9 provides that the normal value—this is on page 48—is to be taken as the price at which like goods—"like" under the Code means identical goods—are sold at arms, length in the ordinary course or trade in the country of export at about the same point in time as the goods are sold to the Canadian importer. Detailed adjustments for differences in the terms and conditions of sale and taxation and other differences affecting price comparability between the sales in the country of export and the sale in question to the Canadian importer are to be set out in regulations passed by the Governor in Council.

I would like to say, Mr. Chairman, that those regulations which give rather more meaning to the anti-dumping scheme than is evident from this bill are in an advance stage of preparation and we have in mind that if the Minister of Finance approves they may be available for the information of members of this Committee before January 1. It will be appreciated, Mr. Chairman, however, that it has frequently been the case that Parliament passes legislation and the regulations are issued afterwards, but in order for this rather involved new legislative scheme to be understood we are hoping that these key regulations that go to determine the margin of dumping can be made available considerably before January 1.

• 1150

Mr. Alexander: Mr. Chairman, if I may interject just for a second, I know that it is proposed that those who have any briefs to submit regarding the anti-dumping...

The Chairman: Mr. Alexander, what is your point of order?

Mr. Alexander: On this point of order I was wondering whether the regulations would be available to those who have any intention of submitting briefs. I understand, Mr. Chairman, that it is fairly impossible for them to submit a brief on the basis of the proposed act as outlined in the White Paper, if there is no indication of what the regulations are. I am just wondering if there is a possibility of these proposed regulations being available to those who want to submit briefs in order that they can prepare the required briefs. It appears to me that the regulations are a very important part.

Mr. Grey: Well, Mr. Chairman, as soon as these regulations in draft have been considered by the senior legal advisers to the government I would hope that they could be made available to this Committee, and perhaps they might be printed in the Committee's proceedings and made available to the public in that way. Of course, because they are regulations, if in March it is found we have made some technical error, they can be changed. There is a rather different situation with regard to the bill. It will not be physically possible to have all the regulations made available to this Committee, before January 1, but we do indeed hope that the key ones can be made available very shortly.

Mr. Alexander: Thank you Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Gray: Before Mr. Grey proceeds I do not want to make an issue of this but certainly just to note this so a precedent will not be created. I think in the past people who are not official members of the Committee have not been allowed by the Chairman to raise formal points of order or privilege, although Mr. Alexander may merely have intended to ask a question.

The Chairman: I think it was a question. I mentioned a point of order but I think it was a question, Mr. Gray.

Mr. Alexander: It was a question rather than a point of order Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Thank you. I was the one to say a point of order. I think it was a question—not "I think", it was a question...

Mr. Alexander: It was a question.

The Chairman: ...for information.

Mr. Alexander: Thank you sir.

Mr. Givens: Mr. Chairman, am I to understand that the sequence of events will be that subsequent to the publishing of the regulations briefs will be invited?

The Chairman: No, sir. We have decided—not we, you have decided—that the deadline for receiving briefs will be November 12, and already some organizations have indicated they will present briefs without waiting for those regulations.

Mr. Givens: November 12 is the deadline.

The Chairman: At noon, yes. Mr. Lambert?

Mr. Lambert: Perhaps this will help Mr. Givens. As you know, the House passed a recommendation that we set up a committee on delegated legislation. Well, this is the type of regulation that will come before that committee and it will be subject to review there, but some time next year. We are hoping that we can evolve this process. It is something new.

Mr. Givens: Well that may open up a whole can of worms.

Mr. Lambert: Well, some of them contain a lot of worms.

The Chairman: Who will keep the one with the fish?

• 1155

Mr. Grey: Mr. Chairman, to revert to the subject matter of the proposed key regulations, it will be appreciated that to achieve comparability between the exporter's sales in his home market and the sale in question to Canada, recognition must be given to legitimate differences for quantities, levels of trade, deferred discount, costs of freight and differences in taxation systems. Under our present legislation these are provided for either in the Customs Act or in the general regulations under section 6 of the Customs Tariff Act and those latter ones are reproduced in the White Paper.

It is our view that in considering the question of allowances a great deal of care must be taken to ensure that the exporter does not claim more in respect of the sale to the Canadian importer than is his normal practice in relation to sales in his home market. I might also emphasize, Mr. Chairman, that the reason these regulations are not yet available is that we are making a close study of the practice of other countries, because it is not self-evident in calculating these many allowances and prescribing rules of law under which officials of the Department of National Revenue will make this calculation that it would be expedient for Canada to be more generous in relation to a particular allowance than are our major trading partners, but that involves a very detailed study of a vast mass of legislation in other countries. If it were not for that consideration they would have been long since available.

Now, if it is not possible to establish normal value in this way the Bill provides for three alternative methods. The first is, if the exporter sold goods solely or primarily for export, but there were sales of like goods for consumption in the market of the exporting country by other vendors in the exporting country, the Department of National Revenue may find normal values by looking at these other transactions. The second is by reference to the price at which like goods are sold by that exporter to importers in a third country, and a third method, the cost of production of the goods, plus an allowance for administrative, selling, and all other costs, and for profits.

In the case of the latter two methods the Minister of National Revenue would be required under the proposed legislation to exercise an option as to which basis is to be used in a particular case. I might point out Mr. Chairman that the concept of finding normal value by reference to sales by the exporter to a third country has long been provided for in GATT, but it is new to Canadian practice.

In the case of goods that are exported to Canada from a country whose economy is controlled by the state, a so-called state trading country, it is contemplated that the normal value—the value of the goods when sold for consumption in the exporting country—is to be determined in the manner prescribed by the Minister. Accordingly it will be possible to continue the present practice of establishing values for imports from such sources by reference to the values at which like goods are sold in neighbouring free market countries under normal conditions. What will be new in this case of course in Canadian practice is the need to enquire into whether or not such imports cause or threaten injury.

• 1200

Clause 10, page 52, provides that the export price—I might explain Mr. Chairman, that “export price” is a rather misleading term. It is the price to the Canadian importer on an f.o.b. basis. It is really what the concept is. The use of the term “export” has, I gather, confused a number of people. It is the term that is used in the Code, and we have adopted it for this Bill. It is to be taken as the amount equal to the lesser of the exporter's sale price for the goods or the importer's purchase price for the goods adjusted in a manner to be prescribed by regulations to exclude all the charges in relation to those goods resulting from or arising after their shipment to Canada; that is to put this importer's price on an f.o.b. basis.

Provision is made in clause 10 subclause (2) for the establishment of an export price where none exists; for example, in relation to consignment shipping, or where the exporter's price is considered to be unreliable because the transaction has taken place between associated persons. “Associated persons” are defined, Mr. Chairman, in this bill as people who are not dealing at “arm's length”, as defined in the Income Tax Act, or because there may be some compensatory arrangement between the parties concerned.

This provision will be most important in dealing with what has been called “hidden”, or, in France, “occult” dumping, because it requires, or allows, seeing through a transaction in those cases involving companies that are not dealing with each other at arm's length.

I might say that it is a matter of fact that it has often been represented to us that the existing Canadian anti-dumping provisions are not as effective in protecting Canadian producers from such dumping as are the laws of some other countries, such as those of France.

Clause 11, at page 56, is a sort of residual provision which would provide the Minister of National Revenue with authority under the proposed legislation to prescribe the manner in which the normal value and the export price are to be determined where sufficient information is not available. This is explicitly provided for in the Code.

Clause 12 carries forward into the anti-dumping legislation two provisions of the Customs Act that relate to indirect shipping.

Now, Mr. Chairman, it might be asked: How do these clauses of the Bill compare with the provisions of the Code? The draftsmen believe that, errors and omissions excepted, they have accurately translated into Canadian law our rights and obligations under the Code. I believe the Committee will find that these provisions are precisely in accord with Article 2 of the Code, on page 12 of the White Paper, which is the Article of the Code concerned with the determination of dumping. I think for this reason it would be repetitious to examine each paragraph of Article 2 at this time.

However, perhaps it would be helpful if I identified the relationship between the various paragraphs of this Article and the concepts used in the draft bill. You will forgive me, Mr. Chairman, if I set this out rather synoptically. It will possibly be of some use to those who may read the proceedings of this Committee.

Paragraphs (a), (b), (d) and (f) are concerned with normal value, whereas paragraph (e) and the last sentence of paragraph (f) relate to export price. Paragraph (c) deals with indirect shipment. Paragraph (g) authorizes the continued use of our present method of valuing goods imported from state trading countries.

• 1205

Mr. Chairman, that is all I have to say at this stage about the question of what is dumping and how the margin of dumping may be calculated. I would now like to turn to the question of injury.

The second major requirement both in the draft bill that is before you—I should say, Mr. Chairman, the proposed draft bill—and in the Code is that there must be a formal inquiry into the impact of dumping on Canadian production. Anti-dumping duties may be levied definitively only when dumped goods:

(a) has caused, is causing or is likely to cause material injury to the production in Canada of like goods, or

(b) has materially retarded or is materially retarding the establishment of the production in Canada of like goods,

Mr. Chairman, the word "likely" in the sentence I have just read is what we have used for the concept of threat; and I believe that on this point we are exactly in accord with United States' practice. The threat of material injury is taken to mean that if the dumping goes on injury is likely to occur. It is that way in which "threat" is used in the United States' legislation, and I think we have made it somewhat clearer in the proposed draft bill than in the Code. It is this requirement, that there be a formal inquiry, which is the most significant change from present practice.

Article 3 of the Code is concerned with the determination of injury. This is at page 14. I would like to point out that it does not say what injury is but does give some guidance on what sort of thing should be looked at, what indices should be used in assessing injury and whether it is material. It does not define what is injury.

The draft bill, Mr. Chairman, contemplates the establishment of an anti-dumping tribunal, composed of not more than five members, to be appointed by the Governor in Council; and they are to receive representations, to hear evidence, and to arrive at decisions on the effect of dumped imports on Canadian production.

I would like to emphasize, Mr. Chairman, that neither in the Code nor in the proposed draft bill is it anywhere suggested that there is an onus on the producers of Canadian goods to prove that they are injured or threatened with injury. The obligation not to levy anti-dumping duties except in those circumstances is an obligation that is on the Government of Canada and the responsibility is the Government's to establish whether or not there is injury or a threat of injury. It is not the responsibility of Canadian producers to prove this; rather the Canadian Government is required to exercise some judgment.

The draft bill also provides for the setting up of a panel—this may be considered a rather novel procedure—to be composed of the deputy ministers, or their alternates, of various interested government departments, who may be judged to have information available which would be useful to the tribunal; and they are to provide advice to the tribunal before it issues an order or finding. The tribunal is, of course, not bound by the advice received from the panel.

Clause 16 of the draft bill outlines, in very general terms, the procedures to be followed by the tribunal in the course of an inquiry. It is on page 66. Part 3 of the proposed draft bill provides authority for the establishment and functioning of the tribunal and of the panel.

Mr. Givens: Would this panel be permanent or ad hoc?

Mr. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the panel is composed of the deputy ministers, or their alternates, and its membership obviously changes as different deputy ministers come and go.

• 1210

Now I will turn to the question of procedures. Part II of the draft act sets out the procedures to be followed by the Department of National Revenue and the Anti-dumping Tribunal in the investigation of dumping and the inquiry into injury. In summary, an investigation is to be initiated by the Deputy Minister of National Revenue either on his own initiative or on receipt of a complaint on behalf of Canadian producers if, in his opinion, there is evidence of dumping and either he or the tribunal is of the opinion that there is evidence that the dumping is injurious to production in Canada.

I hope you will allow me, Mr. Chairman, to not repeat "causes or threatens injury, or materially retards". The Code uses a bit of shorthand in this and I will use the term "injury" to mean all these three different concepts which, of course, in the bill are very carefully spelled out. If, as a result of this initial investigation, the Deputy Minister concludes that the goods are being dumped he makes what is called a preliminary determination and from that date until an order or finding is made by the tribunal, imports of the goods in question are entered provisionally subject to a final decision by the Deputy Minister regarding the amount of duty payable and the Deputy Minister may demand either the payment of provisional duties, according to his provisional calculation of the margin of dumping, or the posting of a security in respect of any goods entered during this period.

Should the Deputy Minister decide not to initiate an investigation after receiving a complaint or having the matter drawn to his attention by his officials, he must advise the complainant in writing of this decision and the reasons for such decision. If the investigation was not initiated merely because the Deputy Minister was of the opinion that there was not sufficient evidence of injury, the Bill provides that the complainant may have the matter referred to the Tribunal for its opinion on the question of whether there is evidence of injury.

I would like to emphasize, Mr. Chairman, that at this stage in the proposed procedures there is quite a difference between a finding of injury and the expression of an opinion that there is some evidence of injury. These are really two quite different concepts in law. As required in Article 5 (c) of the Code the Bill provides that the Deputy Minister must terminate the investigation before making a preliminary determination if he is satisfied that there is insufficient evidence of dumping to justify proceeding with the investigation or that the margin of dumping of the goods or the actual or potential volume of the dumped goods is negligible, or if there is not, in his opinion, sufficient evidence of injury.

If the investigation is terminated because the Deputy Minister has formed the opinion that there is a lack of evidence of injury, the matter may be referred to the Tribunal for its opinion which must be rendered as soon as possible. Public notice must be given under the proposed draft bill of the Deputy Minister's decisions regarding, first, the initiation of investigation, the preliminary determination, the final determination and any termination of an investigation.

Upon receiving the Deputy Minister's preliminary determination of dumping—let me explain Mr. Chairman, that the preliminary determination by the Deputy Minister is a sort of legal finding that would presumably be published in The Canada Gazette—the Anti-dumping Tribunal is required to enquire into whether the dumping of these goods is the cause of injury or threat of injury or material retardation. Clause 16 (2) on page 70 provides that the Tribunal may also direct the Deputy Minister to investigate the dumping of goods similar to those covered by the preliminary determination in the unlikely event that the Deputy Minister of National Revenue has not cast his net wide enough.

• 1215

The Tribunal must, within a period of three months from the date of the preliminary determination, decide on the impact of the dumping on Canadian production. This is required under the Code and in the Code this concept was taken from the United States legislation, which requires that the Tariff Commission must make its finding within 90 days.

If the Tribunal finds injury and it makes its order or finding to that effect, then the Deputy Minister must make a final determination of dumping in respect of any goods as described in the order which were entered into Canada before the order of finding of the Tribunal and the anti-dumping duties then are levied definitively on those goods. Prior to that they may have been levied provisionally.

All like goods entered at Customs subsequent to the Tribunal's order or finding are subject to the definitive application of dumping duties at the time of entry in the amount of the margin of dumping as calculated in respect of each importation. I would like to explain, Mr. Chairman, that in some jurisdictions when an anti-dumping duty is levied it is then applied to subsequent imports as though it were virtually an automatic increase in custom duty or levy at the frontier on those goods and the onus, as a practical matter, is on the importer to establish that, in fact, those goods were not dumped by that amount.

It is proposed in this bill to carry forward the present practice in which the responsibility rests on the Crown to establish in respect of each transaction and subject to appeal to the Tariff Board on fact, and beyond the Tariff Board on law, the margin of dumping in respect of each transaction and it is our view that is the only procedure which properly conforms with the Code.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question?

The Chairman: Yes. Mr. Hales.

Mr. Hales: After the Tribunal has decided that anti-dumping tariffs should be applied, does this take effect when the Tribunal reports or does it have a retroactive effect and all the goods that have been imported up to the Tribunal's findings are then taxed?

Mr. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I have already made clear that after the Deputy Minister makes a preliminary determination and for the period of three months during which the matter is then before the Tribunal, all the goods that are described in the Deputy Minister's preliminary determination are entered provisionally at Customs and may, if the Deputy Minister so wishes, be subject to provisional duties.

The definitive application of anti-dumping duties with respect to those goods follows the order or finding. The liability begins with respect to imports that are entered as of the time the Deputy Minister makes his preliminary determination, and there is one category to which I will refer later where imports that have entered 90 days before that preliminary determination may also be subject to an anti-dumping duty if the Tribunal so directs.

Clause 32 of the Bill, which is on page 90, provides that,

The Tribunal may, at any time after the date of any order or finding made by it, review, rescind, change, alter or vary the said order or finding or may rehear any matter before deciding it.

• 1220

Now, as I think I have already mentioned, the decision as to the margin of dumping in respect of any given importation after the Tribunal has issued its order or finding; and whether the actual imports are indeed goods, as described in the order or finding of the Tribunal, is to be subject to appeal to the Tariff Board and, on points of law, to the Exchequer Court.

That is analogous to the present provisions under which the value for duty and the tariff classification are matters that must be determined by the Department of National Revenue, subject to appeal to the Tariff Board or to the Exchequer Court.

We have modelled the procedures here very closely on the existing provisions of the Customs Act. However, like the legislation in the United Kingdom and the United States, it is contemplated that there is to be no appeal from the tribunal's judgment on injury. In the United States, I think I am correct, there is no appeal from a finding of the Tariff Commission; and there is no appeal in the United Kingdom.

I might say Mr. Chairman, that it has not been represented to us, I think, except by one group, that any useful purpose would be served by any form of appeal from this tribunal, but we have provided in the proposed draft bill that the Governor-in-Council may exempt goods from the operation of this Act. That means, in effect, that if the tribunal were to make an order or finding that dumping caused injury and, therefore, an anti-dumping duty was levied, the Governor-in-Council could, in effect, remove that duty.

There is no power, of course, to impose the duty if the tribunal has not found injury. That could be the case, Mr. Chairman. If the tribunal found injury and the government concluded that this firm, notwithstanding this finding, was in a monopoly position, or was involved in a combine, or was involved in some other action that the government regarded as contrary to government policy, it could, therefore, exempt those import transactions from the operation of the anti-dumping duty. This power, of course, exist in any event in the Financial Administration Act.

The relevant provisions of the Code on procedures are Article 5, Article 6, Article 9 and Article 10.

To turn to a subject about which I was asked a question a few minutes ago, the matter of the retroactive application of anti-dumping duties, this was one of the major subjects of the negotiation which resulted in the Convention. The draft bill provides that, for the definitive application of anti-dumping duties to goods that were entered provisionally during the course of the enquiry, all of the goods in question be held to be entered provisionally once the Deputy Minister of National Revenue has made his determination. To prevent such injury recurring, it also provides for an additional retroactive application of anti-dumping duties for 90 days in those cases where there has been a history of dumping of those products, or where it is concluded by the tribunal that the importer should have been aware that the exporter was practising dumping and that massive dumped imports in a relatively short period had caused material injury to production in Canada.

These provisions are taken almost word for word from Article 11 of the Code. They are found in sections 4 and 5 of the draft bill, and they were designed in the Code to take account of the difficult problems for Canada of so-called sporadic dumping.

• 1225

I would like to point out Mr. Chairman, that it is really necessary for the tribunal, under this proposed draft bill, to consider not only imports by a particular importer but all imports of that product in the period in question.

That may have some considerable implication for the application of this provision.

Mr. Chairman, I would now like to turn to some additional features of the draft bill, some of which are not dealt with in the anti-dumping Code. First is the whole question of enforcing the legislation. It is clear that under the Code governments need to have certain information if they are to carry out their obligations in the length of time that is specified. Article 6 of the Code provides:

In cases in which any interested party withholds the necessary information, a final finding, affirmative or negative, may be made on the basis of the facts available.

Because governments are thus permitted under the Code to make final decisions if sufficient data is not supplied by interested parties, this may seem to put some pressure on the parties concerned to provide the required information.

Equally important is the matter of false or incorrect information and fraud. The provisions of section 34 of the draft bill on page 92, taken together with section 10 (3); 11; 17(2); 18(4) and 27(2) are intended to meet these problems and enable the effective administration of the Act.

Section 34, in particular, puts teeth into the Act by not allowing the perfecting of an entry until the necessary information is supplied to the Deputy Minister and provides for a fine equal to the duty-paid value of the goods where the information is false or incorrect.

The term "perfecting an entry", for purposes of this Act, is quite important. In the definition section, which I think is on page 42, it will be noted that

(b) the date of entry of any goods shall be deemed to be the date on which

(i) the entry of the goods has been perfected for purposes of the Customs Act,

(ii) the entry of the goods has been perfected for purposes of this proposed Act—or

(iii) the goods have been released from Customs possession, whichever is the latest.

The purpose of this rather devious approach is to ensure that it is not possible, if the Deputy Minister intervenes in a situation, for an importer to escape anti-dumping duties through the operation of the limits on the retroactive application merely by withholding information. If he withholds information he cannot perfect the entry of the goods and that brings those goods forward into the period in which the anti-dumping duty may be levied.

This is a result of the careful study of the implications for Canadian practice of the obligations we have assumed about retroactivity. The import of these may be understood if one considers what would be the implications under the Income Tax Act if there was a similar limit on retroactivity.

I think it is the case that the Department of National Revenue can re-assess for a period of four years going backwards, and in the case of fraud I am not sure what the limitation is. We have, I think, in strict conformity with the Code, provided that it is not possible to escape anti-dumping duties by supplying incorrect information.

On the other hand, the importer who is not dumping, or is not injuring, or is not providing incorrect information, or withholding information, would to my mind have nothing to fear from the most vigorous application of these provisions.

• 1230

I would now like to turn to a point that has given rise to a number of questions in the representations which the Department has received, that is, what is an industry. The definition of "industry" is set out in Article 4 (a) of the Code on page 15, and under the proposed draft legislation the Tribunal must take this into account. The word "industry" as used in the Code and "Canadian production" as used in the draft act does not mean a group of corporations. It relates to the production of a particular product. Any other result would be nonsensical and would require the setting up of a separate corporation for the production of each distinct product by a given corporation. Accordingly, it is contemplated that it will be possible under this proposed draft bill, as is clearly contemplated by the Code, to give protection against injurious dumping to a multiproduct corporation which is being injured by the dumping of one of its particular product lines in respect of that particular product.

Under the present Canadian provisions—to turn to a different point, Mr. Chairman—the liability for anti-dumping duty occurs at the time that goods are imported into Canada. As I mentioned earlier, because the concept of dumping and margin of dumping as used in the proposed draft bill differs somewhat from the terms of our proposed legislation, it will now be possible to create the liability for dumping before the goods enter Canada. The draft bill is written in terms of the dumping occurring at the time of the sale which may be for some products very considerably before the date of shipment of the goods to Canada. In the case of major capital goods, that may be several years before it is reported.

The Bill is drafted in this way in strict conformity with the Code, because it was represented to the government and agreed with by the government that injury, in relation to such dumping, occurs before the import of such goods.

It will be noted that under clause 3 of the Bill the potential liability for anti-dumping duties is established when the Tribunal makes its order or finding, not when the goods are entered. The actual collection of the duty does not, of course, take place until the goods are imported. There is a distinction, I think, between the creation of a potential liability for the duty and the collection of the duty. These are separate matters. This provision I think is clearly intended to take account of the situation in which a contract is entered into at what is a dumped price for the provision of capital goods. The impact on Canadian producers takes place then. The goods may enter three years later.

If a judgment as to whether or not there is a potential liability for dumping is not made until three years later, it might be assumed that there is no protection given to the Canadian producers against injurious dumping. So this Bill has been drafted in terms of the dumping occurring at the time of sale, at the time of a firm contract to provide the goods. For many types of goods this may be largely irrelevant as the time of sale may be only shortly before the import. For others it may be quite crucial.

• 1235

Now to turn to the question of consequential amendments. I might say, Mr. Chairman, that it has already been drawn to our attention that we have neglected to provide for a consequential amendment to the Tariff Board Act. At some future point, if it is the Committee's wish, I would set out what ought to be a consequential amendment to the Tariff Board Act. The substantive revision, the only one that is required, relates to the proposed deletion of subsection (7) of Section 40A of the Customs Act which provides for the establishment of arbitrary or fixed valuations in respect of goods which are not dumped, but which are judged to be causing injury to Canadian producers. The real impact of such fixed valuations or arbitrary customs valuations is the assessment of an anti-dumping duty in the amount of the difference between the values so fixed and the actual export price, up to a maximum of 50 per cent ad valorem. Under the Code it is not possible to use anti-dumping duties in this fashion. It is proposed that a new provision be added to the Customs Tariff to deal with imports which are not dumped, but which threaten injury to domestic producers. Article XIX of the GATT, the so-called emergency or escape clause, provides for just such emergency action. Let me take a specific and current example, Mr. Chairman, to explain the import of this.

Mr. Blair: Where can we find Article XIX?

Mr. Grey: Article XIX, Mr. Blair, was not reproduced. Possibly this is a mistake in the White Paper, but we can make it available so that it could be printed in the records of this Committee if so required.

If I may take a current example. It has been represented by corn producers in Ontario that American corn is entering Canada at prices which are injurious to Canadian producers. It is not represented that these imports are dumped in the technical sense. Under present Canadian law one action the government could take by the issue of an appropriate Order in Council would be to arbitrarily fix a customs value on those goods. This would result in economic terms in the imposition of an additional tax on such imports of the amount of difference between there actual selling price to the importer in Canada on an f.o.b. basis and the arbitrary fixed valuation. Now this provision, this proposed new provision, would enable the Governor in Council, on a report from the Minister of Finance that goods not dumped are in fact being imported in a way that injures Canadian producers or manufacturers, to order the levying of a surtax on such imports.

The economic result of this proposed new provision is, to my mind, precisely the same as the present emergency power, but it enables us to conform precisely with the Code and to make clear what was not always apparent, that we were using the anti-dumping duty as an emergency measure to control injurious non-dumped imports under the provisions of Article 19 of the GATT, rather than using it to deal with dumped imports under the provision of Article 6.

Mr. Blair: This can be accomplished by an amendment to the Customs Tariff Act?

Mr. Grey: Yes, Mr. Blair, that is correct. The one change of substance from present practice in relation to this emergency provision would be that an order under this new proposed provision would cease to have effect after 180 days unless it is approved by Parliament.

Mr. Chairman, that concludes my review of the scheme of the proposed legislation. Thank you.

The Chairman: Thank you very much, Mr. Grey, for such a lengthy report. It has been suggested, gentlemen, that before questions are asked by members of this Committee on Mr. Grey's report we await the printing of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence of this meeting. We hope that that report will be in your hands by Monday. If so, the next meeting will be next Tuesday at 11 o'clock in this same room. It has also been suggested that if, by any chance, the Minutes are not in your hands by next Tuesday, we delay questions directed to Mr. Grey. What are your reactions to that?

• 1240

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman we have to recognize that Canada has entered international undertakings to have this matter disposed of by Parliament, I believe by January 1 and I know we will want to give this measure the study it deserves because of its seriousness. May I suggest that in the event the statement of Mr. Rod Grey cannot be printed in formal proceedings, that Mr. Grey and the Clerk consult and arrange to have the statement reproduced in Xerography or mimeographed form. I think there would be no problem at all in having this done.

The Chairman: I am told by the Clerk that she is pretty sure these Minutes will be in our hands by Monday.

Mr. Gray: In fact, may I make another suggestion? If Mr. Grey can have his statement reproduced in final form in some unofficial way, perhaps it might be circulated to members before the weekend in case any of them want to study the text before Monday. Would this be practical, Mr. Grey?

Mr. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I was speaking from notes and the only record is the record that was made on the tape.

The Chairman: Any other comments, gentlemen, on that? Yes, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert: May I make a suggestion, as it is going to be a matter of principle, that perhaps Mr. Grey would be prepared to discuss the question of why ministerial discretion is introduced into this particular draft bill.

Shall we say it is ministerial discretion by way of translation from the Income Tax Act, and that ministerial discretion with regard to associated persons is a subject which raised a great deal of controversy about three years ago when it was brought into the Act. In my book ministerial discretion is a thing that should not exist; if it does exist, it must be curbed. I suggest we be prepared to discuss why it is brought in this way.

Mr. Blair: I think it would help the members of the Committee if Mr. Grey and his associates could advise us how they intend to proceed with the balance of the explanation. Mr. Grey has given a general description of the Statute. There are questions, of course, about the American action, to which he referred quite briefly, and I see that we have senior officials of the Department of National Revenue with us. It might assist us in directing questions if we knew when, and to what extent, other officials were to testify so we would not engage in repetitious questions.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Mr. Chairman, I would...

The Chairman: Mr. Émard, I am going to ask Mr. Grey if he has any comments to make with regard to Mr. Blair's—and then I will give you the floor.

Mr. Émard: But what I have to propose concerns what has just been said. I want to suggest, in order to ease the work of the members—I was wondering if it would be in order—that at each meeting, we ask those who come as observers, those, in other words, who are not appearing but then agree to do so to identify themselves and to state the name of the firms they represent. This would also apply to newspapermen, because in certain cases we want to get in touch with newspapermen and we don't know who is who. This would help everyone, who wants to contact some of these people, because their names would appear in the proceedings of the Committee.

The Chairman: Are there any comments on this last suggestion by Mr. Émard with regard to the identification of firms, groups of the private sector and newspaper people? I believe as far as journalists...

Mr. Émard: Only if they want to...

Mr. Lambert: Why? The public are here as observers; they have no status, and neither have newspapermen, and unless we are talking about officials of departments or persons with briefs to present, they have no status whatsoever, and I wonder, Mr. Émard, why they would be here?

• 1245

Mr. Émard: There may be observers here who are directly interested but have no briefs to submit. They are representing interested firms and we might want to get in touch with them in certain cases.

Mr. Gray: I think Mr. Émard's suggestion could perhaps be followed. Newspapermen, as a rule, remain at a special table reserved for the press, and the officials of departments are behind us. Other observers are in the main hall. If a member of a committee wants to ask questions or get in contact with a spectator, an official or a journalist, those people can all be found in the portion of the hall reserved for them. And if there are others in the hall who want to get in contact with the members, they can introduce themselves after the committee meeting has adjourned. But as far as printing the names of people in each proceeding booklet, we would have to have two or three extra clerks to look after that and help Miss Ballantine. I think Mr. Émard's idea might indeed help us to do our work, but possibly my suggestion might be the more efficient method. Is my suggestion satisfactory to you, Mr. Émard?

[English]

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to engage too much in discussion and I am interested in having my first question answered. But I really think the proposal Mr. Émard has put forward is novel to the extent that it should excite everybody here. This is a public proceeding, any citizen of this country should be able to come here and witness the proceedings, and if he chooses not to make a representation that is his business.

There may be people here who are highly interested in this, but why should they have to stand up and identify themselves and the firms and the interests they have, unless they choose to make a formal submission? I think if we were to follow this course we would, in effect, be saying to people: You come here and talk to us or do not come at all. I think this is a very, very new type of suggestion and I suggest we leave the press and the spectators alone.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Émard: I meant those who want to give their names, who wish to be identified. I did not ask for everyone to be identified.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: I think, Mr. Émard, the normal procedure is that only the department officials are registered in our minutes.

Mr. Émard: It was only a suggestion.

[English]

Mr. Gray: As I said already, all these people can easily be contacted by interested members of the Committee. We know where officials are sitting, we know where the press is sitting, we know where other people following the proceedings are sitting, and I do not think that we have to formalize it; even though I know that Mr. Émard's suggestion is meant in a constructive spirit. If I may make a comment on...

The Chairman: I am sorry, Mr. Herb Gray, but I think Mr. Blair would like to have an answer from Mr. Rod Grey if it is possible.

Mr. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I had no clear view on the most useful way to proceed after making a general statement. If your Committee wished, I with some assistance from other officials present, would be prepared to examine it clause by clause, or to answer questions at random.

• 1250

Mr. Blair: I take it from your comment that it was not the intention of you and your colleagues to make further submissions, and the whole group would then stand ready to assist in the answering of questions; thank you, very much.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Herb Gray.

Mr. Gray: It was my understanding of the recommendations of the Steering Committee that following a general statement by Mr. Rod Grey we would proceed to look at each clause of the bill in turn with Mr. Grey, and such official colleagues as may be desirable, providing the Committee with answers to our questions with respect to each clause. It was not the intention of the Steering Committee to recommend to the full Committee that the appearance of Mr. Grey and his official colleagues be limited to questions with respect to his general statement.

The Chairman: Are there any other questions, gentlemen?

Mr. Alexander: Although I am not a member of the Standing Committee, it was pointed out to me, through you, by an hon. member what the status is of a Member of Parliament who is not a member of the Committee. I just want to clarify that, in this term as an observer more or less, you are restricted to asking questions and you do not have the right of points of order, or questions of privilege, or both. This is a restriction and I just want to clear it up.

The Chairman: Or to suggest amendments.

Mr. Alexander: Or to suggest amendments. But the questioning is available to me, vigorous or otherwise.

The Chairman: Right.

Mr. Alexander: Thank you, sir.

The Chairman: Are there any other comments, gentlemen? If not, I will again thank Mr. Rod Grey for his lengthy report, and thank you gentlemen.

APPENDIX A

Article XIX

Emergency Action on Imports of Particular Products

1. (a) If, as a result of unforeseen developments and of the effect of the obligations incurred by a contracting party under this Agreement, including tariff concessions, any product is being imported into the territory of that contracting party in such increased quantities and under such conditions as to cause or threaten serious injury to domestic producers in that territory of like or directly competitive products, the contracting party shall be free, in respect of such product, and to the extent and for such time as may be necessary to prevent or remedy such injury, to suspend the obligation in whole or in part or to withdraw or modify the concession.

(b) If any product, which is the subject of a concession with respect to a preference, is being imported into the territory of a contracting party in the circumstances set forth in sub-paragraph (a) of this paragraph, so as to cause or threaten serious injury to domestic producers of like or directly competitive products in the territory of a contracting party which receives or received such preference, the importing contracting party shall be free, if that other contracting party so requests, to suspend the relevant obligation in whole or in part or to withdraw or modify the concession in respect of the product, to the extent and for such time as may be necessary to prevent or remedy such injury.

2. Before any contracting party shall take action pursuant to the provisions of paragraph I of this Article, it shall give notice in writing to the Contracting Parties as far in advance as may be practicable and shall afford the Contracting Parties and those contracting parties having a substantial interest as exporters of the product concerned an opportunity to consult with it in respect of the proposed action. When such notice is given in relation to a concession with respect to a preference, the notice shall name the contracting party which has requested the action. In critical circumstances, where delay would cause damage which it would be difficult to repair, action under paragraph I of this Article may be taken provisionally without prior consultation, on the condition that consultation shall be effected immediately after taking such action.

3. (a) If agreement among the interested contracting parties with respect to the action is not reached, the contracting party which proposes to take or continue the action shall, nevertheless, be free to do so, and if such action is taken or continued, the affected contracting parties shall then be free, not later than ninety days after such action is taken, to suspend, upon the expiration of thirty days from the day on which written notice of such suspension is received by the Contracting Parties, the application to the trade of the contracting party taking such action, or, in the case envisaged in paragraph I (b) of this Article, to the trade of the contracting party requesting such action, of such substantially equivalent concessions or other obligations under this Agreement the suspension of which the Contracting Parties do not disapprove.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of sub-paragraph (a) of this paragraph, where action is taken under paragraph 2 of this Article without prior consultation and causes or threatens serious injury in the territory of a contracting party to the domestic producers of products affected by the action, that contracting party shall, where delay would cause damage difficult to repair, be free to suspend, upon the taking of the action and throughout the period of consultation, such concessions or other obligations as may be necessary to prevent or remedy the injury.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF MINUTES
OF
PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

This edition contains the English deliberations and/or a translation into English of the French.

Copies and complete sets are available to the public by subscription to the Queen's Printer. Cost varies according to Committees.

Translations under the direction of the Bureau for Translations, Secretary of State.

ALISTAIR FRASER,
The Clerk of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

First Session—Twenty-eighth Parliament

1968

---

STANDING COMMITTEE

ON

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. GASTON CLERMONT

---

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

No. 3

---

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1968

---

Respecting

WHITE PAPER ON ANTI-DUMPING

---

Including

APPENDIX B

Language agreed to in Conference as a Substitute for Title 2 of the Senate Version of HR17234 Concerning the International Anti-Dumping Code

APPENDIX C

Ad Article VI (of the GATT)

---

WITNESS:

Mr. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance.

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
QUEEN'S PRINTER AND CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY
OTTAWA, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON
FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. Alastair Gillespie

and Messrs.

Blair,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
Downey,
Émard,

Flemming,
Gauthier,
Givens,
Gleave,
Gray,
Hales,

Harkness,
Lambert
(Edmonton West),
Latulippe,
Perrault,
Roberts,
Trudel—20.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

ORDER OF REFERENCE

MONDAY, October 28, 1968.

Ordered,—That the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs be authorized to sit while the House is sitting.

ATTEST:

ALISTAIR FRASER,
The Clerk of the House of Commons.

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

TUESDAY, October 29, 1968.

(4)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 11:12 a.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Blair, Burton, Clermont, Comtois, Danson, Emard, Flemming, Gauthier, Gillespie, Givens, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton West) Latulippe, Perrault, Trudel—(17).

Also present: Messrs. Alexander, Douglas, Hees, and Ritchie.

In attendance: From the Department of Finance: Messrs. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister and C. D. Arthur, International Economic Relations Division.

Also in attendance: From the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise): Messrs. R. C. Labarge, Deputy Minister; A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division; H. D. MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section; From the Department of Industry: V. R. St. Louis, Commercial Policy Division; From the Department of Trade and Commerce: C. J. Kelly, Office of Area Relations.

The Committee resumed consideration of the White Paper on Anti-Dumping, and the witness, Mr. Grey, was called.

The Chairman read a telegram from the Steel Company of Canada, which is as follows:

We are concerned that regulations referred to in draft legislation Canadian Anti-Dumping Act are not available now or likely to be available prior to deadline for comment from interested parties, namely November 12, 1968. Effective legislation and its application depend on clear and definitive regulations. We submit that knowledge of regulations is vital to assessment of proposed legislation and suggest that deadline for comment be delayed until regulations are available for study by your committee and interested parties.

The witness, Mr. Grey, stated that the key regulations can be made available to the Committee on Thursday. It was agreed that at that time the regulations thus tabled before the Committee can be printed as an appendix to the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, thus making them public.

The Committee resumed questioning of Mr. Grey on his statement made at the last meeting.

During the questioning, the witness tabled a U.S. paper entitled, Language agreed to in Conference as a Substitute for Title 2 of the Senate Version of HR17324 Concerning the International Anti-dumping Code which on motion of Mr. Gray, seconded by Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West) is attached hereto as Appendix B.

Mr. Grey also tabled the U.S. Antidumping Regulations published by the American Bureau of Customs, copies of which were distributed to the members.

At 1:05 p.m. the Committee adjourned until 3:30 p.m. this day.

AFTERNOON SITTING

(5)

The Committee resumed at 3:50 p.m., the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Clermont, Comtois, Danson, Emard, Flemming, Gauthier, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Latulippe, Perrault, Trudel—(13).

Also present: Messrs. Ritchie and Saltsman.

In attendance: The same as at the morning sitting.

Also in attendance: The same as at the morning sitting, except Mr. Labarge.

The Committee continued questioning of Mr. Grey.

The witness tabled a paper headed Ad Article VI (of the GATT) which on motion of Mr. Perrault, seconded by Mr. Trudel, is attached hereto as Appendix C.

At 5:10 p.m. the Committee adjourned until Thursday, October 31, 1968 at 11:00 a.m.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Tuesday, October 29, 1968

• 1111

The Chairman: Gentlemen, I note that we now have a quorum. Before turning the meeting over to members for questions to Mr. Grey regarding the statement he made before this Committee last week, I would like to state that yesterday I received a telegram from Hamilton dated October 28, 1968, and it reads:

COPY CN TEXTEX OTTAWA

MR. GASTON CLAIRMONT, M.P.,
CHAIRMAN, STANDING COMMITTEE ON FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS,
HOUSE OF COMMONS, OTTAWA,
ONTARIO.

COPIES ALSO BEING SENT TO THE FOLLOWING:

THE HONOURABLE E. J. BENSON, MINISTER OF FINANCE AND RE-CEIVER GEN.,

THE HONOURABLE JEAN-LUC PEPIN,
MINISTER OF INDUSTRY AND MIN-ISTER OF TRADE AND COMMERCE;

THE HONOURABLE JOHN C. MUNRO,
MINISTER OF NATIONAL HEALTH AND WELFARE;

MR. LINCOLN ALEXANDER, M.P.,
HOUSE OF COMMONS, OTTAWA.

WE ARE CONCERNED THAT REGU-LATIONS REFERRED TO IN DRAFT LEGISLATION CANADIAN ANTI-DUMPING ACT ARE NOT AVAILABLE
NOW NOR LIKELY TO BE AVAILABLE
PRIOR TO DEADLINE FOR COMMENT
FROM INTERESTED PARTIES, NAME-
LY NOVEMBER 12 1968. EFFECTIVE
LEGISLATION AND ITS APPLICA-TION DEPEND ON CLEAR AND DEFINI-TIVE REGULATIONS. WE SUBMIT THAT KNOWLEDGE OF REGULA-TIONS IS VITAL TO ASSESSMENT OF PROPOSED LEGISLATION AND SUG-GEST THAT DEADLINE FOR COM-MENT BE DELAYED UNTIL REGULA-TIONS ARE AVAILABLE FOR STUDY
BY YOUR COMMITTEE AND IN-TERESTED PARTIES.

H. M. GRIFFITH, PRESIDENT, STEEL
CO. OF CDA LIMITED, HAMILTON.

You will remember last week, gentlemen, that a question was posed by Mr. Alexander, Member for Hamilton West, to Mr. Grey from the Department of Finance when he said there is and there was a possibility that in the very near future some of the regulations might be given to this Committee. I will now ask Mr. Grey if he has any other permission regarding the statement he made last week about the regulations.

Mr. R. Y. Grey (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance): Mr. Chairman, in the light of the comments that were made to the Confidential Committee, chaired by Mr. Glass, the Vice-Chairman of the Tariff Board, on behalf of various steel producers, I would judge that the regulations which are referred to in this telegram you have read would be the regulations under Section 9 of the proposed draft bill. It is our intention to make these available as a proposed draft at the next sitting of this Committee.

The Chairman: Are there any comments on the telegram and the statement just given by Mr. Grey?

• 1115

Mr. Gray: You feel the regulations will be available? When exactly?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Thursday next.

Mr. Gray: On Thursday.

Mr. Alexander: Mr. Chairman, that is Thursday of this week?

The Chairman: Right.

Mr. Gray: If the regulations, I presume in draft form, could be tabled before this Committee, they would become part of our records and would be publicly available. If that is the case, the problem raised by the Steel Company in their telegram will have been eliminated.

Mr. Alexander: I believe so, Mr. Chairman. Thursday of this week would be October 31, Mr. Chairman, I expect that in view of that, the question posed by me and also as extended by the Steel Company of Canada perhaps now is rectified, because Mr. Grey seems to give us the assurance that the regulations which will be dealt with in this act would be available by Thursday.

The Chairman: I think, Mr. Alexander, I should add "some of the regulations". Mr. Grey?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, the key ones which I think are the regulations under Section 9 are the relevant ones.

Mr. Alexander: Mr. Chairman, I suppose Mr. Grey could not—I understand the pressure that he is undergoing—there is no way at this particular time that we could be told when the regulations in draft form would be available? These are just the key regulations that we are talking about now.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, may I suggest that if necessary we give this request from the Steel Company further consideration after the regulations referred to by Mr. Grey are presented to this Committee. Perhaps there will be no problem at all.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, to cut this short, I think the Steering Committee could take this under advisement, and in the event that these are very complicated and so forth, certainly the deadline for filing of briefs or supplementary briefs could be extended without any difficulty in this particular case, or anyone else who feels affected. There may be some regulations under some other sections which may affect different producers and different manufacturers, and I think we would have to extend to them the same consideration that might have to be extended to the Steel Company of Canada. I do not think there is any real problem here.

The Chairman: If we are through making comments on the telegram and the regulations, I think it was understood last week, gentlemen, after Mr. Grey made his statement, that the floor would be open to questions. I am now going to ask who would like to ask questions on that statement. I have Mr. Lambert first.

Mr. Lambert: First of all Mr. Grey, could you advise us what is the latest status in the United States. As you may recall, earlier this fall on a passage of a renegotiation bill by the U.S. Senate there was tacked on a provision repealing the passage by the United States of the anti-dumping convention, or whatever legislation they had passed with regard to that in the Senate. This obviously puts the administration and the Congress—at least part of Congress—in conflict. Could you tell us what the Department of Finance has been able to get on an official basis as to the status of this particular question in the United States?

• 1120

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Lambert's description of the rider that was tacked on the renegotiation bill in the United States Senate is quite correct. But subsequently in the conference between representatives of the Senate and the House of Representatives, a different rider was agreed on and passed. The import of this is really quite different than that of the Senate rider. We have had a preliminary discussion between Canadian representatives and United States government representatives as to the precise meaning for different sections of the United States law and their relation to the Code of this rider. The discussions are still going on. I wonder, Mr. Chairman, if Mr. Lambert might agree that at some later meeting of this Committee when these discussions have been concluded we could give a fuller report to the Committee. It is my preliminary view that there is only one section of the Code which is possibly at issue with this rider that emerged from the House-Senate conference. It is still a complicated question of the meaning of the precise terms in United States law as they relate to the obligations of the United States under the Code. I would rather prefer to wait until our discussions with United States representatives have been concluded so that I can give an exact and careful answer.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, that is fine, but I want to make a point abundantly clear. If the United States Government in any way deviates from its undertaking at the time of the passage of the Kennedy Round or its adoption of the Kennedy Round and this anti-dumping convention that Canada entered into with its trading partners, we in Canada should adopt a full anti-dumping convention which has some dubious value in certain parts. Then, to me, it would be a foolhardy act on the part of Canada to enter into the convention, as it had agreed to do, if the United States does anything less because we can be very seriously affected by this. And if we are getting something less, in so far as the United States is concerned, then we might as well put this aside and remain where we are.

But in the interval, naturally I do not want to—if there are, shall we say, serious negotiations on or—in fact it might be a very competent level and action taken here might upset something—well, I am going to defer. But I will, shall we say, put on record a caveat at this time so that we do not do something foolhardy just to be noble.

The Chairman: Any more questions, Mr. Lambert, regarding Mr. Grey's statement of last week?

Mr. Lambert: Yes. I would rather give him notice that I wanted to discuss the importing into this act of a principle of ministerial discretion which is included in the Income Tax Act in so far as it relates to associated persons or associated companies.

I want to get to the rationale as to why that is being imported into another act, bearing in mind the severe criticism that was levied at the government—at the Minister of Finance of the day—the Minister of National Revenue—for extending ministerial discretion when it had been excluded from the Act in 1948—that is from the Income Tax Act—and the fuss that was made in 1961 by members of the present administration when some ministerial discretion was going to be used in the Customs Tariff Act.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if you would allow me to revert to Mr. Lambert's previous question. I have now found a copy of the text of the agreed rider to the renegotiation bill and I suggest, Mr. Chairman, it may be of interest to members of your Committee if this was printed in your record of proceedings.

The Chairman: Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

(See Minutes of Proceedings)

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Now, if I could revert to Mr. Lambert's second question. The Code recognizes that there may be a class of import transactions between exporters and importers who are in some sense not dealing at arms length, who are related or associated, and it recognizes that it is appropriate for the authorities concerned to look through to see the real nature of that transaction. I think that every anti-dumping measure by any government has to deal with this problem.

• 1125

In attempting to draft an appropriate provision for Canadian legislation, we gave careful study to the provisions of the United States legislation which are to be found in Sections 206 (b) and (c) and Section 207 of the United States Anti-Dumping Act of 1921. In that legislation there is an attempt to set out quite specifically the various categories of transactions which will be deemed to be between related persons. Now, the draftsmen, Mr. Chairman, found it difficult to translate this provision into Canadian legal wording. It is obvious that an alternative approach would be to set out very specifically all the types of transactions or all the types of relationships, alternatively, which would be deemed to be transactions between related companies or associated companies or people not dealing at arm's length.

I think that one way to proceed would be—to examine this question further—if members of the Committee had before them the text of the United States legislation. We have copies available for members of the Committee. I think we have enough copies available for every member. If you thought it useful, Mr. Chairman, those could be distributed; it is a less extensive document than the Canadian White Paper. Members might then turn to sections 206 (b) and (c) and section 207 and see how another government attempted to deal with this very difficult technical problem.

Mr. Lambert: That is in the act, is it not?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is legislation, yes, sir.

Mr. Lambert: That is not contained in regulations?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: No, sir, it is not.

Mr. Lambert: I do not know if, by curiosity I suppose, we could take that document, but I have an alternative and you will see the argument I have.

While I believe Mr. Labarge of the Customs and Excise Branch here would be aware of the problems in 1961 when there was a question of ministerial discretion, there was no appeal therefrom, and I suggest to you that ministerial discretion under the Income Tax Act with regard to associated companies is also without appeal, that is, effective appeal, because no court will exercise any ministerial discretion on behalf of any minister.

I would suggest to you that the other way is that the definition of associated companies shall be by way of regulation. That bill provides for the passage of regulations. There certainly is an omnibus clause there, and since regulations, I trust, will then come before a committee of the House in due course, these could be examined. This is what I am after.

I am thoroughly opposed to any question of ministerial discretion being imported into this act on the basis of what exists in the Income Tax Act, because that puts it away beyond any question of appeal or any question of review. I feel that Committee members who were quite unanimous in support of the proposition of a committee on delegated legislation would want to see this, and this is precisely what we are driving at when we are setting up such a committee, that matters such as this could be reviewed under regulations and it is for that reason that I am querying this.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I am not entirely clear what Mr. Lambert's question is. I would say, however, that it is, I think, merely an exercise in drafting, although not an easy one.

Mr. Lambert: There is a fundamental question of principle, Mr. Grey.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I am aware of that, sir. It is a difficult technical exercise in drafting, to draft a regulation which does in fact include all those types of transactions or, if you like relationships, which are in fact transactions between related companies. To my mind the provisions in the United States legislation are quite all-encompassing and I suspect that something like 70 or 80 per cent of Canadian imports would then fall within such a broad definition.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: You have a supplementary question I believe, Mr. Gray.

Mr. Gray: No.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert.

[English]

Mr. Lambert: May I ask the next question? Surely, Mr. Grey, is it not the truth, or axiomatic, that the individual businessman should also have some degree of certainty? If there is a provision that says that an associated company shall have the meaning attributed to it in the Income Tax Act, which is subject to ministerial discretion, there is nothing that will prevent him doing bona fide into a transaction which he thinks is quite all right but after the event the minister, or whoever is the administrator decides within the discretionary powers that these are associated companies. In other words, it is after the event and there is no certainty. If you were advising a client whether the scheme or arrangements he proposed were caught by the associated companies clause in this bill any self-respecting lawyer would have to say: "I do not know, that will depend on how the minister feels on that particular day". That is not an acceptable principle on which we should legislate.

• 1130

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Lambert asked whether a certain proposition was axiomatic, I think it is. I hesitate to revert to this point but I do think that it would be helpful to the Committee if they saw how United States draftsmen have attempted to deal with the same technical problem; albeit it is less important for them than it is for us because a smaller proportion of imports into the United States are likely to be between related companies than would be the case in Canada.

If one looks at the kind of language which the United States draftsmen, who are certainly as competent as Canadian draftsmen dealing with these problems, found it necessary to use one will see that there are still elements of uncertainty for the businessmen. For example, Section 207 of the United States Anti-Dumping Act is a relatively short section so I will read it out, merely to make the point that the technique suggested by Mr. Lambert, which I for my part, would be quite prepared to attempt to use in the Canadian draft—I merely wish to demonstrate that one cannot remove the uncertainty, or at least the United States draftsmen have not succeeded in so doing.

Section 207 reads:

That for the purposes of this title the exporter of imported merchandise shall be the person by whom or for whose account the merchandise is imported into the United States:

The exporter and the importer are really the same person, and there are four conditions:

- (1) If such person is the agent or principal of the exporter, manufacturer, or producer;
- (2) If such person owns or controls, directly or indirectly, through stock ownership or control or otherwise, any interest in the business of the exporter, manufacturer, or producer; or
- (3) If the exporter, manufacturer, or producer owns or controls, directly or indirectly through stock ownership or control or otherwise, any interest in any business conducted by such persons; or
- (4) If any person or persons, jointly or severally, directly or indirectly, through stock ownership or control or otherwise, own or control in the aggregate 20 per centum or more of the voting power of control in the business carried on by the person by whom or for whose account the merchandise is imported into the United States, and also 20 per centum or more of such power or control in the business of the exporter, manufacturer, or producer.

• 1135

Mr. Lambert, you used the term "can of worms" at our previous meeting. There are some worms in that draft and there are some elements of uncertainty. A point the Committee might wish to consider if it recommended the adoption of a detailed regulation along these lines is whether the Canadian regulation should be as broadly drawn, have as many elements of uncertainty, and catch as many transactions as would be caught by the United States law. I think that is the technical problem that the draftsmen attempted to deal with and after a great deal of consideration they came up with a rather different approach to it. I hope Mr. Lambert understands. I am not trying to argue a case. We are faced with a complicated technical problem and we gave a great deal of study to the sort of provisions which I have read out.

Mr. Lambert: Well my comment there would be, yes, that may be, and I recognize the difficulties. However, I think Mr. Grey would also recognize that they do draft regulations over in the Income Tax Department that are just as complex, perhaps even more so. Also there are, I think, although I am subject to correction, regulations in the Income Tax Department with regard to associated companies. What I am after is this question of ministerial discretion. Ministerial discretion has gone far enough, it has gone too far and must be curbed; it should not be extended.

The Chairman: Have you a supplementary question, Mr. Hales?

Mr. Hales: Yes. Mr. Chairman, we have been quite technical in all our discussions here, so much so that I think we can get quite easily confused, and I do not mind admitting that I am confused. May we take a practical example and ask Mr. Grey how the anti-dumping legislation would work. Supposing we have in Canada an American subsidiary, which is making a product worth $200. They have a branch in another part of the world, not in the United States but in another area, and they are making the same product for $1.25. So the American subsidiary in Canada says, "Well, we can make this product for $1.25 in our foreign plant. We will close our Canadian plant and we will import this product at $1.25". Now, are they going to be liable under this anti-dumping legislation and would it be considered anti-dumping under the proposed legislation that we are now discussing?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think the answer in part depends on what the figure of $1.25 represents. Mr. Hales said they can make the item for $1.25. Is that their cost of production or is that the price at which they sell it for consumption in the country from which the product is exported to Canada?

Mr. Hales: The price that they manufacture it for in that country; that is their cost of manufacturing, $1.25.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, Mr. Chairman, if the price to the importer in Canada is less than the price at which it is sold in the country of export for consumption in the country of export, that is dumping, making allowances for the difference in quantities and levels of trade required under the Code, and those required under this proposal under Section 9, which will be the subject of the regulations, and which we were discussing earlier.

Mr. Hales: Well, the American subsidiary in Canada would give consideration to making this product in their foreign plant because they can make it at a lesser cost and therefore would be inclined to close their Canadian branch. This is what I am concerned about.

Why would they not close their Canadian branch when they can make the same product and bring it into Canada for less than they can manufacture it here?

• 1140

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, Mr. Hales, it is not dumping if a Canadian subsidiary of a foreign firm finds that in fact the product can be produced, either by a firm to which it is related or a firm with which it is dealing at arm's length somewhere else, more cheaply than it can be made in Canada, taking into account transportation costs and the normal duty—that is, if the price at which they import it into Canada is not less than the normal value in the country of export. This Bill deals only with the question of dumping, it does not deal with the question of whether or not it is possible to make something more cheaply abroad than in Canada.

Mr. Hales: I think, Mr. Grey, we are going to find that American subsidiaries in Canada will close their doors. They will import this product, they will be accused of dumping; they will get away with it. We will have manufacturing companies in Canada closed because of this legislation.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, Mr. Chairman, that, I do not think, is a question. If I may finish my answer, the important question that arises in the kind of transaction Mr. Hales has described, is the question of whether the import price stated on the face of the customs document, is in fact the price which the Canadian subsidiary paid its parent company or the company from which it imported the goods. That is the importance, therefore, of the section which allows the administration to look through the stated export price in the case of transactions between related firms. If, in fact, and it is a question of fact, the amount paid—actually transferred—by the Canadian subsidiary to the foreign firm to which it is related, is the real export price, then the question arises as to whether or not leaving aside all the transportation costs, that is the same as the normal value in the country of export. If it is less than the normal value that is dumping. Then the question arises whether that constitutes a threat of injury. The problem is to know, in transactions between related companies, whether the stated export price really is the consideration that passed between two persons not dealing at arm's length.

Mr. Hales: You mentioned they must prove injury. Well the import company...

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I beg your pardon, sir, I did not say they must prove injury. I said the question would arise as to whether there was a threat of injury, I did not say that they must prove injury, that is not the fact.

Mr. Hales: Well, if there is a threat of injury and the Canadian subsidiary would not say there was injury, would there be any other source that would prove or say there was injury caused by this importation?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, it might well be that the trade union in the plant concerned might represent to the government that there was injury. Employment is one of the indices of injury that is mentioned in the Code. I think if that was stated to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue, it would be perfectly within his jurisdiction, as this proposed legislation is drafted, for him to then consider whether an investigation should be launched into that particular transaction and to find out whether or not it was dumping.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: The following members would like to ask questions: Mr. Gray, Mr. Blair and Mr. Danson.

[English]

• 1145

Mr. Gray: Returning to Mr. Lambert's point, Mr. Grey, I gather it is your feeling that the method used in the United States for attempting to define nonarm's length transactions and associated companies has turned out to be a very complex piece of legislation, which is not easy to translate into Canadian legal terminology. Also as it is part of the American legislation itself any change would require amendment by the United States Congress, by their legislative body. On the other hand, Mr. Lambert suggests leaving the matter entirely to ministerial discretion is leaving it on too vague a basis. Mr. Lambert adds it may be capricious. I hope that both the administration Mr. Lambert was associated with, and the present one, would not have been interested in proceeding on a capricious basis but I suppose that criticism might always be made by people who are not happy with the exercise of the discretion.

Mr. Lambert suggests what he considers to be a middle way, that an attempt be made to define nonarm's length transactions and associated companies in a regulation, or set of regulations. These could then be changed, added to or amended, by the Governor in Council as circumstances would seem to require, without the necessity of formal legislative amendment.

May I suggest, because this is just the opening stage of our study of the proposed anti-dumping legislation, and we are going to hear the views of interested members of the public, and we are then finally going to come back to our own formal discussion on the legislation, that you might want to give some consideration, between now and the third stage of our deliberations, to whether or not Mr. Lambert's suggestion would be practical in the Canadian context. I think, if I may say so, it is worthy of further consideration. It may not turn out to be as practical as Mr. Lambert thinks it is, but may I suggest that you could report back to us when we come to the third stage of our deliberations.

Do you have a comment on my suggestion, Mr. Grey?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, Mr. Chairman, the draftsmen will be instructed to see if they can draft a regulation which might be somewhat along the line of the relevant sections of the United States anti-dumping act. When the draftsmen are satisfied with this, which I think would be fairly soon, I will be quite happy to make it available to the Committee for their consideration.

Mr. Gray: In the meantime as Mr. Arthur has obtained copies of the text of the American legislation, perhaps we could ask our Clerk to distribute them and we could use this as a basis for our further study of the issue raised by Mr. Lambert which, I think, is an important one.

Now if I may take another minute, Mr. Chairman.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Do you agree that the text dealing with the United States be distributed to the members?

Some hon. Members: Yes. Agreed.

[English]

Mr. Gray: If I may take another minute with your permission, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Grey, what, if anything, is there in the present legislation that would impose a dumping duty on a product which an American parent decides to make in the United States; for example, if they decide the cost of production is lower than the cost of production in its subsidiary in Canada? If those are the only circumstances available, would they be covered in any way by our present anti-dumping legislation?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think that the relevant provision in the present legislation is subsection 6 of section 6 of the Customs Tariff which, in the White Paper, is reproduced beginning at the bottom of page 27.

• 1150

This is an attempt in rather different language to provide the administration with the right to look through, to see, the real nature of the transactions between an importer in Canada which is related to an exporter abroad.

The second part of your question or, perhaps, the real import of your question, if, in fact, a subsidiary in Canada concludes that the product can be made more cheaply abroad and imported into Canada, at less than the cost to manufacture, the cost of distribution and the normal profit in Canada, and it makes that decision, brings this product into Canada, and then imports it, it is not dumping. That is, it is not importing it at less than the normal value in the country of export. If it is not dumping, it is not dumping. It may be an awkward problem of competition and it may well be that this competition is facilitated by the relationship that the subsidiary has to its parent company and the availability to it of a product of more modern design, but that is not dumping.

Mr. Gray: In other words, at the present time and under the existing legislation the mere fact that a product is produced in another country at a cost of production lower than the cost of production in Canada—whether by a parent firm or, for that matter, an unrelated firm—is not sufficient to enable the government to impose an anti-dumping duty under the present legislation.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, in the present legislation and in the draft legislation the references to cost of production in the Code refer to the cost of production in the country of export. There is no reference to the cost of production in Canada. The production of a product abroad, and its export to Canada at less than the Canadian price, is not necessarily dumping.

Mr. Gray: So that if we compare the situation under the present law with the situation under the proposed law with respect to the set of facts outlined by Mr. Hales, and limiting what I am saying just to the narrow terms of the set of facts set out by Mr. Hales, there is really no change.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think the only change is that we have attempted to draft this legislation in such a way that we could more easily identify transactions of that sort which might in fact be dumping. In other words, we tried to strengthen the enforcement provisions. Otherwise your remarks are quite correct.

Mr. Gray: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Mr. Blair.

Mr. Blair: Mr. Grey, what I am first going to ask follows on from what Mr. Gray has been asking. Is it possible for you or the administration to say that there is not likely to be any significant change in the valuation process as it exists under the present law and as it would prevail under the proposed Anti-Dumping Code?

• 1155

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, under the present law the calculation of value—that is, the fair market value in the country of export—for the regular or normal duty is in fact different from the calculation of what is called “normal value” in the Code for the purposes of levying the anti-dumping duty. It begins on page 29 of the White Paper. For example, an allowance for cash discount is taken into account in the calculation of fair market value for purposes of the anti-dumping duty, but not for the purposes of the normal duty. In other words, under our law now there is a difference in the calculation of that concept that is called “normal value” in the Code between the regular duty and the anti-dumping duty. I think that is true in all jurisdictions, not only in Canada.

This proposed anti-dumping bill does not deal at all with the question of the fair market value for regular duty. Those sections in the Customs Act are unaffected and remain completely intact, and those calculations will presumably be made in exactly the same way. The extent to which the calculation of normal value under this bill, in conformity with the Code, will differ from the calculation of fair market value for purposes of the present anti-dumping provisions can only be determined when you see the regulations which we discussed earlier, because those regulations have to deal with how the Deputy Minister of National Revenue will calculate a proper deduction for quantity, for differences in levels of trade, and so on.

Mr. Blair: Could I then direct your attention to clause 9 of the proposed bill, and more particularly the concluding paragraph, on page 50. This speaks of adjusting the arithmetic of the importer ...to reflect the differences in the terms and conditions of sale, in taxation and other differences relating to price comparability...

and then it concludes,

...but with no other allowances affecting price comparability whatever;...

I am in the unfortunate position of having arrived a little late and in answer to a previous question you may have already outlined the criteria which will be taken into account. You have mentioned cash discount. What are the criteria which fall under the general terminology of ...other differences relating to price comparability...

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, in the present legislation in the Customs Act—in the statute itself—there are rules for calculating the differences in quantity between the export sale and the transactions for consumption in the home market by that exporter. There are rules about level of trade. Then under Section 6 of the Customs Tariff Act, the anti-dumping provision, there are some regulations which have been made which for the calculation of other allowances for differences in the conditions in terms of sale between the sale for export to Canada and the sale by the exporter for consumption in the country of export. As this draft bill has been devised, all those matters are to be the subject of regulation. Before you came in, Mr. Blair, there was some discussion as to when those regulations in draft form could be made available, and I said that they would be available at the next meeting of the Committee. The words to which you drew our attention were:

...with no other allowances affecting price comparability whatever;...

• 1200

This was to make it clear, with respect to each transaction to which this arithmetic has to be applied, that only the allowances which are set forth in the regulation—and are therefore a matter of law and subject to appeal to the Tariff Board and on a point of law to the Exchequer Court—can be made. No others can be made. I do not think the words add anything to the effect of the section. I think they are there primarily for emphasis; to make it clear that only if you can find a basis in the regulation for an allowance can you have that particular deduction made. If it turned out in the light of experience that the regulations did not provide for some difference in the terms and conditions of sale—because I think the Code requires us to make an appropriate allowance for all differences in terms and conditions of sale—then it would be necessary to change the regulations so that as a matter of right they would be available to everybody who is carrying on a similar transaction.

Mr. Blair: I am glad you are able to make that statement because that would be my interpretation of the clause. It is contemplated, of course, as we discuss the application of these proposed regulations that they will apply to protect the Canadian manufacturers, but let me put a converse case to you.

Let us suppose that an American firm is selling its product in the United States at a price of $100 per unit and as part of its sales program in the United States it provides advertising allowances, let us say, to the value of $4 and it provides servicing of $4, meaning perhaps that the net selling price, having regard to these services, is $92 in the American market. Then, let us suppose that the American company appoints a distributor in this country, as is sometimes done, the distributor undertaking out of his own resources to provide for advertising, servicing and all that kind of thing. The American company and the Canadian distributor might agree on a price of $96 per unit as the import price into Canada.

My question is whether these contemplated regulations relating to valuation would work, as it were, both ways for the benefit of the importer in this kind of situation reducing his transaction to one which is more or less comparable to the condition in the home market?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Blair said that the purpose of these regulations would be to protect the Canadian producer. That is not a question, that is an assertion. I would like to comment that the purpose of these regulations is to meet our obligation under the Anti-Dumping Code. These words were taken almost literally from the Code.

I think the answer to your question is, yes. It will, I think be easier to deal with that, though, sir, when you see the draft regulations. I might merely comment at this time that the question has arisen and it has been the subject of extensive discussion in the group which drafted this White Paper as to whether in a situation in which the costs incurred for, let us say, advertising in the country of export are significantly less than the cost incurred in the country of import which might be the case, say, on an import into Canada from some European country, the allowance should be based on the sort of costs that are incurred in the country of export or the costs that are incurred for the carrying out of that particular function or service associated with the transaction in the country of import? I think the whole tenor of the Code is that it would be the costs incurred in the country of export. The whole purpose of these allowances is to adjust the export transaction back to the same basis as the sale for home consumption in the country of export. That is the basis for determining whether or not dumping has occurred. Of course, that is set out in Article VI of the GATT. There is nothing new in the Code on that point.

How we have tried to set out that concept in proposed law you will see, sir, in the draft regulations.

• 1205

Mr. Blair: I will not question you anymore on the detail of the regulations except to comment that I think Mr. Grey's answer to my question was a highly significant one and if my recollection is correct, then it will mean that the Department will have rather different terms of reference on valuation than they have had heretofore. Perhaps that is too broad a statement, but if these proposed regulations will work both ways, as it were, to the advantage of the importer into Canada as well as for the protection of the Canadian industry, then it is quite a different arrangement than the present anti-dumping provisions.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, may I just comment on the statement that Mr. Blair has made? It has been represented frequently by the governments of certain countries that export to Canada, that the basis in present Canadian law for calculating the differences in quantities and levels of trade provided for in the Customs Act do not give an adequate basis for calculating allowances—an allowance on those two counts. The Code is more specific than Article VI on this and I think it is quite clear that, as in other jurisdictions, there will be a significant difference between the calculation of normal value under the proposed anti-dumping legislation and fair market value under the Customs Act. There is a very wide difference in the United States, of course, between these two concepts and there is now a difference in Canada. There will be a greater difference when we meet our obligations under the Code.

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to take up too much of the Committee's time, but let us be specific. One of the problems which is frequently raised is the problem of the British exporter into Canada, where in Britain, as a general rule, you do not have the same number of levels of trade through distributors, wholesalers, retailers and so on, so that the British price in the home market quite frequently is the final price to the consumer, but when they come to North America with their products and appoint distributors and sub-distributors they are not able to establish a selling price in the British home market which is appropriate to all of these various levels of trade that we have in North America. I take from Mr. Grey's answer that it would be in contemplation, for purposes of determining dumping at any rate, that recognition now would be given to the differing trade practices of exporting countries and the exporters into Canada therefore, might, be able to get a more realistic and favourable valuation under the proposed Anti-Dumping code.

• 1210

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the Code lays certain obligations on us which are to take account of all the differences in terms of conditions of sale. The question which we have had to examine in the drafting group is whether, in the sort of case that Mr. Blair has cited, you deduct from the price for which the exporter sells for consumption in the United Kingdom some kind of an allowance which is related to the cost of advertising, warranty, and so on in Canada where it may be quite substantial, given the nature of our market, or in the United Kingdom where it may be a good deal less. I think it is quite clear from the Code that the allowance is related to the order of cost—incurred in the United Kingdom the sort of percentage cost—and that to go beyond that would be sanctioning dumping.

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, I have one other question which may open up a very broad field. All of us have been reading the financial papers and the accounts that have been published about proceedings in the United States Senate. I would not want to attempt to put words into the mouth of the editor of The Financial Post, but certainly the impression one gets from reading some of these reports is that the Americans may have done an end run around the anti-dumping agreement. Without going into detail perhaps it would be helpful to the Committee if Mr. Grey could explain what has happened down in the United States, and how the administration expects that the Americans will be able to comply with the terms of the international agreement.

The Chairman: Mr. Blair, that question was asked of Mr. Grey by Mr. Lambert before you came in.

Mr. Blair: I am so sorry; then, I will read the transcript.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): With all due respect, I think maybe Mr. Blair has opened another area which will be very instructive. It may be that Mr. Grey will say, "We will bide our time on this", but I do not think it should be ruled out on the fact that it has been asked before.

The Chairman: I did not rule out the question, Mr. Lambert. I just mentioned that the subject was brought up by you.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think it is the view of the United States administration that they will be able to comply with the terms of the Code but the rider to the renegotiation bill to which I referred before Mr. Blair came in the room is indeed very complicated. The Clerk has a copy of this bill and I gather it is to be printed in your proceedings. The precise meaning of this rider for the various obligations in the Code is not something I would wish to answer at this point. I have some questions which have been put to the United States representatives and when we have their answer I will be quite glad to give the Committee a considered answer. I am not dissenting from the view that it is important that the United States meet their obligations, but I do not think I should be put in the position of asserting whether or not they are at this stage.

The Chairman: On a supplementary question, sir?

Mr. Perrault: Yes, it relates to this. I would like to ask Mr. Grey whether there is any possibility that if there is a change in administration in the United States, after the result of a presidential election, there is any possibility of the United States repudiating any previous agreement entered into with respect to anti-dumping legislation by the previous administration? How binding is this agreement on subsequent American governments?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the Anti-Dumping Code, as it is called informally, has been signed on behalf of the United States Government on the authority of the President of the United States. I do not think I really wish to comment on the possibilities of another Congress, another President doing something else.

Mr. Perrault: A new President, with a new philosophy then, conceivably could repudiate this agreement?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: So could the Government of the United Kingdom, or the Government of France, or the Government of Canada.

Mr. Perrault: Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is not normally the basic on which trade negotiations are carried on.

• 1215

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Mr. Latulippe, is it a supplementary question, or a series of questions?

Mr. Latulippe: Just one question.

The Chairman: A supplementary question or...

Mr. Latulippe: No. A question.

[English]

Mr. Danson: May I start off with a supplementary to Mr. Blair's question? I think it is a rather interesting point and an important one. Does not the Tribunal ultimately determine whether this is dumping or not? In other words, are provisions for service or extra types of service which a distributor may give in this country, but which he may not give in the United Kingdom, for instance, taken into consideration? Does the Tribunal deal with these considerations at all?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the answer is no. The function of the Tribunal, under this proposed scheme of legislation, is really analogous to the role which the United States Tariff Commission plays in relation to the United States Anti-Dumping Act. It examines solely the question of whether or not the dumping, found on a preliminary basis by the Deputy Minister of the Department of National Revenue to have occurred, has caused, is causing, or is likely to cause, injury. Their function is solely to exercise a judgment about the impact on Canadian production of the dumping which has been found by the Department of National Revenue to have taken place.

Mr. Danson: To whom or with whom would one determine what is a fair price and what does not constitute dumping? If, in the case of a British product, for instance, the price is $1 and it is brought here for 80 cents, there is no analogous situation in Great Britain, and the Canadian distributor is working on a completely different basis, where is that determined and by whom?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, that is solely the function of the Deputy Minister of the Department of National Revenue and his officials acting under the proposed law and the regulations, which we discussed earlier and which are yet to appear. Of course, once a decision—an order or a finding to use the formal language—has been made by the Tribunal, then the calculation of the margin of dumping, that is the amount of dumping duty, import by import, is made by the Department of National Revenue subject to appeal to the Tariff Board on questions of fact. All these are, in part questions of fact and in part questions of law.

Mr. Danson: Well, the main question I was going to ask, previous to that, was covered partially by Mr. Hales and Mr. Herb Gray and was given, I think, quite a good answer. However, I think it is rather important that we know our terms of reference clearly, with reference to what is dumping and what is anti-dumping, and what we are dealing with here. Perhaps a practical example is the case of flashlight batteries where a major American company, say Union Carbide is manufacturing them in Canada and finds that its plant in Hong Kong can manufacture them much less expensively. As a result, they close down their Canadian operation and import from Hong Kong. RCA might do the same with transistor radios from Japan. This does not constitute dumping, as I understand it, except if it is sold below the market prices in those countries. These are matters of very great interest to this country when it comes to questions of the Watkins Report, for instance.

Mr. Gray: On a point of order, Mr. Grey, I think, is shaking his head in an attempt to indicate some type of answer. This is not recorded, and perhaps you might ask him to make some verbal affirmation or denial without shaking his head.

The Chairman: Thank you Mr. Gray, you have a good point there.

Mr. Gray: I assume you were agreeing with Mr. Danson from the direction in which your head was moving.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I am sorry.

Mr. Gray: This is not TV.

An hon. Member: For which we are grateful.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think the situation outlined by Mr. Danson is not one of dumping. Therefore, it does not fall within the scheme of this legislation.

Mr. Gray: It does not fall within the scheme of the existing legislation either?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is correct, sir.

Mr. Danson: I was trying to determine that we were all crystal clear in what we were discussing; what is dumping and what are the effects of foreign investment in the Canadian economy, which is quite a different kettle of fish, really. There seems to be some vagueness in this area, although I think your answer was quite clear.

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Chairman, as a result of a considerable amount of practical experience of the unfortunate situations which can arise in the fruit and vegetable industries, I am concerned with the effect of this legislation on those industries. We have always had the situation where fruits and vegetables come on the markets earlier in the United States than they do here in Canada. Let us take strawberries as one specific example. They come on the market perhaps a month earlier in the United States than they do in Canada, the market gets pretty well saturated in the United States, and the price from the time the strawberries first come on the market falls materially. For example, they may be selling at $2 a case for some two or three weeks, then they fall to $1.50 and by the time the Canadian strawberries come on the market, they are down to $1 a case. Then, of course, if there is no provision to protect the Canadian producer, it means that he has to sell the strawberries below the cost of production because he is in competition with the tail end of the crop in the United States. This was formerly covered by the value for duty provision found on page 36, (7) (b) where the deputy minister, I think it was, or the Minister, could put on a special value for duty in order to enable the Canadian producer to get a fair price for his product. Now, as I understand the situation, this section will disappear; it will be repealed. Is that correct?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is right, sir.

Mr. Harkness: Is there any section in the proposed act which covers this situation? I have gone over the act; I cannot find any and I was wondering whether there is any such section.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, in answer to Mr. Harkness' question, I think it is on page 96, subsection 3 of the proposed section 37. This provides the Governor in Council with the power to impose an additional duty or surtax on imported goods which are not dumped, but which are deemed to be injuring Canadian producers. The impact of this is precisely the same as in the present provisions under section 40A of the Customs Act to which you referred, sir, which enable an arbitrary evaluation to be imposed, which means the difference between the actual invoice price and the fixed valuation is levied as an anti-dumping duty. The effect of the present section is to impose an additional tax or duty when the goods are imported. This section, although worded somewhat differently to separate it from the anti-dumping provisions as such, will have precisely the same economic impact and the terms of the discretion proposed to be given the Governor in Council are analogous to that of section 40A as it now exists.

There is one other provision in the proposed anti-dumping act which may have a bearing on the type of importation to which you referred, sir, and that is found on page 48. In paragraph (c) of subsection (1) of proposed section 9, there is a reference to a period—a fixed period of time—and it is contemplated that the regulations will provide that in calculating what is the normal value—the value at which the goods have been sold for consumption in the country of export—rather than looking at transactions that occur on the day the export transaction took place, there will be some ability to look over a period. Whether or not that will be significant for the trade of fruits and vegetables is difficult to determine until we have had some experience with the working of this legislation. I merely wished to draw your attention to that provision as it is slightly different from the present provisions.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that most of the problems of potential injury or actual injury to Canadian producers of fruits and vegetables have not been problems of dumping as defined under the present law—as defined under the Code or as proposed to be defined in this act. Rather they have been problems of the United States producers being able to produce these goods or being willing to sell them at substantially lower prices than the Canadian producers are able to. They have been dealt with by a technique which imposed an additional emergency duty at the frontier and that action by Canada has been justified internationally by reference to Article XIX of the GATT, that is the escape clause or emergency clause of the GATT which is printed on the last page of the Minutes of the last meeting of this Committee. This proposed section 37 would provide precisely the same sort of power although it is stated to be a tax rather than an additional value for duty. The result is precisely the same, to be used under precisely the same sort of circumstances and to be justified internationally by the terms of Article 19 of the GATT and not Article 6 which deals with dumping.

• 1225

Mr. Harkness: But what tax is provided for? You said it is comparable, but in actual practice I do not think it would be comparable at all because for example, if you have a tax of 10 or 15 per cent and a case of strawberries is coming in at $1 whereas the normal price for sometime prior to this in the United States has been $2 then this is the price that is required for the producer to get an adequate return. You have a tax of 10 or 15 per cent, but you still have not provided any comparable remedy to the one which was provided by the old value for duty provision.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the present value for duty provision to which Mr. Harkness referred, does have the ceiling that the anti-dumping duty which is levied is the difference between the arbitrary or fixed value under section 40A and the actual invoice price. The ceiling on that is the one provided by the provision in the anti-dumping section that it shall not be more than 50 per cent ad valorem. No such limitation is required under the GATT. Accordingly, the last part of the proposed new section on page 98 of the White Paper says:

... a surtax at such rate, not exceeding the rate that in the opinion of the Governor in Council is sufficient to prevent further such injury or the threat of such injury, as is specified in the order.

Now, just as in the present legislation, the Governor in Council can—to look at the domestic law for the moment—provide under this section an astronomical value for duty and then the anti-dumping duty applies up to 50 per cent ad valorem. So it is contemplated here that the Governor in Council can prescribe such surtax—such emergency tax—as is necessary to prevent the injury. There is a limitation on the action of the Governor in Council provided for in Article XIX of the GATT that if this power is used in an unreasonable manner when we cannot demonstrate to our trading partners that there is injury they are likely to exercise their rights to take compensatory action. That is the case now and, presumably, will be the case if this provision is enacted. But there is no limit, sir, with the level of the tax—

Mr. Harkness: You contemplate, then, that a surtax, we will say, of 100 per cent, could be put on?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: The act does provide for that. The limitation on our action would be the view taken of such action by the government of the exporting country. That is the limitation now on the use of value for duty and that presumably would continue to be the limitation on the use of this slightly different power.

Mr. Harkness: But, in your view as far as this new act is concerned, evaluation or at least a surtax of, let us say, 100 per cent, could be put on?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is right, sir.

Mr. Harkness: There is another point in connection with this. In cases of this kind, time is of the essence. Under the situation that existed, the Minister, as soon as this matter was brought to his attention which ordinarily was as soon as the fruit season or whatever it happened to be started in Canada and imports were coming in at a lower price than had been secured during the season in the United States, could put on the surtax immediately without any delay. How much time would be required at present for the Governor in Council to deal with this and so forth? In other words, there is no use having a provision of this kind if it is going to take a week or 10 days to put it into effect.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, that point has been made to us about the present power which does require an Order in Council—action by the Governor in Council—to authorize the Minister of National Revenue to prescribe the manner in which such goods will be valued. This proposed section also requires an Order in Council and on the face of it there is no reason why it should take any more or any less time.

Mr. Danson: I believe, Mr. Grey, at the last meeting you mentioned something about the threat of dumping or the threat of injury—I am not sure which it was—and this applies here, I think, because one of my colleagues brought up the question of the turkey producers, where their price is driven down by the threat of over-production in the United States and the possibility of these lower costs being applicable to Canada in the turkey market. As a result the Canadian turkey producers have reduced their prices to meet the competition below an economic level, in their opinion. No dumping has actually taken place, but there is a threat of dumping and it is injurious in this man's opinion to his industry.

• 1230

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the situation that has been outlined is not one which, on the face of it, is dumping. I think in the case of most recent difficulties about turkeys it was not established that there was any dumping. What was at issue was whether or not there was injury or a threat of injury and I draw Mr. Danson's attention to the fact that the proposed section 37 mentions threat of injury. It is quite clear. It would be within the power of the Governor in Council to levy a surtax, if in the judgment of the Governor in Council on a report from the Minister of Finance, there was a threat of injury, but it ought to be clear, I hope, that this deals with injurious imports which are not dumped.

Mr. Danson: It is a pretty hairy one to sort of work with, is it not?

Mr. Harkness: I think all these agricultural products—fruits, vegetables, turkeys, eggs and so forth—are probably cases in which there is no dumping under the strict interpretation of dumping as laid down in our present act or under the new act, but there are cases in which there is very considerable damage to our industry because of different seasons of production in countries other than our own or in some cases, such as turkeys, it normally has been because of an over-production which has developed in the United States. The main concern, I think, of the people who are engaged in those industries is whether their protection in the future is going to be considerably reduced or whether it will remain approximately at what it has been. What is the answer to that?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think it is a matter of history that in the last decade or so most of the problems in this sector of trade have not been problems of dumping. The injury has been caused by non-dumped imports. It has been the availability of goods at substantially lower prices than Canadian producers could compete with. I think their protection under the proposed legislation would be almost exactly the same as it is now.

• 1235

Mr. Harkness: I would like to go to the matter I was on, the time element. When a person or representatives of an industry, as I read this proposed act, think they are being injured or there is a threat of their being injured, they have to report this matter to this Tribunal, or they complain and the Minister or the deputy minister turns the matter over to the Tribunal to make a determination as to whether there is injury or whether there is a threat of injury. Would that be the case as far as the fruit and vegetable industry is concerned?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the answer is, no. Just as at present, if it is the view of Canadian producers that they are facing imports which are injuring them or threaten injury, but clearly, as say, in the case of turkeys or potatoes or some of these more recent problems, on the face of it they are not dumped imports, then under the proposed legislation the Governor in Council could act on the basis of reports from the Minister of Finance. In the proposed section 37 the Tribunal has no role. This is an emergency provision analogous to that which all countries have in their legislation—some impose extra taxes, some impose quantitative limitations—and will not appear in the anti-dumping act, but will appear in the Customs Tariff.

Mr. Harkness: Under this act the Minister who will take action is the Minister of Finance, rather than the present provisions, the Minister of National Revenue. What is the reason for that? I would think the Minister of National Revenue would likely be much more in touch with these situations than the Minister of Finance and, therefore, in a better position to take action.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the matter of the prices at which goods are actually being imported is obviously one on which the Department of National Revenue has the information . . .

Mr. Harkness: Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: . . . and it will in the future, as now, make that available to the other government departments concerned. In the case of the sort of product you are talking about, it it would be the Department of Agriculture that would be most active. The question of whether or not a Canadian industry is being injured or threatened with injury has to be the initial responsibility of some minister. It seemed to the draftsmen that these were matters of economic judgment and not matters of the administration of taxing and tariff laws and they did not belong in the Department of National Revenue.

Mr. Lambert: Why not the Department of National Revenue which is the department that is primarily concerned with customs and the imposition of duties?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, to answer Mr. Lambert's point, because a number of these might concern the Minister of Agriculture or some might concern the Minister of Fisheries. It was considered that the neutral department—the department responsible for changes in the tariff—might be the department which would have the responsibility, in a formal sense, of making the recommendation to the Governor in Council.

Mr. Harkness: My only observation on that would be that on the basis, again, of practical experience in dealing with these matters I think the chance of, say, the fruit and vegetable people getting rapid action will be considerably less with the Minister of Finance being the Minister to take action than was the case with the Minister of National Revenue.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I did not detect that there was a question which I am required to answer.

Mr. Harkness: No, I said I would just like to make the observation. I was not putting it in the form of a question, Mr. Grey.

Mr. Burton: If my understanding of the section at the bottom of page 96 is correct, it means that an order made under this proposed subsection could be applied to imports made only after the date of the order. Is there any provision whereby the effect of the order could be made applicable to imports prior to the date of the passage of the order itself?

• 1240

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, we assumed that neither this Committee nor the House of Commons, would contemplate retroactive taxation of this sort. I think—I speak subject to legal advice—that it is not possible under the present legislation. I know that it is not the practice under the present legislation to pass with retroactive effect these Orders in Council which prescribe arbitrary valuations. That I understood was really the import of Mr. Harkness' question as to whether these matters could be dealt with expeditiously so that the injury was in fact precluded.

Mr. Burton: I wondered if there was any provision for application of order to the time period following the commencement of the investigation, or of a preliminary determination of fact that might be the term used otherwise.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, this section on page 96 has nothing do do with the anti-dumping act. It is a consequential amendment because it is no longer proper for us to use an anti-dumping duty to deal with non-dumped imports, and this section does not appear in the anti-dumping act. It would appear in the Customs Tariff and has nothing to do with dumping whatsoever. It has to do with injurious imports which are not dumped, and the tribunal and all the procedures of the anti-dumping act have nothing to do with this section whatsoever. This is in the section of the bill which provides for consequential amendments.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert: There is a little confusion here. Mr. Grey was telling us in answer to Mr. Harkness' question about the time element that under the old act it required an Order in Council to establish valuation for duty. I have looked at section 6, which is the authorizing section. Nowhere does section 6 of the Customs Tariff speak of the Governor in Council. It says the Minister. Then there are provisions in the regulations passed under section 6 where there is a possibility of Governor in Council action. Then we come to sections 35 or 36 to 41A which have to do with valuation for duty under the Customs Act, but it is only in certain remedial situations that the Governor in Council has to act. I rather think that may be a fair interpretation of 36 to 41, that the Governor in Council act only in exceptional cases under 36 to 41A and that otherwise it is the Minister. I do not know—perhaps subject here to Mr. Labarge's interpretation of how they operate under the Customs Tariff—I would like to get that straight because I have the impression that perhaps there is a little confusion here.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the emergency power which is used by Canada to deal with injurious non-dumped imports which Mr. Harkness is referring to is essentially to be found in Section 40A (7) (c) of the Customs Act which provides that, and I will read it for the convenience of the members of the Committee:

where at any time it appears to the satisfaction of the Governor in Council on a report from the Minister...

and that means the Minister of National Revenue...

that goods of any kind not entitled to entry under the British Preferential tariff...

and so on. That provides the authority for the Governor in Council to fix quite arbitrarily a valuation. Then the difference between the invoice price of those goods after such an order is passed and the arbitrary valuation, the difference of up to 50 per cent ad valorem, is levied as an anti-dumping duty. That is the only power which the Government of Canada has to deal with injurious non-dumped imports, and it is a power which is exercised by the Governor in Council by Order in Council on a report to the Minister of National Revenue.

● 1245

Now, the difficulty that Canada has encountered internationally is that the use of the anti-dumping duty in this way is seen by our trading partners to be an improper use of the anti-dumping duty. Other countries, such as the United Kingdom or the United States, would impose a quantitative restriction in such a situation and their action dealing with such injurious non-dumped imports would be presented internationally and have to be justified internationally under the terms of Article XIX of the GATT which is the provision that allows any signatory to the GATT to deal with imports which it deems to be injurious but which are not dumped. The impact of this provision, of an order fixing an arbitrary valuation, is in fact to impose an additional tax on those imports. And that is what this proposed section (7)(a) of the Customs Tariff would do.

Mr. Lambert: When you talk about (7)(a), are you on page 36?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think it is 7 (1a). I am on page 96, sir.

Mr. Lambert: All right.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Section 37, subsection (3), of this proposed bill introduces a new subsection (1a) of section 7 of the Customs Tariff.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Énard: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Énard.

Mr. Énard: I would like to say I gave you my name three quarters of an hour ago and you are allowing all kinds of supplementary questions. Although I am sure that all the questions can be considered as supplementary because they all deal with the same subject, nevertheless, you either take names or don't.

The Chairman: Well Mr. Énard, last week, at the previous meeting, when I asked the Committee for instructions concerning supplementary questions, the Committee left it to my discretion.

Mr. Énard: Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out that I can understand one supplementary, but when this leads to five or six subsequent ones, then it is no longer a question of supplementaries.

The Chairman: Well, I thought, after consideration, if I may say so, that I would let them go on, as they would have to come up at some time.— I am sorry— you said you gave your name forty five minutes ago. I did not see the time. It seems to me that, so far, the supplementaries that have been asked, concerned the subject we are studying. In the future, I intend to accept further supplementaries unless the Committee gives me other instructions.

Mr. Émard: Well, Mr. Chairman, in the future, my questions will be supplementary questions.

The Chairman: Well, if I find these supplementaries are replacing questions, then I will accept or refuse them. Yes, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert: I think that I have sinned much more often than the others. It seems that when we are dealing with a very complicated matter it would be better to get right to the bottom of things, rather than give the floor to a member who wishes like to discuss quite a different matter. I know that it is a very delicate matter, and I understand how frustrated Mr. Émard must feel just now, but if you allow the discussion to move on to something else, you loose the whole thread of thought and then it is more difficult, later on, to come back and re-examine the situation.

The Chairman: That is why I accepted the supplementary questions, Mr. Lambert, because, as I said to myself, if I didn't, Mr. Gray would have to go over his explanations again, at another meeting. I apologize to Mr. Émard for not being able to speak earlier.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I was mistaken, I believe. When you gave me the floor, I thought I was on your list. I intended to ask questions just as though it was my turn to do so. I am sorry if I made a mistake. I thought that most of the other members, who were asking questions after Mr. Blair, for instance, were just following the normal process. But I think there is something in Mr. Lambert's suggestion, to follow through in certain matters so as to have a more complete discussion. It is better not to accept too many supplementaries, but to ask the members who are asking questions, if they wish to give the floor to someone wishing to ask a supplementary, although they, themselves, have not finished asking questions. At the same time, I think it would be best to leave this to your discretion. I shall refer any difficulties which arise to the subcommittee for suggestions.

• 1250

The Chairman: When I gave you the floor, Mr. Gray, I thought it was your turn because you were the second one on my list, I am sorry...

[English]

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Harkness.

Mr. Harkness: If one is following a series of questions it is a little disturbing or, shall I say, it throws one off a bit to have a series of supplementary questions. Nevertheless, I think it saves time in the end to have these supplementary questions and finish with one phase of the subject rather than going back to it half a dozen times. So I really think your allowing the supplementary questions along this line is all to the good.

Now, I do not want to hold up Mr. Émard, so I have only one more question. In connection with...

The Chairman: Mr. Harkness, before you go any further I think, too, we will have to keep in mind that in the past we allowed 15 minutes to any individual member, for granting him additional time to compensate for supplementary questions. It is my intention, if I have no other direction from this Committee, to follow that rule. You have had, Mr. Harkness, over 20 minutes, but I will allow this other question. When I say 20 minutes, time for supplementaries were allowed.

Mr. Harkness: The question is in regard to manufactured items which have a seasonal or other feature in connection with them. I am looking at the present provision of (7)(a) under the value for duty provisions on page 36. With this provision of section 37(3)(1a)—Surtax in certain conditions—be applied equally to manufactured goods—to, say, agricultural products?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the answer is, yes.

Mr. Harkness: Can you give us any example of a product of that kind where this provision would apply?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, it has frequently been represented to us that this is the sort of situation that arises in the garment trade.

The Chairman: Mr. Hales?

Mr. Hales: My question has to do with procedure, if you are ready for that before we adjourn.

The Chairman: Before I give the floor to Mr. Hales, no doubt you have received notices of the intention of this Committee to sit this afternoon at 3.30 p.m. As you are all aware, the House granted us permission although, according to one of our members—Mr. Lambert—that permission will be used only when we have witnesses other than government officials. I am sorry I called the meeting this afternoon before getting in touch with members of the subcommittee, but because there is a time limit, in a way, for returning this White Paper to the House of Commons I have called this meeting for this afternoon.

• 1255

Another suggestion I wish to make is that when a member asks a supplementary question or has his turn, he should address himself to the microphone because I understand that our people have a hard time getting the question.

Mr. Hales: With regard to the White Paper issued by the United States on this matter of anti-dumping regulations, I might say that I do not think it is one bit better than our own; as a matter of fact, I think our own is a better production. However, there is one part of it that I think would be of help to the members of the Committee. At the back of the American one they have a series of examples for purposes of illustration and they list seven of them there. I am wondering whether our officials would be good enough to give us seven examples of a similar nature, but related to existing conditions in Canada. Mr. Grey, would that be possible?

Mr. Gray: While Mr. Grey is thinking about his answer, may I ask something for clarification? Is this document headed: FEDERAL REGISTER Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Customs, Antidumping Regulations, dated Saturday, June 1, 1968, which was distributed to us by Mr. Arthur, a white paper issued by the United States Federal Government or rather a release in a form similar to that used by our Canada Gazette of the law as it existed in the United States and, I suppose still exists pending the implementation of the United States obligations under the GATT negotiations in the code?

Mr. Blair: It is intended to meet the requirements of the GATT arrangements.

Mr. Gray: We should understand—or perhaps I should understand—exactly what this document is.

The Chairman: Mr. Grey, are you ready to give a reply to the question asked by Mr. Hales?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think before answering Mr. Hale's question I really would like to consult the government's legal advisers as to the appropriateness of giving an example. The practice in the United States on such matters is somewhat different from here and my own inclination is not to give examples but rather to discuss the terms of the proposed legislation.

As to the question raised by Mr. Gray, the FEDERAL REGISTER is the equivalent in the United States system of law to the Canada Gazette. In the first part of this document which goes to page 8250 of this particular edition of the FEDERAL REGISTER, these are the regulations which have been instituted with effect July 1, so that the United States, with respect to those operations that fall within the control of the Secretary to the Treasury, is acting, it believes, in conformity with the Code. The date for application of the Code by the United States was July 1. We thought it would be convenient if we also annexed to this particular document the Antidumping Act of 1921, because it is difficult to understand these regulations without having the Act with it.

Mr. Gillespie: These now have the force of law in the U.S.?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Yes, sir.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, I have a supplementary.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Gillespie?

Mr. Gillespie: It has to do with the whole question of clarifying the terms we are using and the basis on which duties are set. Mr. Grey has pointed out that the anti-dumping White Paper here and draft act is not concerned just with protecting the interests of domestic producers, but a lot of domestic producers are concerned about the effects of this act.

They are being asked, it seems to me, to compare two things. They are being asked to compare a new act with an old act. Many of them also are trying to compare a new act with existing legislation with respect to importations and tariff changes. We have talked about this this morning.

It seems to me that it would be helpful if we could see some sort of a brief chart—no more than a page—which would define and reconcile the terms we have used, and I am referring particularly to normal value and export price on the one hand and to fair market value and selling price on the other. I think this would help many of us to understand; it certainly would help me and, I suspect, many in industry to understand the kind of changes we are talking about.

It also would seem to me very helpful if. . .

The Chairman: I am very sorry, Mr. Vice-Chairman, but you asked a supplementary question. Is it a statement you want to make?

• 1300

Mr. Gillespie: The question is, would Mr. Grey be prepared to produce such a chart?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think the answer, Mr. Chairman, must be no, because the concepts that have been referred to are concepts which have been the subject of a number of decisions by the Tariff Board and in some cases by the Exchequer Court. They are very complicated questions in law and I do not think, as a practical matter, they can be reduced to some easy sort of chart exposition.

For example, the question of what is a selling price has been the subject of an Exchequer Court decision. I think it is beyond the possibility of human wit to reduce this to an accurate chart.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, it is 1 o'clock. The meeting is adjourned until 3.30 p.m. or after the Question Period unless I am otherwise instructed by you members.

AFTERNOON SITTING

The Chairman: Gentlemen, I am seeking your guidance. Should we proceed now unofficially, and when can we ask that a motion be accepted? Otherwise, at the next sitting, which will be next Thursday morning, a motion could be passed that the proceedings this afternoon are official. What is your direction on that?

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, I do not think I could concur that these hearings now would be official in any sense of the word without a quorum.

The Chairman: In the past the Committee has proceeded without an official quorum, but later on it became official on a motion when we had the required number. If you feel that we should not sit. . .

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, is there not a distinction between hearing evidence and passing motions? Why can we not sit as we are, carry on a discussion, and question the witnesses but refrain from any action which might be considered official with respect to motions?

Mr. Hales: I agree.

The Chairman: Is this agreeable to you, gentlemen? If so, I will begin with Mr. Émard.

[Interpretation]

• 1550

Mr. Émard: Mr. Chairman, I would like to have some practical information, so as to have a better idea on the purpose of the Bill. We constantly refer to American dumping. I would like to know if other countries dump their surplus production in Canada besides the United States?

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the United Kingdom has dumping legislation and it has recently been modified to bring it into accord with the international agreement. The Commission of the European Economic Community drafted legislation which, as I understand it, is to be enacted by each of the parliaments of the member states of the EEC and enforced at the national level. This is still a matter which is under the national governments of the EEC, not under the community at such. I believe the Japanese now have dumping legislation. Finland has a new dumping bill. The Nordic countries, Norway and Sweden, have dumping bills. If you required it, sir, I could get a list of all the countries that have legislation but. . .

Mr. Émard: No, no.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Other people have caught the fever.

Mr. Danson: I have a supplementary to that. Did the nations in the European Common Market have—I was going to say common law—similar laws in this respect? Is it identical or similar in the European Common Market economic community?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, before the negotiation of this Code I think the only country which had a law which, by its terms, explicitly dealt with dumping rather than dealing with it at the administrative level was France. Since the passage of the Code, in which the representatives of the Commission of the European Economic Community played a very active part, the Commission has drafted a model law and I believe it is now in force in each of the member states. To what extent, because of the different administrative practices, there are differences from this model legislation, I am not quite sure. I have examined the model legislation, which is rather closer to the language of the Code than our language.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: I conclude from what you just said that Canada is not the only country to suffer from U.S. dumping.

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think it is correct that Canada is not the only country that suffers from dumping by Americans. It is my understanding that Canadian exporters sometimes dump and that exporters in many countries dump. It is a very common commercial practice and according to the international rules it is to be condemned only if it threatens injury.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: But, here, in Canada we always refer only to the United States. Is dumping in Canada carried out only by the U.S., or are other countries involved?

• 1555

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I expect, Mr. Chairman, that is because the majority of our imports come from the United States and we most frequently refer to the problem of dumping through subsidiary companies, and also because the United States has very detailed anti-dumping legislation which the draftsmen have studied rather carefully. So, I expect that is the reason that I at least refer to it very frequently.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Could you mention some items that are often dumped on the Canadian market?

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Certainly.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Gray.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman...

[Interpretation]

Mr. Gray: ... Mr. Émard may create some difficulties for the officials. Usually, public information on dumping is not given out. Perhaps this question could best be left to the officials themselves. Is it unusual to make public information on decisions regarding dumping tariffs? It might be difficult for officials to give us accurate information on this matter. Perhaps not. I don't know.

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Gray's observation is correct. The reason I was hesitating in answering the question is that until new legislation is in effect which requires, in conformity with the Code, that a degree of publicity be given, the question of whether or not an anti-dumping duty has been levied—that is, that the product has been dumped—is a question between that taxpayer and the Crown. It is just as confidential as an individual's income tax. Those that are known about are in fact those who have appealed to the Tariff Board or the Exchequer Court. For example, there is the very well-known case of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, and the question of whether or not there is dumping involved there is a matter that is public knowledge because the facts came up before the Exchequer Court. However, as Mr. Gray observed, these are confidential matters except where they have been brought before the courts, and are then a matter of public record, so I am unfortunately unable to answer the question.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: My last question. Everyone I think agrees that the United States is a country with very high productivity. Now, in such a case, it is quite easy to have surplus production. I wonder if you could give us a general idea of what an American over-production of 5 p. 100, let us say, in a given product, would represent percentage-wise on the Canadian market?

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I do not think I really understand the question, sir.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: I would like to say, we could, for instance take one example, let us choose a given product, for instance, the United States might produce millions of match boxes and the consumption in the United States still leave a surplus of, let us say, 500,000 boxes. Now, 500,000 out of several millions would represent but a small percentage in the United States. If these 500,000 boxes were dumped in Canada, they could possibly represent high percentage compared to our match production. So would you have an idea of what 5 p. 100 for instance of excess production in the United States could represent here in Canada? Would it be 25 or 30 p. 100, on the basis of the production of Canada and the United States?

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think my difficulty is that I do not see the relationship between this and the proposed anti-dumping bill. Certainly across a wide range of products the United States production is 15 or 20 times the Canadian production. For some products it may be lower. On cotton textiles, for example, 1 to 20 is the ratio that is usually used by people dealing with that item. It may be, because production is on a much larger scale in the United States, that their costs for a particular product are much lower and therefore after paying the normal tariff they can compete in the Canadian market without dumping. That would seem to me to be a commonly observed phenomenon. However, I do not see the relationship between the factual question you asked and the anti-dumping arrangements.

• 1600

[Interpretation]

Mr. Énard: What I thought personally was that as the United States over-produces several commodities the purpose of the anti-dumping legislation was to protect us against excess exportation. If, as I said earlier, the consumption here is based on a given number of units—for instance let us suppose that the United States manufactures 10,000 refrigerators, and that out of these 10,000 refrigerators they have sold 9,000 at American prices. They have an excess of 1,000. They know they will have different models next year, so they want to get rid of the 1,000 refrigerators that are left. They dump them on the Canadian market. That might not be true for fridges, but it might be true for other things.

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Sir, the question is whether a transaction of the sort you describe would be dumping. Your example does not seem to me to be particularly hypothetical. It is the sort of transaction that can in fact take place.

Whether or not it would be dumping depends on the precise wording of the regulations we were talking about this morning—the matter of the allowances for quantity and the price during the period in relation to the time of the export to Canada.

It is really very difficult to answer the question whether or not such a transaction is dumping until you see the regulations.

I would make one point, though, which is not perhaps very obvious. The Bill was drafted in terms of like products and that means that “like” is defined as identical, where identical goods exist.

It has been the conclusion of those who have discussed this internationally that the addition of a brand to an article, such as in the case of “Frigidaire”, makes it distinct from an unbranded article.

That is the sort of question that is going to have to be discussed and examined in legal context, case by case, when the legislation is in force. But certainly the kind of commercial transaction that you describe is frequently called dumping, and it may be dumping under this legislation.

Mr. Flemming: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a supplementary?

The Chairman: I understand that Mr. Flemming wishes to ask a supplementary question.

Mr. Flemming: Mr. Grey, would not the determination of whether or not it was dumping depend on the price at which it was invoiced to the prospective customer?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, whether or not it is dumping depends on the difference between the export price—that is the phrase used in the Bill for the price at which it is invoiced to the Canadian importer—and the normal value in the country of export. The difference between is the margin of dumping, taking account of the fact that they are both to be on an f.o.b. basis.

Mr. Flemming: That was really my question: Would this not depend on at how much the goods were offered below the regular price in the country of origin?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Sir, the difficulty raised by the previous question and by the way you have put your comment is how you calculate what is the normal value and what allowances you make for the difference in quantities sold in the country of export for home consumption and the export transaction. That is why I said earlier that the calculation of this—the determination of whether it is dumping and by how much—depends upon the regulations that we mentioned this morning.

• 1605

To use Mr. Émard's analogy, he said 1,000...

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Mr. Latulippe, is this a supplementary question?

Mr. Latulippe: No.

The Chairman: Because you are the next one on the list.

Mr. Gauthier: Yes, it is a supplementary.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Gauthier.

Mr. Gauthier: I think that in order to try and clarify Mr. Emard's thinking, I believe that when he mentioned a difference of 5 p. 100, he wanted to know what difference it makes. Let us for instance, take an example to clarify my idea. If, for instance, we reach an agreement with the United States on eggs. It is possible, for Canada, to export for instance, 10 p. 100 of its production, or its excess production, and the United States, on the other hand, was allowed to export 4 to 5 p. 100 of their production. I believe that Mr. Emard wanted to know, what impact the importing of American surplus eggs would have on Canada in view of high American production. What difference would there be between the "dumping" by the United States in Canada and "dumping" by Canada in the United States in terms of ratios or percentages? I think this is what Mr. Emard wanted to know.

What percentage does that represent comparing the two productions?

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Perhaps I could put my answer this way: What, for Canada, might be a very substantial volume of exports to the United States, which might be dumped, might have no impact at all on the enormous American industry.

There might well be cases of dumping of Canadian exports, but there would be no possibility of the United States Tariff Commission finding that they injured American producers. The attention that is afforded Canadian exporters who may be dumping in the United States market is such that it is unlikely that Canadian production and exports would be so substantial as to have an impact on the United States market; although it is the case that what might be a very small portion of American production, dumped on a market which may be one-tenth or one-twentieth the size, might have a very substantial effect indeed on Canadian production.

It seems to me that if the proposed anti-dumping tribunal in Canada, and the Tariff Commission in the United States were to apply, under the language of the Code, precisely the same standard on what constitutes injury, one might find that a dumped export from Canada of, let us say, 100 units of some product, might not threaten injury to the United States producers, whereas the export of 100 units at a dump price from the United States into Canada might indeed threaten injury; and that simply derives from the difference in the size of the market.

Mr. Danson: A supplementary to that. The point, then, if I correctly recall a discussion at one of our previous meetings, was not whether it was injurious to the entire industry, but to even a segment of that industry, even one American supplier—if he were injured by the dumping of 100 Canadian units on the market.

I would assume and perhaps I am assuming too much—that that would bring action under their anti-dumping legislation. In other words, if it were injurious to a total industry, or affect the output of somebody's business...

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, that question raises two points. First, what is an industry and, second, the question of the individual producer.

I think I said in an earlier discussion that an industry was not a set of corporations. It is the production, the capital and the labour, resources and managerial skill employed in the production of a particular article, abstracted from the corporate structure.

That is, if, let us say, flashlights are being dumped into Canada the impact of that quantum of dumped flashlights has to be assessed in relation to the Canadian production of flashlights, not to the operations of the Canadian General Electric Company. Clearly, that latter result would be nonsensical. It would lead to everybody's separately incorporating each of their separate lines of production.

• 1610

That is quite clear from the Code and that is why we talked about Canadian production rather than Canadian industries. "Industries" does suggest to many people a group of corporations. To avoid that connotation we have talked about "Canadian production" throughout the Bill.

Now, whether one producer could bring an anti-dumping action—I do not think "action" is quite the right term. This is not actionable in a conventional adversary sense. As to whether they can trigger off an investigation the answer as far as our legislation is concerned, is this: if the Deputy Minister of National Revenue is satisfied that there is some evidence of dumping and is of the opinion that there is some evidence of injury he can start an investigation, but when the tribunal examines the question of injury, they are, it is proposed, bound by the provisions of Article 4 of the Code, which is found at page 15 of the White Paper, which says, in part:

...the term "domestic industry" shall be interpreted as referring to the domestic producers as a whole of the like products...

That is, the identical product. Let us say in this case it is a flashlight. I continue:

...or to those of them whose collective output of the products constitutes a major proportion of the total domestic production...

Then there are a number of exceptions to it, but that is the basic rule. Incidentally, this section is the only section of the Code which is explicitly referred to in the draft bill and which by reference is imported into the bill. Everywhere else the bill stands completely on its own feet without any reference to the Code whatsoever. This is the one part where the Code is imported into the bill. It would be a matter for the tribunal to decide what is a "major proportion".

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a supplementary?

The Chairman: I will allow this one, but I want everyone to have a chance to ask questions for 10 to 15 minutes. Your name is coming up shortly, Mr. Gillespie, but I will allow this one.

• 1615

Mr. Gillespie: I think it is pertinent to the question that was just asked because part of this question of injury deals, as I understand it, with the question of retardation, I think the words are "materially retards the establishment of a domestic industry". Now the problem I am having is this. If we are talking about one company or a group of companies, we are talking about them in existence; when we start to talk about the establishment of a domestic industry we are probably talking about something which does not yet exist. So why then would not one producer or one potential producer qualify under the terms of this particular act?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, Mr. Chairman, in that situation where what is alleged is that dumping is taking place and the impact of that dumping is to prevent a potential Canadian producer from producing that product and there is no other producer in Canada—obviously that is the situation—then he is the whole of the potential Canadian industry for this purpose. The conclusion drawn is perfectly correct and I think that is implied in the last sentence of Article 3, paragraph (a) of the Code on page 14.

Mr. Gillespie: Well under those circumstances one producer would be sufficient to qualify?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Yes.

Mr. Danson: In Canada?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: In any country, yes.

Mr. Danson: I hope you do not mind me pursuing this but Mr. Gillespie and I, in our previous occupations, were victims of legislation and we are not used to working with the legislation itself. It is very interesting because these things are reciprocal, I would think, and if we interpret things unfairly then they are likely to interpret them in the same light. I know my own experience has been that a producer in the States can be a very vocal person to his Congressman, as can be his Congressman, and sometimes interpretations of customs regulations on that side of the border are pretty strict. I think there has been some relief in that respect in the new spirit generated by the Automotive Trade Pact for instance. But it is terribly important that we understand this point because if it is an industry per se, as a whole it suffers. My experience is that if you are hurting one fellow in South Bend, Indiana the whole full force of the American government comes on his side, and if this was a little clearer it would be very helpful.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, there are two aspects of this. Under the United States practice as applied before July 1, if a producer complained and there appeared to be dumping an order could be made by the Treasury to withhold appraisement of those goods. That meant that though the goods would be released from Customs and they could in fact be disposed of, the importer did not know whether or not he might be liable for an additional dumping duty. Should it be finally concluded that the goods are dumped and then the matter referred to the United States Tariff Commission and it finds there is injury, this process during which the goods are simply held, subject to appraisement—although released from Customs and one could dispose of them—might last from six months to two years. It was the view of the Canadian government and many other governments that this restricted legitimate trade and that this meant, because there was no time limit on which appraisement could be withheld, that dumped exports which were not injuring anyone were being dealt with by a technique of holding imports subject to appraisement for prolonged periods of time. And this is the reason that in the Code there were time limits set on the taking of provisional action. Withholding of appraisement is provisional action in terms of the Code. So that while it may be that a single producer in the United States, as in Canada, can trigger an investigation as to whether dumping takes place there can be no liability created for potential anti-dumping duty—that is by the withholding of appraisement, to use United States language—for longer than 90 days. At the end of 90 days there must be a decision by the Anti-Dumping Tribunal in Canada or by the Tariff Commission in the United States as to whether or not there is injury. That was one of the main purposes of the Code from the point of view of access to the United States market. It was not part of the purpose of the negotiations to preclude the United States from levying anti-dumping duties on Canadian exports that were dumped and did, in fact, threaten injury to United States producers. It was part of the purpose of the negotiations to limit the operation of the United States legislation and our own in such a way that harassed exporters who were dumping but were not injuring anyone—

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Was Mr. Émard through?

• 1620

Mr. Émard: A last question. Are you aware that Canada has already been accused of dumping in the United States?

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, there have been a number of cases in which Canadian exporters have been accused of dumping in the United States. Several of them have gone beyond this question of dumping and into the question of injury, and I think there is one case current now which arose before the Code came into effect.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Have you concluded, sir?

[English]

Before I give the floor to Mr. Latulippe I would like to state that we are now in a position to operate in an official capacity. Mr. Latulippe?

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: I was waiting for Mr. Grey's answer.

[English]

The Chairman: I am sorry, Mr. Émard.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I have a record here of all the cases since 1960 which have progressed to different points in the United States under the investigative process, and I am trying to establish how many cases there are now. I think there is at least one. Mr. Chairman, from a quick reference to the material we have, it seems that the current cases which have not been terminated in the United States involve—since these are matters of public record in the United States this could be established by reference, I think, to the notice of investigation that is published in the Federal Register—concord grapes, potassium chloride, frozen haddock, radio and television towers, plastic mattress handles and brake drums. These are the products which it is alleged Canadians are dumping on the United States market.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Mr. Émard?

Mr. Émard: No, thank you.

The Chairman: Mr. Latulippe, please.

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, I think that we are dealing with generalities. Could we not concentrate and work on sectors which are of particular interest to us in Canada? Could we define the sectors in which we are affected by dumping, either from France, Japan or the U.S.—for instance, such sectors as the textile, footwear, or food industry? It seems that it would be easier to work on subjects which are clearly defined and the dumping of which is detrimental to Canada. Besides, this is what people expect us to do, particularly where textiles are concerned. I think we should work on specific subjects so as to know where we stand in this matter and also to know whether we are not causing injury ourselves by dumping in other countries.

The Chairman: Thank you for your question, Mr. Latulippe. The Committee had decided that members would be able to put questions after Mr. Gray's report and then to proceed article by article on the new draft Bill. I think, in order to be fair, the Committee has decided to follow this procedure to enable the members of this Committee to put questions on Mr. Gray's report, which was submitted last week, and then, to deal, article by article, with the draft bill in the new White Paper.

Mr. Gray: We will then hear witnesses from the public sectors and then finally, we will have a discussion on the White Book, White Paper, before we get on to our final report. Therefore, we are meeting here to obtain explanations concerning the contents of the legislation dealt with in the White Paper. When we'll have groups from the public sector, perhaps groups representing the textile industry, we shall be able to enquire about special problems as Mr. Latulippe suggested, because I think it's a very useful suggestion. But I suppose, Mr. Chairman, that your idea is that it would be better to delay the enquiry on special subjects and perhaps until we can meet those groups representing the various sectors of industry who have specific ideas to submit, and then get on to the questions which we would like to put. Thereafter, we could discuss our ideas, in Committee, while dealing with the final stage of this White Paper.

• 1625

The Chairman: Gentlemen, as chairman of this Committee, I am at your disposal. These, I believe, are the guidelines you have set for me and which I am following. But, of course, you may decide to change them.

Do you have another question, Mr. Latulippe?

Mr. Latulippe: No.

[English]

Mr. Gillespie: I pass, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Mr. Flemming?

Mr. Flemming: Not at the moment, thank you.

The Chairman: Mr. Gray, do you have any questions?

Mr. Gray: Not at the moment, Mr. Chairman. Perhaps I will when we begin looking at the bill clause by clause.

The Chairman: Mr. Perrault?

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, I am interested in some of the methods to be used to establish value for anti-dumping. I think we have covered very well in the hearings, thus far, the procedures which would apply to economies comparable to our own. I am interested in the matter of state-controlled economies. I know that in section 9, subsections (4) and (5) there seems to be a reference to the matter of state-controlled economies and reference is made to:

9. (5) (a) the government of that country has a monopoly or substantial monopoly of its export trade, or

(b) domestic prices are substantially determined by the government of that country,

It seems to me it poses an entirely new set of problems in the matter of establishing the value for anti-dumping. It has been proposed at various times that if we are to establish a fair method of calculating the domestic price, we should have a procedure developed to compare that domestic price to those which exist in a third country. It has been suggested and I quote:

Article (g)2—State Controlled Economies.

(i) the free economy third country must be located in the same general geographic area of the world as the exporting country.

(ii) standards in real terms of living and wages in the two countries must be as near as possible and due allowances must be made for any difference in the standards.

(iii) the cost and source of raw materials for the product in question must be taken into consideration.

(iv) due allowance must be made in each case for difference in terms of sale for the quantities involved, for differences in taxation and other differences which affect price comparability.

The draft bill suggests—I can only find the general words:

9. (5) shall be determined in such manner as the Minister prescribes.

I wonder if Mr. Grey could tell the Committee what methods will be employed to determine whether something has been practised by state-controlled economies. I think this is an important question if we are going to engage in more trading with this type of economy in the years to come.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the group that negotiated the Code, in which there was a representative speaking on behalf of the state-controlled economies of Eastern Europe, agreed that the internationally accepted practice should be continued, essentially as you have described it, sir, by reference to the prices at which a more or less similar product is being imported by an economy of an open-market type and presumably a neighbouring economy where conditions are as much the same as in a state-controlled economy as can be reasonably ascertained. That has been the practice followed by Canada. It has been the practice followed by the United States. There was recently a case, I believe, where the United States found that dumping was occurring from Poland and they did, in fact, proceed in the way you suggested by reference to the imports of a similar product from a nearby country having an open-market economy.

I might say, Mr. Chairman, that in the Code this is remarkably unclear. It is found on page 13. At the bottom of page 13, paragraph (g) it says:

(g) This Article is without prejudice to the second Supplementary Provision to paragraph 1 of Article VI in Annex I of the General Agreement.

I think it was a mistake on the part of the people who prepared the White Paper not to have included the supplementary provisions to Article VI because this part of the Code cannot be understood by reference to anything in the White Paper and if your Committee agreed, Mr. Chairman, I have found these additional provisions which are entitled "Add Article VI". They should really have been included in the White Paper and it would help the members of your Committee to understand this.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, it is a matter of concern and some confusion for me to see it dealt with in such a vague fashion. When regulations are issued, will they cover the methods to be employed to determine dumping as it relates to state-controlled economies?

• 1630

The Chairman: And you will move that this additional information be included?

Mr. Perrault: Yes, I would.

The Chairman: Seconded by Mr. Trudel.

Mr. Trudel: Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the present practice is that the Minister of National Revenue now prescribes how the value of such an import from a state trading economy shall be valued for normal duty and for purposes of the dumping duty. That is carried forward in subclause (5) of clause 9 on page 52, and on this there really is no change except that the particular circumstances in which the Minister shall prescribe the value are described more exactly. This is covered by a general provision under the present legislation. Here we attempted to describe that class of import on which the Minister should use this discretionary power. But the Minister does now prescribe it, and we have neither added to nor subtracted from his discretion in this regard.

It is the case, though, that if it is found that such an import from a state trading economy is dumped by the use of this provision, there will also have to be an examination into injury. That, of course, applies to this class of dumped imports as to others, and that is new, of course.

Mr. Danson: Mr. Grey, you used the word "like" previously and described it briefly. I have heard it used a few times in these discussions and it referred to products and to conditions. When you referred to "like" products you interpreted "like" to mean identical. Then the further illustration of a refrigerator that had the name Frigidaire on it and one that was unbranded brings up the question concerning to what extent, if any, are we using the "class or kind" descriptions that we have been accustomed to in the past, because if "like" is meant to be "identical", there are all sorts of ways of evading these general categories of goods. Maybe I misunderstood it. Then there are "like conditions", a term which also requires some interpretation. I am primarily interested in the interpretation of "like" products. How are we going to differentiate there?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, this is defined in the interpretation provision of the proposed bill, clause 2, subclause (g), which reads:

(g) "like goods" in relation to any goods means

(i) goods that are identical in all respects to the said goods...

Now, it would be my view—of course, once this bill comes into effect, my view is irrelevant; it is what the court says—that a branded product is not like in this sense, not identical with the same article minus the brand. That was something which was discussed extensively in the negotiating group. The definition goes on to say:

or,

(ii) in the absence of any goods described in subparagraph (i),...

which I have just read out.

goods the characteristics of which closely resemble those of the said goods;

• 1635

So, concerning the product which it is alleged is being dumped into Canada, if there is no Canadian product which is like it, then you look at the impact of that dumping on

"goods the characteristics of which closely resemble those of" the imported product. And, in the case of the country of export, if there is no sale in the home market of a product which is identical to that which is being exported to Canada, then you look at the price in the home market of the product made by that exporter which has characteristics closely similar to those that he is exporting to Canada.

Mr. Danson: Yes. Well, I was confused, "Closely similar" gets into a broader category, but the question of branded and unbranded, if that interpretation was of "like", it was pretty clear for a while. It was terribly restrictive. It was a "like" I did not like. But then you are getting into something we will not call "class or kind", but that type of interpretation—"closely similar to"—if we can stay with refrigerators, then does this make a difference whether it has a bigger freezing compartment than the other refrigerator? How "like" is like? If you say it is not in the same category as the "class or kind" rulings, which we got used to—I do not know if they are good; many of the rulings were perhaps bad—but it gave you an area to work in, and this looks very confined. It need not be, except that when we talk about the difference between branded and unbranded not being "like", then something that closely resembles is then a matter of interpretation, and it could be interpreted broadly or narrowly. I am just not sure what the intent is here and if our intent is the same as the other signatories involved?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I cannot see, Mr. Chairman, that there really is a problem here analogous to the "class or kind" problem. I suppose, though, that if it is found by the Tribunal that there is, in fact, no production or planned production in Canada of any product that has characteristics closely similar to that of the imported dumped article, then there can be no injury. And I think it is only in that sense that there is a problem analogous to the "class or kind" problem. But it would be a matter for judgment by the Tribunal, I would think, to determine what impact the dumping of article "A" has on Canadian production of article "C". They may say that they are so dissimilar that there cannot be any impact at all. In that sense it becomes a question of injury. Except in that context, I do not think there is a problem analogous to the "class or kind" problem, and I think that, with respect, when we go through the bill, clause by clause, you will see that the whole structure is really quite different on this particular point.

Mr. Danson: I see.

Mr. Grey: This definition is taken from the Code, and it simply is an injunction to look at both the terms of the import market and the price in the country of export for the identical product, and if you cannot find it to look at something similar.

Mr. Danson: Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That does not seem to me to introduce any complications.

Mr. Danson: Oh, no, that interpretation I did not mind, except it was the interpretation I took from your interpretation which was when you took it from a branded to an unbranded, it became "not like", and that was getting pretty identical, except for the name plates. But maybe I misunderstood you.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I had merely made earlier a purely factual statement that the negotiators felt that there were many areas of trade in which the addition of a brand made the product not "like", in the sense of identical, but it might remain within the definition of "like" in the second paragraph.

• 1640

I think it is the case that a product which has with it the brand name which has been heavily advertised is for commercial purposes a different product than the same physical article which cannot be identified by the consumer as being that branded article.

Mr. Danson: But this is really perhaps what dumping is all about. We have dumping on the domestic market by the same company. They will make an unbranded and a branded item, and dump in this case too, within our own country and particularly when you get into the area of brand names.

Mr. Perrault: House brands and name brands.

Mr. Danson: Yes.

Mr. Perrault: Is that dumping, though? I should not be intervening like this.

Mr. Danson: No. I think this brings up an exceedingly important point. The fact that the negotiators discussed this specific point and determined it in this way is of great interest, because this is how it will be interpreted and where there could be the greatest possible danger in dumping.

In other words, if I were a distributor of refrigerators in Canada I could go, let us say, to Whirlpool, in Grand Rapids, Michigan, which I do not believe sells in Canada as a brand name, and make a deal with them; and because of this high production that Mr. Emard was talking about I could really sell at a very low rate, particularly if they give me 10 per cent of their production, which I can handle in Canada.

I will call it "Poolwhirl". They have taken off a well-advertised brand name, have reduced the value by 20 per cent, are able to sell it in this country at lower than the market price of Whirlpool in Grand Rapids, and cannot be accused of dumping; and yet they are dumping in the worst possible way. This could be a terrible abuse of this legislation.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: It was the intention of the draftsmen, Mr. Chairman, to prevent that sort of dumping. Whether or not they have succeeded may not be known for years, until the Courts have examined this. I am not being facetious, but I think the matter is that complicated and that difficult to determine.

Mr. Danson: In other words, this matter seems to be wide open?

The Chairman: Mr. Perrault, is this a supplementary or a question?

Mr. Perrault: Yes; it relates to this question, in a way. Mr. Chairman, I would be interested to know explicitly—and it may be of interest to other Members of the Committee—the instances of dumping which have occurred in the past ten years, by nation and by product, to find out where the challenge or threat originates, or has originated in the past ten years. It might be most enlightening to find out exactly those areas of our economy that apparently are threatened by this practice by other nations.

Your observation inspired this question. Have refrigerators in fact been shipped into Canada from Grand Rapids, Michigan or from some other comparable source? Would it be possible to obtain such a document?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the answer to the last question is no, because in Canada these questions raise the matter of the tax liability of an importer to the Crown, and that is confidential.

Mr. Perrault: Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: It is generally believed that it is in the field of consumer goods, where fashions change, that there may be a disposition by United States' producers to dump goods into Canada rather than "spoiling" the market in the United States.

That was the sort of dumping that was described in the 1920's by Jacob Viner, the Canadian economist, who went to the United States and wrote the classic work in this area. Nothing so important has been written since then.

My impression is that dumping tends to occur from those countries where there are large corporations which either have monopoly or oligopoly power in their country, or are highly protected by tariffs.

• 1645

I would therefore suspect that if the records were to be made available—which they cannot—you would find that most dumping has occurred from large corporations abroad where there is high tariff protection, as in the case of certain chemicals in the United States; or where, simply through size, a corporation may effectively dominate a substantial market and, therefore, will exact a high price there.

In a more open market, such as Canada, they have to dump in order to take a share of the Canadian market. It is an economist's as well as a theoretical answer.

The nature of dumping has changed, from the phenomenon of the New York garment industry dumping its end-of-season products in the Montreal market, to something that is an aspect of large, multi-national corporations and how they price their products in different markets.

The Chairman: Mr. Trudel?

Mr. Trudel: Mr. Chairman, my question may be related to what Mr. Danson has said.

I believe it is a fact at the present time that there are manufacturers, possibly with headquarters in the United States, who are using affiliates in other countries to the point that you have raised about brand names on identical products, exporting at a known quantity or at a known price on a brand name, and using the excess production under an unknown brand to dump in various countries.

I would like your views on that?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, that can happen, sir, and whether or not it can be dealt with effectively under this legislation will depend on how effective are the regulations about "normal value" to which we referred this morning—how well they are drafted—and how effective the administration can be in looking through the stated export price in transactions between what are called "associated persons" in this Bill.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Do you have any other questions, Mr. Trudel?

Mr. Trudel: I have another question, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Grey, do you feel that this legislation is restrictive enough to impose barriers on such a practice? Is it sufficiently refined, that it will eliminate this usage of brand names either to dump or control a price or a market?

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: The question, as stated, does not really relate entirely to dumping. The fact is that if a brand is established through large expenditure in the past establishing that brand name in the minds of consumers, whether it be a particular machine tool or a consumer product such as a power lawn mower, that gives the competitive advantage to the producer of that product, whether he be in Canada, in the United States, in Japan, in the United Kingdom, or wherever.

I thought that the difficulty in law—and it is a real difficulty would have been in dealing with dumping by producers exporting the identical article except that it is unbranded; not the domination of the market by the branded product, but the ability to dump the unbranded product from the same production line.

• 1650

All I can say is that the draftsmen of this Bill and those who are drafting the regulations are aware of this problem and are trying to deal with it. There are a good many sections of the regulations and of the act which, working together, deal with this problem. Whether or not I think we have done our job properly I do not think is of any real interest to the Committee.

Mr. Hales: I wish to pursue just a little further a question I asked this morning about American subsidiaries in Canada. I will preface my question this way. American subsidiaries are located in Canada because of existing tariff regulations. They establish plants here to supply the Canadian market and perhaps do a little exporting. This is chiefly due to our present tariff regulations. With the introduction of the Kennedy Round of tariffs and the anti-dumping legislation do you feel, Mr. Grey, that this opens the door for these companies to reassess their situation and the advisability of their remaining and manufacturing in Canada, realizing that one of their branches, be it any place in the world—it might be in an area where they have a very low labour cost and low general production costs—can import that product into Canada and fulfil all the regulations so that they would not be charged with anti-dumping and place themselves in the position where they can say, "It is not economically advisable for us to continue our Canadian operations". Is the door not open for this sort of logic, this sort of thinking on behalf of so many American corporate companies in Canada?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think there are three points I would like to make in trying to answer Mr. Hales' question. It may be, because of some of the reductions in the rates of duty, that somebody producing goods in Canada—it may be subsidiary of an American firm or it may be an independent Canadian firm—will find that these goods can now be more economically imported. If that was not the case we would not have been able to sign the Kennedy Round, because presumably our trading partners thought that they were going to make additional exports to Canada as a result of our tariff reductions. Presumably we are going to make extra exports because of other people's tariff reductions.

As far as the anti-dumping legislation is concerned, the previous Minister of Finance stated before a committee meeting in this room, in the House and on several public occasions—as the present Minister of Finance states in the introduction to this White Paper—that this legislation will enable us to apply anti-dumping duties quickly and effectively when dumping threatens injury to Canadian producers. I do not find any difficulty in agreeing with the Minister of Finance on this point. If I did, I do not think I would be here. That would be my choice. I would not be here if I disagreed on a point as important as that.

• 1655

It may be that there are some producers in Canada who now have protection against dumping which is not injuring them. Whether any such firm or group of producers—and I find it very hard indeed to think of an example—would change their production plans in Canada because they cannot now get the protection of the anti-dumping duty unless it is concluded on behalf of the government by the Anti-dumping Tribunal that there is at least a threat of injury, I do not know. I think the real answer to your question is the kind of decision that will be made by the tribunal as to what constitutes a threat of injury. I think it is the case, Mr. Hales, that there are a number of subsidiaries of American firms, and possibly firms from other countries, that may well be taking decisions about their production in Canada on the basis of newspaper reports or other vague allegations about the change in our anti-dumping legislation and without reading this White Paper and implicitly not accepting the view of several ministers of finance that this would enable us to apply anti-dumping duties quickly and effectively if dumping threatens injury. I do not see that there is any way in which the government can preclude business firms from making that kind of mistake in judgment.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Grey, I think we realize that there are some American subsidiaries in Canada who may now have 90 or 95 per cent of the market in any given product and it is not conceivable that they are going to register any threat of injury when they are almost the sole producer of the product in Canada. What do you do in a case like that?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Hales, neither the Code nor the Bill precludes the government, on the initiative of the Deputy Minister of National Revenue, from investigating the impact of such dumping. One of the points that was made to us during the hearings, which were held on a confidential basis, by certain trade unions was just this very point, and I would have thought one of the most likely ways in which information could come to the government's attention that such was the proposal of a particular corporation would be from the employees. There is no limitation in the Code on the right of a government, and there is no limitation on the right of the Deputy Minister in the law, to launch an investigation. I suppose, Mr. Hales, the answer to your question will not be given until we deal with some such development, should one occur.

Mr. Hales: I am sorry that I am not putting this in the form of a question. As the chairman of a committee I prefer questions, not comments. However, I think we can readily realize and visualize that a Canadian subsidiary would be closed up and away before the 90-day period and before the investigation and everything took place, and I am quite concerned about this. They have been reading the papers and perhaps not looking into this, and we will find ourselves with some of them closing up and folding their tents and stealing away before we are caught up with this.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, . . .

Mr. Hales: That was not a question but you might like to comment.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think I have commented as much as possible. I think the problem is that the government really cannot preclude business firms from making decisions on the basis of what they think is in the Bill rather than what is in the Bill.

An hon. Member: As a supplementary question, though. . .

The Chairman: I will give the floor to Mr. Gray. He indicated he wished to speak before you did.

Mr. Gray: Unless my memory is failing me, I seem to recall when we were having our hearings on the Kennedy Round tariff changes this spring, and we had a sort of preliminary look at the Code, Mr. Hees made just the opposite complaint or raised just the opposite type of spectre. He suggested that it might be possible for somebody to come in and make a quick dump and injure Canadian industry before anybody could do anything about it. Mr. Hales, as I say, is now suggesting that because we have something in our proposed law which will operate quickly will have just the opposite result.

Mr. Hales: I think it is a different analogy, Mr. Chairman. I am talking about industries closing and Mr. Hees was talking about a dump in products. I think it is two different points.

• 1700

Mr. Danson: An extension of what Mr. Hales was saying is that if a foreign company could maintain a market in Canada with dumped goods then there would be less incentive or no incentive for them ever to open up a production plant here. Is this not a possibility? I am sorry that this is in the nature of a comment, but I assume our aim is to get at the root causes here and we all have some concerns. Fundamentally, the old anti-dumping law contained a lot that was not good and this proposed one sets it out so much better, but it is a matter of looking at these alternatives.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: It might be found, Mr. Chairman, that such dumping was materially retarding the establishment of Canadian industry.

The Chairman: Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: If it is the case that there is a product now made in Canada which can be made efficiently and economically here with existing tariff protection and the parent firm controlling the Canadian plant decides that it would prefer to supply this market by dumping and abandons Canadian production here, certainly one way this could be dealt with is if there were another potential Canadian producer who would argue the case that that dumping was precluding him getting into production of the like product. So there is the situation of the injury done to Canadian production through the impact on employment and also the possibility of another producer, a potential producer, bringing this matter forward.

The Chairman: Mr. Grey, this morning some questions were directed to you concerning ministerial discretion. Have you anything to add to your reply? I think one of the questions was directed to you by Mr. Lambert.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, over the luncheon period I did have an opportunity to take advice on the extent to which we were importing by reference to the Income Tax Act on page 42 of the White Paper—the concept of ministerial discretion—and this was commented on several times by Mr. Lambert. I think a difficulty has arisen because by following the language of the Code the draftsmen used the term “‘associated persons’ or persons associated with each other”. It will be found in the Code on page 13, paragraph (e). The term used there is “association”, It says:

(e) In cases where there is no export price or where it appears to the authorities concerned that the export price is unreliable because of association...

and so on. I think the use of this term from the Code in the draft bill has created some confusion. I am not an expert on the Income Tax Act, but, as I see it, there are three separate areas in the Income Tax Act which are relevant here. Section 39(4) of the Income Tax Act defines corporations that are associated. This definition is necessary because there are two steps in the corporate income tax rates. Section 139(5) says what is “dealing at arm’s length” and, in effect it says:

For the purposes of this Act, related persons shall...be deemed not to deal with each other at arm’s length.

And then for persons who are not related to each other, it is a question of fact whether they are dealing at arm’s length. In section (5) (a) there is a definition of “relationship”.

● 1705

It was this concept which, as I understand it, in no way involves the concept of ministerial discretion which we were, perhaps not very skilfully, trying to impart by reference into this bill. The concept of ministerial discretion is found in section 138 (a) (2) of the Income Tax Act in which the Minister is given power to hold that certain corporations may be associated even though they do not fall within section 39 (4). If they are not deemed to be associated by the plain meaning of section 39 (4), then the Minister has a discretion under section 138 (a) to hold them to be associated. There is no discretion, as I see the Income Tax Act, in relation to what is “arm’s length”. The definition of “firms dealing with each other at arm’s length” for those that are not related, is a question of fact; for those that are related, they are held by the act not to be dealing with each other at arm’s length.

The draftsmen will look at this section again, Mr. Chairman, and after the draftsmen have looked at it again if we conclude that it is desirable to bring another draft forward at an appropriate time, I think we want to be sure that if there is any association or relationship between the importer and the exporter or they are not dealing with each other at arm’s length in any other way, that all those are deemed to be associated in the sense that the word is used in the Code. The Code implies that if there is any kind of relationship between the importer and the exporter, then it is appropriate for the authorities concerned to look through the export price and satisfy themselves on what the real export price is rather than the stated export price. It is also clear in the Code that if there is any other kind of compensatory arrangement beyond the invoice price, then that should bring the invoice price, therefore, the export price, also into question. It would seem to me appropriate to follow the concept of the Income Tax Act that for those persons who are not related, the question of whether they are dealing at arm’s length should be a question of fact.

I do speak subject to further advice from the people dealing with the Income Tax Act, but, I think, the term “association” or “associated” in this section has given rise to some confusion. I merely wish at this point to make these comments so they can appear in the proceedings and then possibly in the light of that comment we can revert to it at a later time, if that is the wish of the Committee, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, is it your intention to sit until 6 o’clock? Unless there are other questions of Mr. Grey regarding his report, we will start article by article consideration. I am at your disposal, gentlemen.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, we have been here since 3:30 and I think we have done pretty well. If we start the article by article consideration at our next meeting, it might be in order.

The Chairman: Is that agreeable with you, gentlemen?

Mr. Gray: I support Mr. Hales' suggestion.

The Chairman: May I ask you a question, Mr. Hales? Did I give you the impression that your Chairman did not like comments but only questions?

Mr. Hales: You are a man after my own heart.

The Chairman: Because I do not think I should try to stop a member from making a comment before asking his questions.

Mr. Hales: No, I agree with you, sir.

The Chairman: Thank you.

APPENDIX B

Language agreed to in conference as a substitute for title 2 of the Senate version of HR 17324 concerning the International Anti-dumping Code

Text

Section 201 (a)

Nothing contained in the International Anti-dumping Code shall be construed to restrict the discretion of the U.S. Tariff Commission in performing its duties and functions under the Anti-dumping Act, and in performing their duties and functions under such Act the Secretary of the Treasury and the Tariff Commission shall (1) resolve any conflict between the International Anti-dumping Code and the Anti-dumping Act of 1921 in favour of the Act as applied by the agency administering the Act; and (2) take into account the provisions of the International Anti-dumping Code signed at Geneva on June 30, 1967 only insofar as they are consistent with the Anti-dumping Act as applied by agency administering the Act.

Section 201 (b)

No later than August 1, 1969 the President shall submit to the House of Representatives and United States Senate a report for the period beginning on July 1, 1968 and ending on June 30, 1969 which shall (1) set out the text of all determinations made by the Secretary of the Treasury and the United States Tariff Commission under the Anti-dumping Act of 1921 in such period; (2) analyze with respect to each determination in such period the manner in which the Anti-dumping Act of 1921 has been administered to take into account the provisions of the International Anti-dumping Code; (3) summarize Anti-dumping action taken by other countries in such period against U.S. exports and relate such actions to the provisions of the International Anti-dumping Code; and (4) include such recommendations as the President determines appropriate concerning the administration of the Anti-dumping Act of 1921.

APPENDIX C

Ad Article VI

Paragraph 1

1. Hidden dumping by associated houses (that is, the sale by an importer at a price below that corresponding to the price invoiced by an exporter with whom the importer is associated, and also below the price in the exporting country) constitutes a form of price dumping with respect to which the margin of dumping may be calculated on the basis of the price at which the goods are resold by the importer.

2. It is recognized that, in the case of imports from a country which has a complete or substantially complete monopoly of its trade and where all domestic prices are fixed by the State, special difficulties may exist in determining price comparability for the purposes of paragraph 1, and in such cases importing contracting parties may find it necessary to take into account the possibility that a strict comparison with domestic prices in such a country may not always be appropriate.

Paragraphs 2 and 3

Note 1. As in many other cases in customs administration, a contracting party may require reasonable security (bond or cash deposit) for the payment of anti-dumping or countervailing duty pending final determination of the facts in any case of suspected dumping or subsidization.

Note 2. Multiple currency practices can in certain circumstances constitute a subsidy to exports which may be met by countervailing duties under paragraph 3 or can constitute a form of dumping by means of a partial depreciation of a country's currency which may be met by action under paragraph 2. By "multiple currency practices" is meant practices by governments or sanctioned by governments.

Paragraph 6(b)

Waivers under the provisions of this subparagraph shall be granted only on application by the contracting party proposing to levy an anti-dumping or countervailing duty, as the case may be.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

First Session—Twenty-eighth Parliament
1968

---

STANDING COMMITTEE

ON

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. GASTON CLERMONT

---

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

No. 4

---

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1968

---

Respecting

WHITE PAPER ON ANTI-DUMPING

---

Including

APPENDIX D

Proposed Draft Regulations Relating to Sections 9 and 10 of the Draft Anti-Dumping Bill

---

WITNESS:

Mr. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance.

LIBRARY

DEC 4 1968

29148-1

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.

QUEEN'S PRINTER AND CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY
OTTAWA, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON
FINANCE, TRADE, AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. Alistair Gillespie

and Messrs:

Blair,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
Downey,
Émard,

Flemming,
Gauthier,
Givens,
Gray,
Hales,
Harkness,

Lambert
(Edmonton West),
Latulippe,
Perrault,
Roberts,
Saltsman,*
Trudel—20.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

* Replaced Mr. Gleave on October 30, 1968.

ORDER OF REFERENCE

WEDNESDAY, October 30, 1968.

Ordered,—That the name of Mr. Saltsman be substituted for that of Mr. Gleave on the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

ATTEST:

ALISTAIR FRASER,
The Clerk of the House of Commons.

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

[Text]

THURSDAY, October 31, 1968.

(5)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 11.10 a.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Blair, Burton, Clermont, Comtois, Émard, Flemming, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton West), Latulippe, Perrault, Saltsman, Trudel—(15)

Also present: Messrs. Alexander and Ritchie.

In attendance: From the Department of Finance: Messrs. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister and C. D. Arthur, International Economic Relations Division.

Also in attendance: From the Department of National Revenue: Messrs. A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division; H. D. MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section; From the Department of Industry: V. R. St. Louis, Commercial Policy Division; From the Department of Trade and Commerce: C. J. Kelly, Office of Area Relations.

The Committee resumed consideration of the White Paper on Anti-Dumping.

Mr. Grey tabled the proposed draft regulations relating to Sections 9 and 10 of the draft anti-dumping bill and made a brief statement.

On motion of Mr. Lambert, seconded by Mr. Blair, the proposed draft regulations are attached hereto as Appendix D.

Copies of the proposed draft regulations were distributed to the members and to interested parties from other government departments and representatives of organizations or firms who will be presenting briefs.

Mr. Comtois, on a point of order, noted that the draft regulations were tabled in English only and following discussion on the point of order it was agreed that the Proceedings of this Committee should be published bilingually in English and French in the same manner as those of the Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts.

It was also agreed that all documents tabled before the Committee be in both the official languages.

After general questioning, the Committee proceeded to clause by clause study of the proposed draft bill contained in the White Paper, and Mr. Grey was questioned.

The Chairman announced that the Co-ordinating Committee has assigned the following times of meeting for this Committee for next week: Monday, November 4th at 8.00 p.m.; Tuesday, November 5th at 3.30 p.m. and Thursday, November 7th at 11.00 a.m. and 3.30 p.m.

At 1.10 p.m. the Committee adjourned until Monday, November 4th at 8.00 p.m. at which time the witness will again be Mr. Grey.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Thursday, October 31, 1968

• 1114

The Chairman: Gentlemen I will call the meeting to order.

Last Tuesday when your Committee adjourned it was decided that this morning we would consider the Draft Canadian Anti-dumping Act clause by clause. Before doing so, I will ask Mr. Grey, as was understood at last Tuesday's meeting, to present the regulations to this Committee.

Mr. R. Y. Grey (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance): Mr. Chairman, with your permission I would like to make a short statement about these proposed draft regulations relating clauses 9 and 10 of the proposed bill.

The officials concerned are involved in a fairly detailed study of the procedures and the allowances, in the sense of clause 9, that are granted under the legislation of our major trading partners because it has been our view that it would not be expedient for Canada to be, shall we say, more liberal or more generous than are our trading partners in their practice under the Code. I should also mention, sir, that primarily because of the difficulties of timing it has not been possible for the Minister of Finance to see these draft regulations and, therefore, they have no status. They only carry the judgment of the draftsmen concerned.

• 1115

What we have in these regulations is essentially a scheme which, in the view of the draftsmen, will serve as a basis for the officials of the Department of National Revenue to use in the calculation of the allowances that may be taken into account to achieve comparability between the normal value of the goods in the exporter's home market and the exporter's sale price to the importer in Canada under clauses 9 and 10 of the draft bill.

I would like to make clear, Mr. Chairman, that the document that I can make available to the Committee contains the regulations about the allowances for normal value under clause 9 and the key regulation under clause 10. I am of the view that these are the regulations that are necessary for people such as the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. to understand the import of this bill. The other regulations, not that they are unimportant but they do not go to the substance of the bill as these particular regulations do, are the ones on which we have been concentrating so far.

Clauses 9 and 10 of the draft bill set out the criteria or the rules to be followed in the determination of normal value and export price. They, therefore, outline the conditions under which goods can be held to be dumped into Canada and the basis in law for the measurement of the margin of dumping, that is, the measurement of the difference between what is calculated to be the normal value and what is found to be the export price. These proposed regulations should enable companies to make an assessment of the effect of the proposed anti-dumping legislation on their particular operation both as importers or as producers.

Mr. Chairman, at the last meeting of the Committee several of your members expressed concern regarding the calculation or determination of normal value under the proposed legislation in respect of brand name products. These products generally fall into two categories. Under the present Customs Act they are dealt with under the provisions of section 36 (2) (c) and (d) which will be found on pages 31 and 32 of the White Paper. It is now the view of the draftsmen that in the case of those brand name products the import of which is referred to under section 36 (2) (c) of the Customs Act that it will be possible to provide appropriate guidance to officials of the Department of National Revenue—an appropriate guidance in legislative terms—to determine the normal value of such imports by regulation. A notation to this effect in square brackets will be found in these draft regulations. We have not actually drafted it, but on this piece of paper it is indicated that the import of this present regulation should appear at a certain place in this scheme of regulations.

In the case of those brand name products which are now dealt with under section 36 (2) (d) which is on page 32 of the White Paper, it is the view of the draftsmen that a clause will have to be added to the draft bill to give proper legislative authority and guidance on how the normal value of such goods is to be determined.

• 1120

Mr. Chairman, at an appropriate time we will make available the text of a proposed amendment to the draft bill for consideration by the Committee along with other proposed changes. I should explain, Mr. Chairman, that the difficulty the draftsmen faced when they started drafting the bill was to be sure that they had provided properly in the bill for the authority to deal with all the wide variety of transactions which do, in fact, take place. It was only yesterday morning that we concluded that we had, in fact, made an error and had left out a necessary clause in the bill and there was no authority in the bill to make by regulation what is now covered in section 36 (2) (d) of the Customs Act. It was also the view of the draftsmen that the definition of "sufficient number of sales" as set out in section 11 of the draft regulations—this paper that I will circulate and make available to the Committee—is not appropriate when applied to clause 9(2) of the draft bill and the draftsmen now are considering whether to define, "sufficient number of sales", for purposes of this clause by regulation or by an amendment to the draft bill. Mr. Chairman it will be seen that in the draft regulations we have made provisions for such a definition under section 12. Finally, Mr. Chairman I should mention that we have not provided draft regulations to cover the cost of production provided for in section 9, subsection 3, paragraph (b) because this does not appear to us to be a particularly difficult concept. It is one that is already well known under the Customs Act. It is our view that the regulations when drafted will obviously take account of what is good and normal business practice and that such regulations do not have any significant bearing on the understanding of the impact of this legislative scheme.

Mr. Chairman I can make available now copies for you of what is called the Proposed Draft Regulations Relating to Sections 9 and 10 of Draft Anti-Dumping Bill.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, are there any comments on Mr. Grey's statement regarding the regulations?

Mr. Alexander: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to say I am very pleased with the speed that Mr. Grey has made these regulations available, because I do believe that those who wish to submit briefs on this anti-dumping Bill will, of course, now have an opportunity of really presenting more thorough briefs. I just wanted to express my appreciation for the consideration shown to the Committee, and in particular me, after my repeated requests. I just wanted to say thank you for that.

Mr. Hales: Under the heading of...

Mr. Blair: I wonder if the draft regulations could be circulated.

The Chairman: Yes, just a moment Mr. Hales. I will accept a motion from the members that the regulations be printed as an appendix to today's proceedings. I will distribute the regulations amongst the members and the press.

(See Minutes of Proceedings)

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Mr. Chairman...

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Émard.

Mr. Émard: Has anybody been invited to present briefs?

The Chairman: Mr. Émard, as decided by your sub-committee a press release was issued last week informing those who are interested to present briefs, the deadline being November 12, at noon. Your Committee no doubt will not keep strictly to that date. Briefs coming in on the 13th or the 14th will be accepted I suppose.

Mr. Émard: Have any been received so far?

The Chairman: Our clerk, Miss Ballantyne, has received some mail. I do not know if she has received any briefs. I received a telephone call yesterday from a company telling me that they were submitting their brief to the Committee on November 12. It will then be the responsibility of the sub-committee on procedure to decide.

[English]

Yes, Mr. Hales?

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, under the heading of general statement, I wonder if Mr. Grey is in a position to say whether or not he could fulfill a request I made at the last meeting to have published some examples similar to those in the United States White Paper on Antidumping Regulations, for the use of the Committee and also for manufacturers. I wonder if Mr. Grey has given this further thought?

Mr. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I have given this further thought, but there are two difficulties. The question of determining normal value would be the question in law, and I am not sure that it would be appropriate to try to explain this in purely hypothetical terms. In the long run that can be misleading, I am not quite sure what the status of such an explanation would be.

Second, the United States probably disposes of about 20 times as many customs experts as we have available. Therefore they are able to devote a great many more resources to the careful setting out of an example. In terms of our priorities I have thought, Mr. Hales, that it was more important that we draft the regulations. Unless I am instructed by the Committee I would really prefer not to try and devise hypothetical examples of what will be matters to be decided by the courts, if the judgment of the Department of National Revenue is not accepted in a particular case. I do have real reservations as to whether that would be an appropriate procedure. Thank you Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, I do not know what the wish of the Committee would be on this matter, but I would think with an introductory paragraph setting out the reasons these examples must be considered as hypothetical, etcetera, they would be most useful I am sure, to the Committee and to manufacturers. However, I will leave that with the Committee and with you Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Have you any other comments on this subject gentlemen? May I make a suggestion to Mr. Hales that his question be left till we go through the proposed draft bill item by item?

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, in looking over the contents of this Federal Register, this United States document, Volume 33, No. 107, I noted with interest as well the examples which have been cited at the end of that document. I think it makes it far easier for members of the Committee to have examples of this kind. I would certainly think I am in accord with you, that it would be most helpful to members of the Committee, some of whom are not experienced in the technicalities of this matter of anti-dumping, to have some examples drawn up for perusal by Committee members. I think this is one of the more helpful aspects of this American document.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Mr. Émard, I am told a number of groups intend to submit briefs but that we have not received any to date.

[English]

Have you any other comments gentlemen? Yes, Mr. Saltzman.

Mr. Saltzman: Mr. Chairman I have a question I would like to ask.

The Chairman: On what subject?

Mr. Saltzman: ...specifically on the points that have been raised up till now.

The Chairman: On the regulations or what?

Mr. Saltzman: No, dealing just with some general aspects of dumping legislation.

The Chairman: Can these questions be directed when we have item by item consideration, Mr. Saltzman, or do you prefer to ask them in a general way?

Mr. Saltzman: I would like to ask it in a general way. I could perhaps wait until later, though.

The Chairman: If you prefer to ask your question now, I, personally, do not have any objections.

• 1130

Mr. Saltzman: I would like to ask Mr. Grey a question that has been bothering me; it does not refer to anything specifically in this legislation, but it might have an element of dumping in it. It is a rather complex problem. During the examination of selling expenses in the drug industry, when the Committee met on that a number of years ago, suggestions were made, although no recommendations were made on this, that some limit on the amount of advertising expenditure allowed for tax purposes might be considered in the sale of drugs. There was an indication that 30 per cent, I believe, was used for sales purposes and some suggestion was made that it might be cut to 15 per cent. In view of the overflow effect of American advertising if such a limit were placed in Canada, if our tax legislation were different from that of the United States, where full allowance is granted, there would be an element of subsidization in these products coming across the border based on the American advertising hitting Canadian consumers because the tax allowance would work to the disadvantage of Canadian manufacturers.

The question I would like to ask you is this. If such an event took place, that we decided to place certain limits on advertising expenditure, what could be done to avoid the kind of situation that might arise where they could spend all the advertising they want, have it completely tax deductible in the United States, and bring it into Canada where it was not completely tax deductible. Would there be some element of dumping involved or some element of subsidization that we could take into account under this legislation? I realize it is a rather complex question and perhaps I have not expressed it as clearly as I would like to I would be pleased to clear it up if you want me to.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, answering Mr. Saltsman's inquiry in a general way it would be my view, and this is not a legal opinion of course, that if an importer brings in a product and the import price, let us say, is $100 but his advertising is provided free of charge or, alternatively, by the exporter, which is the sort of case I think that you were describing, though I have stated it in more abstract terms, or if he advertises in Canada the imported product and the advertising is paid for by the exporter, that that might be held in law to be:

... a compensatory arrangement affecting the price of the goods made between any two or more of the following...

and so on. This is on page 54. That raises the question then whether the export price is really the export price.

Mr. Saltsman: I see.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I would have thought, and again this is not a legal opinion, that in failing to make clear that aspect—that transaction, because it does affect the import price of the goods in a real sense—meaningful commercial sense, the Department of National Revenue might hold this to be providing false information, or very close to fraud. It raises then the question of the enforcement provisions in this draft legislation. But the example you have raised is only one of a rather general and important class of possible techniques of evasion.

Mr. Saltsman: Therefore, in your opinion it would be possible to levy a dumping duty in instances of this type. In other words, a determination could be made of the element of subsidization for dumping duty purposes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, if it were determined by the competent authorities that that was a subsidy. And I point out that Section 6(a) of the Customs Tariff provides the authority to put on a duty when goods are held by the Governor in Council to be subsidized. That is outside this Act but that power exists—it is Section 6(a) of the Customs Tariff. On the other hand, that sort of arrangement might be held to be a compensatory arrangement, which means that the export price would be found to be something different than the stated export price. Therefore, there might be found to be a margin of dumping where on the face of the documents none had appeared to exist before.

• 1135

Mr. Saltsman: Now can this calculation be made on the basis of different tax attitudes between two countries. For instance, if one country takes the position of enabling a certain thing to be deductible for income tax purposes as a form of subsidy and they wish to reduce that degree of subsidization and other countries have not taken this position, can you make a decision based on these differences in tax legislation?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, Mr. Chairman, a sort of amateur legal answer would be that Section 6(a) of the Customs Tariff provides authority for the levying of a countervailing duty—not an anti-dumping duty but a countervailing duty, where the Governor in Council finds that a subsidy has been paid, but that is a very broad power and it is completely discretionary, as is the practice in most other jurisdictions. Whether it would be appropriate to find that such difference in tax policy constituted a subsidy really requires an examination of the extent to which our tax system may have the same sort of impact on Canadian exports. I think I would want to make a pretty close study of that before giving any kind of an answer.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, may I raise a question here. Do I understand from the question put by Mr. Saltsman and the answer given by Mr. Grey that types of expenses in the ordinary course of business such as advertising, other business expenses, transportation, or depreciation—there is one partical area where you do get considerable difference in tax policy—are a form of subsidy for the production of commodities?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I did not express my view as to whether they were a subsidy. I merely drew the Committee's attention to the fact that Section 6(a) of the Customs Tariff enables the Governor in Council really to deem that a subsidy has been paid. In the terms in which it was passed by Parliament it gave a very broad discretionary power because it is a fact that many effective subsidies are paid rather indirectly at an early stage in production or in such a way that they are not always easy to identify but they are perfectly real in their impact on world trade. Section 6(a) of the Customs Tariff goes very far in giving the Governor in Council power. I did not express a view as to what was a subsidy though.

The Chairman: Are you through Mr. Saltsman?

Mr. Saltsman: Yes, thank you.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Mr. Comtois.

Mr. Comtois: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make an observation concerning the regulations which we were handed a moment ago. I notice that they are in English only. It is rather difficult for half the members of the Committee who are French-speaking to match this with the White Paper. The White Paper is in both languages and in the future, I would like all documents that are distributed to be in both languages. We have the same problem with our debates. The French version comes in three or four weeks later. In the past, Mr. Chairman, you were among those who complained about this state of things. The Committee should make a special effort to rectify this situation. I wanted to raise this point because we are likely to receive many documents and I would like them to be both in French and in English.

The Chairman: Thank you for your observations, Mr. Comtois, and especially for mentioning that I was one of those who complained about this in the past and that I would have done so today had I been in your place.

[English]

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I hope a proper French text will be available to the members of the Committee not later than Monday next. It will be appreciated that the preparation of this in French is not a matter that the interpreter of ordinary ability can achieve.

The Chairman: I think, Mr. Grey, as suggested, and I am sure it meets the approval of the full membership, that any document that is presented before this Committee should be presented in English and in French at the same time.

• 1140

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Again, I will ask our Clerk to see that we have our reports and proceedings in English and in French as soon as possible. I know we have the same trouble every year, but I think it was agreed that in one Committee today they would accept the English and the French without translation. Could that be accepted by this Committee?

Mr. Harkness: I do not think that would be appropriate as far as a document of this kind is concerned. As far as the evidence given is concerned, this is perfectly all right, but when it comes to a document of this kind, as Mr. Grey has pointed out, it is a matter of considerable difficulty to get a translation which is accurate and I do not think anything along that line would apply.

The Chairman: I agree with you, Mr. Harkness, but what I had in mind was the day-to-day proceedings. The evidence is printed together with the interpretation before it has been officially translated. I know one committee is trying this method and I wondered if your Committee would like to try the same method.

An hon. Member: I do not see any reason why not.

Mr. Harkness: I do not know if the interpretation which is made as we speak is accurate. If it is reasonably good I would be quite prepared to accept this, but as I said, I just do not know.

The Chairman: I think the best thing for us to do is to try it for a week or two—at least a week—and then we can judge the results.

Mr. Harkness: That is perfectly satisfactory to me.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Mr. Emard.

Mr. Emard: Perhaps you could inform certain officials of the translation bureau that if we didn't spend so much time on prestigious Committee, more time would be left for the others.

The Chairman: I don't know what you mean by prestigious Committees. I've been told though that the Committee of which you are a member, must have priority because of the deadline set to study this White Paper. All the subjects to be studied by the Committee are very important.

Mr. Emard: For your information, Mr. Chairman, by prestigious and "glamorous" Committees I mean, for example, the Committee on Broadcasting and the External Affairs Committee, among others.

The Chairman: You will admit, Mr. Emard, that it is rather difficult for the Chairman of the Committee to tell newspaper men what to write in their papers.

Mr. Comtois: We are discussing Committees, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Yes.

[English]

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, may I ask whether or not the other standing committees have a similar delay in getting their deliberations translated into French?

The Chairman: Yes, sir.

Mr. Perrault: Are we on a full level of equality in this regard?

The Chairman: Yes, sir. There is no discrimination against your Committee on that basis, Mr. Perrault.

Gentlemen, are there any other questions?

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, I am not addressing myself to a question of committee procedure, but I wondered if I could just clarify one aspect of the regulations by a question to Mr. Grey. I may not have fully understood his explanation. My question really follows from Mr. Saltzman's question.

Under clause 10(2) of the proposed bill, the Deputy Minister has power to investigate what is called "compensatory arrangements" between exporters and importers and I notice, Mr. Grey, that these are not dealt with specifically in section 13 of the proposed regulations. Am I right in thinking that they are the type of items you considered were not the subject for regulations, but for ministerial determination?

• 1145

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, under subclause (2) on page 54 there are two categories, first, where there is no sale price or importer's purchase price. That would be in the case of consignment shipping. I take it that that is a matter of fact, a question of fact. The second one is a category when the Deputy Minister is of the opinion and the rest of the subclause says what the exporter's price shall be when he is of that opinion.

Mr. Blair: But it would be under this particular clause Mr. Grey, where compensatory advertising allowances could be dealt with and, although the question posed by Mr. Saltzman of "slop over" from American advertising is difficult, I suppose it might fall to be considered under this particular subclause as well.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I take it that Mr. Blair understands this side relates to whether the export price, that is, the price presented on the face of the document, really is the export price or whether there is some other transaction which does not relate to normal value. There is no call here for regulations. That may be a mistake.

My mind boggles at the prospect of setting out a regulation which would provide for special rules of procedure to identify and take appropriate action with respect to all the multitude of compensatory arrangements which can be devised by traders which would, in effect, affect the validity of the stated export price.

Mr. Blair: I must say, Mr. Grey, that I fully appreciate your position. I did not ask the question to urge that this matter be covered by regulation, but simply to identify the place where it would be dealt with under the statute.

The Chairman: Are we ready now, gentlemen, to consider the proposed draft bill, clause by clause?

An hon. Member: Yes, go ahead.

The Chairman: No doubt you will indicate if you have any questions.

On clause 1—Short Title

(See Minutes of Proceedings)

On clause 2—Interpretation

Mr. Lambert: Yes, on subclause 2 on page 42, this comes back to the point I was making yesterday, I think maybe mise au point by Mr. Grey yesterday afternoon. I left the Committee and I ascertained from the Department of National Revenue, Taxation Division, that there are no regulations under the Income Tax Act dealing with the definition of "associated persons" or companies and that this is handled right in the statute.

It is the purpose in this Bill, as one can see, to import into the interpretation of this Bill the meaning given to "associated persons" under the Income Tax Act. I objected to this and indicated my reasons for it on Tuesday morning. May I add one further reason, that there is being imported into a statute dealing with the importation of goods and the imposition of duties or what have you by the Department of National Revenue and the tariff provision of the Department of Finance, an interpretation under an entirely different statute controlled by the Taxation Division of the Department of National Revenue, in other words, a third body, and a statute that is designed philosophically for an entirely different purpose.

• 1150

I would suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this is the wrong way to proceed. I would come back to what I said earlier that if it is felt to be too difficult to define "associated persons" within the statute that it can be done within the regulations and while section 138 gives ministerial discretion to the Minister of National Revenue to, shall we say, have a general basket in which he can sweep anyone on his own discretion, I object to that discretion as well under this Bill. I would prefer to see the regulations dealing with "associated persons" under this Bill examined by the Committee on delegated legislation.

An hon. Member: Mr. Chairman...

The Chairman: Just a moment. I will give Mr. Grey a chance to reply if he wishes, and then I will give you the floor after Mr. Blair.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think I attempted—perhaps in a rather confused way—at the last meeting, at which Mr. Lambert was not present, to deal with this point. He has now stated his view more clearly or perhaps more emphatically than previously. If he were right I would agree with him.

This section is not very well drafted and I agree with that point. It is not the purpose of this clause to import into this proposed Bill the concept of "associated persons" in the Income Tax Act which if I am right I think are found in Sections 39 and 138(a) of the Income Tax Act. This is a reference to Section 139, (5) and (5)(a), which defines arm's length. The reason I said that this was badly drafted is that it uses the term "associated persons". That happens to be the term used in the Code and that is where it came from. It is not, however, a reference—and I think this is clear from the draft—to the concept of "associated persons" in the Income Tax Act, and I do not think that it is the right of the Minister of National Revenue to say that certain corporations which are not bound by Section 39(a) are nonetheless associated. That is not imported here. What is imported is the truly legal concept of arm's length found in Section 39, (5) and (5)(a).

It may be Mr. Chairman, that it would have been more appropriate to have reproduced the whole concept of arm's length, as set out in that section of the Income Tax Act, directly here rather than by reference. Mr. Lambert made the point that some draftsmen say it is objectionable to use this reference technique. It only has the advantage, possibly, of brevity. I have asked for legal advice on whether the concept of arm's length in Section 139(5) and (5)(a) in fact also covers corporations that would be associated under Section 39 (a), because I believe they should also be included for these purposes and I await with some interest the opinion that I have asked for on that point. As I read Section 139, (5) and (5)(a) it deals only with arm's length and on the face of it it appears to catch all the sort of known arm's length—used in the layman's sense—transactions which are likely to occur in importing.

Mr. Lambert: My comment on that, Mr. Chairman, is that the possibility of amendment to the Income Tax Act for purposes that are not related to this Act at all import into this Act certain meanings which are not meant to be had under this Act and this is one of the particular reasons that I feel this is the least happy way of proceeding.

• 1155

The Chairman: Mr. Blair.

Mr. Blair: I share Mr. Lambert's concern and I realize that Mr. Grey has the same concern about the clarity of the section and I would like to make one or two observations.

My first observation is that this statute is addressed to the commercial community of Canada in the same way that the sections in the Income Tax Act are addressed, and I should think that just as a matter of procedure we should strive to have the same concepts of non-arm's length transactions in this Code as there are in the Income Tax Act in order to give the public greater assurance and confidence in dealing with their legal responsibilities. However, I would like to reserve my opinion on this until I have had a chance to look at the Income Tax Act in greater detail, because it is extremely important for the proper enforcement of this statute that the Department have complete authority to look through various intercorporate arrangements in order to ensure that parties not dealing at arm's length are not enabled to bring in goods at a depreciated value. Perhaps, Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that Mr. Grey has said that the Department is considering a revision of this particular clause, it might well be left for further consideration.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I wonder if I could say, Mr. Chairman, that one obvious improvement would have been to have said "at arm's length within the meaning" and then have identified the sections in the Income Tax Act. I think this would have made it clear that we did not intend to convey the impressions that the discretionary power of the Minister found in section 138 (a) was included. My advice, Mr. Lambert, is that it is not included in this draft, but I must also admit that that is not at all clear on a quick reading.

Mr. Lambert: I see. I agree with Mr. Blair and I think we had better let this stand.

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, I hope that I did not hear Mr. Lambert incorrectly when he suggested that an important matter like this might be handled by regulations rather than in the statute.

Mr. Lambert: I am sorry, I missed that shaft!

The Chairman: Is it your suggestion, Mr. Blair and Mr. Lambert, that we stand clause (2) (a)?

Mr. Lambert: We will stand the whole interpretation section and then we can come back to it.

The Chairman: Is that agreeable to you gentlemen?

Some hon. Members: Yes.

The Chairman: We will now go to page 44.

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Chairman, before you proceed with that, this definition of "like goods" which first appears on page 40, and I am reading from the top of page 42, states:

(i) goods that are identical in all respects to the said goods, or

(ii) in the absence of any goods described in subparagraph (i), goods the characteristics of which closely resemble those of the said goods;

Is this type of definition going to be sufficient to deal with in particular, we will say, chemical products? As I understand it, you have a large number of cases of goods which are not identical although they might come under subclause (ii), "...the characteristics of which closely resemble..." but at the same time while the characteristics may closely resemble other goods, these goods may be for quite different purposes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, in the negotiation of the Code, from which this definition is taken, we carefully avoided the use of any such modifying phrases as "the characteristics of which in use" or "the physical characteristics of which" or "the chemical characteristics of which". We deliberately left this as a matter to evolve in practice. All those suggestions—from which this definition is taken—were at one time considered by the draftsmen of the Code and precisely the problem Mr. Harkness has raised was raised in that discussion. We therefore struck out at the end of the negotiation phrases such as "physical characteristics" and "characteristics in use" because it raises precisely this sort of difficulty. I think the answer is that this definition is broad enough to enable the Department of National Revenue to look at dumping in the sort of situation you described, sir.

• 1200

Mr. Harkness: Can you give us any examples of the kind which were brought up when this was being discussed which led to the demand that there should be some definition as to the end-use, other physical use or anything else along that line?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, no record was kept of the conduct of these negotiations. It has not been our practice to keep a record and I cannot recall the examples, except that some of us saw, fairly quickly, the intellectual difficulty of putting in the phrase "characteristics in use". At the end we decided to keep it as broad as this definition is.

Mr. Harkness: But this is the definition if it is strictly applied. In other words, "the characteristics of which closely resemble those of the said goods", could present considerable difficulty.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the point is that the narrower that second part of the definition is made, the more difficult it will be to consider the impact of dumping on a given product on a market or on production in Canada, assuming that we do not produce every product in the narrowest sense. But the dumping may well have an impact on the production of Canadian goods which are not identical and to the extent that the narrower the second part is made, the more the possibility is open that there will be injurious dumping which is not actionable. It was our view that this phrase, "the characteristics of which closely resemble" is very broad indeed. It was the view of the legal draftsmen who worked on the drafting of the Code and subsequently on this legislation that it really would be very difficult to have a phrase that would be broader and still meaningful.

Mr. Lambert: I suppose perhaps something that is analogous to what Mr. Harkness just said is in the building materials, where, for instance, as in aggregates or in certain types of material for certain purposes, you will get a variety of materials which will serve the same purpose. The problem arises in the sales tax field, or did when there were exemptions under the building materials, Schedule III of the Excise Tax Act. You could get a building material imported from some other country under, shall we say, dumped conditions which would completely destroy the market for Canadian goods, which could serve the same purpose, but is not identical in composition. One might be a gypsum product, the other might be a clay product and that sort of thing.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, it was because there are such situations in real life that this second part was drafted so broadly.

Mr. Lambert: I see.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think if I am not mistaken there is something similar in the United States.

Mr. Lambert: In your view would it cover these cases?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Yes, sir.

Mr. Gillespie: I want to ask a question in respect to subclause (2) (b), Date of entry, and the meaning of the word "perfected".

(b) the date of entry of any goods shall be deemed to be the date on which (i) entry of the goods has been perfected for purposes of the Customs Act,

What is the significance of this word "perfected"? What is its meaning?

• 1205

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, as to its meaning under the Customs Act, I think that is a technical question that should be addressed to an officer of the Department of National Revenue who are available here, but to answer your question in a rather general way, if it were possible to go back and levy an anti-dumping duty, say, for two years after one has discovered that an injurious dumping transaction has taken place, but because of the way the documents were presented, the fact that it was dumping had not been entirely clear, if one had the right to reopen such things as is now the case, one would not need to be concerned about the date of entry. However, as soon as limitations are accepted on the right of a government to go back and levy a dumping duty retroactively, the question which arises is, when were those goods imported? When they were released physically from customs surveillance, because it is the normal practice in Canada, as in other countries, often to release goods before the documentation is entirely completed. This is necessary. This sort of practice has developed in order to facilitate legitimate trade. It should not be possible to use that sort of flexible customs administration to evade a liability for anti-dumping duty, that is, to simply fail to provide the information and, therefore, make it impossible for the authorities to detect if dumping has taken place because of the limitation which is in the Code on the right to go back retroactively. So there are provisions elsewhere in this Bill suggesting that if the Deputy Minister requests information and that information is not provided, subsequent entries of goods of that category from that exporter, shall not be perfected until the information is available. Clearly it should not be possible to evade an anti-dumping duty by virtue of the limitations on retroactivity, simply by failing to co-operate with the authorities in providing the appropriate information. It is necessary, therefore, to make it perfectly clear that the latest date, either the date on which the entry is perfected, that is, all documentation has been completed to the satisfaction of the authorities concerned under the Customs Act or under this Bill, or the goods have been released from customs, whichever is the later. The need for this provision is related entirely to the limitation the government has accepted on the right to levy a duty retroactively.

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Harkness raised a question about the definition of the word "like" and I wonder if I could ask Mr. Grey to look at Sections 37 and 38 of the Customs Act as it is reproduced on page 33. Section 37 provides: "...where like goods were not sold for home consumption...but similar goods were sold..." Then in the first paragraph of section 38 where the value for duty cannot be determined...for the reason that like or similar goods are not sold in the country of export"... My question, Mr. Grey, is, is it the view of the administration that the word "like" as used in the Customs Act and interpreted at the present time is the same as that contemplated under the new anti-dumping code?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, this is a different definition, but they are related. To put it in as short a way as possible, because of the difficulty of getting an agreement on appropriate terms in an international convention that covers a variety of different customs jurisdictions, we came up with a slightly different set of words. I think the short answer is that for the anti-dumping Bill, the word "like" throughout this Bill means "like goods" in the sense of the Customs Act now, or if such "like goods" do not exist, what are called in the Customs Act, "similar goods." Certainly Clause 2(g)(ii) says: "...characteristics of which closely resemble..." which is at least as broad as the concept of "similar". So wherever you find the word "like" in this Bill, it means "like goods" in the sense of the Customs Act or in their absence "similar goods".

• 1210

Mr. Blair: Thank you, Mr. Grey.

Mr. Hales: Concerning this date of entry, suppose the anti-dumping legislation comes into effect January 1, 1969, and a manufacturer of heavy electrical apparatus had completed a tender or accepted a contract two years ago—sometimes it takes one to two years to manufacture some of these heavy transformers and the like—does the Customs Act spell out what the date of entry is for that heavy transformer the order for which was accepted and placed a year or two years ago?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: The date of entry cannot be before the goods are physically imported under this Bill. The date of entry for the purpose of the anti-dumping duty may be considerably after its physical importation because of the complexity of documentation that is required for an import of that nature. This perhaps goes beyond the question the member has asked, but this Bill is drafted in terms of the dumping taking place when the contract is entered into. Of course, the dumping duty cannot be collected until the goods are physically imported, but a conditional or potential liability can be established following the dumping taking place. This Bill is written in terms of the dumping taking place at the time the contract is made. It is quite different than in the present legislation and, if I may be allowed to say so, I think it is much more realistic.

The Chairman: Page 44, Part I—Liability for anti-dumping duty, Clause 3. Yes, Mr. Harkness.

On Clause 3—Anti-dumping duty payable

Mr. Harkness: How is this to be established that...

(b) has materially retarded or is materially retarding the establishment of the production in Canada of like goods,

What is the method by which this is a fact to be established?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, this is entirely a matter for the Tribunal to decide, and it is contemplated that there is no appeal from the finding of the Tribunal. In the United Kingdom there is no appeal from a finding by the Board of Trade, that is, their department of trade and commerce. There is no appeal from the United States Tariff Commission. This is a question of judgment to be exercised by what is called here the anti-dumping Tribunal. They look at the facts as presented to them in public hearings. They look at the confidential information provided to them, and they should have a staff which would investigate the situation. On the basis of that, they are expected to make an order or finding, which is the end of the matter.

Mr. Harkness: In other words, representation would be made by a company, we will say, to the Tribunal and then it is entirely in the hands of the Tribunal to establish that this import is retarding the establishment in Canada of production of that type of goods?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Yes, sir, and "like" goods, of course, means not only goods that are identical, but goods that have characteristics closely similar. This is an example of where "like" means like or in their absence similar goods.

The Chairman: Mr. Gillespie.

Mr. Gillespie: Does this mean, Mr. Grey, that the Tribunal will develop its own rules without guidance from any other quarter? If I may add one further thought here, it seems to me this is one of the most important parts of this Bill. It, in theory, provides something new in the way of protection to those who want to start and promote Canadian industry, but we are left rather in the air, or I am at the moment, because there do not seem to be any ground rules or any basis for establishing these ground rules.

• 1215

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I have not found in the legislation of any other countries that I have looked at, any criteria as to what constitutes injury or the material retardation of production or of an industry. It is certainly not the case in the United States or in the United Kingdom.

I would suppose that when the Tribunal addresses itself to a matter such as this for the first time, they will look at the jurisprudence that already exists in the United States and in the United Kingdom, and obviously people appearing before them will do the same. That is, if they are well advised they will do the same because it would be the view, I would have thought, of the United States authorities that the findings of the United States Tariff Commission on injury and all these matters have been in fact consistent with their obligation under the GATT.

We carefully avoided, in the drafting of the Code and subsequently in drafting this Bill, attempting to say what injury is because it seemed to be generally agreed by the various business interests who appeared before the so-called Glass Committee that this was the sort of matter that should be determined on its merit, on the facts, in particular cases, and that any attempt to set out criteria of a binding and legal character might really preclude giving protection to someone who was in fact injured or to someone whose potential production was in fact being materially retarded, because it was impossible really to foresee the whole complexity, the whole variety of situations that could arise.

Mr. Gillespie: Does this mean that in each country the tribunals, or their equivalent in each country, will be writing the rules for that particular country? Is there wide discretion, for instance, for the Canadian Tribunal to set its own rules which may be written in such a way as to provide quite exceptional protection for an industry in Canada when other countries might take a rather more liberal view?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is in the abstract sense correct. I would have thought it would be represented to the Tribunal of any country adhering to the Code that it should not be—whichever you wish to say—more liberal, more generous, or more restrictive than is the practice of its trading partners, and a clearly highly protectionist interpretation by the Canadian anti-dumping Tribunal would be an important argumentation in front of the United States Tariff Commission when Canadian exporters are accused of dumping in the United States and of injuring American producers, or in the United Kingdom, for example. And in a certain sense jurisprudence will become internationalized because we are all operating under the same Code.

There also is, of course, international provision for an international body to meet once a year to examine how we are adhering to our obligations, and it might well be that if a Tribunal made an unreasonable, in the sense of overly restrictive, interpretation, it would be brought up in that body.

Mr. Gillespie: There was concern on the part of those who were negotiating this particular aspect of the Code that this might in fact open up the opportunity for protectionism, of a kind that we have not seen in international trading for some time. Surely there is a major danger that this could happen, that it could encourage protectionist sentiment in various countries for a very rigid interpretation of this, and in fact defeat the whole philosophy of the Kennedy Round itself.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think the negotiators were all aware that a decision by one country would, in fact, become almost a precedent in the jurisprudence of the equivalent Tribunal in another country, and this would be a natural brake on overly restrictive interpretations. It would also be a brake on overly liberal interpretations, and over time a common pattern would evolve. The Code does say how you go about looking at injury, the indices that you have to take into account. It suggests that one ought to be careful one is not attributing to dumping some injury which is arising from some other factor. But it does not say what injury is; it does not say what material is. It leaves this to be evolved in each jurisdiction, but we were all aware of the fact that once this Code came into effect producers and importers in each country would be looking at the decisions made by the Tribunal of other countries and most obviously, Canadian importers and Canadian producers will look at the existing decisions of the United States Tariff Commission.

Mr. Gillespie: Are you saying then that our Tribunal will delay any action until a set of precedents has been developed by the United States Tribunal and that, in fact, other countries as well will follow the same lines so that a United States decision in fact will set the tone?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: No, Mr. Chairman. I was drawing attention to the fact that there are in existence a very large number of decisions by the United States Tariff Commission which already provide the precedents. The second point I would make is that the tribunal is required to make its order or finding within 90 days, as is the United States Tariff Commission, once the matter is formally before it.

• 1220

The Chairman: Mr. Perrault.

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Chairman, I have a supplementary question. It relates to the same subject matter.

The Chairman: I will take down your name, Mr. Saltsman.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, I was similarly concerned about the wide latitude apparently which exists under section 3 for the determination of whether or not injury has been caused. I would like to ask Mr. Grey whether or not the type of tribunal we are establishing in Canada is similar to the kind of tribunal which is being established by some of the other nations. It spells out the terms and conditions of this tribunal very explicitly later on in the draft bill and suggests that there will be available to the tribunal research facilities. It also states, on page 86, that the tribunal shall seek the advice of a panel consisting of deputy ministers before making any order or finding or before rendering any advice on any dumping reference. Is this similar to the procedure that is being established in the United States, for example, or in Great Britain?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the United States had anti-dumping legislation since 1921 and, subject to correction, they have had a tariff commission since 1921, and I think it is their view that no change needs to be made in the rules of procedure of the Tariff Commission to accommodate themselves to the Code. Given that the United States constitutional system is different than Canada the United States Tariff Commission is a somewhat different body. It is bound by the Code though as is Canada. The United States is bound by the Code as is Canada to have hearings and to allow interested parties to appear. That is in fact the sort of procedure that is now followed by the United States Tariff Commission.

In the United Kingdom there is quite a different situation. It is the responsibility of a division within the Board of Trade—that is, a government department, to deal with these matters and I believe that they will have to adopt somewhat more open procedures now because of the coming into effect of the Code. The Code itself does not require the setting up of a tribunal along the lines of the United States Tariff Commission. This proposal here is a matter of choice by the Canadian government—that the way for us to meet our obligations is to set up a separate body along the lines of the United States Tariff Commission.

Mr. Perrault: And then they seek the advice of deputy ministers of this panel that I see listed on page 86.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well on that point, Mr. Perrault, it was the view that there might well be a great deal of information available within the government in addition to that that would come to the attention of the tribunal through holding its hearings and through the use of its own investigative staff, that that information should be made available and that the way to do this was through some sort of group of deputy ministers or their nominees representing the departments most directly concerned. But of course the tribunal is required to do no more than seek their advice. They are not of course bound by it.

• 1225

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, I notice that on page 14 Article 3 of the International Convention says,

In the case of retarding the establishment of a new industry in the country of importation, convincing evidence of the forthcoming establishment of an industry must be shown, for example that the plans for a new industry have reached a fairly advanced stage, a factory is being constructed or machinery has been ordered.

It seems to me by that wording that there was some general agreement at this international meeting with respect to what the criteria should be in the respective countries signatory to the agreement. But no explicit regulations have been established yet for our tribunal.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, they have the right to make their own rules of procedure.

Mr. Perrault: You see, the draft bill seems far more vague than the International Convention.

The Chairman: The projected draft bill.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: It is my view, Mr. Perrault, that the draft bill is not more vague. The Code has a lot of words in it but their precise meaning on this point is not that clear. On this point that you have raised it merely says that there must be convincing evidence. Now, for example, and these are merely examples and they are therefore not binding, that the plans for a new industry must have reached a "fairly advanced stage". I am not clear, and I was a negotiator, what a fairly advanced stage is. It was argued by the representatives of the developing countries that if the plan for the industry is included in, say, their five-year plan that that is a fairly advanced stage. I think that is going pretty far. And I think in a close examination of these particular provisions of the Code you will find that the meaning is more apparent than real. The section of the Code that is quite exact are the provisions on retroactivity on margin of dumping. They are much more precise. It was because countries could not agree on what really is injury and that it was a matter to be determined by several good men and proved case by case that we avoided trying to set up criteria. This is nothing more than a piece of advice here.

29148—23

Mr. Perrault: So that there is a lack of a body of precedents and these precedents are going to be created then in the next while.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Perrault, I have already said that the United States Tariff Commission has made a number of decisions which they would regard as being in conformity with this Code even though it did not exist at the time, and I assume that the legal advisors of many Canadian importers are reading those decisions right now. They are all public of course.

The Chairman: Mr. Saltsman, you are next.

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Grey if this particular clause is really not to some extent an indication of sort of a general philosophy contained in this White Paper—the sort of moving away from a legalistic interpretation of damage to perhaps an economic determination of damage.

What strikes me about the sort of all-encompassing nature of this clause is that really the definition of material damage is going to depend to a great extent on the question of the economic conditions in the country at any given time. If a certain industry is booming and the people are dumping it is going to be very difficult for that industry to prove any damage; on the other hand, under circumstances where a particular industry is not doing well, it is going to be a lot easier to prove damage. The fact that the council is appointed by the Governor in Council would seem to indicate to me that government policy generally will be reflected through the actions of the tribunal based on the economic conditions of this country. I know that is a very broad statement and I would appreciate your comments on that.

• 1230

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, Mr. Chairman, on the first part of Mr. Saltsman's comments, I think in the general statement I made at the first meeting of this Committee I did say that the difficulty that we had got into internationally was that there was no explicit test of injury in our legislation as apparently required by Article VI of GATT. GATT merely made it clear that one should not levy an anti-dumping duty unless there was injury or threat of injury. Canadian representatives have never accepted, internationally, that our law levied an anti-dumping duty when at least there was not a threat of injury, but it was the lack of an explicit procedure. What has happened, in effect, is the major trading countries have agreed that the problem of injury is not one that can be dealt with in the fashion that our law now deals with it, that is, by the elaboration of a very complex set of general rules which would then apply to particular cases, but rather that the technique followed in the United Kingdom and the United States should be followed that is, it should appoint several wise people, put them in a room and tell them to look into it and tell you whether or not it is injury. It is really a complete change in technique. I think you have observed that that is the case.

It is not, I think, correct to say that we have been levying anti-dumping duty when there was not a threat of injury. That has been the position that we have argued internationally. There has been an international decision to which we are now party, but it can lead to some difficult results if you try to elaborate a set of general rules and it is better on injury—on that aspect of dumping—to have a judgment made independently and have relatively open procedures. The United States has been concerned that judgments have been made in many European countries on this, but the procedures have been closed. Most of the Code, therefore, is about procedures.

On the question of whether or not there is dumping, that is a matter that can be determined by the rules of law. The Code suggests that it ought to be that way and I think we fully comply with that. But that is why there is the distinction between the judgment from which there is no appeal, except in one sense, on injury, and the much more legalistic approach to the question of dumping. There is, of course, an appeal from the tribunal and that is the right of the Governor in Council to exempt any goods from the operation of this Bill. There is no appeal in the opposite direction; there is no way to put on an anti-dumping duty if the Tribunal has not made a finding.

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Perrault referred to the matter that I wanted to speak about, namely, the provisions of the international agreement regarding injury and the other terms. The only comment I would like to make—I do not think it is properly addressed to Mr. Grey, but rather to the Committee at large—is that I do not think any of us here would want to be in the position, going through this Bill clause by clause as we are doing now, of seeming to indicate to the public that we are approving the definitive words of the legislation without having heard from them. I would suspect that on this question of injury we might have representations from some of the people who may appear before us.

So my main point in intervening, Mr. Chairman, is to establish the fact that although we are going through the Bill clause by clause and line by line at this stage, it is in the sense of exploring the meaning of it and without prejudice to an opportunity to review particular clauses in the light of the representations we may receive.

Mr. Hales: My remarks are somewhat along the line Mr. Blair has just mentioned. No doubt we will have people appearing before us as well as briefs submitted that will bring up many of the detailed points on material injury. I wonder if my question comes under this clause or if it comes under some clause later on in which case I will be prepared to wait. I have in mind the case of an exporter who will not sell to the importer in Canada, but he will rent a piece of heavy equipment, we might say. There will be no sale, but he will rent it to the importer. Is this taken care of in some clause of the Bill? If so, I will wait until we come to that clause.

The Chairman: We will deal with that later on, Mr. Hales.

• 1235

Mr. Hales: All right, I shall wait.

The Chairman: Are there any other questions?

Mr. Lambert: Yes, with respect to clause 3 it states:

3. There shall be levied, collected and paid upon all dumped goods entered into Canada in respect of which the Tribunal has made an order or finding...

Does this mean that there has to be an order or finding with respect of each entry or is it with respect to each class of goods? I have in mind, for instance, that you will have several concurrent importations, say, by jobbers of textiles during a season, whether the country of origin is Britain, Italy, the United States or the Far East and on which there may have been an order by the Tribunal. Does the Tribunal have to make an order with respect to each entry by these several firms?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the answer is, no, it does and perhaps I am forced to give an example. Let us say that it comes to the attention of the Deputy Minister of National Revenue. Perhaps some Canadian producer draws it to his attention, a customs officer draws it to his attention or he sees the goods in a shop and inquires of his own initiative entirely. There are seven-transistor radios—I mean, radios made with seven transistors—which appear to be available in Canada at a ridiculously low price made, let us say, in the Lieu Chieu Islands—there are such islands, sir; I am not making it up entirely and they do make radios there too. He might decide to initiate an investigation and a notice would be published in The Canada Gazette and so on. He might make a preliminary determination that seven-transistor radios made by the “XYZ” company in such a place as the Lieu Chieu Islands have been dumped and then the Tribunal would address itself as to whether imports of that category, as described by the Deputy Minister in his preliminary determination, cause or threaten injury or materially retard and so on. But the Tribunal has the power to say, in effect: “Well, you should have looked at seven-tube transistor radios from Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Mainland China and a number of other places, too, and get on with that, please.” There is the power in the Bill to do that.

I would expect that the Department of National Revenue would have done that, anyway, but in the unlikely event that they have failed really—having found one import—to look at such imports of goods that fall, let us say, within the same description from other sources, the Tribunal can order a further investigation by the Deputy Minister of National Revenue. When the Tribunal makes its order or finding, it is the Tribunal that describes the category of goods and perhaps they might say: “Seven-transistor radios made by the ‘XYZ’ company in the Lieu Chieu Islands”, or perhaps they might say: “Seven transistor radios when made in the Lieu Chieu Islands,” and they do not identify a particular producer, or perhaps they might say: “Seven-transistor radios from all those exporters and all those different countries,” or perhaps they might say: “All radios.” It is for the Tribunal to decide what is the meaningful category. We have carefully avoided the use of the word “class” because that is a word that has been subject to interpretation by the Exchequer Court and I believe the word we use is “description”. It is for the Tribunal, in its wisdom, to decide what is the category, but if they discover that they should be looking at a category that is broader than those which the Deputy Minister described in his preliminary determination, then they can order him to cast his net wider.

Mr. Lambert: To follow up on that, does this mean that the Tribunal, say, could make an order this year with regard to that particular category of goods and that the order of finding would be applicable a year hence? You see, this is what I am getting at. I will agree that when the period is rather contemporaneous, there is not too much difficulty, but, say, one year hence, would someone say: “All right, last year these were subject to a dumping duty of so much. This year they are going to be subject to the same duty.” I would suggest that most likely that would not be the case because the circumstances may have changed considerably in the interval.

• 1240

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, once there is an order or a finding by the Tribunal there are then two points at issue. Does a particular importation which appears at customs after the date of that order or finding fall within the description of goods which were made subject to an anti-dumping duty? That is for the Department of National Revenue to determine and it is subject to appeal just as tariff classification is now. It is up to the Tribunal to write the description—whether or not the imported goods fall within that description—and the order or finding runs on until it is withdrawn by the Tribunal. The Tribunal has the power to re-hear or alter its order or finding; it runs on indefinitely. It is then the responsibility of the Department of National Revenue to examine every importation of goods of that description and levy an anti-dumping duty to the extent that they are dumped, import by import.

Now, this is rather different than the United Kingdom's system or the system in use in Scandinavia where a flat rate of anti-dumping duty is put on a description of goods. It is our view that the Code, most strictly interpreted, requires a judgment in respect of each importation that they are subject to anti-dumping duty and this bill makes the anti-dumping duty the margin of dumping on each importation and that is what this clause says: “an anti-dumping duty in an amount equal to the margin of dumping of the entered goods . . .” meaning each entry of those goods. Automatically that means if a particular entry is not dumped there is no dumping duty; an importer can at once escape the penalty of the anti-dumping duty by stopping dumping. No legal action or further finding is required if he stops dumping and the dumping duty automatically does not apply. There is no other way, in my view, to comply with the terms of the Code that dumping duty shall only be levied on dumped goods.

But the answer is, that goods of that description, set out in the order of finding, are subject to anti-dumping duty as entry by entry in the amount that that entry is found to be dumped and like the description, that is also appealable to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue, to the Tariff Board and, on a question of law, to the Exchequer Court unless the Tribunal alters its finding. I could go on indefinitely.

Mr. Lambert: I was going to say that the Tribunal having made a finding on a particular class of goods, or particular goods, if one year hence an importer were to attempt to bring in goods and is faced with the administrative action of the Department of National Revenue, he could say, "Oh, no, you cannot do that because the circumstances have changed". Then, what is his way to the Tribunal? After all, the period of appeal from the original finding has expired and what, in essence, he is asking for is not so much an appeal, but a variation in the finding. I presume he could, then, on the basis of the particular entry he is attempting to make, initiate further proceedings before the Tribunal in order to establish that circumstances have changed, either that the duty should be greater or should be less if he is an importer. But what about the position, say, of a domestic producer who might say, "Well, the conditions have changed to such an extent here in Canada that the dumping duty must be increased?"

• 1245

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, this Bill provides that a dumping duty cannot be greater than the margin of dumping—the Code provides that. The margin of dumping is a question of fact on each importation. This legislation, unlike the present legislation, says it shall not be less than the margin of dumping. The present one puts a ceiling of 50 per cent ad valorem. That ceiling is gone.

It is open to the tribunal under this Bill to re-hear or alter its order of finding. Presumably, the Tribunal will develop a set of rules as to how, when and in what manner it is prepared to hear representations to the effect that although the dumping may be continuing, the economic situation has so changed that there is no possibility of injury. Presumably, over a time some jurisprudence will develop on this. That power is to be found on page 90, clause 32 of the draft Bill.

The Chairman: Mr. Gillespie and then Mr. Hales.

Mr. Gillespie: I think perhaps Mr. Grey has dealt with part of my question. It has to do with the situation where an entrepreneur, a domestic or a foreign entrepreneur, might see an opportunity in the Canadian market. It would be a situation, perhaps, in which the particular item was not being made in Canada and he might think to himself that there were opportunities here which he would like to investigate. Would he be able to go to the Tribunal and get a ruling from them in advance with respect to whether he would qualify, or his particular plan would qualify under the definition of industry? Under the terms of definition of industry would he be able to go in advance and get a ruling from the Tribunal that he would so qualify?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think what Mr. Gillespie is asking is, can an importer get an advance ruling that dumped imports would not constitute injury of a particular product.

Mr. Gillespie: No, I was not talking about an importer. I was talking about someone who wanted to produce the item in Canada. It might be a domestic entrepreneur or it might be a foreign entrepreneur who sees an opportunity in the Canadian market.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I do not think we have provided power for the Tribunal to give such advice. On the other hand, as soon as there is a body of orders and findings by the Tribunal there will then be some jurisprudence as to what constitutes an industry. I suspect that it will be by reference to formal orders or findings of the Tribunal that people will have to make the judgment.

It would be my view that if the Tribunal were saddled with this task, at least in the initial period, it would be impractical for them to meet their overriding obligation that they must make their orders or finding within 90 days, bearing in mind that in addition to that they have to be prepared to give advice forthwith to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue as to whether, in their opinion, there is evidence of injury. That is an additional function which this Tribunal has which the United States Tariff Commission does not have and given this time limitation in which they must act, I think that it was the view of the draftsmen, the Tribunal should not be asked to take on this additional function of giving advice to potential producers.

Mr. Gillespie: Thank you.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Grey, it was quite evident by the procedure you outlined about the importation of these radios from the Lieu Chieu Islands, that considerable time could elapse, no doubt, several more importations of the radios could come in and the man or the company that made the observations could be put out of business by the time a ruling was made. I would be quite concerned if I was the Canadian manufacturer. Is this not a fact?

• 1250

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, it would be impertinent, perhaps, of me to observe that Mr. Hales is not alone in this concern. To deal with that specific problem, an additional 90 day period of retroactivity was provided in the Code to deal specifically with this sort of problem. It is reproduced in the Bill using almost the identical language of the Code in clause 5 on page 46.

Mr. Hales: That still does not keep the fellow in business. He is out of business.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, one cannot rule out if this draft Bill or something like it becomes Canadian law, that some importer may attempt to do just what Mr. Hales described and may succeed in doing so. Let us try to make up an example. Let us suppose, observing that there are certain limitations on the power of the administration to levy the duty retroactively, that an importer of radios from the Lieu Chieu Islands brings in a substantial quantity, but he has read this Bill and he says, well, as long as I do not bring in a massive quantity—the words that are used here are “a massive importation”—I can make a quick killing and by the time they catch up with me I will be importing something else. These sort of transactions do, in fact, occur. Now, it might be that a month and a half after he has made this importation he has disposed of the goods, pocketed his profits, or the Department of National Revenue has become seized of this. If they can make a preliminary determination within 90 days of the date of importation and subsequently the Tribunal finds that either that importation was of such a massive nature that that importation alone caused injury, or it was one of a series of importations which may have been made by people of which this importer had no knowledge at all—it may have occurred at the other end of the country—the Tribunal may direct that the anti-dumping duty be levied on those transactions which would have occurred not more than 180 days before the Tribunal made its decision.

It was the view of the draftsmen, sir, that although there may be some people so misguided as to make the kind of importations which you have described, the first time this section is used there may be some importers made bankrupt by it. It was accepted internationally that Canada, because of its proximity to the United States, was peculiarly exposed to this kind of dumping and the possibility of arranging a transaction very rapidly, making a very quick killing and doing real damage and that there should be special provision in the Code to deal with this situation. Of course, it is open to all countries to use it. An exporter from Canada to the United States is equally exposed to the use of this should the United States modify its law to take account of it—to provide the power to do so. It is contemplated that we will take full advantage of this power. If it is used, I would think it would then create in the minds of the importing community recognition of the fact that dumping may be a risky business and that the only way to be sure that you are not caught with an anti-dumping duty is not to dump.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, I will accept another question from Mr. Gray as it is now five minutes to one. We have had a very interesting meeting and I will ask for your guidance on a few matters after Mr. Gray has asked his questions.

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, I do not like to intervene, but since we are dealing with Mr. Hales' important question, perhaps Mr. Grey might be able to say whether, in a very grave case, the provisions of clause 15 which enable a provisional determination to be made and dumping duty to be levied provisionally, might be some protection to Canadian industry.

• 1255

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the right to apply provisional duty only applies to entries the date of which comes after the preliminary determination by the Deputy Minister of National Revenue. He has no power to go back and levy a duty provisionally on goods which have already entered. Of course, the question of whether they have already entered is a question of whether the entry has been perfected in terms of this legislation and the Customs Act which may be a very complicated question.

An additional provision, which I think I should draw to your attention, is the fact that if the dumping duty is not paid in the sort of case that I have pointed out, then the liability follows the goods. These provisions are necessary because in the Code we accepted an obligation not to apply the duty retroactively except within very strict limits. That was a very important concession on the part of Canada and on the part of other trading countries. Now, let us say, an importer of the kind Mr. Hales described imports these goods and he sells them to a large retailing organization. The retailing organization may find that that importer has transferred all his assets to his wife, that he has gone into voluntary liquidation or that he has left the country—there are all sorts of techniques by which liability of the Crown may be debated. Under this Bill it is contemplated that the anti-dumping duty then lies with the subsequent owner of the goods. The first time that section is enforced I would think the purchasers of imported goods in Canada would wish to be sure that the importers they purchase from are sufficiently well established to meet their obligations to the Crown should those obligations be created by this Bill. This is intended to stop what Mr. Lambert called a fly-by-night operation.

Mr. Lambert: But you will agree, Mr. Grey, that the following of goods through the chain of retail distribution and so forth, though, can be very difficult. I would not like to be the one necessarily having to do that. For instance, in the case of small transistor radios that go out to novelty shops and pass through a number of distributors to novelty merchants and so forth, one would have quite a job on his hands.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is true, Mr. Chairman, but because we have accepted this very limitation on retroactivity and thereby possibly opening the door to sort of hit-and-run dumping tactics which could be very injurious, we have endeavoured to provide a scheme which is, in a sense, self-enforcing. It has come to our knowledge that there are substantial and well known retailing organizations that make a practice of importing dumped goods.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I think I will reserve my more detailed questions on the aspect raised by Mr. Hales until we come more specifically to the clauses in the draft bill dealing with this matter. However, I just wanted to make sure that we did have confirmation from Mr. Rod Grey that the draft bill did deal with the situation of sporadic or hit-or-miss dumping which has been raised by Mr. Hales.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, it is, I think, in clause 5 read in conjunction with the enforcement division to which I just referred. Clause 5 is on page 46. It specifically deals with what is called colloquially "sporadic" dumping. The language is more elaborate and more careful in clause 5 than that phrase.

Mr. Gray: I have just one further question. Under the existing scheme of the law, of course, the same type of risk actually exists. There is a risk under the existing law with respect to hit-or-miss or sporadic dumping.

• 1300

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Yes, Mr. Chairman, there is although it might be argued that the ability of the Department of National Revenue to go back and deal with importations that took place, I think it is not more than two years previously, does provide some protection, but it is a matter of judgment how effective that can be. The limitation on retroactivity has required us, though, to put in this special provision to deal with that sort of dumping.

Mr. Gray: You have in effect put into the draft bill a special provision designed to deal, hopefully, as effectively as before, if not more effectively, with this problem of hit-or-miss dumping in the light of the limit placed on retroactivity under our international treaty obligations—the same limitations which our trading partners also have to put into effect in their own domestic laws.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is correct, sir.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, the Co-ordinating Committee met yesterday and allocated the following days, room facilities and hours: Monday, November 4, 8:00 p.m.; Tuesday, November 5, 3:30 p.m.; Thursday, November 7, 11:00 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Could I have your direction, please?

Mr. Gray: Would you give us some further explanation, Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: On what, Mr. Gray?

Mr. Gray: Are you saying that it was suggested these are the only hours available for us to meet?

The Chairman: Yes, sir. I understand that the Co-ordinating Committee will meet every Wednesday and at that time allocate the days, room facilities, hours of sittings, and so on.

Mr. Gray: Could you give us that list again, please?

The Chairman: Yes, sir. Monday, November 4, 8:00 p.m., room 308 West Block; Tuesday, November 5, 3:30 p.m., room 308 West Block; Thursday, November 7, 11:00 a.m. and 3:30 p.m., room 308 West Block.

Mr. Gray: With the exception of the afternoon of Tuesday, November 5, there does not seem to be that much difference from what we have been doing up until now—unless you look at the possibility of an evening meeting on Monday, November 4.

The Chairman: What are your suggestions, gentlemen, about the proposed schedule allocated to us by the Co-ordinating Committee?

Mr. Blair: I move that we approve.

Mr. Trudel: Is that the schedule for one week, Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: Mr. Trudel, the Co-ordinating Committee will meet every Wednesday and allocate the times of sittings and so on for each Committee.

Mr. Trudel: Fine.

The Chairman: If you think that we have not been allocated sufficient time we can go back to them and ask for more time.

Is it agreeable, gentlemen, that we accept this allocation for next week?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Thank you very much, Mr. Grey.

The meeting is adjourned.

APPENDIX D

October 31, 1968

Proposed Draft Regulations Relating to Sections 9 and 10 of Draft
Anti-Dumping Bill

1. For the purpose of determining the normal value of any goods imported into Canada, the period referred to in section 9(1) (c) of the Act in relation to the said sale is the period ending on the day of the said sale and commencing ( ) days immediately preceding that day or for such longer period, as in the opinion of the Deputy Minister, is required by virtue of the nature of the trade.

2. The sales of like goods, the prices of which are used to compute the normal value of any goods shall be those sales of goods made to purchasers who are at the same or at substantially the same trade level as the importer, and

(a) that are in the same or substantially the same quantities as the sale of goods to the importer, or

(b) in the event that the goods were not sold in the same or substantially the same quantities in the country of export as the sale of goods to the importer

(i) if the quantity sold to the importer is larger than the largest quantity sold for home consumption, that are in the largest quantity sold for home consumption, or

(ii) if the quantity sold to the importer is smaller than the smallest quantity sold for home consumption, that are in the smallest quantity sold for home consumption.

(c) sub-section to the same effect as section 36, subsection 2, para (c) of Customs Act.

3.(1) The normal value of any goods, as otherwise determined, may be adjusted by an allowance for quantity only if

(a) the exporter in the six-month period immediately preceding the date of the sale to the importer has granted quantity discounts of at least the same magnitude with respect to twenty per cent or more of the total quantity of like goods sold for home consumption and such discount had been freely available to all purchasers, or

(b) the Deputy Minister is satisfied that such a discount is warranted on the basis of savings specifically attributable to the quantities involved.

3. (2) Notwithstanding sub-section (1), where the quantity of the goods sold to the importer in Canada was smaller than the smallest quantity of goods used in computing the normal value of the goods, the said normal value of the goods, as otherwise determined, shall be increased by an allowance to an amount which, in the opinion of the Deputy Minister, reflects the price for which such smaller quantity would be sold for home consumption.

4. The normal value of any goods, as otherwise determined, may be adjusted by an allowance, which, in the opinion of the Deputy Minister, reflects the value of any differences in quality, structure, design or material and any other difference between the goods sold for home consumption and those exported to Canada.

5. The normal value of any goods, as otherwise determined, may be adjusted by the deduction of an allowance on account of any deferred discounts granted by the exporter in connection with the goods purchased by the importer if

(a) the discounts were shown on the invoice at the time of importation of the goods,

(b) the discounts are not greater in percentage and not more favourable in terms than those granted generally by the exporter on the sales of goods used in determining the normal value of the goods, and

(c) the minister has provided the Deputy Minister with an undertaking that he will comply with the terms and conditions relating thereto.

6. The normal value of any goods, as otherwise determined, may be adjusted by deducting an allowance on account of a discount for cash if

(a) the terms and conditions of the discount are set out on the invoice,

(b) the discount is similar in percentage and terms with that granted generally by the exporter on the sales of like goods that are used in determining the normal value of the goods and

(c) the Deputy Minister is satisfied that the importer has earned or will earn the discount in accordance with the terms and conditions relating thereto.

7. The normal value of any goods, as otherwise determined, may be adjusted by deducting an allowance on account of the cost of transportation from the place of shipment to purchasers for home consumption.

(a) if the like goods are sold generally for home consumption by the exporter in the country of export at a common delivered price (freight prepaid or allowed) to all destinations in the country of export or in that zone in the country of export in which the place of direct shipment to Canada is located, that under ordinary commercial practice of the country of export is considered to be a common transportation zone,

(b) subject to paragraph (c), in an amount not greater than the average cost of freight prepaid or allowed by the exporter on the sales of like goods in the country or zone therein, and

(c) not exceeding the actual charges for transportation of the goods to the importer.

8. In the event that there were not sufficient number of sales of like goods made to purchasers for home consumption in the country of export who are at the same or substantially the same trade level as the importer of the goods but there were a sufficient number of sales of like goods made to purchasers for home consumption at a level subsequent to that of the importer, the latter sales shall be used to compute the normal value of goods and the normal value of the goods so determined may be adjusted by deducting an allowance

(a) not exceeding the discount that is freely available on sales, by other vendors in the country of export of like goods, to purchasers for home consumption who were at the same trade level as that of the importer, or

(b) where the information referred to in paragraph (a) is not available, not exceeding such amount as in the opinion of the Deputy Minister represents the cost incurred by the exporter in respect of sales for home consumption for carrying out the functions normally performed at the trade level of the importer provided

(1) the exporter did not perform these functions on sales to the Canadian importer,

(2) the exporter did not carry out these functions in respect of the sale of the said goods in Canada,

(3) the allowance does not exceed the actual cost of carrying out these functions in Canada.

9. The normal value of any goods, as otherwise determined, may be adjusted by deducting therefrom the amount of any taxes and duties levied on the sales of like goods when destined for home consumption that are not borne by the goods sold to the importer in Canada.

10. All computations shall be made at the same exchange rate which shall be the exchange rate prevailing on the date of shipment to Canada.

11. For purposes of section 9(3), a sufficient number of sales with reference to any goods in a prescribed period means sales of those goods during that period in such quantities that, if the quantity of the goods sold to Canada in the period were to be deducted from the total quantity of goods sold throughout that period, at least twenty-five per cent of the remainder would have been sold for home consumption.

12. [Regulation to define sufficient number of sales for purposes of section 9(2).]

13. (1) For the purposes of paragraph (a) of sub-section (1) of Section 10, the "exporter's sale price" means the price at which the goods are sold or agreed to be sold to the Canadian importer less the amount, if any, whether or not included in such price, for (1) any additional costs, charges and expenses, incurred by the exporter incident to preparing the goods for shipment to Canada which are not generally incurred on home market sales, (a) all other costs, charges and expenses by or for the account of the exporter resulting from or arising from the exportation or after the shipment of the goods from the place described in paragraph (d) of sub-section (1) of Section 9.

13. (2) For the purposes of paragraph (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 10, the "importer's purchase price" means the price at which such merchandise has been purchased or agreed to be purchased by the importer less, the amount, if any, whether or not included in such price, for (1) any additional costs, charges, and expenses incident to preparing the goods for shipment to Canada, over and above those normally incurred by the exporter on home market sales, which are not for the account of the importer, and (2) all other costs, charges and expenses resulting from or arising from the exportation or after the shipment of the goods from the place described in paragraph (d) of subsection (1) of Section 9 which are not for the account of the importer.

---

OFFICIAL REPORT OF MINUTES
OF
PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

This edition contains the English deliberations and/or a translation into English of the French.

Copies and complete sets are available to the public by subscription to the Queen's Printer. Cost varies according to Committees.

Translations under the direction of the Bureau for Translations, Secretary of State.

ALISTAIR FRASER,
The Clerk of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

First Session—Twenty-eighth Parliament

1968

---

STANDING COMMITTEE

ON

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. GASTON CLERMONT

---

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

No. 5

---

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1968

---

Respecting

WHITE PAPER ON ANTI-DUMPING

---

WITNESS:

Mr. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
QUEEN'S PRINTER AND CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY
OTTAWA, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON
FINANCE, TRADE, AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. Alastair Gillespie

and

Mr. Blair,
Mr. Burton,
Mr. Comtois,
Mr. Danson,
Mr. Downey,
Mr. Énard,

Mr. Flemming,
Mr. Gauthier,
Mr. Givens,
Mr. Gray,
Mr. Hales,
Mr. Harkness,

Mr. Lambert (*Edmonton
West*),
Mr. Latulippe,
Mr. Perrault,
Mr. Roberts,
Mr. Saltzman,
Mr. Trudel—(20).

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

EXTRACT FROM THE MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS OF
TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1968

On motion of Mr. Trudel, seconded by Mr. Roberts.

Resolved,—That the evidence adduced earlier this day and at the meeting of November 4, 1968, be considered as part of the official record of this Committee.

ATTEST:

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

Monday, November 4, 1968.

(7)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 8:10 p.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Burton, Clermont, Danson, Gillespie, Givens, Gray, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton West), Perrault, Trudel—(10).

Also present: Mr. Ritchie.

In attendance: From the Department of Finance: Messrs. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister, and C. D. Arthur, International Economic Relations Division.

Also in attendance: From the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise): Messrs. R. C. Labarge, Deputy Minister; A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister, M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division; H. D. MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section; From the Department of Trade and Commerce: C. J. Kelly, Office of Area Relations; From the Department of Industry: V. R. St. Louis, Commercial Policy Division.

The Committee continued questioning the witness, Mr. Grey, on the proposed draft bill on anti-dumping.

At 10:00 p.m. the Committee adjourned until Tuesday, November 5, 1968 at 3:30 p.m.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

EVIDENCE
(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Monday, November 4, 1968

• 2010

The Chairman: Last Thursday when we adjourned, gentlemen, we were on page 44, Part I, Liability for Anti-Dumping Duty. Yes, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): On a point of order, Mr. Chairman. As I indicated to you prior to the commencement of the meeting, I know that this Committee is meeting at this insane hour as the result of the directions of the co-ordinating committee. But if they want to kill the committee system let them continue this, because it is not only this committee that can be directed to meet in the evening as well as during the daytime, and that will kill the thing entirely. We have staff to consider, Mr. Chairman, and that decision did not consider staff. They cannot come in at noon to compensate for the hours in the evening. We have also here very many senior public servants who all have their responsibilities in their departments and we cannot, in all justice, even if members are insane enough to suggest that they are going to sit at night, ask these men to come here night in and night out. Therefore, I officially record my dissent at this procedure.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert, as I mentioned to you in private, last Thursday before we adjourned I read the suggestion made by the co-ordinating committee that we have the night sitting tonight. It was moved and seconded that we accept that schedule, and I do not think it would be fair to put the full blame on the co-ordinating committee, because the Committee members who were here accepted the proposition.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, that at the time you did not have a quorum.

The Chairman: This I would not be able to say because I did not count them, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I stayed here until one o'clock last Thursday.

The Chairman: Yes, I agree that you were not here.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): But I stayed here till one o'clock.

The Chairman: Yes, but I mean I did not move and second it myself, Mr. Lambert, and I was not alone here. There were members even from your own party. Are there any other comments on this?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Do I take it all the gentlemen here approve of sitting on Monday nights, Tuesday nights?

The Chairman: No, Mr. Lambert. It is not a question of Tuesday nights. What was suggested by the co-ordinating committee and what I placed before the members here last Thursday was the schedule that we sit tonight at eight o'clock, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 p.m., Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, and Thursday afternoon at 3:30 p.m. There was to be only one night sitting this week, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): As far as I am concerned the co-ordination is all nonsense because there is a Procedure Committee that sits on Tuesday afternoons and Thursday afternoons, and that conflicts with this one as far as I am concerned.

The Chairman: Yes, but is any member of your party sitting on that co-ordinating committee?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Yes, there is, but the Chairman is also one who sits. The chairman of the co-ordinating committee is a man who sits on the Procedure Committee and he suddenly remembered that perhaps he had goofed.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Mr. Trudel.

Mr. Trudel: Is this a permanent arrangement or is this going to be changed from week to week?

The Chairman: I believe that the coordinating committee will make suggestions for each week.

Mr. Trudel: So perhaps on one week there would be a possibility that we meet in the evening and on the other weeks during the day.

[English]

• 2015

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, I suggest we take this up in the steering committee.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: I believe that the coordination committee has made suggestions only, and it is up to the members of this committee who were there who accepted the schedule. I cannot assure Mr. Lambert that we had a majority of members present at that time. I cannot assure him of that, but the coordinating committee is going to make suggestions every week. It is up to the members of the committee to accept or not such a decision.

Mr. Trudel: Thank you.

[English]

The Chairman: Are there any other comments?

Mr. Danson: I hesitate to comment, because the last time I suggested a procedure that was not followed in the past, the gentleman opposite suggested that I had better wait until I had more experience, and I shall wait.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, as I mentioned before, last Thursday when we adjourned we were at page 44, Part I, Liability for Anti-dumping Duty, and Mr. Gray had the floor. I do not know whether he was finished with questions to Mr. R.Y. Grey, but he had the floor.

Mr. Gray: I will yield, Mr. Chairman, so that we can attempt to make further progress.

The Chairman: Are there any other questions on clause 3? If not, we will move to clause 4, or to clause 5 on page 46.

Mr. Harkness: In connection with clause 4, do I understand from reading this that if a provisional duty is imposed, that then becomes the maximum duty that can be imposed?

Mr. R. Y. Grey (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance): Mr. Chairman, the answer is yes.

There is a provision to this effect in the Code. I think the practical import of this is that officials of the Department of National Revenue will be doubly scrupulous to be sure that they impose the maximum provisional duty.

Mr. Harkness: Yes, if they did not impose a sufficient provisional duty, then I could see that there could be serious results. What is the reason or the need for having a provision of this kind, that the provisional duty imposed shall be the maximum?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I am unable to answer that question. The point was raised by the representative of one country in the anti-dumping negotiations, and I made the reply which I just made to you, sir, that the impact of this would not be to have lower anti-dumping duties, which would seem to be the import of the proposal, but just the opposite. They maintained their position, so I saw no particular harm in it. It is quite lacking in logic as far as the Code is concerned.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, last winter when we were discussing this at the time of the Kennedy Round discussions, and with the then Minister of Trade and Commerce and I believe other officers of the Department of Finance, it became quite apparent that with a reasonable amount of astuteness, importers or shall we say an exporter from a foreign nation would be easily allowed one good free dump before you caught up to him. The combination of clauses 3 and 4, I would suggest, has that result, in that the anti-dumping duty that is payable is made only in respect of goods in which the Tribunal has made an order. The Tribunal will have made an order because there has been a complaint that it has caused, or is causing, or is likely to cause material injury to the production in Canada of like goods, or has materially retarded or is materially retarding the establishment of the production of like goods in Canada. And I put it to you as a practical measure that this will in effect mean one free dump.

• 2020

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Lambert has made two assertions that clauses 3 and 4 together would allow one good free dump and one free dump. I do take issue with the first of those statements, sir, because clause 5 which you have not yet come to is intended to stop the one good free dump by which I assume you meant a very large one that might do real damage. I think it is the case that one that does not form part of a series of importations, which taken together would be judged to be massive, which is the case that is dealt with in clause 5, does not fall within clause 5, or the administration does not act with sufficient speed.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Grey, the idea may be all right, but the procedure and the machinery will not catch up with those people who are moving fast enough to be able to come in with a dump. We will hear about this from the trade associations, I am sure, but this was expressed as one of the difficulties last summer, or last year.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think the question in part should be addressed to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue or the Minister of National Revenue, because it concerns the speed with which that Department will act. I would point out that if the dumping action which comes to the attention of the authorities can be dealt with within 90 days from the date of that original importation, it may be that it will be subject to duties retroactively as much as 180 days after the importation under clause 5. It is not just clauses 3 and 4 taken together, but clauses 3, 4 and 5. I think then the situation is that even if the administration acts with all due speed, it is possible to have one small bite and escape the dumping duty, but if it is a very large one or if it is a series of middles, like being attacked by a school of barracuda, it is possible that clause 5 will apply. That is the purpose of clause 5, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Yes, because it seems to me the old procedure was more effective and made it possible for the Department of National Revenue to react quicker. We are now entering into an anti-dumping convention imposed upon us by the thinking of European countries who do not have to rely upon anti-dumping conventions to control imports into their country because they resort to other methods and, therefore, we tied our hands behind our backs on the really effective way we had of controlling this sort of operation. They gave away nothing because they have other means and utilize other means, such as quotas, particular taxes and one thing and another that they could move in on rather rapidly. That is why I feel we have to be very careful at this particular time.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think I ought to draw Mr. Lambert's attention to the fact that it was the situation in the United States that they would take what is called under the Code "provisional action". There was no limitation on the amount of time required to take provisional action and, therefore, goods could be held subject to further appraisement and potentially liable for an anti-dumping duty for a very long period of time.

There are cases on record where goods were subject to that provisional action for as long as two years. It was the view of the Canadian Government and they so instructed their representatives that some limitation should be put on the United States. That limitation is embodied in the relevant sections of the Code which here are given force in Canadian law. We, of course, had to put the same limitation on ourselves, but we could only reach backward under certain very defined circumstances. I think it is quite correct that if the administrative authorities do not act with sufficient speed dumping could take place, but that is not the fault of the Code, that would be the fault of the administrative authorities.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, could I ask a question . . .

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Gray.

Mr. Gray: . . . just to clarify a point in my own mind, at least. First of all, is it correct that the procedures under the Code can be initiated not only by means of a complaint received by the customs administration, but through action of the customs administration itself?

• 2025

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is correct.

Mr. Gray: So this would be a factor limiting the possibility of the so-called free dump that Mr. Lambert has referred to, I mean, if the customs administration is efficient and alert to the fact that it can initiate the procedures itself this will help to lessen the possibility suggested by Mr. Lambert. Do you agree with that suggestion?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think, Mr. Chairman, that when we come to the procedural sections of the Bill you will see that the Department of National Revenue would be under a fairly strict legislative instruction to act when information comes to their attention.

Mr. Gray: Do I understand, then, that you said to Mr. Lambert that the Code is such that with efficient and effective customs administration even the possibility of the one small dump about which you made some distinction, would be lessened materially?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, we were concerned in the negotiations to make sure that it was not possible to dump a sufficient quantity of goods to do injury to Canadian producers and, because of the retroactivity limitations, to escape the duty. We defined this in such a way that that category includes not only single transactions, but a transaction that is one of a series of transactions. That is what clause 5 refers to. Now, if there is one dump which is in itself not massive and it is not one of a series of importations of similar goods in a relatively short period of time, then it is possible in that situation for one dump to occur. Some might argue that that can happen now in fact, but by definition that importation would not have been injurious. If it were injurious because it was massive and was not caught by clause 5, it merely means that the administration did not move to the stage of preliminary determination within 90 days of the importation.

Mr. Gray: If the dump in question is not injurious, that really begs the question as to the whole effect of the particular transaction. The legislative scheme or proposal embodied in the draft law is that we must now take into account the question of injury.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Gray, I do not think that is a question. That is a statement, is it not?

Mr. Gray: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

On clause 6—When duty payable.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Harkness.

Mr. Harkness: In connection with clause 6, when we were discussing some of these matters earlier, Mr. Grey, you said that if the importer, we will say, had disappeared and the duty could no longer be collected from him, then it could be collected from people to whom he had sold the article. Where is that covered? This clause of course, just says "the importer".

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, it is contained in clause 33 on page 90, under Part IV, General.

Mr. Gray: Would it be in subclause (2)?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Yes.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Very well, Mr. Lambert.

[English]

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): My question deals with clause 7.

On clause 7—Exemption by Governor in Council.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Under what circumstances would you envisage that clause 7 might be invoked, Mr. Grey or is this to provide for that possible case where it is not necessary?

• 2030

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I presume the situation would be analogous to that which applies under the present legislation. There have been exemptions from anti-dumping duty for window glass. No reason was ever stated in the House for the exemption, but I believe the reason was that the government was of the view that there was some kind of combining to raise prices in that industry. That is hearsay. There is an exemption now for automobiles imported under the terms of the order which gives effect to the automotive products agreement and one, I think, for commercial vehicles.

These were situations in which it was apparent that dumping could not injure Canadian producers of those goods for various reasons. It is possible to envisage a situation in which there is a sole Canadian producer who can demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Tribunal that, indeed, he has been injured in the strict meaning of the word—his prices have fallen, employment has been reduced and so on. The government might, none the less, conclude that they should be able to exempt that product from anti-dumping duty.

There is broad power both in the Customs Tariff Act and in the Combines Investigation Act to use tariff reductions when prices are being maintained by a monopolist or by a combination. They are of long standing and they very seldom have been used. This power is analogous.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): This would be deemed to be delegated authority, would it not?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think that is correct, Mr. Chairman. I would point out that if this clause were not here—it is an exact model of the one in the existing provision. There is a provision in the Financial Administration Act under which the Governor in Council has power. This power is in relation to all taxes, fees penalties or licences.

Mr. Gray: I believe that is section 22.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Yes, Section 22.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Yes, we have heard about it; it is about a certain type of equipment.

The Chairman: Mr. Gillespie.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, I was going to ask precisely the same question as Mr. Lambert has asked.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, just for the record, I might correct Mr. Grey in saying that a similar power to the one found in clause 7 of the draft bill exists in section 6(2) (b) of the Customs Tariff, which is the section dealing with our present anti-dumping scheme.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is correct, it is precisely the same power.

On clause 9(1)—Determination of normal value of goods.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Grey, with respect to clause 9 has further progress been made in obtaining approval of the draft regulations you placed before us the other day, or when do your anticipate that the approval of this may be obtained.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I do not think they will be approved until after this draft bill has moved on quite a number of stages. As Mr. Lambert will realize, there are several sections that are not put in in legal language but simply indicate the structure of the regulations. I would think that it will be very close to January 1 before they are in final form.

• 2035

On clause 10(2)—Special rules to determine export price.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I would like to enquire about the special rules to determine the export price where the Deputy Minister rather doubts that the price is reliable because of the relationship between the importer and the exporter.

Have we had difficulty with this at all in the past? Are the principles not the same? Under our present Act I am sure that the concept is not new, and I am just wondering whether this is really an area that gives much trouble to the administrators of our anti-dumping provisions?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, a question about the administration of the present legislation I think should be more properly addressed to Mr. Labarge. I would merely state that in the confidential hearings before the Blass Committee and, prior to that, in consultations with members of the business community which I conducted on the instructions of the Minister of Finance, and on numerous occasions in consultation with the representatives of various corporations, it had been represented to the Department that between associated or related companies it is remarkably easy to arrange one's affairs so that dumping can take place and that it is difficult to detect and to get at this.

I once asked a tariff consultant in Ottawa, who shall be nameless, how a firm in a particular line could dump; he asked me how many ways I would like to know because he could off-hand think of a dozen ways a firm related to a parent firm in another country could so arrange their affairs as to place a considerable burden on Mr. Labarge's officials in detecting the real nature of that transaction. I would not suggest, Mr. Lambert, that this has made it easier to find; our effort was to be sure that we did not make it easier to dump in that manner.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I will be asking Mr. Labarge about this, but I was wondering whether in your context you were aware that this was one of the real tough nuts to crack.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Lambert has me at a slight disadvantage because most of the information I have on this basis is in fact of a confidential character. But I would put it very strongly that it has very frequently been represented to us in the very strongest terms, and it was the advice we got from the consultant that was hired by the Department of Finance to assist us in the negotiation of the code, that a good deal of such dumping took place; that he had advised his clients how to do it, which was perfectly within the scope of the law, and I believe the assertion made recently in a number of semi-public gatherings that no Canadian importer need pay a dumping duty if he arranges his affairs with sufficient skill.

Mr. Gillespie: I would just like to pick this point up that Mr. Grey has made. Are these arrangements to which you refer related in any way to imports from state-trading agencies?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: No, Mr. Chairman. I was really thinking of transactions between very large parent firms abroad and very large subsidiaries in Canada which both import and export a wide variety of products and carry on a multitude of transactions and who therefore can obscure the amount of the real consideration that is passed with reference to particular imports.

Mr. Gillespie: You are talking about the multinational firms?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Yes, and a multiproduct firm too.

• 2040

Mr. Gillespie: The multinational multiproduct firm. I would like to come back to that a little later. There was one question I wanted to ask you in this area which has to do with the valuation of imports from state-trading countries. I am referring particularly to those behind the Iron Curtain, and the basis on which the Deputy Minister would make his valuation.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Sir, the problem in relation to imports from so-called state-trading countries relates to determining not the export price, which is the subject of this section, but the normal value, and that is dealt with in subclause (5) of clause 9 on page 52.

Mr. Gillespie: Can we revert back to that clause, Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: That is all right.

On clause 9 (5)—Normal value where export monopoly.

Mr. Gillespie: Perhaps Mr. Grey would like to just review that item for me.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: When a complaint is received that goods from a state-trading country are coming in at what seems to be an unreasonably low price, given the going structure of international prices, it is the practice now in Canada, the practice in the United States, and it is the practice which is recognized under the GATT, that the normal value can be determined by reference to the price at which such goods are imported from a nearby open-market economy and I am using a term that ought to be in quotation marks. I think that power is now exercised under section 38(d) of the Customs Act which confers the power on the Minister of National Revenue to prescribe the manner in which such goods shall be valued, and this concept of the Minister prescribing a manner in which the value shall be determined is carried forward here. The grounds are stated more narrowly than in the present Customs Act, and here it describes, completely in conformity with the Code on this point, the right of all countries to have reference to some other standard than the domestic value when looking at the normal value in the different state-trading countries, where obviously goods do not change hands at market prices in the ordinary economics sense.

Mr. Gillespie: Is this likely to be a very arbitrary decision on the part of the Deputy Minister? I am referring particularly to those who are interested in developing trade with Eastern European countries. If they start out on one basis which proves effective, are they likely to find shortly thereafter that there will be a new evaluation placed on normal price and, as a result find the business and their efforts gone for naught?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: This finding of normal value is bound to be arbitrary in a formal sense, I think you meant whether it is going to be unreasonable or unreasonably high.

Mr. Gillespie: Or consistent.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: No question is raised about the value of the great volume of goods which are now imported by Canada from state trading countries. The invoice value is accepted as being an indication of the value in the country of export. But there have been at times a number of complaints and inquiries which have given rise to the use of the analogous power now. I think that the fact that it is a stated policy of the Canadian Government to develop trading relations with these countries is a natural brake on the arbitrary use of this power. But at the same time, there is the fact that if it is not used fairly and correctly, it means that we would be discriminating in effect against our trading partners who have open-market economies. It is a difficult exercise in judgment to see that trade develops with those countries at the same time, without discriminating against countries whose systems of marketing are more open to the scrutiny of this type of customs system.

Mr. Gillespie: I am referring in particular to a group of products which might be described as those involved in heavy construction. Some publicity has recently been given to them. This is one side of the equation, the evaluation of a normal price, or normal value. The other side is the export price and many of these, as I understand it, might be exported on a consignment basis and then leased in Canada. What provisions relate to this question of assigning an export price to goods which are not sold but which are leased once they arrive in Canada?

• 2045

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is a question I would like to revert to later, because I think I need advice, but I think it is dealt with under subclause (2) on page 54, where it states:

10.2(2) Where, in respect of any imported goods,

(a) there is no exporter's sale price or importer's purchase price at the time of importation of the goods...

You go all the way through that section and then you find out it states:

(d) in any case other than that described in paragraph (c), the price determined in the manner prescribed by the regulations.

And what I am suggesting is that for goods imported and not sold but leased, rules will have to be prescribed by regulation under this Act. I think I am correct that it is done by regulation under the present Act. This same problem, of course, arises. If they are sold on consignment then it is dealt with under paragraph (c) on page 54, where the export price is determined by taking the first arm's-length transaction in Canada and deducting from that all the costs and profits and taxes that have been incurred between the time of import and the time of the arm's-length sale. That principle, of course, is in the present legislation.

Mr. Gillespie: One further question has to do with the nature of compensatory arrangements. I wonder if Mr. Grey might give examples of these.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: If an importer in Canada purchases goods from an exporter in, let us say, New York, and it is discovered subsequently that his hotel bill in Florida was paid by that exporter, in other words there was a reduction of the export price, or perhaps some other friendly service was provided by the exporter in Florida, I suppose that would be a compensatory arrangement. How wide that term is—it is intended to be wide—I suppose will be determined by the Exchequer Court in due course. I think that there is probably no limit to the list of compensatory arrangements.

Mr. Gillespie: Is there suspicion on the part of the Department that this is a very prevalent practice?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Not prevalent. I think if it is clear that the legislation recognized that one way of dumping is to provide some related compensatory service so that the export price is not really the real export price, presumably it will not be prevalent.

Mr. Gillespie: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: On clause 11—page 56—Where information not available.

Yes, Mr. Grey?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I wonder if I could point out to the Committee, Mr. Chairman, that it was our insistence that in the Code it was established that where information is not made available, decisions can be made on the basis of the information that is available, so as to make it not possible for people to get one small bite or two small bites or three small bites by withholding information. This is a logical corollary to the undertaking to place limits on the retroactive application of anti-dumping duty.

Mr. Burton: I was just wondering why there is the immediate reference to the Minister after the Deputy Minister has drawn the conclusion that there is not sufficient information available, rather than a reference to the Tribunal?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Because the question of what is the normal value and what is the export price is a matter for the Department of National Revenue, subject to appeal to the Tariff Board and the Exchequer Court. It does not fall within the purview of the Tribunal, which concerns itself only with injury. As to whether it should be the Deputy Minister or the Minister who prescribes, I am not quite clear, but tentatively we proposed the Minister.

The Chairman: On clause 12—Goods exported to Canada through another country. Yes, Mr. Lambert?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): On clause 12, it seems to me that there is... Oh, excuse me.

Mr. Burton: With respect to clause 11, I would like to underline Mr. Grey's last comment about the question regarding whether this should be just referred to the Minister in the legislation. It seems to me this is a trend in legislation. There are many very specific matters referred to the Minister that I think can be questioned on a number of grounds.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I am not clear just what the question is.

Mr. Burton: Maybe you can comment.

●2050

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, I might merely comment. The question that faced the draftsmen throughout was that where it was clear an arbitrary power of some sort or delegated power was required, should it be the Deputy Minister or the Minister or the Governor in Council? We have followed broadly the pattern of the present legislation. But I would point out that as much power can be delegated by the use of language which obscures the need to make a judgment as by stating it explicitly. Throughout this legislation I think the draftsmen's bias is to invoke the opinion of the Deputy Minister or the prescription of the Minister whenever there is a real matter of judgment, and not to fall back upon language which would obscure the nature of that discretion. And that is possibly the reason that these terms appear here more frequently than in some other types of legislation.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert, on clause 12.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): This raises a point that can be related back to section 9 (1) (b), raising the problem that I think is inherent in the structure of the common market. In 9(1) (b) we hear of home consumption. Shall it be deemed that within the common market, that shall be home consumption, even going beyond the national boundaries of the country of production?

In the same way, how does the common market structure apply under 12? There it is deemed that goods shall be passing, without any customs barriers, or what have you, within the common market. Therefore, goods can actually be produced in West Germany, shipped to France without any customs toll between France and Germany, and then exported to Canada.

I think the two points are somewhat related. What do we consider to be the country of origin within the common market, and, also, what are the criteria for home consumption within the common market? That is an example on the trading front.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, throughout this proposed Bill the common market is treated as a series of individual countries and not as something different. That is, goods, say, from Italy, passing bona fide in transit through France bound for Canada, as evidenced by the bill of lading, are treated as though they came directly from Italy, as under the terms of the present practice, and the country of origin then would be Italy and home consumption is "for sale in Italy". That is the first part of this section.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Suppose the goods were produced in West Germany, imported into France without duty, and then sold to Canada by a French exporter. Would the area of home consumption then be in Germany or in France?

• 2055

Mr. R. Y. Grey: In that case it would be France, sir, because they were sold by an exporter in France.

The Chairman: We have just covered the item on goods indirectly shipped to Canada. We now come to Part II.

On clause 13(1)—Initiation of investigation.

The Chairman: Mr. Harkness?

Mr. Harkness: Sir, it says "... complaint by or on behalf of producers in Canada ..." Could this be in the singular—a producer, or has there to be more than one producer?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, subject to correction I think it can include the singular. The rule would be found in the Interpretation Act, though.

Mr. Harkness: I would certainly think it should, or that at least one producer should be able to make the complaint. But I was wondering why they did not say "on behalf of a producer or producers".

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I will take advice on this point. It is some time since I was involved in drafting it, but I think the Interpretation Act says that the plural includes the singular.

The Chairman: Mr. Gray?

Mr. Gray: I think it would be very worthwhile to enquire into this so that the intention of the Government be clearly expressed in the wording.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I would merely point out, Mr. Chairman, that if, in any event, one producer complained and produced a reasonable amount of evidence the Deputy Minister would then be free to act on his own initiative.

Mr. Danson: Mr. Chairman, I assume, in that case, that "on behalf of" would include the union, if it was a union complaint. Would that be considered "on behalf of"?

We discussed the other day the possibility that a sole producer, particularly a foreign company, might not make a complaint, and there was the option there, I think, that it need not be a union, but that the employees might complain of dumping if it resulted in the closing-down of the producer.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: With respect, I think the point is rather an academic one because, sir, if real information is provided that dumping has taken place in the sort of circumstance that you outlined, sir, surely that is a case where the Deputy Minister would act on his own initiative. It says:

... shall forthwith cause an investigation to be initiated. . . on his own initiative . . .

Mr. Danson: Yes; except that it does say "on behalf of".

Mr. R. Y. Grey: But there are two.

Mr. Danson: I see.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: "On his own initiative", or "on receipt of".

On clause 13 (2)—Notice.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): At the same time one sees that in subclause (2) the word is in the singular—the notice of the decision is sent to the complainant; whereas if there has been "receipt of a complaint in writing . . . by producers" then the written notice of the decision is to the complainant. Therefore, I presume that the singular and the plural are interchangeable here?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think it is correct, sir, that they are interchangeable. The complainant might be a tariff consultant of a trade association; one firm that has been nominated by the rest to speak on behalf of a group, or one firm that is the sole producer.

On clause 13 (3)—Reference to Tribunal.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Gillespie?

Mr. Gillespie: After receiving a decision from the Deputy Minister how long has the complainant got to refer the matter to the Tribunal?

• 2100

Mr. R. Y. Grey: It is to be prescribed by regulation, sir, and the regulation has not been drafted.

On clause 13 (5)—Notice of Investigation.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Harkness?

Mr. Harkness: In sub-clause section (5) notice is:

to be given to the importer, the exporter, the government of the country of export, the complainant, if any, and such other persons as may be specified by the regulations . . .

Is that now in these regulations, or are these other regulations that are being referred to here?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: No, sir, they are not in the regulations. None of these procedural regulations has yet been drafted. The words "and such other persons as may be specified by the regulations" were put in to allow the Deputy Minister to notify all possible exporters of the product who, through his knowledge of the trade, he may be aware of. It talks of the importer and the exporter. The government were required to do that under the Code. It seemed to use that, in addition to that, there ought to be a right under the law to notify anyone else that the regulations prescribe, and we had in mind other known exporters.

On Clause 16 (4)—Tribunal guided by Canada's obligations.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Could you give us an explanation of the import of this subclause, Mr. Grey?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, under the Code in Article 4 this paragraph attempts to define what is a domestic industry, what is production, by reference to which the impact of the dumped goods are to be assessed. The third line of this Article which is on page 15 of this White Paper makes this clear. It says:

• 2105

"domestic industry" shall be interpreted as referring to the domestic producers as a whole of the like products or to those of them whose collective output of the products constitutes a major proportion of the total domestic production. .

This was a major point in the negotiation of the Code. Other phrases, such as "a substantial proportion", "all or nearly all" of the domestic production, all of these phrases were examined and rejected since, in a sense, through this subparagraph we have imported this paragraph of the Code into Canadian law. That is the proposal. I suppose it will be for the Tribunal to determine what is a major proportion. In the negotiations the gentleman who proposed this term said that a "major proportion" meant in principle more than 50 per cent.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Subparagraph (ii) of paragraph (a) of Article 4 reads:

(ii) in exceptional circumstances a country may, for the production in question, be divided into two or more competitive markets and the producers within each market regarded as a separate industry, . . .

That I suppose, would affect certain machinery production, for instance, in the lower mainland of British Columbia where there is a good deal of custom manufacturing for the industries there. There is also, for instance, in lumbering the manufacturing of similar type equipment in central Canada and, therefore you set up the two separate markets. The products from the two hardly cross one to the other because of the cost of transportation.

I have had that happen where, under the "class or kind" and that sort of thing, it is just nonsense to say there is a manufacturer in Ontario who makes this or potentially can make it, and the cost of transporting from Ontario out to Alberta or British Columbia is so prohibitive that you cannot consider them as being in the same market.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Lambert, I was going to draw attention to the fact that there are two exceptions to this. You have discussed the second one which is, indeed, the important one. The first has to do really with the right to look at the impact of dumping on a segment of an industry, of dumping by the other producers who are also the importers.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: You are dealing with second of these exceptions. I do not think it is a secret that it is this section of the Code which has given rise to some question in the United States. It is alleged that certain of the findings by the United States Tariff Commission which depended on their finding that injury that existed in a regional sense had been injured, that certain of the findings that they had previously made, if made now, under the Code could not be made, because these criteria are alleged to define regional industry in a more rigorous manner than that under the Tariff Commission heretofore. This is a subject on which we are having consultations with the Government of the United States.

As I indicated before, Mr. Lambert, I really would like to revert to that in the question of the appropriateness of this provision in the draft Bill when those discussions have been concluded, which I do not think will be for several weeks.

On clause 16(5)—Notice of order or finding.

• 2110

Mr. Burton: On this clause I want to enquire what provision there is for publication of and access to the orders and findings of the Tribunal. I could not locate any specific provision for the publication, whereas I note from page 64 that when the Deputy Minister makes a preliminary determination and takes further steps he causes notice to be published in the Canada Gazette. On page 62, when he initiates an investigation of dumping, notice of this is also to be published in the Canada Gazette.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think it is clause 25 on page 82 which provides the Tribunal with the power to make rules for the manner of conducting any business before it. It would be my view, certainly, that the orders or findings of the Tribunal, like the determination of the Deputy Minister, would be published and I think it would be the normal practice that they would appear in the Canada Gazette.

If somehow the draftsmen have neglected to make this perfectly clear, it will certainly be rectified because an order or finding of the Tribunal certainly is required to be made public under the Code and that would be the normal method by which an instrument which has the effect of imposing a tax would be made public in Canada. I think it is within the power of the Tribunal to make such a finding for itself and that power is in clause 25.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): May I make a supplementary point? I think Mr. Burton has a very good point here in that there would be nothing that would force the Tribunal, though, to make such a regulation and it is quite conceivable, in addition to those persons named in this particular subsection—that is, the Deputy Minister, the importer and the exporter and such other persons as may be specified by the rules of the Tribunal—there might be still some other persons adversely affected if it were not to be published in the Canada Gazette and that they would not receive themselves a copy of the order. Surely, if the preliminary notices, and so on, are to be published in the Canada Gazette the final notice or determination should appear there too.

Mr. Burton: Mr. Chairman, I think it would be desirable to have this set out clearly in the legislation.

The Chairman: Mr. Grey will make a note of it.

On clause 18—Finality of determination and appraisal.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, there is something that nags me here. Is there a provision for appeal from a decision of the Tribunal or those of the Dominion Customs Appraiser with regard to the determination of whether the goods are of the same description as the goods or description of goods to which the order or finding applies, and as to the appraisal. Because it says:

made upon the entry is final and conclusive unless the importer,

The reason I say that is that I recall very well in 1961 a great deal of controversy with regard to the decision of the Minister being final. There was objection to that. That was because goods were of a class or kind, and for good and many reasons advanced and for efficacy and so forth it was determined that that should be the case, that the Minister's decision should be final. Is that the same in this particular case?

• 2115

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the answer is no. These clauses at the beginning of page 74 read together will be found to parallel the existing provisions of the Customs Act. Their meaning is that after there is a determination that a certain category of goods has been dumped, and that this dumping causes or has caused injury, and the dumping duty is levied by this Act, then each importation of those goods must be subject to scrutiny and the Department of National Revenue must determine, first of all at the level of the Dominion Customs Appraiser, the Dominion Customs Appraiser concerned with that particular import, that the goods do fall within that description of goods set out in the order or finding; and secondly, he must determine the margin of dumping on that particular import. Those two matters are subject to appeal up through the Deputy Minister to the Tariff Board on a point of law to the Exchequer Court, just as value for duty and tariff classification are now under the Customs Act. These provisions are listed almost word for word from the existing appeal provisions of the Customs Act. Really we are placing normal value on export price, putting that phrase in instead of value for duty.

I assure you, Mr. Lambert, nothing has been added and nothing has been taken away in this particular case.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Perhaps per incuriam something was left where it was sought to give the Minister the ultimate decision and final decision as to class or kind, and actually is there not a parallel here that they will find a class or kind because they will be of a class of goods found by the Tribunal. I am just wondering whether the reasons that were then deemed to be valid by the administration are now deemed to be valid for the same principle, for the same reason.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: The answer, Mr. Chairman, is no. This is exactly analogous to the problem that faces the Dominion Customs Appraiser when he has to classify goods. He is faced with a description of goods.

I think there are 2,800 separate subheadings in the Canadian Tariff, and on every import someone has to make the initial decision as to whether or not those goods fall under this tariff heading or that tariff heading. The question of whether or not they fall within the description of goods set out in the order or finding of the Tribunal is I think an exact analogy with that kind of mental process. The question of the margin of dumping is analogous to finding the difference between the value for duty and the selling price now.

We have taken the appeal provisions governing value for duty and tariff classification in the Customs Act and simply transliterated them into this draft bill. The importer has the right to appeal that his goods do not fall within that description of goods or that the margin of dumping is something different, either that he has lowered the normal value or that the export price is changed, or some other point of fact or law. He has the full right to go on points of law to the Exchequer Court on those matters.

What he does not have an appeal on is the question of whether or not the dumping, if it is occurring, is injurious. And I would suggest, Mr. Lambert, that, in fact, we have provided for more scrutiny and for more appeal to the normal processes of the law on this matter certainly than in the United Kingdom, and I would have thought as much, if not more than in the United States.

The Chairman: Mr. Herb Gray?

• 2120

Mr. Gray: Under the Act then, just to see if I understand this correctly, the question of the description of goods and the question of appraisal of goods to determine the normal price or export price, is not the task of the Tribunal. It is the task of the Customs administration. If the decisions of this sort by the Dominion Customs Appraiser are not satisfactory, in effect there is an appeal to the Deputy Minister. If the persons involved are still not satisfied, then under Section 19 there is an appeal to the Tariff Board, with a further appeal under Section 20 to the Exchequer Court on a question of law.

Is my understanding of the scheme correct?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: That is correct, yes.

The Chairman: Clause 18, Finality of determination and appraisal.

Page 74, Review by Dominion Customs Appraiser, Review by Deputy Minister, Re-determination or re-appraisal.

Page 76, Effect of re-determination or re-appraisal. Yes, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): In 4(d), Mr. Grey, it says:

(4) (d) in any other case, where the Deputy Minister deems it advisable within two years of date of the entry of those goods.

Is this following a pattern that exists now, because that seems to be a terribly long time. In most instances, with the exception of perhaps turbo generators, equipment that may take a great deal of time to install and so forth, and shall we say, the contract for the installation thereof is still current and so forth, and the transaction is not closed. But it would seem to me that in the normal course of events the transaction would have been long closed and almost forgotten at the end of two years. There may be—likely there is a good explanation for this, but I would like to know what it is.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, Mr. Chairman, it is modelled precisely on sub-section (4) of Section 43 of the Customs Act which I believe was revised in 1955. It is:

(d) in any other case, where he deems it advisable within two years of the date of the entry of those goods.

I must say that the draftsmen looked uncritically, I think, at these sections. They simply decided that the existing appeal provisions should not, as a matter of policy, be limited. There should be the same, at least as good appeal provisions as there are now, so they were taken over holus-bolus. That provision which is marked on my copy of the Customs Act as "new 1955" was taken over with just the change from classification to description, and so on.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Thank you.

The Chairman:

On clause 19(1)—Appeal to the Tariff Board.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, I am going to make the appeal that I was making the other day. Why is it that the provisions are that the period during which an appeal will be filed will be so many days from the day on which a decision was made when there are problems of communication to the far reaches of the country in many instances and now there are restrictions on postal service? I can give you classic examples, Mr. Grey. Under the Immigration Act the period of appeal is much shorter. There was a postal strike this summer and the Immigration Appeal Board and, no doubt, the Tribunal here or the Tariff Board would not recognize the existence of the postal strike and said: The act says that the period of appeal shall be so many days and that is it. We had certain cases where we had to go cap in hand to the Supreme Court of Canada for leave to enter an appeal because the judgment of the Immigration Appeal Board and the reasons therefor could not reach the appellant, the person concerned or their solicitors within the prescribed time. Again, I think this has a bearing here. True enough, the period is 60 days but I think that the people across the country should be treated equally and that they should not be penalized by geography. I am wondering why there is such an insistence on the period of appeal being so many days from the making of the decision and not the delivery of the decision to the parties concerned.

• 2125

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I find it difficult to comment on Mr. Lambert's question because, again, we took it completely from the existing provisions of the Customs Act which provides 60 days. But if the Committee so wished I will consult the Chairman of the Tariff Board to find out whether in fact in his long experience as Chairman it has been represented that that period is too short, and I would certainly be prepared to report to the Committee on that.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Grey, I am not suggesting that the period of 60 days is too short but that persons concerned living in Toronto, Montreal, or Ottawa should have no advantage over people living in Vancouver or Edmonton. I can assure you I have some very grievous complaints about how fast air-mail special delivery will work. I just had a bad case this past week. It does not work. A dog team could take it just as fast. This was a case of Mr. Kierans, actually in reply to my complaints under the recent Postal Bill, saying, that he hoped that he could take it up with the various ministries that had provisions in their acts, such as this, so that they might, shall we say, introduce a little more equity.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I have made my comment.

On clause 20(1)—Appeal to Exchequer Court on question of law.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): The same thing applies here—the automatic appeal to the Exchequer Court.

The Chairman: Yes, on questions of law.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): And, again, the question of 60 days from the making of an order.

On Clause 20(3)—Application of section 45 Customs Act.

Mr. Gray: Just for the record, perhaps Mr. Grey could give us some indication of what section 45 of the Customs Act says.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, it deals with such matters as who may appeal, service, substantial interest, how to enter an appearance and so on. There are three and a half pages of procedure setting out the rights of all parties concerned and the draftsmen recommended that this was the simplest way to import this whole provision objectionable as legislation by reference may be.

The Chairman: We will now proceed to page 80, Part III—Anti-Dumping Tribunal.

On Clause 24—Head Office.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, may I ask Mr. Grey, whether in his opinion, he feels that there would be a substantial increase in staff required to administer this Act over that of the previous Act.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman there will have to be some staff for the Tribunal but whether, after an initial period of, say, six months, there will be a decrease in staff or an increase, I do not know. I do not think this question can be answered until after the initial period has passed. Obviously, there will be a net increase in the work to be done in, say, the first five or six months as we convert from the system that has grown up since 1904 to really a completely new system. The question of how much staff is required for the Tribunal is a matter that is being discussed with the Treasury Board at this moment. It will not be a large staff. We will have to wait and see whether six months from now it turns out that there is a reduction in the staff of the Department of National Revenue—I think we will have to wait that long.

Mr. Gillespie: What has been the experience of other countries that have had a six months lead on this?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I do not suppose there was any increase in staff required in the United States because the main change required of the United States to adhere to the Code was a change in the procedures regarding appraisement, provisional measures and so on applied by the United States Treasury, and I do not suppose that any increase in staff was required for that. In the United Kingdom I am not aware that there has been any increase in staff in the dumping division of the Board of Trade department which deals with this particular work.

This is a more fundamental change in the structure of law than for those two countries. It may well be that for an initial period, particularly if some importers are under the impression that because of the retroactivity provisions they can dump with impunity regardless of whether or not they are injuring Canadian producers, there may be quite a lively business for a few months, and whether that means a net increase in staff or merely that the other work will not get done, I do not know.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): On that particular point, the Department of National Revenue has quite effectively been looking after the anti-dumping provisions in our law. Now we propose to take some of that work away from them although there will still be duties that will devolve upon the Department of National Revenue consequent upon findings, and so on.

• 2135

It seems to me that we are here setting up a nice little empire. Although there may, to start with, be an amount of business that may put a strain on the staff and the staff may be deemed to be small, it has never been the experience that those staffs get any smaller but rather that they grow.

Looking at comparable tribunals or boards such as the Tax Appeal Board and perhaps the Tariff Board and several of the others, we can see that they become quite sizeable structures and particularly for the members of the board, naturally, the salaries to be paid will have to be quite substantial in order to get the required quality of men. They will certainly be in excess of that of members of Parliament, that is for sure.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, if I may comment, I think that the establishment of a tribunal with emphasis on the staffing of it with men of independent thought will be hailed by those in industry. It is a good feature. Presumably the economy is going to expand as well. I have, however, a question on clause 21 that I did not notice at the time. Within the context of this proposed act what does the expression "good behaviour" mean? We find the words in 21(4):

Any member is eligible to be reappointed to hold office during good behaviour for any term of seven years or less,

That term is also used in sub-clause (2). I know it is standard in many acts. Sub-clause (2) reads:

Subject to subsections (3) and (4), each member shall hold office during good behaviour for a period of seven years.

When does good behaviour cease? When is there bad behaviour?

Mr. Givens: That is to cut out all that moral turpitude!

Mr. Perrault: I am interested in the phrase. It has been used rather freely here. Who makes the determination of when someone ceases to behave well? And what are the grounds for dismissal? If the tribunal is going to be independent then how vulnerable is it going to be? That is a fair question.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I believe that the other standard phrase is "during pleasure".

This is to make clear that unless there is good cause, in terms of misbehaviour, a member of a tribunal cannot be removed. I believe this is a conventional statutory phrase.

Mr. Perrault: I know it is a conventional phrase but in its application to this independent tribunal which we hope to establish does "misbehaviour" relate to the presenting of an opinion which may have been influenced by some commercial pressures? I am just interested in the determination of "bad behaviour".

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Gray?

Mr. Gray: Perhaps we are creating difficulties for Mr. Grey by asking for his opinion on these words which, I think, have had some interpretation in law in the courts, and so on. Perhaps we might invite Mr. Calof, the Treasury Solicitor, or some of the other legal advisers in the Department, to present a memorandum dealing with these phrases. We could have it printed in our records. These phrases are quite commonly used, at least in British Commonwealth nations, in drafting terminology designed to denote the ease, or the lack of it, with which an official can be removed. Where the phrase "hold office during good behaviour" is found it means that the official is much less easy to remove than if he holds office "during pleasure". That is the matter that Mr. Lambert would appear to . . .

Mr. Givens: You need a joint address of Parliament to remove a judge.

The Chairman: Mr. Perrault?

Mr. Perrault: My question stemmed from the fact that there has been a widespread feeling throughout Canada that it is desirable to have this independent tribunal. I would appreciate a legal definition of it as Mr. Gray has proposed. I know it is common terminology, but it is very important that we know what we are talking about when we provide safeguards to the independence of this body.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Certainly to the laymen "pleasure" and "good behaviour" do not necessarily go together.

Mr. Perrault: That is exactly my point.

The Chairman: Mr. Dancy?

• 2140

Mr. Dancy: Mr. Chairman, I would . . .

The Chairman: Just a moment, gentlemen. I have no objection to your making your comments but they may make it difficult for our personnel to identify you. Yes, Mr. Grey?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I will ask the Treasury solicitor or senior officers of the Department of Justice if they are prepared to write an essay on the subject of "good behaviour" and "pleasure".

I would point out however, that this language is taken largely from the National Energy Board Act. The whole set-up of this section was modelled on the National Energy Board Act, which happens to be a tribunal exercising the important quasi-judicial functions not so far removed from this; that is, making important economic decisions. The draftsmen found the National Energy Board to be the one most similar to this body.

The Chairman: Have you finished, Mr. Perrault?

Mr. Perrault: Yes, I have finished.

The Chairman: Mr. Burton?

Mr. Burton: Mr. Chairman, I just have one question on subclause (1) of clause 21 at page 80. It is my understanding of this subclause that it really makes it obligatory to have a tribunal of no less than five members. Do I correctly understand that it is expected that in the long run, even after the initial period of operations to which you referred, there will be good cause, in terms of the workload, to have a council of five members at all times, or was it considered that this number was required to obtain good balance on the tribunal?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, one of the many changes which the draftsmen have in mind is that this section should read "consisting of not more than five members". There will be a number of changes that the draftsmen will wish to introduce to this Committee, and that is one of them.

Mr. Burton: Thank you.

The Chairman: Mr. Dancy?

Mr. Dancy: Relative to the proliferation of any group within the tribunal that has to be set up, could we not use machinery such as that set up for the Kennedy Round negotiations? There is some kind of tribunal there, although it is not called a tribunal.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the board to which you refer which, I think is called the General Adjustment Assistance Board and set up by an Order in Council was taken out of the Department of Industry Act. There the Minister, or it may be the Governor in Council, nominates an outside person as chairman, but the deputy ministers are members. It has the advantage of being presided over by a distinguished citizen from outside the Government, but it is, in effect, a Government board.

It is an independent tribunal making decisions which can really only be appealed in one direction that is to the Governor in Council. It was therefore considered that is ought to be much further removed from the taint of bureaucracy.

The Chairman: Have you finished, Mr. Dancy.

Mr. Dancy: Yes, thank you.

On clause 25: Rules.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Lambert?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): May I ask that provision be made in that section whereby the rules of the tribunal shall be tabled by the minister responsible and shall be tabled in the House?

This Committee can then have a look at them, as we do with the Immigration Appeal Board and with a number of others which make rules for conduct. In that way we can re-examine them.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I take note of the point made by Mr. Lambert. There is, however, no minister to whom this tribunal is responsible.

● 2145

This is a completely independent tribunal which, in fact, when it makes a finding imposes a tax and does not report to any minister; nor is it in any way under the jurisdiction or guidance of any minister.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, someone must answer in the House for the activities of this Tribunal. There must be one minister . . .

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): After all, the Estimates of the Income Tax Appeal Board come under those of the Minister of National Revenue.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if Mr. Lambert would allow me to look into this matter a little further?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I have made a plea.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: The Tariff Board Estimates are printed alongside the Estimates of the Department of Finance.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: And reverting to an earlier point, you said that no staff was ever cut. I think you will find that the staff of the Tariff Board has been cut.

That is just by comment in passing. But I think the question of what department this body's Estimates should be printed with in the Estimates book has not been considered by the draftsmen. We will look into it further.

The Chairman: Clause 26, page 82, Secretary. Page 84, Officers and employees.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think, Mr. Chairman, that we took most of this procedural material from the National Energy Board Act. It happened to be about the most recent Board exercising an analogous power.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): And could you tell us, Mr. Grey, whether the employees and the officers will be members of the Public Service, or are they what are now called Treasury Board Minute people whose scales of pay are determined by the Treasury Board, as against within the Public Service. For superannuation they are "deemed" to be persons employed in the Public Service, but in clause (2):

The Governor in Council may, upon the request of the Tribunal, provide the Tribunal with the services of such officers and employees employed by or in any agency or department of the Government of Canada as are necessary for the proper conduct of the business of the Tribunal.

And the question now is, are these people going to be part of the Public Service of Canada as such, with the positions open for competition under the Public Service, or are they, as I said, Treasury Board Minute people.

Mr. Grey: They would be members of the Public Service. The problem facing us here is whether we should establish a separate body, analogous to the Tariff Board, with a completely separate staff which does not draw upon material available in other government departments and which conducts its own investigation, a completely self-contained unit, or whether it should be a tribunal that has a small secretariat who are members of the Public Service—that is, the officers, junior to the Secretary—and then the deputy ministers of the various departments may, within the present power they have under the present Public Service legislation, assign individual officers to work under the direction of the Tribunal. That seemed to us to be an appropriate procedure when we had no way of knowing whether the initial work load would be very heavy or very light and what the continuing work load would be.

Whether we need 40 people to do the work of this body or whether we need three people, I think, sir, there is no way of knowing. This provision was drafted so that members of the Public Service can be assigned to work for the Tribunal, and when they are assigned by the Deputy Minister to work for the Tribunal they are under the direction of the Tribunal. I think that is the meaning of these clauses, but they are members of the Public Service.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): They may be withdrawn.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: And they revert to their function in their existing departments.

The Chairman: On the same page, Superannuation, Experts.

Clause 27, Tribunal a court, Power as to witnesses, etc., Court of justice.

Clause 28, page 84, Hearing and taking of evidence, Report to Tribunal.

Page 86, Making of order or finding.

Clause 29, page 86, Right to appear, Hearing may be in camera, Confidential evidence not to be made public.

Mr. Danson: Would that include the complainants?

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Danson.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think it is a matter for the Tribunal to decide, sir, whether the nature of the material is confidential, no matter what its source.

Mr. Danson: There could be a tricky situation here where a supplier could be making a complaint about goods being purchased that he suspects are being dumped by a customer. This would not necessarily endeavor him to the customer for future negotiations, but would this be at the Tribunal's discretion or could the complainant ask that it be kept confidential?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think I may need to have advice from the Treasury Board's solicitor on this, but I think that it is impossible to keep the identity of the complainant secret either at the stage where he gives information to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue at the beginning of this whole process, or at this stage. But, of course, it may well be that much of the information he provides is, by its nature, confidential and deemed so by the Tribunal.

The point has often been made to us that in a country the size of Canada there will be much embarrassment over complaining. It may be that many of the complaints will therefore be private in character to the Deputy Minister, and the Deputy Minister may be, at the initial stage, acting on his own initiative in initiating an investigation.

Mr. Danson: It could be rather important to the extent to which people would complain or make appeals in this case if they were assured of some degree of secrecy. They would be more likely to do so, and in a short-term interest they might think it advisable to complain, but in a long-term interest they might just let it slip by. We might be defeating the spirit of the legislation in this respect.

• 2155

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think it is the case, sir, that Canadian exporters have often felt that if there were more publicity about the complaints made about them and their dumping or alleged dumping in foreign markets, their interests would be better protected and, of course, such an assertion works both ways. Either there is to be a degree of publicity about these matters or there is not, and it was one of the main thrusts of the negotiation that there should be more publicity, more openness of hearing, more justice seen to be done in the United Kingdom and in Europe than heretofore. I think that, by and large, the Canadian business community, in the representations they made to the Department of Finance as to the negotiators, felt that there was something to be gained by agreeing on some minimum procedures for publicity and publicity hearings, and the balance was struck in the Code between the sort of circumstance you outlined and the need to insure some kind of openness of hearings where Canadians are dumping abroad.

Mr. Danson: And this presently then is at the discretion of the Chairman of the Tribunal.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: If you mean as to whether the evidence is confidential, it is at the discretion of the Tribunal.

Mr. Danson: That is the evidence but not the complaint itself.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: You mean, the identity of the complainant?

Mr. Danson: Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Or information that goes to the identity of the complainant.

Mr. Danson: Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think that it is in fact very difficult to keep that secret or confidential throughout the whole process.

Mr. Danson: I am just wondering how important this really is. However it is a point that I can see could cause some difficulties.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, sir, it proved impossible in the negotiations to negotiate a Code where we had maximum publicity abroad and maximum protection against dumping by privacy at home. That was the difficulty the negotiators faced and they followed a middle course between extreme publicity which was urged by the United States and the degree of secrecy that was urged by certain other countries.

The Chairman: Are you through, Mr. Danson?

Mr. Danson: Yes.

The Chairman: If you have no objection, gentlemen, it is time to adjourn. We will resume our sitting tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 p.m. in the same room.

If we are through with Mr. Rod Grey, I am informed that Mr. Labarge, Deputy Minister, Department of National Revenue, Customs and Excise Division, will be available to the Committee.

Thank you very much, Mr. Grey. Thank you, gentlemen.

---

OFFICIAL REPORT OF MINUTES
OF
PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

This edition contains the English deliberations and/or a translation into English of the French.

Copies and complete sets are available to the public by subscription to the Queen's Printer. Cost varies according to Committees.

Translations under the direction of the Bureau for Translations, Secretary of State.

ALISTAIR FRASER,
The Clerk of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS
First Session—Twenty-eighth Parliament
1968

---

STANDING COMMITTEE
ON
FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. GASTON CLERMONT

---

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE
No. 6

---

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1968

---

Respecting
WHITE PAPER ON ANTI-DUMPING

---

WITNESS★

Mr. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
QUEEN'S PRINTER AND CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY
OTTAWA, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON
FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. Alastair Gillespie
and Messrs.

Blair,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
Downey,
Émard,

Flemming,
Gauthier,
Givens,
Gleave,
Gray,
Hales,

Harkness,
Lambert
(Edmonton West),
Latulippe,
Perrault,
Roberts,
Trudel—20.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

TUESDAY, November 5, 1968.

(8)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 3:55 p.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Burton, Clermont, Comtois, Danson, Downey, Énard, Gillespie, Givens, Harkness, Perrault, Roberts, Trudel—(12).

Also present: Mr. Ritchie.

In attendance: From the Department of Finance: Messrs. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister, and C. D. Arthur, International Economic Relations Division.

Also in attendance: From the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise): Messrs. R. C. Labarge, Deputy Minister; A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division; H. D. MacDermid, Chief Valuation Section; From the Department of Trade and Commerce: C. J. Kelly, Office of Area Relations; From the Department of Industry: V. R. St. Louis, Commercial Policy Division.

The committee being one member short of a quorum, the members agreed to continue questioning the witness, Mr. Grey, on the draft anti-dumping bill on an informal basis.

After a time the Chairman having noted that a quorum was now present, on motion of Mr. Trudel, seconded by Mr. Roberts,

Resolved,—That the evidence adduced earlier this day and at the meeting of November 4, 1968, be considered as part of the official record of this Committee.

The questioning continuing, and having been concluded, the Chairman thanked Mr. Grey, who was permitted to retire, subject to recall.

At 4:50 p.m. the Committee adjourned until Thursday, November 7, 1968, at 11:00 a.m. at which time the witness will be Mr. Labarge, Deputy Minister of National Revenue.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Tuesday, November 5, 1968

• 1559

The Chairman: Gentlemen, we will now start our meeting.

Last night when the meeting was adjourned we were dealing with clause 30 on page 86, Advice of Panel to be sought; membership of panel.

Mr. Danson: Mr. Chairman, I have a supplementary on a question I asked last night because when I got home I gave it a little more thought. It is in relationship to the secrecy of the complainant. I appreciate the comments which were made about secrecy and the creative tensions between secrecy and full disclosure and publicity. I think this could result in a rather difficult situation and one that could be quite inhibiting unless the name of the complainant could be kept confidential at his request because more and more, as you think about this, there probably will be many cases where complainants will be complaining about something to their customers and rather than create ill will and have the door shut on them for future business, they likely will keep quiet about it.

In thinking about this later last evening I felt the answer, perhaps, dealt more with the secrecy of the testimony and the details rather than the complainant himself. I wonder if this could be thought out a little further. This is hardly a question, but I think there is a point to be made.

• 1600

Mr. R. Y. Grey (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of Finance): Mr. Chairman, since last night I have had a look at what is the practice in the United States and it appears that the Treasury Department that carries out in regard to the United States anti-dumping law the functions analogous to the Department of National Revenue in Canada has the right to keep the name of the complainant confidential if he requests it and the Secretary of the Treasury believes that it is, in fact, prejudicial to his business interests. We are, therefore, considering whether the Deputy Minister of National Revenue, if he receives a request to keep the name of the complainant secret and if such a request is warranted, he should have the power to do so.

With regard to the Tribunal, it seems to me that this is a matter which would fall within the proposed rule-making powers of the Tribunal and it should be a matter which might be left to the discretion of the Tribunal, when it is established, as part of their whole procedural arrangements.

The United States Tariff Commission does have its own rules of procedure which it makes itself without any further oversight or scrutiny. I have not had an opportunity to look at them in relation to this point, but I think it is a fact that it has not been, as a practical matter, possible to keep the identity of the complainant secret at the stage it is moved into an inquiry into possible injury, but, no doubt, there will be many cases of alleged dumping which the Deputy Minister of National Revenue will see fit to investigate which will not go further than his investigation.

He will find out that it is not dumping and it might well be that it would be in the interest of the sort of person in the sort of situation you described to provide the Deputy Minister with authority to keep the name of the complainant confidential.

So, Mr. Chairman, this is one of the many matters which has arisen in front of the Committee which the draftsmen will be looking at and on which they will be reporting back to the Committee.

Mr. Danson: Would the complainant, if the Deputy Minister decided the evidence was not adequate to keep his name confidential, then have the option to withdraw his complaint?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, that would depend at what stage the investigation had reached. As the Bill is drafted now, it says that the Deputy Minister shall forthwith cause an investigation to be initiated. If he receives a complaint or on his own initiative if he has reached certain opinions and has formed a judgment about the state of the evidence, he does not have the option not to proceed with an investigation if he is of the opinion that there is evidence of injury and he is of the opinion that there is evidence of dumping. There is a possible difficulty in the drafting there.

Mr. Danson: This could be critical to the effectiveness of much of it, I would think.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: It could, yes.

The Chairman: Are you finished, Mr. Danson?

• 1605

Mr. Danson: Yes, I am, thank you.

Mr. Harkness: In regard to clause 30, this Panel of five Deputy Ministers which has to be consulted before the Tribunal can make an order or finding would appear to be a means of enabling these Public Servants, we will say, to keep a finger on the Tribunal and make sure that they do not give any ruling which is contrary to departmental policy. Is that the object of this clause?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, there were times when some of the draftsmen have wished it was the object.

Mr. Harkness: I beg your pardon?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: There were times when some of the draftsmen have wished it was the object. The purpose of this clause was to provide some formal mechanism by which the Tribunal would have made available to it information about the state of economic activities in a particular industry in Canada, so that it would not make its decisions in the absence of information available within the government departments. But it is quite clear that this Tribunal is not bound by this advice. They are bound to seek the advice, but they are not bound by the advice.

Mr. Harkness: Yes, subclause (3), of course, makes that very clear, but the fact they are not bound by the advice is what prompted my question, if this was designed to act as a form of brake on their decisions or whether, as you explained, it was designed merely to ensure that they have information available.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think that is correct, Mr. Harkness.

Mr. Harkness: Subclause (2) says:

The Panel shall as soon as possible consider any matter relating...

but there is no deadline laid down. In other words, it would seem to me it would be quite possible for the Panel not to consider the matter or not to give its advice for some indeterminate time and thus the finding of the Tribunal would not go into effect.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I speak subject to correction, Mr. Harkness, but I think the Tribunal is instructed to seek the advice of the Panel and the Panel is instructed to render this advice as soon as possible. I would have thought if the Panel does not render its advice within the 90 day period, in the case of a formal inquiry, then the Tribunal is nonetheless bound by the clauses which say it must make its decision within 90 days.

Mr. Harkness: So you think there is a 90 day limitation of time here in any event?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I would think so and presumably the Chairman of the Tribunal in making an order or finding would draw public attention to the fact that it had sought advice and not received it from this Panel.

Mr. Harkness: Then, there would seem to be a contradiction. Clause 30 says that the Tribunal before making any order has to consult the Panel and get its advice.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Harkness, it says: "Shall seek the advice". If the Panel for some unknown reason does not render this advice within the time period concerned, I do not think that absolves the Tribunal of its formal responsibility to make an order or finding, at least, that was the intention of the draftsmen. It was also the intention of the draftsmen that the Deputy Ministers will render their advice as soon as possible.

Mr. Harkness: It seems to me the wording is a little ambiguous. Possibly it might be improved and there might be some other time limit put into subclause (2) so that there would be no question in regard to the matter.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Harkness, the advice of the legal officers that "as soon as possible" was a term like "forthwith". It does mean within a very short time span. Now, if one were to say, "within 10 days" or "within 12 days", that might be really quite unrealistic. Judging by experience in related matters where deputy ministers have to give advice, not under law, but as a matter of policy have to give advice, that advice is rendered as soon as possible. For example, in the question of whether or not imports of United States corn were injuring corn production in Canada it was certainly the case that the advice of the Deputy Minister of Agriculture was the key advice necessary in terms of the economic impact of American corn and that advice was certainly rendered as soon as possible. It seems to me that that is the way the various departments will operate.

Mr. Harkness: I do not think there is any question about the intention, but my only question is whether the words that appear here are going to carry that intention into effect.

• 1610

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, Mr. Harkness, if a phrase can be found that is stronger than "as soon as possible" and yet does not create an additional legal problem by creating a formal time limit, meaning if they rendered their advice after that it might not have the status of advice, I think the draftsman certainly will want to look at it. "As soon as possible", we are told, is really a very strong term.

Mr. Harkness: It may be strong, but it is also very indefinite.

The Chairman: At the top of page 88, subclauses (2) to (5) inclusive, Panel to advise; Advice not binding; Rules; Assignment of Deputy Minister's duties. (See Minutes of Proceedings.)

On Clause 31—Orders and findings final.

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Chairman, clause 31 leaves me quite confused as it would appear under subclause (2) that the Exchequer Court has exclusive original jurisdiction and in subclause (3) it says that an order of finding of the Tribunal is not subject to review by certiorari, prohibition, or mandamus, the very things which in the previous clause the Exchequer Court is given power to do. So, on the face of it, it looks as though one clause cancels the other.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, on this particular point, I think the practical impact of this is that if the Tribunal, having referred to the preliminary determination of the Deputy Minister, simply does not function, then the interested parties to have recourse to the Exchequer Court to order the Tribunal to carry out its function under the Act.

On the other hand, when they carry out their function and they issue an order or finding on whether or not there is injury, that order or finding is not subject to appeal to the Exchequer Court. That is the meaning of subclause (3). It says: "An order or finding of the Tribunal is not subject to review...", but subclause (2) provides the customary right for the Exchequer Court to order this quasi-administrative body to do its job. There has to be some way this body can be got at if it simply fails to function.

Mr. Harkness: Yes, but there is nothing in this wording in regard to it failing to function. In fact, it says definitely, "to any order or finding of the Tribunal", which I think infers that the Tribunal has functioned. It has issued an order, or it has issued a finding; somebody has found this injurious and they then have applied to the Exchequer Court to determine whether this application should be prohibited or something else.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: As I understand it, Mr. Harkness, the purpose of subclause (2) is to make it clear that the Exchequer Court is the body to whom one applies if one feels that the Tribunal is not functioning or functioning outside the law. However, if it functions within the law, its order or finding going to the substance of a question of injury, is the one thing that cannot be got at in the Exchequer Court. On the question of injury the Tribunal is the court of last resort.

Mr. Harkness: Whatever the intention, I think you would agree that a reading of these two subclauses certainly makes it appear as though one cancels the other.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Harkness, I am assured by the lawyers that that is not so.

• 1615

Mr. Harkness: I am not a lawyer, but I would think that clauses in a Bill should be sufficiently clear so that the meaning is reasonably apparent to the layman as well as to a lawyer. In this particular case I just cannot see anything except a flat contradiction between the two.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, the notes that were provided by the legal advisers for my use here—I did try to put them in layman's language because I am not a lawyer either—say that subclause (1) provides that an order or finding of the Tribunal is final and conclusive.

The Exchequer Court has exclusive original jurisdiction to hear any prerogative writs relating to an order or finding of the Tribunal. That is covered by subclause (2).

Subclause (3) places limitations on the Exchequer Court on hearings of prerogative writs.

I do not think that explanation is clearer than mine. As I read it the two clauses taken together make it quite clear that the one thing that cannot be appealed to the Exchequer Court is the substance of an injury finding, but if the Tribunal does not function properly—the question is that it is outside the terms of this legislation—that is what can go to the Exchequer Court.

Mr. Harkness: We are dealing with two things. It was clause 1 in the one case and clause 4 in the other case where it could be taken to the Exchequer Court. Do you recall what clauses those were?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Harkness, those are the clauses having to do with the classification of goods and the normal value and export price. That, of course, is on the other side of the process. That is the question of the function of the Deputy Minister of National Revenue being exercised subject to appeal to the Tariff Board and the Exchequer Court. It deals entirely with the question of injury and it is parallel to the procedure in the United States where the decisions of the Secretary of the Treasury can be brought before the Customs Court and on appeal to the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, but the decision of the Tariff Commission on injury is a final decision.

Mr. Harkness: The thing that makes it particularly confusing is that subclause (3) says that there cannot be any proceeding in the Exchequer Court in regard to a question of law or fact that was erroneously decided by the Tribunal. Under ordinary circumstances the very purpose of the Exchequer Court is to determine whether there was a question of law or of fact which had been erroneously decided on. This just adds to my confusion with regard to the matter because the normal function of the Exchequer Court is to decide questions of that kind.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, in the clause having to do with the right of appeal from decisions of the Deputy Minister, it is provided that the appeal to the Exchequer Court from the decision of the Tariff Board is only on a question of law...

Mr. Harkness: Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: ...not of fact. There was only one group which appeared before the confidential hearings that were held on the instruction of the Minister of Finance that argued that there should be any appeal from this Tribunal the role of which we suggested to them ought to be analogous to that of the Tariff Commission.

It was the view of all but one group of business people who appeared before us that the question of injury was a matter of assessment as to the facts and their import in a particular business situation and that no interest would be served by making it a subject of litigation. I might say that it was not any group of Canadian producers who argued that there should be an appeal.

I do not wish to defend this particular wording. This is a matter really that the law officers can explain to you better than I can. I take the meaning from this that the one thing about which one can go to the Exchequer Court is to seek an order to direct the Tribunal to get about its business—that is putting it very much in layman's language—but if the Tribunal has exercised its functions under this Bill to make an order or finding, that is the end of the matter, except, of course, there is the power of the Governor in Council to exempt any goods from the anti-dumping duty, but there is no power to make an order or finding applying the duty.

Mr. Harkness: It looks very much to me as though this gives the right of appeal to the Exchequer Court, but in actual fact this does not amount to anything.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, it was not the intention of the draftsmen, I think, to suggest that there is an appeal to the Exchequer Court on a question of an order or finding and, perhaps, that is simply because the law officers drafted it this way. It looks as though there is more there than, in fact, there is. The intention of this section is to make it quite clear that an order or finding of the Tribunal is conclusive.

• 1620

The Chairman: Are there any other questions then on clause 31, page 88? If not, we will move to page 90, clause 32.

On Clause 32—Review of Orders by Tribunal

Mr. Harkness: This would appear to make the Tribunal a sort of a court of appeal itself; any particular finding that it had previously made it can then review. It becomes a sort of a court of appeal for itself to review its own findings. Could this be done at any time? It says, "may at any time"—four years after, or at any other particular time?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Well, Mr. Harkness, we envisaged the situation where there might be an order or finding imposing an anti-dumping duty because of a finding of injury on a certain category, class or description of goods. The importer of those goods, of course, can escape the anti-dumping duty by no longer dumping.

Mr. Harkness: Yes.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: However, supposing two years later he is still dumping, paying the anti-dumping duty, the Tribunal may make rules that enable him to bring the matter before the Tribunal on the basis that the situation in Canadian industry has changed, and he is no longer threatening anyone with injury. There has to be some mechanism under which the order or finding of the Tribunal which may run on indefinitely can somehow be reviewed.

In the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury has his executive action under the act to put together the finding of the customs authorities and the finding of the Tariff Commission. Here that function is performed by the statute itself. We thought it necessary, therefore, to provide some mechanism by which, as conditions change, the Tribunal itself can review its finding. It might decide after a further hearing that the order or finding should be terminated or should be extended or should be applied to a broader description of goods. The intention throughout this section, as I have to make clear at undue length, is that the Tribunal has the last word on injury.

The Chairman: Clause 33.

On Clause 33—Duties a debt to Her Majesty

Mr. Roberts: Subclause (1) or (2)?

On subclause (2), is it people who knowingly purchase these goods? The section seems to require payment by those who receive the goods ultimately, even though they were not the persons who imported them, which they might do presumably in good faith?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Roberts, this clause is not mandatory, it is permissive. It says: "the Minister may".

Mr. Roberts: What I really do not understand is the purpose of the clause and the flexibility that it introduces.

• 1625

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, it has been represented to us, given the limitations on the retroactive application of anti-dumping duties, which is one of the main features of the Code, that it would be possible for an importer to import a substantial quantity of goods at a dump price which import would be deemed to be injurious; to sell those goods; then go into voluntary liquidation; transfer his assets to his wife; leave the country and in one transaction reap a very substantial benefit. From my own knowledge of the possibilities that are open in the import trade from various sources, I would say this is really quite an easy thing to do.

Having accepted the limitations on retroactivity, and assuming that it is not possible to turn the customs service into a kind of Gestapo that are going to look at every import, it is necessary to have some way in which this legislation in a sense polices itself.

The operation of this clause will mean that substantial retailers in Canada who may have been willing to buy dumped goods—after all the import of dumped goods may be risky but it is not an offence, it simply exposes you to potential taxing liability, they will take steps to ensure that they are dealing with an importer who will still be there, possibly as long as six months later, to pay an anti-dumping duty if one is levied under this act. It is my view that without this clause there is a grave danger of dumping taking place in the manner I have described which could not otherwise be caught.

The only alternative would be to very substantially increase the number of people in the customs service and to give them very extensive powers to enquire into the affairs of importers. That seems to me to be an even more repugnant solution to the problem. This follows from the obligations not to levy duties retroactively.

Mr. Danson: Just along that same line, I do not know if it is appropriate, Mr. Chairman, but in so much of this you can find loopholes, although the total legislation, from what I have seen of it, seems to be a distinct improvement over what we had before, as was the Kennedy Round. In going through the Kennedy Round you could see many things—I was on the other side of the fence at that time—some of which could frighten you. However, in effect the people who have to administer it do so. Although there will be some abuses of it, the abuses are minimized. You just cannot cover every loophole. In fact, the things that worried us about the Kennedy Round are not worries at all and it would appear if we look at each piece of this type of legislation, that we could worry about each bit of it.

It reminds me of when I had an operation on my back, the doctor said: "Do not think of how you were yesterday, think of how you were last week, then you will see the improvement." If you look at the legislation in total context and the fullness of time, I think these things are generally of less worry.

The Chairman: Thank you, sir.

[Interpretation]

Page 92, clause 34: Statement to be submitted.

Failure to submit statement and false or incorrect information.

[English]

That is all part of clause 34, page 92.

On Clause 35—Regulations

Mr. Harkness: That is in the usual language of the regulations section of any act is it not?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Yes, sir.

• 1630

On Clause 36—Consequential Amendments (See Minutes of Proceedings).

On Clause 37—Surtax in certain conditions.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Harkness.

Mr. Harkness: What particular case is this designed to deal with Mr. Grey?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Harkness, it is designed to deal with imports which are injurious but which are not dumped. At the moment equivalent action is in force by the use of arbitrary value for duty on certain grades of gasoline, certain garments made in Macao, cotton elastic braid and corn.

Mr. Harkness: And which?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Corn.

Mr. Harkness: In general it is to take the case of the present value for duty provisions.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Yes, and recognize it for what it is, a tax on imports.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Danson?

Mr. Danson: Would this section include such things as used machinery for instance?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, this can include any product if it is deemed to be injurious but is not dumped. Whether it should include used machinery of course, is another matter, but it is not limited in scope. I take it that the real import of your question is, is it possible to deal with the question of the arbitrary valuation of used machinery by this section. I think the answer is no, unless we are prepared to argue in Geneva and with our trading partners that the import of used machinery at the prices it is normally available at in the United States represents potential injury to Canadian production.

Mr. Danson: That would be covered under the Tariff Act as it is now?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: I think, Mr. Danson, that under the Code and under this Bill there is no distinction made between used goods and goods that are not used. They are simply goods and their normal value in the country of export and their export price should be found.

Mr. Danson: Thank you.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Any other questions?

[English]

Yes, Mr. Harkness?

Mr. Harkness: Will this same provision appear in the legislation of the other countries that have agreed to this pact?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, all other countries to my knowledge, that is all other market economies, do have emergency legislation. The United Kingdom has legislation, which I believe ante dates the First World War, which prohibits the import of all goods except those that are by regulation allowed to be imported. It is that legislation under which the United Kingdom can, acting under Article XIX of the GATT deal with some injurious import. The United States has various legislation which enables it to deal with the imports that are injurious, but not dumped.

Aside from the limited powers that are available under the Export and Import Permits Act, the present valuation provisions which it is suggested here be repealed, which have the effect this section would have, constitute the power of the Canadian government to limit or to prohibit imports that are injurious, but not dumped. The answer to your question is that every other country does have some analogous power although some of them provide for limitation by prohibition or by quantitative restriction rather than by a taxing method.

• 1635

Mr. Harkness: They have all kinds of methods of doing this, of course. This is the point I was getting at. Whenever we have in the past, I should not say "whenever" in a considerable number of cases when we have made use of the value for duty provision, particularly I am thinking of fruits and vegetables, there has always been a very serious complaint that we were breaching our agreement under the GATT when we put these provisions into effect. Is this still going to continue to be the situation? As a matter of fact, when this prohibition, or at least this corn business, was put on just 10 days ago or something, there was immediately a complaint from the United States that we were in breach of our agreement, and they were going to demand compensation or something else along this line. Is this still going to be the situation whenever we make use of this section, that we are immediately going to be attacked as being in breach of our agreement under the GATT?

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Chairman, it is not true in fact that every time we have used this we have been accused of being in breach of our obligations. The fact is that Article XIX of the GATT provides quite clearly that governments can act against imports they deem to be injurious. However, that same article of the GATT makes it quite clear that the exporting country concerned, if it does not agree with the case, may withdraw substantially equivalent concessions, and it is around that right of the exporting country to withdraw benefits to our trade that the discussion and negotiation usually takes place. There is no question that the GATT allows us to take such action, and it makes clear that it is the Canadian government which has to make the judgment on whether or not imports are injurious. It is frequently the case that the exporting country does not agree on the facts and is not prepared to accept that the action is warranted, but this has not been invariably the case.

Mr. Harkness: No, I withdrew; I said to begin with "whenever" and I withdrew that and said "in a considerable number of cases". I take it then the fact that this anti-dumping agreement has been made is not going to change the basic situation in that regard?

Mr. Grey: No, sir.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Mr. Émard.

Mr. Émard: Mr. Chairman, if I have understood your point, Mr. Grey, you said the United Kingdom had legislation prohibiting any imports without a permit. Is that what you meant?

Would this be a better formula for us in Canada? It seems that our legislation would be much simpler if we could adopt such a formula. I could say that I am completely lost in this matter.

[English]

Mr. Grey: Mr. Chairman, I think it is a matter of policy and not a mere technical question for the draftsman. A quota system to deal with injurious imports, unless it is very short term, requires a very elaborate administrative apparatus, unless the quota system is to be used as a prohibition.

It is necessary to allocate the quotas on some arithmetic or historical basis amongst known importers and a very substantial apparatus is required to do this. The last time this was done, in 1947, the staff of Wartime Prices and Trade Board was still in existence and they woke up one morning to find that they were the Import Control Division of the Department of Finance.

In 1962, when there was a crisis of a more general character, which required some control on imports across the board rather than particular categories, it was found more practical in an administrative sense to deal with this by a taxing method than by a quantitative or quota method. I think that has been a major consideration that various Canadian governments have addressed themselves to in considering how to deal with injurious imports, either in a broad case such as 1962 when a surcharge on imports was applied or in dealing with emergencies in relation to specific products. This taxing device, or as it is now, a value for duty which applies to tax, in effect, can be a prohibition, but it requires no allocating mechanism and no additional staff is required to administer it which is a major consideration.

• 1640

I think in terms of its actual effect, instead of allocating by administrative order it allocates through the price mechanism. It allocates imports to those who think they can sell the goods with the additional tax and from that point of view it is a more economical method of dealing with an emergency control on imports.

The Chairman: Are there any other questions, gentlemen?

Mr. Harkness: Clause 37(3)(1c) on page 98, provides that any tax imposed will come to an end in 180 days. This is a new provision; this did not exist before. What is the purpose or reason for that?

In other words, under the previous legislation you could put on a value for duty and you could keep it there for a year or as long as you wanted to, but now, apparently, you can put on one of these surtaxes provided for under this clause, but the application of it ends after 180 days, unless it has been referred to Parliament and Parliament has passed an act.

Mr. R. Y. Grey: Mr. Harkness, of those products that I mentioned that are now subject to value for duty—the arbitrary value for duty—three of them have not been in effect for longer than 180 days. It seemed to the draftsmen and to the minister when it became clear that the effect of the present measure was, in fact, to impose a tax and that this clause empowered the Governor in Council to impose a tax without any ceiling, because it is so serious a matter, it ought to be subject to some form of scrutiny by Parliament. The 180-day rule was taken from the amendment that was made to the Customs Tariff Act in—I am afraid I am not quite certain of the year. There is a power under the Customs Tariff Act to withdraw the preferential rate or the MFN of any country in whole or part and in the last Parliament, I believe, 180-day limitation was placed on that power. In practical terms, this is an analogous power and we simply adopted the same 180-day limitation. That amendment will be found at the end of Section (4) of the Customs Tariff Act.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, before continuing I will seek your indulgence now that I note we have a quorum, if it meets your approval that the following be moved and seconded.

(See Minutes of Proceedings.)

Are there any more questions on clause 37, page 98? If not, we will move to page 100.

On Clause 38—Coming into force

(See Minutes of Proceedings.)

[Interpretation]

This concludes our clause by clause examination of the Anti-Dumping Bill.

[English]

I thank Mr. Grey and Mr. Arthur very much for their presence before this Committee on the White Paper on Anti-Dumping and, no doubt, we will benefit from the presence of Messrs. Grey and Arthur later on when their guidance will be required.

• 1645

Gentlemen, we have here, too, Mr. Labarge, Deputy Minister of National Revenue for Customs and Excise as well as some of his officials. Is it your intention to start questioning these gentlemen now or would you rather wait until the next sitting which will be on Thursday at 11.00 a.m. in the same room?

Mr. Harkness: I would suggest that we wait until next Thursday to question Mr. Labarge.

The Chairman: Mr. Labarge will have no objection if we wait? Perhaps I may make a suggestion, the questions could be asked today and the reply supplied on Thursday. Is this agreeable with you gentlemen?

Mr. Burton: Mr. Chairman, what sort of a timetable do we have to keep in mind in dealing with this entire matter before us?

The Chairman: As you are aware, Mr. Burton, we have given until November 12 at noon for the private sector to present briefs to this Committee. A Steering Committee meeting after that date will decide the schedule for us.

Mr. Burton: Are there any other officials whom it is proposed to call before the Committee other than the gentlemen to whom you have just referred?

The Chairman: Mr. Burton, it has been suggested that some officials from the Department of Industry might come before this Committee.

Mr. Burton: Would that be this week?

The Chairman: That will depend on how long we spend with Mr. Labarge and his officials because as approved last Thursday we will have a meeting this Thursday at 11.00 a.m. and another one at 3.30 p.m.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Comtois: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Comtois.

Mr. Comtois: Perhaps Mr. Labarge has a statement to make today and we could make our comments on Thursday.

The Chairman: Before the meeting I inquired and Mr. Labarge said that he has no general statement to make, but that he is at the disposal of the Committee to answer the questions put to him.

Mr. Comtois: Thursday.

The Chairman: Thank you very much, gentlemen. Our next meeting will be on Thursday at 11.00 a.m. in the same room.

---

HOUSE OF COMMONS

First Session—Twenty-eighth Parliament
1968

---

STANDING COMMITTEE

ON

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

---

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

No. 7

---

THURSDAY, November 7, 1968

---

Respecting

WHITE PAPER ON ANTI-DUMPING

---

WITNESSES

*From the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise), Messrs.
R. C. Labarge, Deputy Minister; A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division; H. D.
MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section.*

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
QUEEN'S PRINTER AND CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY
OTTAWA, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON
FINANCE, TRADE, AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. Alastair Gillespie

and Messrs.

Blair,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
Downey,
Émard,

Flemming,
Gauthier,
Givens,
Gleave,
Gray,
Hales,

Harkness,
Lambert (Edmonton West)
Latulippe,
Perrault,
Roberts,
Trudel—20.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

THURSDAY, November 7, 1968.

(9)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 11:10 a.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Blair, Burton, Clermont, Comtois, Danson, Émard, Flemming, Gillespie, Givens, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton West), Latulippe, Roberts, Trudel—(16).

Also present: Mr. Ritchie.

In attendance: From the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise): Messrs. R. C. Labarge, Deputy Minister; A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division; H. D. MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section.

Also in attendance: From the Department of Finance: C. D. Arthur, International Economic Relations Division; From the Department of Trade and Commerce: C. J. Kelly, Office of Area Relations; From the Department of Industry: V. R. St. Louis, Commercial Policy Division.

The Chairman read a statement on the proposal to print the Proceedings of this Committee in a bilingual edition. (See Evidence)

The Committee resumed consideration of the White Paper on Anti-Dumping.

Officials of the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise) were called and introduced by the Chairman.

Mr. Laberge was questioned and was assisted in answering by the officials of his Department.

At 12:25 p.m. the Vice-Chairman took the Chair, at the request of the Chairman.

The questioning having been concluded, it was agreed to cancel the meeting scheduled for this afternoon and the witnesses were permitted to retire, subject to recall.

At 1:15 p.m. the Committee adjourned to the call of the Chair.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Thursday, November 7, 1968

• 1110

The Chairman: Gentlemen, I see a quorum. Last week at the meeting of October 31, 1968 this Committee agreed that the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence should be published in a bilingual edition in a manner similar to that now being done by the Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts.

I have since ascertained that a bilingual edition was authorized by Mr. Speaker as an experiment for that one committee only, with a limited distribution and for a limited trial period, to ascertain how staff and equipment facilities can handle the proposed format. I have been informed that at the moment there are many technical problems which will have to be ironed out before it is possible to produce all committee proceedings in a similar format.

For the moment, therefore, it will be necessary to defer the printing of the Proceedings of this Committee in a bilingual edition. Separate English and French editions will, of course, continue to be prepared and distributed in the usual manner.

You will remember last week we had a discussion about adopting the procedure used by the Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts, and that is the explanation I have received from the Speaker's office. Are there any comments on this, gentlemen?

[Interpretation]

Mr. Emard: Yes.

The Chairman: Mr. Emard.

Mr. Emard: Mr. Chairman, we have asked whether we could have the French translation of reports of the Committees that have been published until now. I am not one of those who wish to be nationalistic and insist that the French version should be given the same day. I realize there are many problems involved, but if you realize how difficult it is for people who are not well acquainted with the question to talk about these anti-dumping problems, can you imagine what it is for French-speaking persons, when it is already very difficult for an English person? I am just wondering if we could not try to obtain the translation. Mr. Grey's testimony is very important—pretty well the most important to date—and I wish I could follow it in my own language.

The Chairman: Mr. Emard, Tuesday of this week, the Speaker of the House, after a question of privilege raised by one of our colleagues has given the explanations you asked for. I would invite you to look at the debate of Tuesday of this week concerning...

Mr. Emard: Yes, yes, I know, a lot of explanations are given but I want action.

The Chairman: You know who is responsible for the personnel on the Hill. I am very willing to take further steps but the answer given by the Speaker, after a question of privilege raised by one of our colleagues, should be considered to be the policy our Committee should follow.

Mr. Gray: I think we are all agreed that we should have completely bilingual facilities but the solution of this problem is not in our hands. Those whose responsibility it is come under Parliament and not the Committee. If we had our own team of translators, it would be easy, it would be perhaps possible anyway to solve this problem ourselves but the only solution possible is, as I explained, to approach the general administration of Parliament.

The Chairman: Does Mr. Lambert, have any comments?

• 1115

The Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): I am impatiently waiting to question the witness.

The Chairman: Thank you, Mr. Lambert. Mr. Lambert now has the floor.

[English]

The Chairman: As you know, this morning we have as witnesses before this Committee, Mr. R. C. Labarge, Deputy Minister, Customs and Excise Division, Department of National Revenue. I will ask Mr. Labarge to introduce the other officials with him.

Mr. R. C. Labarge (Deputy Minister, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise)): Thank you, Mr. Chairman. On my left is the Assistant Deputy Minister for Customs, Mr. A. R. Hind; on my immediate right is Mr. Douglas MacDermid who is Chief of the Valuation Service Section in our Department, and who has been long connected with this anti-dumping legislation, attending GATT with members of the Department of Finance and so on, and on the extreme right is Mr. Murray Keam, who is the Director, Customs Appraisal Division. On the shoulders of these people rest the application of this dumping law once it is passed by Parliament.

The Chairman: I understand that Mr. Labarge has no statement to present to the Committee and he and the three officials accompanying him are now at your disposal to answer any questions directed to them.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, the other day in speaking to Mr. Rod Grey I suggested to him that last year, when we were discussing the anti-dumping convention and the reactions of industry and so forth, there was a great fear that because of the nature of the convention, the procedure that was to be adopted and so forth that, frankly, there would be an awful lot of, shall we call it, one free dump. Now that we are talking to the officers who are charged with the administration of this legislation perhaps they could advise the Committee on this danger of one free dump. I would like also to get an assessment of the efficacy of the machinery that is proposed in this legislation.

Mr. Labarge: Mr. Chairman, this one free dump may well be possible but it depends on whether it is the kind of dump that does not create injury. If there is injury then we are to be alerted by those who see the first signs, of threat or of injury. If it is a massive dump, as you know, or if it becomes part of a series which cumulatively cause injury or are comparable to a massive dump over a period of time, then the law permits us to retroactively catch these.

Let us say that the Department to the extent that it can, has some means of vigilance and detection, but these means must be supplemented by those most concerned with dumping so that the two parties together can see to the fastest action possible.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): That may be, Mr. Labarge, but what concerns me is not so much the ability of the Department to go back and impose a dumping duty on the importer; what concerns me is the effect of the one dump. Canadian industry may be ruined by it.

• 1120

Let us take the field of textiles. The goods are brought in and they are sold. You carry on through your machinery and get an anti-dumping duty. Well, that is a penalty imposed upon the importer. However, what happens to the Canadian textile manufacturer or converter whose goods remain on the shelf because they are seasonal goods, subject to style changes and so forth. What about him? This is the point, this is what I am concerned about. You can take three years, if you want, to get anti-dumping duty from the people who may be paying it. What about the Canadian industry that has suffered in the interval?

Mr. Labarge: The only law we have is the application of the dumplaw when we have determined it. However, what you are trying to say is, how do we get at what often passes in common life as "undetected crime"? As I said, we use the best methods of detection we have. If our sensitivity is great enough and we intend "sandpapering" our fingers for this purpose, we intend to use what we have in our records by way of normal importations of commodities and then we would hope, particularly with experience—even now we have what you would call the "sensitive" commodities—to be able to work out a pattern whereby there is a spotlight on these sensitive areas.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Then to follow up, how do you feel the present machinery works to prevent dumping? As the officer chiefly concerned with the administration of the present legislation, are you satisfied that it does a reasonable job?

Mr. Labarge: Under the law that we have been following, it has been doing a reasonable job. The main thing in this of course, is a pretty strong deterrent—the dump is no joke to have hanging over you for a period of time when you thought you were getting away with it.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): It is said, Mr. Labarge, that a good tariff consultant can advise you on about a dozen different ways in which you can engage in dumping with almost impunity, under the present law. If that is so, do you feel that the new set-up, either as to the law or the machinery, would make your Department more effective to combat that sort of thing?

Mr. Labarge: My impression of this was—as Mr. Grey explained it and as I read it—that it has more teeth in it for us. I think the spelling out of “associated persons” as well as this question of “compensatory arrangements” will help us and it is more specific than what we had in the law in the past.

Mr. Gray: You are speaking of the proposed law?

Mr. Labarge: Yes.

Mr. Gray: The proposed new law?

Mr. Labarge: Right.

• 1125

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): You raised the point of “associated persons”. I am concerned, Mr. Labarge, in an act that you and the Department of Finance will be administering as far as the tariffs and customs are concerned, that you will be using an interpretation of “associated persons” devised under another act over which you have no control, in other words, the Income Tax Act. I would much prefer to see the act designed so that your Department along with the Department of Finance could, by regulation or by statute, determine what are “associated persons” within your own statute. There are different philosophies under the two Acts and in the two Departments. Under the Income Tax Act “associated persons” was defined for certain purposes. I would like to get your comment, Mr. Labarge, on whether it is possible, within your own shop, to devise the appropriate regulations.

Mr. Labarge: I am not sure that the person questioned has the right to question the questioner, but I would like to do so, if you do not mind.

I wonder, if in your own experience, you think that the present interpretation and the present wording of the section of the Income Tax Act is either over-adequate in the sense that it extends too far or whether it is inadequate for the purpose for which we would use it, because therein, I think, lies the test. If my knowledge of that section is at all correct, it is a pretty all-encompassing relationship and many of which I do not really expect to find in the import-export business. So, it may be that there will only be a portion of that, but at the same time it would be too bad if we had a definition in the Customs Act which was not broad enough for us to take action where basically the dumping was caused by this relationship.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): In the Income Tax Act the definition is in the statute itself, but then in addition there is an omnibus power, shall we say, for the Minister to use his discretion. That is something I am not particularly interested in importing into this legislation and there is some question whether section 138 is really brought into this legislation by reason of this reference. The point I want to make is that this should be within the regulations and the regulations are, then, subject to examination. As you know, if you feel that something is not covered by the regulations, you have the power of fairly quick amendment to regulations, whereas if it is enshrined in the Income Tax Act by way of statutory provision, you can only amend it by getting an amendment to the Act which is a much slower process.

Mr. Labarge: Mr. Chairman, if I can take refuge as other people do, I think this is part of the drafting of the legislation and the proposing of it to Parliament which is the responsibility of the Department of Finance in this instance. However, I am sure they will take note of what has been said.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, I have other questions, but I will wait until later.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Labarge, just to deal with a very interesting point raised by Mr. Lambert, I gather that under the present law it is also, shall I say, technically possible for something which is an act of dumping to pass undetected.

Mr. Labarge: It is possible that some dumping could be undetected?

Mr. Gray: Yes.

Mr. Labarge: Mr. Gray, I would hate to say that...

Mr. Gray: Not willingly on your part.

Mr. Labarge: But because of the way in which it is done?

Mr. Gray: Yes.

• 1130

Mr. Labarge: I think there is an additional safeguard in this the proposed legislation; that the law is being changed so that you will use as the basis of your complaint both injury and dumping and the sign of injury will be an indicator which will come to us that did not come to us in the past.

Mr. Gray: Of course, under the proposed law you will not have to rely only on complaints. The responsibility is placed on your own administration?

Mr. Labarge: Yes, and even on the injury Tribunal because a complainant could communicate with us to the effect that he believes there had been dumping and he feels he has been injured. The dumping question will be investigated if there is an indication that this man has some evidence. It may be pretty weak evidence and if the Deputy Minister of National Revenue feels that it is very weak he can communicate with him and suggest that he explore other areas of facts, other statistical data or something like that. But if these are not available to the man, he can still communicate with the injury Tribunal and they will carry out the research on the injury aspect.

Mr. Gray: I understand that it is also contemplated under this law that your own administration will maintain some type of surveillance procedure.

Mr. Labarge: That is right.

Mr. Gray: Is that correct?

Mr. Labarge: Yes.

Mr. Gray: I presume you will be extending procedures within your own Department for that purpose?

Mr. Labarge: This is what I meant when I was talking about increasing our sensitivity to these things as well as selectivity and other methods.

Mr. Gray: Under the present Act—not the proposed law—if goods are found to be part of a dumping transaction the import is not banned. The only action taken is the imposition of a duty. Is that correct?

Mr. Labarge: That is correct.

Mr. Gray: So that under the present law it is possible for goods to reach the market to the possible detriment of a Canadian manufacturer, either before or simultaneously with the imposition of the duty?

Mr. Labarge: Right. I was just checking to see whether or not under such circumstances we can, as we will be able in the future, go to the next level of trade to whom the importer has sold should we not be able to collect from him.

Mr. Gray: But the point I was trying to get at was that under the existing law the method of protection, so to speak, for Canadian industry is the levying of duty on the dumping transaction. The goods are not banned.

Mr. Labarge: That is right.

Mr. Gray: Therefore, to this extent, at least, the control remains the same under the proposed legislation?

Mr. Labarge: Yes, it is quite clear that if some goods get through which are sold and sold again, if you like, those goods are on the market. This is how injury can occur and does occur.

Mr. Gray: Under the proposed law that we are studying at the present time, you will also, under certain circumstances, be able to propose duty provisionally?

Mr. Labarge: Yes. All this does is advise them that if we find dumping and injury they are going to be liable for the entries over that period.

• 1135

Mr. Gray: Then because of the procedure proposing provisional duty there will be a clear signal or flag of the consequences to someone who intends to export or import goods of a dumped character?

Mr. Labarge: Yes, plus all the notifications and public notices in the Canada Gazette for other people in the same line of business.

Mr. Gray: The proposed law that we are studying at the present time does not contemplate that your administration would be deliberately allowing anybody to have one free dump?

Mr. Labarge: It never did as far as we are concerned.

Mr. Gray: Thank you.

The Chairman: Are you finished, Mr. Gray?

Mr. Gray: Yes, thank you.

Mr. Flemming: Mr. Chairman, my question to Mr. Labarge is quite specific. I have in mind the fact that New Brunswick from Woodstock all the way north to Edmundston or further is a potato-growing area which would be within 30 to 50 miles of the same potato-growing area in Aroostook County in the State of Maine which is one of the most famous potato-growing sections of the United States. If the Canadian market, we will say, suddenly became improved, would it possible for a large shipment, even as much as 50 carloads or something like this, to suddenly come across the border through our ports of entry at a price that the producers probably felt they had to ask because of it being a perishable commodity? If they were dumped, so-called, and if they were allowed one dump, as Mr. Lambert has mentioned, the result so far as the New Brunswick producers are concerned would be just terrible. I wonder what Mr. Labarge sees as a remedy for that sort of a situation, should it occur.

Mr. Labarge: Mr. Chairman, we are talking about produce which is grown on a seasonal basis—it comes into production at a certain time—and the knowledge of the crops is pretty well known to the people most concerned including, of course, the Department of Agriculture. One can always look at an over-production, if you want to call it that, in the neighbourhood as being a potential threat and I would expect that those who are primarily concerned with what happens to the Canadian producers would be in communication with us, as they have been in the past, in sufficient time to alert us before such an occurrence. I do not think I have seen a large quantity—such a massive importation—but I have seen a series of importations from the first producers who have had surpluses which have been caught as soon as they appeared to be a developing situation. I think this calls for the co-operation of the growers, the Department of Agriculture, ourselves and any other interest-foreseen as a possible threat and we could be altered to the situation. One of the problems here is that you do not necessarily have a dump situation. You could even have a normal value in this case and still have a price which is lower than the Canadian producers' price. We have just gone through this with corn, have we not?

• 1140

Mr. Flemming: Yes. I was most anxious to hear from Mr. Labarge what he has partially suggested, at least I took it that way, that the producers on the Canadian side—New Brunswick—should keep the Department fully informed regarding the possibility that such a thing could happen and if he will have the remedial measures to deal with the situation in the same way as he has at the present time.

Mr. Labarge: Mr. MacDermid might add some words to what I have said.

Mr. H. D. MacDermid (Chief, Valuation Section, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise)): If it is a situation, Mr. Chairman, where goods are actually being dumped, that is the export price is lower than the normal price, I do not think there is any doubt but that we could determine the normal value, the export price and the margin of dumping within the 90 days so that in the event it was a massive situation the Tribunal could tell us to apply duty retroactively. If, however, it were a situation where the prices were low but it was not a problem of dumping, then this problem could be handled, as is the case at present, under the special emergency legislation, clause 37 (3) (1a) to be found on page 96 of the White Paper.

Mr. Flemming: We have to acknowledge, Mr. Chairman, that while the ninety-day period may be necessary in order to deal with the matter, it is not much use, you know, to determine injury to a producer if the producer is already dead. Being injured might result in his demise as a producer during that ninety-day period. I was anxious to find out and to have confirmed by Mr. Labarge and Mr. MacDermid what were the means of dealing with this situation so that the injury will not come into being as far as the producer is concerned and the producer will have protection against that most unusual situation.

Mr. Labarge: We really will be in no different position than we were in the past except for this informational aspect and the sensitivity to it. We have always been sensitive to this and I think the answer to this would not be the application of dumping duty in most of these cases, but a decision to go to fixed values.

Mr. Flemming: This is fine, then, because I think the information that I could give the producers would be that we have no protection at the moment and we will not have any after this legislation becomes law in regard to this dumping but we will not lose any protection. Is that the general idea, Mr. Labarge?

Mr. Labarge: That is right, but, again, if the dumping is done in a normal time and not such a massive situation, they should avail themselves, of course, of the protection contained in this legislation that it is injurious to them even in those lesser quantities and where the importation is not a massive flood. I think there is a little more help in that.

Mr. Flemming: That is fine, Mr. Chairman. May I ask a question sort of in reverse and ask Mr. Labarge if he would care to express an opinion about it. If the situation were reversed and if we could just assume that there had been an over-production of potatoes in the Upper Saint John Valley and the producers could see the American market as a good place to get rid of some of their potatoes, in general, are the regulations that would apply on our producers going into the U.S. market similar to the regulations governing their producers coming into our market? Is there a similarity?

• 1145

Mr. Labarge: We are both signatories to the same Code.

Mr. Flemming: We have here the U.S. regulations, do we not, and now we have a proposed draft of our regulations. I wonder, in this respect, if our producers would have about the same right to go into a large U.S. market as they have to come into our small Canadian market.

Mr. Labarge: I have not, I admit, made the comparison because I have been primarily concerned with interpreting our own.

Mr. Flemming: Yes, I understand this is a difficult question. Actually, Mr. Labarge, I am going to use your expression, unless you convince me I should not when you said you will "sandpaper" your fingers and become very sensitive to this sort of thing. I think with that assurance I will conclude my questions for the moment. Thank you.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Labarge, as the administrator of this proposed legislation, you mentioned that you would be alerted if injury has been caused or would have been caused, but I am concerned about those firms or people who will not alert you to damage or dumping. I am thinking of American subsidiaries in Canada who may choose to bring a product which they are manufacturing in some foreign country into a Canadian plant. It is quite conceivable that they are not going to alert you to this. It is to their advantage to bring this product in and to close down their American plant and put people out of work. You are not going to be alerted about these cases. Now, where do we move from here?

Mr. Labarge: Where does the injury show up, Mr. Hales?

Mr. Hales: The only place where I would see injury would be the people who were put out of work.

Mr. Labarge: But how were they put out of work?

Mr. Hales: By the importation or the dumping of these products which were made in a foreign plant.

Mr. Labarge: We do have a Canadian producer who notices this unusually strong competitive price force?

Mr. Hales: Yes, but it is a subsidiary of the American company.

Mr. Labarge: Are they the only ones manufacturing that product in Canada?

Mr. Hales: In some cases they might have 90 to 95 per cent of the market in Canada.

Mr. Labarge: There is really not much difference between the proposed legislation and the old law in this particular case. What we have been trying to weigh is the element of injury in a situation where the Canadian producer—the one who is complaining—has about 5 per cent of the domestic market and whether this is a threat to the industry.

• 1150

Mr. Hales: It would appear to be a very pertinent problem and I can visualize some of these American subsidiaries in Canada closing their doors because if they can make it cheaper in a foreign plant you can rest assured that that is where it is going to be made.

Mr. Gray: What is stopping them from doing that now?

Mr. Hales: Because there are tariff walls now that make it economical for them to manufacture it in Canada.

Mr. Gray: Is this proposed law removing any of those tariffs?

Mr. Hales: No, but I think they could dump the product in Canada from another country—at least bring it in and not be accused of dumping.

Mr. Gray: Does the present law ban these imports?

Mr. Hales: Yes, it does.

Mr. Gray: It absolutely bans from import, even if the people are willing to pay additional duties?

Mr. Hales: Oh no, they do not want to pay the additional duties.

Mr. Gray: A grave risk exists now.

Mr. Hales: Well, I can see a loophole under this new legislation; time will tell. I visualize this happening in some cases. However, I brought it to the attention of the government and the Committee, and we will wait and see.

My other question was, as administrator, what meaning are you going to put to the word "material", material injury. The word "material" is pretty broad.

Mr. Labarge: I would rather leave the interpretation of that to the injury Tribunal whose task it will be.

Mr. Hales: You will have to have some terms of reference on this word in order to administer the act. You administer it on the basis that there has been, or it would have caused, material injury. As administrator you will have to have some terms of reference, I think, for that word "material".

Mr. Labarge: I was trying to find the French translation to see perhaps, if it was more specific than "material". However, let us say as long as it is not slight is the way we will look at this before we reject an investigation.

Mr. Hales: That is all, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: On the first question asked by Mr. Hales, could a labour union call your attention to such importation by the firm in Canada?

Mr. Labarge: Yes.

The Chairman: Were you asking a supplementary, Mr. Gray?

Mr. Gray: Yes, it is my understanding Mr. Labarge that the Tribunal which is to be set up under this law will be creating jurisprudence on the meaning of the word "material", which will be used by your administration in carrying out its administrative responsibilities under the act.

Mr. Labarge: That is right. It could have been my answer to Mr. Hales, but I think he wants to know what I am going to do before this jurisprudence begins. If it is not slight we will look at it, and eventually it may be that the word "material" will begin to take on some dimensions.

Mr. Danson: My concern really is the overall effectiveness of the legislation as proposed, and how precise we try to make this legislation, which could be so precise it could hamstring us. I am sure that in all legislation, not being a lawyer, there are loopholes. As a matter of fact, Mr. Lambert mentioned a customs consultant who said he could find a dozen ways to circumvent the laws. Just as a humble businessman I thought of twenty more after that, but the fact is people do not. If we start sandpapering our fingers too fine are we going to create some sort of a police state, maybe the government has no place in the deposit boxes of the nation.

However, is it, in balance, legislation that, with due discretion from you and your officials, can properly enforce the spirit of the legislation?

• 1155

Mr. Labarge: Yes, I think it is. It has two criteria now, and there will be much more intelligent evidence available before action is taken. I think there will be a greater alertness. Of course, it will cover a broader field of our commerce because before when we went on the "made in Canada" automatic basis there was a large percentage of up and coming industry which just sort of it took it on the chin because it had no defence against dump. Now this will be an area that is covered too.

Mr. Danson: With the threat of material damage.

Mr. Labarge: With the threat...

Mr. Gray: You are referring to those Canadian producers who do not have 10 per cent of the Canadian market?

Mr. Labarge: That is right.

Mr. Gray: They have no protection under the presently existing law, but they will have under the proposed law we are studying?

Mr. Danson: The other question I want to ask is one I asked the other day concerning the interpretation of this word "like". We are used to working with the "class or kind" regulations and there was an indication at one of the other sessions of this Committee that the word "like" was to be exactly the same. We got into a discussion of the same product but under a different brand. What is your interpretation of this word "like" in this context?

Mr. Labarge: As Mr. Hind has lived with this for quite a while I would like to give him a chance to answer.

Mr. A. R. Hind (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise)): Mr. Chairman, in dealing with this question I ask myself whether I would consider a Westinghouse refrigerator coming into Canada as "like" a model "X". My first reaction would be that perhaps they are not "like" goods in the sense that nationally advertised brand name goods normally command a higher selling price than do lesser known house brands.

I suggest that in establishing the normal value of a nationally advertised article, the Westinghouse refrigerator in this case, we would want to make appropriate adjustments for the difference in the two products.

Mr. Danson: This would be discretionary.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, there is provision in the regulations to make allowances for differences of various kinds; in quality, design, construction and so on.

Mr. Danson: Thank you very much.

Mr. Blair: Just following the question Mr. Danson asked, Mr. Hind may recall that I asked Mr. Grey a question about the definition of the word "like" and I directed Mr.

Grey's attention, among other things, to section 38 of the Customs Act which states:

Where...the value for duty cannot be determined...for the reason that like or similar goods are not sold in the country of export ..

In other passages of the valuation provisions of the Customs Act the words "like" or "similar" are used. Mr. Grey gave me the general answer that under the proposed act the word "like" would include the word "similar".

•1200

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, we have to arrive at a normal value for the goods coming to Canada, and ideally we try to find "like" goods sold for home consumption. In some cases we do not find precisely the same article sold in the home market, for example, if one is looking at electrical equipment, perhaps a toaster. Toasters coming to Canada must have CSA approval. Those same toasters sold in the country of export do not require CSA approval. Consequently there will be some differences between the toaster coming to Canada and the toaster sold in the country of export.

However, we must start somewhere so we take the nearest similar article coming to Canada, which is defined in the interpretation section of the proposed Bill as goods with characteristics which closely resemble those of the goods shipped to Canada, and we make appropriate price adjustments to give effect to the differences.

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, I think one of the most significant features of this new legislation is what I understand to be the difference in the valuation which will apply to anti-dumping transactions as opposed to the valuation which now applies under the Customs Act. I have in mind particularly paragraph 8, and there may be other regulations, and more particularly subparagraph (b) which occurs on page 4 of the proposed regulations.

As I understand the present valuation proceedings, if a manufacturer in the United States is selling, let us say, to his wholesale distributors in various sections of the country at a price of $100 per unit, this is the price or value which would apply for customs purposes in the transaction I am about to describe.

Very frequently a new exporter into this market will appoint what might be called a national distributor. This national distributor deals in turn with wholesalers in different sections of the country or in the various provinces. The case put forward is that the national distributor performs, in Canada, a number of the functions which the manufacturer himself performs in the United States in the way of servicing, advertising and so forth. Under the present law, if I am correct, the value of $100 per unit applies, notwithstanding the fact that the national distributor exists; is that correct?

Mr. Labarge: That is correct.

Mr. Blair: However, under the proposed law, if I understand these regulations correctly, it will now be possible for a lesser value to apply in fixing the export price by reason of the fact that the conditions of sale and distribution of goods in Canada are not the same as those in the United States.

Mr. Hind: Yes, that is correct.

Mr. Blair: Does the Department anticipate much difficulty in dealing with these situation as they arise, in attributing numbers and values to the advertising, servicing and other expenses which may be assumed by national distributors in this country?

• 1205

Mr. Labarge: I will say that it certainly means more work. As to how easy or how difficult it is going to be, I will ask an investigator, the present Assistant Deputy Minister to answer.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, this is a new chore to which we will have to address ourselves. We have not been faced with it before. As Mr. Labarge has said it will in a way increase the difficulty of making investigations.

However, as I see it, the exporter, visualizing a Canadian values investigator in his office, will be suggesting in the circumstances described by Mr. Blair that he should be permitted to sell to the Canadian importer, because of his superior trade status as a distributor, at a lower price than the price at which he sells to his best customers in the home market, namely wholesalers. If I were an investigator I would ask the exporter to tell me what discount he feels should be allowed by reason of the savings which would be effected by him in his home market, if he were to sell in his home market to the same class of trade as the Canadian importer.

This would, as the regulation envisages, require reference to the exporters costs. There would obviously be savings in salesmen's salaries, commissions and expenses in the sense that if the exporter were selling to one distributor in his home market rather than to twenty wholesalers, he would require fewer salesmen to transact business with that one client than he would be faced with in selling to twenty wholesalers. There would be other similar cost factors which would represent a saving to the exporter if he sold to distributors in his home market. So I would ask him first of all what percentage he would suggest as fair. Then I would ask him to justify that on the basis of savings in costs. We are endeavouring to find the price at which the exporter would sell in his home market to the same class of trade as the importer, if such sales were possible.

Mr. Blair: The determinant would be the costs or expenses which apply in the home market?

Mr. Hind: Yes sir.

Mr. Blair: However, subject to an over-all provision contained in subparagraph (b) 3, that the allowance could not exceed the actual cost of performing these functions in Canada?

Mr. Hind: Yes sir, that is correct.

Mr. Blair: May I just ask one more question, Mr. Chairman? Again I wish to assure my friends that I am not seeking free legal advice.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Blair is one fellow who does not need it.

Mr. Blair: Thank you, Mr. Gray. I would like to discuss very briefly the differences which exist under section 6(5) and section 6(6) of the Customs Tariff Act. Subsection (5) is the main provision and it provides for an automatic assessment of dumping duty when the facts justify. Subsection (6) is a more sophisticated section and it deals in broad terms with the non-arm's length type of transaction between a foreign exporter and some kind of Canadian subsidiary which is related to that foreign exporter in a corporate fashion.

Under subsection (6) it is provided that where the Department discovers a non-arm's length relationship between the exporter and the importer it may then go into a detailed study of the business of these firms and make its determination of value and its assessment of dumping duty on the basis of excluding from the accounts compensatory payments or whatever else, which may be paid back and forth because of the corporate relationship.

• 1210

However, am I correct in assuming that where there is an arm's length relationship between the exporter and the importer the Department now does not have the power to make the same type of investigation, particularly in relationship to compensatory payments of one kind or another which may be made outside the importing transaction by the exporter to the importer?

Mr. Labarge: You are talking about sales to unrelated companies where there is a compensatory arrangement?

Mr. Blair: Yes.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, under our current law I think we ought to be able to catch many of these compensatory arrangements, and there is an effort to carry this over, as I understand it, into the new Bill. I am wondering if Mr. Blair would help me by perhaps selecting the type of arrangement he might have in mind.

Mr. Blair: Well, first of all, I have listened with amazement to the suggestion that a bunch of sharp fellows are able to rip the present anti-dumping provisions apart, and it certainly is not my impression that they are subject to wholesale evasion. I think this should be clearly stated. I suppose the officials also would be prepared to comment on whether or not they have ever had any substantial representations to indicate that the present anti-dumping law was ineffective. I would be very much surprised if they had.

However, let us just put a simple case. A Canadian importer may be importing goods at a value of $100 per unit, which value corresponds to the exporter's selling price in his home markets. Sometime during the course of the year the exporter might call this man up and say: We want to help you with your advertising. We propose making a payment to you of $10,000. That payment is not related to the quantity of goods that have been imported or anything of the sort. It is a payment made to reimburse the Canadian importer for his advertising expense. Undoubtedly some of these arrangements take on a more sophisticated form, but when I am speaking about compensatory payments this is the kind of arrangement I have in mind.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, if an exporter wished to undertake an advertising campaign in Canada and advertise his goods, for example, in this country through any medium, there is nothing to prevent that under the present law, and I do not think there is anything in the proposed Bill to prevent that being done, in the sense that this is not tied in with particular importations of goods. I would not have thought of that in the sense of being a compensatory type of arrangement.

• 1215

Mr. Blair: Then may I refine the question? I can see quite clearly that if the manufacturer in the United States undertakes on his own, as it were, an advertising campaign in Canada to publicize his goods, that is not a compensatory payment. However, if his aim is not only to advertise his goods but to advertise the fact that the "X" national distributing company is his distributor in Canada, and to give that distributing company a leg up in the market, and to pursue that aim, he enters into an arrangement whereby he undertakes to underwrite all or part of a large advertising campaign, would that kind of thing, in your opinion, be a compensatory payment?

Mr. MacDermid: Mr. Chairman, in the event the exporter was giving something to the importer in Canada which he did not give in his home market, then I do not think there is much doubt that we would consider this a compensatory arrangement. If, however, he was advertising products in his home market in the same way as he was going to do on shipments to Canada then there would be no dumping duty under the new law nor under the old one. However, I think this is a case where you might well approach it from the point of view of a compensatory arrangement, if he were giving something special to the Canadian importer.

Mr. Blair: What type of payment in ordinary commercial practice would the Department judge to fall under the heading of "compensatory arrangement"?

Mr. Hind: I suppose, Mr. Chairman, that if the exporter were to give superior servicing to the Canadian importer than he were to his customers in the home market, this might be regarded as something over and above what was available to the exporter's customers in his home market and could well fall into that category.

Mr. Blair: Mr. Labarge in commenting earlier expressed the view that the Department would have more latitude under the new law in determining values for anti-dumping purposes because you had a broader base for an attack on compensatory payments. Is this correct?

Mr. Labarge: Yes.

Mr. Blair: So notwithstanding the uncertainty as to what compensatory payments are, it is the opinion of the Department that you will have greater flexibility and more strength in going after them under the new law than you have under the present law.

Mr. Labarge: This is our feeling; this is our hope.

Mr. Blair: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Labarge: I would just like to say we would not want to be too imaginative and propose various schemes in a public way at this time.

Mr. Blair: There may be a customs consultant in the room.

Mr. Labarge: Maybe we ought to consult him. The variety of ways are hard to discern. Some of these things are really small potatoes, for instance, if somebody went so far as to say: You gave an aeroplane ticket for the family, or you gave hotel accommodation. It would have to be a pretty small deal of some kind. However, we hope the major things will be easily discernible. There are cases where what looks like a compensatory arrangement is not a compensatory arrangement because it is a term and condition of the sale in the country of export.

Mr. Gillespie: Is it the compensatory arrangements that have proved the most troublesome in the administration of the existing act?

Mr. Labarge: No, I think just what you call straight dumping.

Mr. Gillespie: In what area has the existing act been most criticized?

• 1220

Mr. Hind: It has been criticized, among other things, Mr. Chairman, by our GATT partners. They have contended for a number of years that Canada's anti-dumping legislation is not in conformity with the GATT concept. It is for that purpose that the international Code has been designed, and has been accepted by the major trading partners of the GATT, including Canada, and in subscribing to the new Code we will, we expect, be—let me put it differently, please. Our new legislation, we expect, will bring our law into conformity with the GATT concept and the international Anti-Dumping Code. That was one of the chief criticisms.

Mr. Gillespie: Do our trading partners feel that our existing law is too rigid, too stringent, with respect to imports?

Mr. Hind: Yes sir. Mr. Chairman, the criticism from our GATT trading partners stems from the so-called automatic application of dumping duty. Whereas in future it will cease to be automatic, rather dumping duty will be collectible only when you find both dumping and injury caused by dumping.

Mr. Gillespie: This automatic provision, though, did not apply to products where Canadian production was less than 10 per cent of Canadian consumption?

Mr. Hind: That is right, sir. Under the existing law dumping duty is payable only in respect of goods of a "class or kind" made or produced in Canada. In order to be looked upon as a "class or kind" made or produced in Canada there must be produced in this country sufficient volume to supply at least 10 per cent of the Canadian market. Consequently infant industries starting up, who have not as yet attained the 10 per cent requirement under the current law, cannot benefit by the collection of dumping duty. They have no protection.

Mr. Gillespie: Looking at this thing from the point of view of the infant industry, and from the point of view of the multi-national firm, was the criticism of this automatic dumping duty a criticism from those who would have liked to have entered the Canadian market for the first time, or from those who had been doing business in Canada for a long time?

Mr. Hind: I think the criticism related to the fact that the Department of National Revenue under the existing law is able to collect dumping duty when in actual fact such dumping is not causing or threatening injury to Canadian production.

Mr. Gillespie: What I am getting at is this. It seems to be quite possible that an imaginative foreign producer might say the Canadian market is going to be an attractive market two or three years from now. I have developed a new product which is distinctive; it is not quite the same as anything yet produced in Canada; I want to export it to Canada; I shall advertise it and promote it in Canada. By the time Canadians are ready to produce a similar product I will have obtained, for my product, such wide market acceptance that I will have the market to myself. Has this sort of situation concerned you in the past? Have you run into this kind of situation?

Mr. Labarge: We have had a situation where, as you say, there was no Canadian manufacturer and therefore there was no "class or kind" and therefore there was no "dump". So it must have been what happened in Canada. I am not sure that it is always a fact that the first in the market is the one who continues to maintain the market. If it is a good product a smart fellow wakes up here, as we have seen them do in other countries, noticeably Japan, to see that a product can be made in Canada which will render that one obsolete or run it off the market and create a production source in Canada.

Mr. Gillespie: This was the second part of my question because this could well be the follow-up. Once you develop a market as a foreign producer, you then produce it in Canada and extend the multi-national aspect of your marketing. This was my concern in terms of the general overall economic policy.

• 1225

I would like to turn, if I may Mr. Chairman, to the question of the administration of the act and the vulnerability, perhaps, of the Department. Is it possible, for instance, under this ninety-day provision that you could be paralyzed by inaction on the part of the Panel.

Mr. Gray: The Tribunal or the Panel?

Mr. Gillespie: The Tribunal. If I understand the Bill correctly the Tribunal has to refer matters to the Panel for advice; is this not correct? In finding on the question of injury or material injury?

Mr. Labarge: Yes. What the Tribunal is going to have is, in fact, a staffing organization which will use the services of all related departments to establish whether or not there has been injury.

Mr. Gillespie: Right.

Mr. Labarge: They have ninety days in which to do this.

Mr. Gillespie: Do they not have to refer this matter to the Panel?

Mr. Labarge: Yes.

Mr. Gillespie: Supposing the Panel are not able to meet within that ninety-day period.

Mr. Labarge: The Panel does not have to be specifically those officers who are named; there are alternates. Everybody has his alternate. There is no reason they should not be able to meet in that period and, in fact, handle a whole batch of things at one time. The evidence should be fairly clear before they call the Panel together.

Mr. Gillespie: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert, is this a supplementary question or a new question?

Mr. Lambert: This refers to the panel, the Advisory Panel.

The Chairman: I have on my list, Mr. Énard followed by Messrs. Burton and Harkness.

Mr. Énard: Mr. Chairman, I would like to be very sure that I understand "dumping". According to the definition we have been given, "dumping" means the introduction of products from another country into the Canadian market.

"Dumping" exists when the imported goods cause injury to an established product and when it retards the establishment of Canadian industry. Are there other causes?

Mr. Labarge: In this case "dumping" must meet these two conditions. It must be a lower price than the normal price indicated, and then there must be injury, or threat of injury.

Mr. Énard: But are these the only two conditions?

Mr. Labarge: The only two conditions.

Mr. Énard: According to my understanding "dumping" implies a surplus. This has been discussed previously. It has been said that a surplus production or a surplus crop are the two main causes which influence dumping. Are there other causes?

Mr. Labarge: Yes, you have taken the most important cases from the point of view of the exporter. The exporter finds too many goods on his market and the demand too low; he has a surplus and he wants to get rid of it. But you know there is also a temptation for an exporter to quote a very low price—a dumping price—to Canadian importers so that he may get into the Canadian market and latch on to part of the market. This is international competition and the same motives which exist in general trade, can be a temptation sometimes to practice dumping.

Mr. Émard: In this case the product must be sold in Canada at a price which is so low even with normal customs duties that it will be lower than the market price?

Mr. Labarge: The anti-dumping tariff would normally raise the price to a competitive level and even higher, that is higher than the price on the Canadian market because it is a penalty, it is a deterrent, otherwise, anti-dumping would not achieve its purpose.

Have I understood your question?

[English]

The Vice-Chairman: Are you finished, Mr. Émard?

[Interpretation]

• 1230

Mr. Émard: No, I don't think we understand each other. What I mean is that if a normal product, comes from the United States, there is a tariff...

Mr. Labarge: A tariff, here in Canada.

Mr. Émard: ... a tariff which is added to the market price for regular products. But in order to have dumping, according to my understanding, and that is what I want to find out from you, the price of the product sold must actually be lower than the normal price. Even with the imposition of the regular tariff, this price would still have to be lower than the sale price here in Canada.

Mr. Labarge: So that it can meet Canadian competition.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton-West): There is confusion here, Mr. Émard, between the Canadian price and the price in the country of origin. At the present time, there is dumping when we can buy in the United States a quantity of a product, at a price which is lower than the price at which this product is usually sold to you or to Americans. Take for example men's shirts. If the price of a shirt at the wholesale price, in the United States, is $3.00 each, but if, when you go to the manufacturer, he sells them to you for $2.00 each, this gives you an advantage to come to Canada and sell them. This is dumping.

Mr. Emard: This is not exactly the problem I raised. What I mean is taking the example of Mr. Lambert, let us say that I buy a shirt worth $3.00 in the United States at $2.00. Automatically, the Canadian government imposes a custom's duty which normally should raise the price from $2.00 to perhaps $3.00.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Not necessarily.

Mr. Emard: In order to have dumping, the shirts I may buy at $2.00 perhaps I would buy them only at $1.00 in the United States, because it is a model that is no longer in style in the States and which they want to get rid of by selling them on the Canadian market, are sold in certain cases even below cost price. Is this a case of dumping? Because Mr. Grey has explained that in 1904, when the Anti-dumping Act was adopted here, it was limited to clothing imports. The excess clothing production in the United States was channeled into Canada and sold at ridiculous prices. Is it the same case at the present time for certain products? Is not this one of the main causes of dumping?

Mr. Labarge: There is not doubt, and it is quite normal, that manufacturers try to get rid of surplus products or products which, due to a change in model are no longer popular in the country of origin. They are ready to accept the best price possible, and at the same time, they are prepared to take a great loss, as long as they get something out of it.

Mr. Emard: But in order to have a special act against dumping, the ordinary tariff must not be high enough to protect merchandise.

Mr. Labarge: No that is why we need an anti-dumping act.

Mr. Emard: This is what I was leading up to.

Mr. Labarge: This is the last defence.

Mr. Emard: According to your experience, can you tell us how dumping is practised? In general, how does an exporter proceed when he wants to practice dumping in Canada?

Mr. Labarge: It is when an exporter is ready to sell his merchandise to a Canadian merchant, at a price which is lower than the price at which he sells the same goods to his fellow citizens.

Mr. Emard: Does he proceed through a middle man in the case, at...?

• 1235

Mr. Labarge: He may even be influenced by a Canadian who goes there to ask him: "What is your lowest price?" He can be encouraged in this way.

Perhaps, he may offer the goods himself at a low price, as is done in all competition, but if he reduces his price lower than the price at which he sells in his own country he automatically practices dumping. He is influenced by competition and the possibility of making sales.

The Department of Finance would be in a better position to say what these pressures were. It is absolutely certain that foreign countries believed our market was not accessible and that we dealt with dumping in an automatic fashion without wondering whether it was detrimental to our industry.

Naturally, those who wished to export to Canada and even those who wanted to import certain articles at a lower price to sell them in Canada, said: "You have an extraordinary kind of automatic dumping duty. You do not take into account the demand for such products; you do not care whether or not there is a question of injury".

Mr. Émard: What about the American industries which have branches in Canada? Do they use these branch plants to practice dumping? Does this happen fairly often?

Mr. Labarge: There are cases where we have been obliged to impose dumping penalties, but I would not like to generalize because this is not a general situation.

Mr. Émard: One last question please. The fact that amendments to the present Anti-Dumping Act have been proposed means that we are not satisfied with the Act as it stands. You have just mentioned that under the pressure applied by GATT you have proposed certain changes to the present Act. What influenced you in making the other changes in the Act over and above those which have been requested by GATT?

[English]

One last question, please.

[Interpretation]

Then, all foreign exporters whose country had dumping laws more in keeping with the one that we proposed said: "It is not a game. Laws must be equivalent as to both parties."

Are you not afraid that with the proposed act, according to what you have stated, dumping will be encouraged in Canada?

Mr. Labarge: No. We do not intend to encourage it. However, there will be dumping where there is no injury to the Canadian economy. But then, where there is no injury, is it logical to apply the act?

Mr. Émard: Thank you, sir.

[English]

The Vice-Chairman: I have the names of Mr. Burton, Mr. Harkness and Mr. Lambert.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Grey: I have a supplementary question. Is it also not true that amendments were requested in the Act regarding Canadian producers who have less than 10 per cent of the present market?

Mr. Labarge: Definitely. It is another very important question. Some producers had no protection at all because they were not producing at least 10 per cent of the domestic demand in Canada. Now though, if competition should prove too stiff for them, the Anti-Dumping Act will be able to protect them.

[English]

Mr. Burton: Mr. Labarge, some of the provisions of the proposed legislation will give you a period of 90 days in which to make a preliminary determination of the facts and then a further 90 days for the proposed Tribunal to make a final determination?

• 1240

Mr. Labarge: Yes, it is the same.

Mr. Burton: Do you anticipate in the actual operation of the legislation that it will take you close to the ninety-day period in many cases to fulfill your responsibilities under the proposed clauses?

Mr. Labarge: The ninety-day period starts from what is known as the preliminary determination. Now, that determination is not made without some examination. In other words, we will consider the complaint which has to be on two points and we will proceed to gather as quickly as we can whatever facts we can get. When there is a certainty in our mind that this investigation is likely to produce an injurious dumping situation we then will put out the preliminary determination. By that time we should be gaining speed because we have some work done on it. After that we have 90 days in which to get on with the job in the interests of the domestic producers and also so that the retroactive assessment is not so colossal that we will have difficulty in recovering the moneys that are due to us in the dump situation.

Mr. Burton: Of course, it is perfectly understandable that you will require time in order to make your preliminary determination. But I am trying to determine if you can anticipate, as far as you can do so, what your practice will be. Will it take you the 90 days in order to make your preliminary determination? Will it subsequently take the Tribunal close to the 90 days that is granted to it to make the final determination?

Mr. Labarge: This is hard to judge, but I would think that we would feel—we will have to feel—that we have to do it within the 90 days. There maybe cases where we will wish we had an extra 20 days and so forth, but once you get the kind of thinking that in certain cases you could extend it, I think you lose the tightness and compactness of this. Ninety days should, in general, be adequate, particularly where we have a preliminary investigation.

Mr. Burton: I appreciate what you have suggested, Mr. Labarge, and my questions were not asked with any thought of extending the time period, I can assure you.

Mr. Labarge: Do not shorten it.

Mr. Burton: I am concerned about one area. Is it possible for companies or concerns who may be involved in the investigation that you are conducting or that the Tribunal may be conducting, in effect, to drag their feet in order to lengthen the period of time that it will take you to make your decision to, as near as possible, the 90 days provided?

Mr. Labarge: They do this at their own peril, as it were, because we have provisions under which they will have to operate. We have not spelled it out here, but there is a determination made possible by the Minister within that period and it is not likely to be less than what is anticipated in the final result. In some cases we simply apply 25 per cent or whatever percentage we want on the importation and tell them that this is what they are going to have to pay. This gets them into action pretty quickly.

• 1245

Mr. Burton: I see. Part of my concern was making sure I understood the full implications of the proposed legislation and that it did provide the final determination or order of the Tribunal would be retroactive for a period of 180 days in certain cases. I am sorry I do not have the proposed Bill before me this morning. If, in fact, the preliminary determination of the facts is made in good time before the ninety-day period and also the Tribunal does not require its full 90 days, then, of course, there is a good possibility that the one-dump case that was referred to earlier by Mr. Lambert could be avoided because the 180 days conceivably could take in the time period in which the one dump was made. However, if the full 90 days is used in each case, then, of course, the preliminary investigation would not be started until after the actual dump had been made. I wondered if there was some cause or need to extend the 180-day retroactivity time period to ensure that the one dump made prior to the commencement of the initial investigation could be covered.

Mr. Labarge: Personally, I do not think it is necessary. Our objective is to make these investigations and complete the case, as we hope the Tribunal will, as soon as possible because the earlier you catch it the earlier the situation is remedied. If there are massive importations or a series that cumulatively amount to a massive importation, it is far better to catch that as part of the investigation at the early stages and make a quick decision because we do not want another massive one to come in.

Mr. Burton: I certainly appreciate what you suggest that this will not be the practice in many cases, but I still wonder if there is not a possibility of a loophole existing here.

Mr. Labarge: I have been reminded that we start collecting dumping duty when we make the preliminary determination after, what I call, the preliminary investigation during that period of 90 days.

Mr. Burton: Yes, I understand that. It was prior to the commencement of your investigation that I was concerned with.

I just have two further questions, Mr. Chairman.

I was interested in finding out how you treat volume discounts in determining value, volume discounts that may be paid considerably after the original transaction has been made and, in fact, which may be determined only after the original transaction has been made.

Mr. Labarge: Mr. MacDermid, will you answer that question.

Mr. MacDermid: Mr. Chairman, paragraph 5 of the proposed Regulations deals with deferred rebates. A deferred volume rebate would fall within that paragraph. There are three conditions under which deferred volume rebates would be allowed.

First, that the discount was shown on the invoice at the time of the importation of the goods. In other words, there was some notation made on the invoice that the invoice price was subject to a deferred or volume rebate, but which was not known at the time.

Secondly, that the discounts was not greater in percentage and not more favourable in terms than those granted generally by the exporter on sales of goods used in determining the normal value of the goods. In other words, the discount that was being claimed was not in excess of that which was allowed to customers in the home market for similar quantities. Again, we are talking about a volume deferred rebate.

Thirdly, that the importer had provided the Deputy Ministers with an undertaking that he will comply with the terms and conditions relating thereto. In other words, he can get it, but we will expect him to earn it. If he does not earn it there will be a recalculation.

Mr. Hales: May I ask a supplementary? The word "invoices" was mentioned. Will they be made available to the one who will be laying the charges that there is dumping or will these invoices be held as confidential information that will not be available?

• 1250

Mr. Labarge: It will be confidential.

Mr. Burton: With respect to compensatory arrangements, I am interested in the determination of these and, in particular, in comparing the effect of compensatory arrangements that may be available to the Canadian distributors or sellers of the product and the American sellers of a similar product. Do you have standard criteria or approaches in measuring this particular factor such as the advertising factor that was suggested by Mr. Blair earlier? How do you make such measurements in comparing the impact of such an arrangement as it applies to Canadian sales of a product and the sales of a similar product in the United States, for example? Does your approach use a volume of sales, population in the market area concerned or just how do you approach this matter in determining how to apply this factor?

Mr. MacDermid: I am not sure I understand your question, but I think it deals with the compensatory arrangements that are found on page 54. I want to point out that the only time that this will come into play will be in a case where the Deputy Minister decides that the selling price as shown on the invoice is not reliable. If the Deputy Minister decides that the selling price is reliable, that there is no reason for him to question it, then in determining the margin of dumping he will look at two factors. One, the normal value and, secondly, the export price. He will not question the selling price. However, if he decides that there is reason for him to question the selling price, then the question of compensatory arrangements will come into play. We have no guidelines on what compensatory arrangements are. I suppose if we did publish any this would be a good way for people not to adopt those, but to look for others, or they might just adopt that one just to see if they could get away with it. I do not know whether I have answered your question or not.

Mr. Burton: Possibly I could illustrate my question. Suppose a product was manufactured in the United States, sold in the United States, but some other product is sold in Canada. Say, $10,000 worth of advertising is provided by the company in the United States for advertising in Canada. At the same time there is $100,000 spent on advertising in the United States. Possibly the sales of this product in Canada amount to only 10,000 units whereas the sales in the United States may be 200,000 units. How do you relate these factors?

Mr. MacDermid: This is a matter of judgment, Mr. Chairman. I suppose one has to come to a decision whether an expenditure of $10,000 for this volume is in the same proportion to what he spends for a much larger volume in the home market. I think this is the type of situation which one might consider as falling within compensatory arrangements, but only if you came to the conclusion that the amount being expended in Canada for advertising was in excess of that which was being used in the home market. In other words, whether an unusual amount of money was being devoted to advertising in Canada. I think in that case one would certainly believe that this was a compensatory arrangement.

Mr. Burton: Do I understand then that you, in effect, have discretionary powers for determination?

• 1255

Mr. MacDermid: Yes, but what actually happens is that if the Deputy Minister decides that this is a situation where the selling price is unreliable because of this compensatory arrangement, then we are told in clause 10(c) how to establish the export price. In short, we are told to establish it by going to the price in Canada—to the first independent customer and then backing out costs incurred in getting the product into Canada. We would compare that price or that amount with the normal value and if we found that the built-up selling price was below the normal value, dumping duty would apply. We do not have to make a calculation as to whether this is a compensatory arrangement or the amount of it. If we suspect that it is reliable because of this amount, then we take another route to establish what the selling price should be.

Mr. Labarge: I think this may be a little hazy on the edges because we tend to think of payment for something that somebody does who works for us as being compensation. We have compensatory arrangements for which there is no compensatory effort, if you like. And then we have compensatory arrangements whereby in a situation where on the domestic market the man has a different level of trade—he sells to a different level of trade—than that on which he is selling to Canada and there is a factor in there where because of the larger quantity he buys there has to be some extra compensation by a larger discount than what he gives. So these two must not really be mixed up, but I think they are somewhat under the same word in the common sense of the word.

The Vice-Chairman: Gentlemen, we have only one or two minutes left. Mr. Harkness will be the next one to ask questions. Would you like to ask your question or make your comment now, Mr. Harkness or would you like to wait until this afternoon's meeting?

Mr. Harkness: I was hoping that maybe we could complete our business this morning.

The Vice-Chairman: I am not sure that we can. There are several others who have indicated they want to ask questions, Mr. Lambert, Mr. Roberts, Mr. Flemming and Mr. Gray.

Mr. Gray: I will be happy to defer.

Mr. Flemming: Mine is only a supplementary question to Mr. Burton's question. I will only take half a minute when my turn comes around.

The Vice-Chairman: Let us try and complete it, then, if that is your wish.

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Flemming brought up the case of potatoes. I am concerned about the entire fruit and vegetable industry. These are all perishable commodities, most of them really much more so than potatoes. Some of them are commodities which can be only kept for a few days and they are also commodities in which, due to climatical conditions, there are frequently surpluses of a particular fruit and vegetable. In that case a dump can be made in Canada and because of the perishable nature of the commodity, time is the essential element. Any idea in this case of 90 days is completely hopeless. It will give no protection to the fruit and vegetable producers at all because if the product has been dumped into Canada, the market will be destroyed and the producer will be left in a hopeless condition and really has had no protection. Now, in the case of this industry, are there any means by which you will be able to prevent a dump very quickly?

Mr. Labarge: We certainly will not have to wait for the 90 days, but we must determine whether or not this really was dumping in the true sense of the word. It just may be that their market was low and, therefore, this would call for another kind of action, as with the corn, which would be a fixed value. This will most likely be the channel for the kind of situation you have described.

Mr. Harkness: This kind of situation happens more frequently than actual dumping, but say it was a case of actual dumping. How rapidly will you be able to act? I am getting at this from the practical point of view of what protection, say, the peach grower will be able to secure in the event of a surplus or a big crop of peaches in the United States and thus a low price, or the producer there is willing to sell part of their product at a very low price in Canada in order to maintain their own price.

Mr. Labarge: Mr. Chairman, the intelligence system of these various industries is usually pretty good. They can foresee things that are in the wind, so to speak. I think if they alert us to the likelihood that there will be a surplus coming into Canada at dump prices, we hope to have our people ready to begin the operation and I would expect, this being the type of commodity that comes very largely from the United States, that we would be able to conclude an investigation in a very short period of time. If the first importation happens to get through before the preliminary determination of dumping, if it is a massive importation, or if it is a series of importations that in total represents a massive volume, we then can go back ninety days and probably pick up that importation or those importations.

• 1300

Mr. Harkness: My personal experience of this, when I was Minister of Agriculture, was that every year there were loud screams from the fruit producers, the strawberry producers of British Columbia especially, and it was always a pretty slow business getting action taken under what will now be clause 37 on page 96, which used to be value for duty. In other words it was not until a considerable amount of the fruit had actually come in that we in the Department of Agriculture ever succeeded in getting you people to put on a value for duty.

Mr. Labarge: On the other hand I think somewhere I heard the other day that we acted very quickly in all respects. Mr. Harkness, I can understand the feelings of the Department of Agriculture because we were part of their wailing wall in those days of difficulties. The problem here is that we get into a situation where it is not the application simply of a dump, it is more likely to be a condition where the price is down. I think that is more generally the situation. When you impose an arbitrary price it involves a great deal of search as to what it is going to bring about by way of retaliation, grievance, and compensation by the producers through the government of their country.

One does not precipitate oneself into a situation where afterwards one will be put to the wall and shot. There has got to be an ongoing exchange. I think we still do have those seasonal tariffs which apply but that still does not answer the problem you are talking about.

Mr. Harkness: No.

Mr. Labarge: But it does relieve a situation which could be worse in the course of this.

I think the statement Mr. Hind made about the alertness of the producers as far as complaints are concerned is true. I think they are faster than any other industry I know of because they are knowledgeable about what is happening on the other side of the border or on the other markets. They can see this very quickly and their associations are well organized for that. It is just a question then of whether we are applying a dump or whether we are applying a fixed value. If it is a fixed value there has to be some real thought given to the consequences of that value, whether it is a reasonable value, whether it is an exaggerated value, and then what are the effects of it going to be internationally on the imposition.

The Vice-Chairman: I wonder if I might interrupt here to ask Mr. Harkness if the is anxious to pursue this particular line of questioning and, if so, then I think we will have to adjourn and perhaps come back later.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I want to cut off this afternoon's meeting. That is far more important than continuing ten or fifteen minutes now.

Mr. Harkness: No, I do not want to continue dealing with fruits and vegetables any longer, as a matter of fact. However, I want to make the point that it is essential to use speed in applying whatever procedures you have at your command in order to prevent both dumping and selling of end-of-season fruits and vegetables at low prices in Canada.

• 1305

I have one other question I would like to ask in connection with oil. We have had some instances where cargoes of what was generally referred to as "dump oil" or "oil without a home" has been brought into Canada and sold at a very low price. This, of course, always tends to disrupt the market and cause considerable difficulties. Under the new provisions is there going to be any better way of dealing with this than has been the case in the past?

Mr. Labarge: We are talking about petroleum oil, are we?

Mr. Harkness: Yes, I mean crude oil or oil products in some cases. It has been mostly crude oil.

Mr. Labarge: This is one commodity where it had not occurred to us to look into the consequences, but our opinion as of the moment is that the law will be substantially what it was before, and our ability to react will be accordingly the same.

Mr. Harkness: I had hoped it might be improved.

The Vice-Chairman: Mr. Harkness have you any other questions?

Mr. Harkness: I just had one other question. Do you anticipate this Tribunal is going to have very much to do, or what is your opinion of how active it is likely to be?

Mr. Labarge: Since injury is one of the main conditions, it is going to have just about as much as we are going to have on establishing whether there is dumping because the two of them go together. Expect that we may have to look at the matter in a preliminary way, and if we do not see evidence of any dumping, we at that point can cease, and that saves them going into injury.

As to the volume, Mr. Harkness, I cannot really estimate it. I think all I can say is that we are going to be busier. Whether it will be the amount of work we will have to do as compared to what we did before is hard to judge because we will have greater punch or authority in carrying out these investigations so we expect to get the information more quickly. However, we are going to have to explore different forms of information than we have in the past, to arrive at the normal value, for instance. We, in our organization, have people in place to handle what we think is likely to be the situation, and it would amount to about, I would say, 20 per cent to 30 per cent more work in the beginning. However, we feel this may or may not be sufficient so we have a reserve strength to add to it. I think we will be quite busy in the beginning.

Mr. Harkness: Would the implication from this be that there is likely to be more dumping or more attempts at dumping than has been the case in the past?

Mr. Labarge: I think so because it is no longer automatic and the test is injury. People will say: I will find out whether I am going to get in there without committing injury and what it will cost me to do so.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): My question is in a related field. I am a little concerned about the elaborate machinery being set up that may not be necessary. The Department of National Revenue has been able to deal with any dumping in the past, with no Tribunal, with no Advisory Panel and all the paraphernalia that will entail. Do we have to have a Tribunal and an Advisory Panel merely to determine the quantum of injury or the question of injury?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, may I raise a point of order? I wonder if we are not asking Mr. Labarge to comment on a policy matter which it may not be proper for him to be expected to deal with.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): There may be an area of policy there, but I will recast the question. Mr. Labarge certainly is in a position to comment, as he is going to be a member of the Advisory Panel in his position as Deputy Minister, on what he envisages as the purpose of the Advisory Panel.

• 1310

Mr. Labarge: To establish injury where there is a complaint of injury by investigation; to establish whether there is or there is not. Second, to provide an investigatory force by using other departments, and perhaps some of their own people, to ascertain facts which the complainant in Canada is unable to do or is not equipped to do in time to have the application of the dump effective.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): In other words, the Advisory Panel has the personnel who will do the leg work for the Tribunal?

Mr. Labarge: I am sorry. Yes, these people altogether represent working forces. We will, for instance, be making our input into this in terms of what knowledge we have of the injury.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Any matter being handled by the Tribunal must be referred to the Advisory Panel.

Mr. Labarge: Yes. I may not have been precise in that last answer. May I review the question with my advisors?

I am not too far off, the Tribunal does have staff. The others make their input with whatever information they have within their own departments.

Mr. Flemming: My supplementary to Mr. Burton's question is also related to Mr. Harkness' questioning about the discretionary power of the Deputy Minister. If he is satisfied a case exists to suspect dumping he applies the remedial duty that he considers justified even before the Tribunal has made a decision?

Mr. Labarge: That is right.

Mr. Flemming: That is correct, is it? That was my question, thank you.

Mr. Labarge: Those are the provisional duties, of course.

The Vice-Chairman: Do you have one last question, Mr. Gray?

Mr. Gray: I will make it a very quick question. The significance of the sections of the act with respect to provisional duty are not simply with respect to giving notice, duty is actually collected from the moment the preliminary determination is made by yourself?

Mr. Labarge: Right.

Mr. Gray: This goes on until the final determination of injury by the Tribunal?

Mr. Labarge: That is right.

Mr. Gray: Second, in response to a question by Mr. Lambert, I believe, who asked you about the effect of this law on attempts and dumping and so—perhaps I did not understand you correctly—I thought I heard you say there would be more dumping or more attempts at dumping. When you referred to dumping I presume you did not mean there would be more dumping of an injurious nature?

Mr. Labarge: No. Really we would say there would be people shipping into Canada at lower prices in circumstances which they feel will not be injurious. They may overstep this point. In any case it could result in somebody being surprised at seeing these goods and making a complaint. We are not talking about whether we expect more dumping in this situation, but we are talking about the workload we will have in dealing with complaints which would result from these people who are coming into the market trying to find out at what level the price is going to be injurious.

Mr. Gray: You may have more complaints from Canadians who up until now did not have 10 per cent of the market?

Mr. Labarge: You are quite right, this is it.

Mr. Gray: With respect to dumping in the sense of sales in Canada at prices lower than in the country of origin, which actually causes injury or is likely to cause injury, you are not suggesting there will be more of that type of action?

Mr. Labarge: I do not think I would hazard a guess on that one.

Mr. Gray: The aim of the Bill is to prevent dumping which is injurious?

Mr. Labarge: Right.

Mr. Gray: Finally, with respect to the Panel, am I correct in suggesting that while the Tribunal must seek the advice of the Panel it does not necessarily have to wait until the Panel gives it all the information the Panel may want to? The Tribunal is obliged by law simply to seek the advice of the Panel but, as far as making its decision is concerned, it must act within ninety days no matter what the input of the Panel may be?

• 1315

Mr. Labarge: You are quite right.

The Vice-Chairman: Thank you, gentlemen. Thank you Mr. Labarge and your officials for meeting with us today. I understand it is the feeling of the Committee that they would like to adjourn without meeting again this afternoon.

Mr. Gray: I think, Mr. Chairman, thanks to the co-operation of our colleagues that we have completed our agenda for today. Perhaps we should adjourn to the call of the Chair when we are next ready to proceed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS
First Session—Twenty-eighth Parliament
1968

STANDING COMMITTEE
ON

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. GASTON CLERMONT

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

No. 8

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1968

Respecting

Revised Estimates, 1968-69, Department of Insurance

Including:

- Appendix E: Estimates of Canadian Arsenals Limited
- Appendix F: Estimates of Canadian Commercial Corporation
- Appendix G: Estimates of Defence Construction (1951) Limited
- Appendix H: Estimates of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics
- Appendix I: Estimates of the Economic Council of Canada
- Appendix J: Estimates of the Department of Insurance
- Appendix K: Estimates of the Department of National Revenue
- Appendix L: Estimates of the Tax Appeal Board
- Appendix M: Estimates of the Department of Trade and Commerce
- Appendix N: Answer to question asked at meeting this day.

WITNESSES:

From the Department of Insurance: Messrs. R. Humphrys, Superintendent; E. E. Clarke, Assistant Superintendent; J. P. Taylor, Administrative Officer.

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
QUEEN'S PRINTER AND CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY
OTTAWA, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON
FINANCE, TRADE, AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. Alastair Gillespie

and Messrs.

Blair,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
Downey,
Émard,

Flemming,
Gauthier,
Givens,
Gleave,
Gray,
Hales,

Harkness,
Lambert (Edmonton
West),
Latulippe,
Perrault,
Roberts,
Trudel—(20).

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

ORDER OF REFERENCE

HOUSE OF COMMONS

WEDNESDAY, October 16, 1968.

Ordered,—That, saving always the powers of the Committee of Supply in relation to the voting of public moneys, the items listed in the Revised Main Estimates for 1968-69, relating to Canadian Arsenals Limited, Canadian Commercial Corporation, Customs and Excise, Defence Construction (1951) Limited, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the Economic Council of Canada, Insurance, the Tax Appeal Board, Taxation and Trade and Commerce, be withdrawn from the Committee of Supply and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

ATTEST:

ALISTAIR FRASER,

The Clerk of the House of Commons.

(Text)

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

TUESDAY, November 12, 1968
(10)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 3.55 p.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Blair, Clermont, Downey, Énard, Gauthier, Givens, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton West), Roberts, Saltsman, Trudel—(13).

Also present: Mr. Ritchie.

In attendance: From the Department of Insurance: Messrs. R. Humphrys, Superintendent; E. E. Clarke, Assistant Superintendent; J. P. Taylor, Administrative Officer.

The Committee proceeded to consideration of the Revised Main Estimates, 1968-69, of the Department of Insurance.

The Chairman called Item 55: Supervision of Companies and Actuarial Services .....$ 1,467,300.

The witnesses were called and Mr. Humphrys made a statement on the operations and responsibilities of his Department.

Messrs. Humphrys, Clark and Taylor were questioned. It was agreed that a written answer would be provided later to a question concerning surgical-medical insurance premiums and included as an appendix. (See Appendix N)

On motion of Mr. Gray, seconded by Mr. Trudel,

Resolved,—That the items listed in the Revised Main Estimates for 1968-69 relating to Canadian Arsenals Limited, Canadian Commercial Corporation, Customs and Excise, Defence Construction (1951) Limited, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, the Economic Council of Canada, Insurance, the Tax Appeal Board, Taxation and Trade and Commerce, be printed as appendices in this day's issue of the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence. (See Appendices E to M.)

Item 55 was carried.

Ordered,—That the Chairman report the Estimates of the Department of Insurance to the House.

On behalf of the Committee, the Chairman thanked the witnesses who then retired.

At 5.00 p.m. the Committee adjourned until Thursday, November 14, 1968 at 11.00 a.m. at which time study of the White Paper on Anti-Dumping will be resumed.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Tuesday, November 12, 1968.

● 1553

The Chairman: Gentlemen, I will call the meeting to order.

As you were previously informed, today we will be considering the Revised Main Estimates of the Department of Insurance, 1968-69. Our witness today is Mr. R. Humphrys, Superintendent, Department of Insurance. I will ask Mr. Humphrys to come to the head table and to introduce the other witnesses who have accompanied him.

Mr. R. Humphrys (Superintendent, Department of Insurance): Mr. Chairman and hon. members, I have with me Mr. E. E. Clarke, Assistant Superintendent, Department of Insurance and Mr. J. P. Taylor, Administrative Officer, Department of Insurance.

The Chairman: I understand Mr. Humphrys has a statement he would like to make before the Committee.

Mr. Humphrys: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The Department of Insurance was established by the Department of Insurance Act, Chapter 70 of the Revised Statutes of Canada. Pursuant to this Act, the responsible Minister is the Minister of Finance and the deputy head of the Department is the Superintendent of Insurance. The office of the Superintendent of Insurance was first established by the Insurance Act of 1875 and at that time his office was attached to the Department of Finance. In the Insurance Act of 1910, which followed an extensive study of insurance matters in Canada by a Royal Commission that reported in 1906, it was provided that "the branch of the civil service by which the provisions of this Act are administered shall be known as the Department of Insurance." In 1924, an amendment to the Insurance Act provided more definitely that there would be a department of the Government of Canada to be known as the Department of Insurance. In the amendments of 1932 the constitution of the Department was dealt with by a separate Act which has remained unchanged since.

● 1555

The Department of Insurance Act in 1932 provided that the Department would be responsible for the administration of the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act, the Civil Service Insurance Act, the Foreign Insurance Companies Act, the Loan Companies Act and the Trust Companies Act. Since that time, further duties have been added to the Department, mainly the administration of the Small Loans Act, the Co-operative Credit Associations Act, the Pension Benefits Standards Act and certain aspects of the Excise Tax Act relating to taxation of insurance premiums.

In addition to the administration of specific Acts, the Department through its Actuarial Branch provides actuarial advice to other departments of the government and performs extensive actuarial services in the valuation of government insurance and pension programs. Major items under this head include the Canada Pension Plan, the Unemployment Insurance Act, the Public Service Superannuation Act and matters relating to federal involvement in crop insurance plans. The Department also has obligations in connection with pension plans registered under the Income Tax Act.

Mr. Harkness: Would you please repeat that statement.

Mr. Humphrys: How far back, Mr. Harkness?

Mr. Harkness: Just the last sentence.

Mr. Humphrys:

The Department also has obligations in connection with pension plans registered under the Income Tax Act.

Many other instances arise where the Department's services and advice are required by other departments in connection with matters that require actuarial and technical study and advice or that concern companies that are under the supervision of the Department.

At the end of 1967, there were 397 insurance companies registered with the Department and 48 fraternal benefit societies. Included in these figures were 127 Canadian companies, 74 British companies and 196 foreign companies. Of the fraternal benefit societies, 14 are Canadian and 34 are from the United States.

The premium income in Canada in 1967 of fire and casualty companies amounted to $1.5 billion and for life insurance companies to $1.3 billion. Assets of Canadian life insurance companies at the end of 1967 amounted to $13.4 billion and assets in Canada of British and foreign life insurance companies doing business in Canada amounted to about $3 billion.

There are 13 mortgage loan companies licensed under the Loan Companies Act and nine trust companies licensed under the Trust Companies Act. In addition to supervising loan and trust companies that are federally incorporated, the Department supervises certain provincially incorporated loan and trust companies by agreement with some of the provinces. The provinces concerned in such agreements are Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Manitoba. Pursuant to these agreements, the Department supervises one provincially incorporated loan company and nine trust companies.

The total assets of loan companies supervised by the Department amounted to $597 million at the end of 1967 and the assets of trust companies similarly supervised amounted to $1.4 billion apart from the estate, trusts and agency funds amounting to $3.5 billion.

As respects the Small Loans Act, there are 81 companies licensed involving a total of 2,144 offices and loan balances outstanding amounting to $52.3 million. There are five organizations supervised under the Co-operative Credit Associations Act and some 400 pension plans under the Pension Benefits Standards Act.

All of the expenses incurred by the Department in supervising financial institutions are recovered by annual assessments against these institutions. Such assessments cover not only the direct costs incurred by the Department as reflected in its estimates, but also the indirect costs in respect of services provided for the Department by other branches of the Government, as for example, office accommodation, financial services and mailing costs. The result is that about 80% of the total expenses of the Department are recovered by specific assessments against companies supervised. The remaining expenses of the Department are practically all accounted for by services provided by the Department to other departments in respect of actuarial matters, particularly the actuarial valuation of government pension and insurance programs. These costs are reflected in the Department's estimates and it has not been the practice to bill other departments for the services so rendered.

The staff of the Department is relatively small considering the extent and scope of the work falling upon it. The nature of the work requires a staff that is highly skilled technically. The Department does not have large volume of material to process on a clerical basis and as a consequence the proportion of professional and technical staff is relatively high. The Department faces a continuing problem in acquiring and retaining suitably qualified technical staff, both in the actuarial line and in the accounting line.

• 1600

The Department has a staff of examiners that perform the examination of the financial condition and affairs of companies under its supervision. The main force of examiners is stationed in Toronto where the head offices of companies are concentrated. An office with several examiners is situated in Montreal and one man is stationed in Halifax, one in Winnipeg and one in Vancouver. Examiners from the offices in Montreal and Toronto make one or more trips a year to the Maritimes and to the West to perform annual examinations of companies located in those regions.

The actuarial staff of the Department is concentrated in Ottawa. This staff performs the actuarial services for other departments and also the actuarial services required in connection with the Department's supervisory activities.

With the growing complexity of financial organizations in Canada and the increasing volume of business, it appears likely that the responsibilities of the Department will tend to increase if adequate supervision is to be exercised. In addition, some provinces are proposing to the Department that it take on supervision of provincial institutions. Since the establishment of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation examiners on the staff of the Department have carried out examination work as required by that Corporation. The examiners of the Department work in co-operation with provincial supervisors where matters relating to provincially incorporated companies are concerned.

The general organization of the Department has not changed for many years. With the growth in the extent, variety and complexity of the work it is becoming increasingly evident that the organizational structure will have to be revised. At present, an organizational study is being carried on by the Organization Analysis Division of the Bureau of Management Consulting Services attached to the Public Service Commission.

While the work of the Department can be said in one sense to consist primarily of the administration of certain statutes as already cited, it is not, of course, confined merely to seeing to it that the requirements of the legislation are being complied with. The main purpose of the existence of the Department and its main responsibility is to exercise the authority conferred upon it by the relevant statutes for the purpose of ascertaining the financial condition of the companies concerned and ensuring, so far as is possible, that each such company maintains itself in a position where it is able to discharge its obligations to the public. This work requires a broad knowledge on the part of the staff of the operation of the various types of financial institutions supervised, ability to understand quickly the financial implications of activities and programs and of changes in circumstances, and the ability to work with companies that may be in financial difficulties to enable them to recover or to transfer their liabilities to stronger companies. For supervision to be effective, the staff must be highly skilled and well-informed.

The Chairman: Thank you, Mr. Humphrys. Are there any questions?

Mr. Harkness: I would like to ask a question about the pension plans that are registered under the Income Tax Act over which you exercise supervision. I understand the regulations were recently changed as far as these pension plans are concerned and a considerable number of them which had made application as far back as two years ago have not yet been approved. Apparently it is fairly common for it to take this length of time for them to be approved, but, nevertheless, they usually go ahead and put them into operation. Under the new regulations, of course, a lot of these plans would not be eligible for registration. What is going to be the situation of the plans for which applications were made and for which approval has not yet been given?

Mr. Humphrys: Mr. Chairman, the responsibilities of the Department of Insurance in that connection are to provide actuarial advice to the Department of National Revenue in connection with the past service liabilities of pension plans that apply for registration. The policy as respects the rules and regulations is the policy of the Department of National Revenue and I think the answer to your question would have to come from them since we merely serve them on the basis of the plans that are sent to us.

The references to the Superintendent of the Department of Insurance in the Income Tax Act require actuarial advice in connection with past service liabilities, but do not require the Superintendent of Insurance to exercise continuing supervision or to determine policy concerning the registration of the plans.

Mr. Harkness: So you would have no information on this particular point?

Mr. Humphrys: No, I would not be able to answer that question, Mr. Harkness.

• 1605

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Humphrys, you mentioned that you render many other services to other departments. Why is there not a cost portrayal of the operations of your Department listed in the estimates? I admit you do show revenue which is primarily the 80 per cent of your services which are supported by the companies that are supervised, but what about the Department of National Revenue from both the income tax side and the Canada Pension Plan side? Do you bill them for your services as does the Post Office Department, for instance, in order to arrive at the true cost of your Department and the true cost to the other department? May I say, also, I believe the Department of Public Works does charge for the services it renders to other government departments in some way on a "hit or miss" basis.

Mr. Humphrys: I will answer the last part of your question, first, Mr. Lambert. The services that other departments render for the Department of Insurance are notified to us and we take those into account in the assessment of our expenses that we make against the companies we supervise. However, we do not include in our estimates an item to reimburse the Department of Public Works for office accommodation. They include this expense in their estimates; they notify us of the amount; we collect it and it goes back into the Consolidated Revenue Fund, but it does not appear in our estimates.

You will note on this document that is before you, that there is a reference to the approximate value of major services provided for the Department which are not included in our estimates. That is, services provided by other departments to us. When we provide services for other departments—I would like Mr. Clarke to verify this point—I believe we notify the Canada Pension Plan of the expenses that our Department has incurred in connection with the actuarial services that we have rendered. Perhaps Mr. Clarke could clarify that point.

Mr. E. E. Clarke (Assistant Superintendent, Department of Insurance): The main cost of the Department of Insurance as respects the Canada Pension Plan is in connection with the valuation of the Canada Pension Plan, the estimates that will be made and the reports that will be made to Parliament. This will come at a frequency of every five years and will cover about a two-year period. For those two years the cost involved by the Department of Insurance will be very considerable and will be charged against the Canada Pension Plan.

In the intervening three years the cost will be very nominal. The services that we have provided up to the present time and that we expect to provide in that three-year period will be very nominal and we have not considered it worthwhile to charge it to the Canada Pension Plan.

In the two-year period dealing with the valuation, we do intend to make a close estimate of the cost and to bill the Canada Pension Plan for that cost.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I will move on to another section of your statement and your estimates. Under the section headed "Administrative and Foreign Service" I notice you have listed 25. Where do you fit in on the Foreign Service?

Mr. Humphrys: That is a general classification that is used in the estimates. We have no officers who would fall under the heading of Foreign Service. We only have administrative officers in that group.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Humphrys, under the new designation of senior executives 1 to 4, how many of these do you have in your Department?

Mr. Humphrys: We have four.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): What categories are they?

Mr. Humphrys: I am sorry, we have five. Two of them are Senior Officer 3 and three of them are Senior Officer 1.

• 1610

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I see. In order to achieve the position of senior executive was the incumbent promoted from the lower rank?

Mr. Humphrys: Yes.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): From what rank did they come—Senior Officers 3?

Mr. Humphrys: They are Senior Officers 3 at present. They came up from Senior Officers 2.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I see. I do not see any reference in these estimates to the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, but in your statement you mentioned something about it. What do you estimate is the proportion of your Department's activities now dedicated to the CDIC? Is it 10 per cent or 20 per cent of your work?

Mr. Humphrys: It would not involve more than 10 per cent and probably less than that. It was quite high last year and the early part of this year because the Corporation was becoming organized and we did quite a lot of examination work for the department in connection with initial applications by provincial companies to become insured. But on a continuing basis the supervisors of the provinces concerned will exercise the immediate supervision and the amount of work that we will have to do will tend to decrease compared with the initial year.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Does your Department staff CDIC in the main or do these people come from the Department of Finance?

Mr. Humphrys: CDIC has its own staff, but at this time it consists only of three people and the Chairman. The examination work is done by our examiners for the CDIC.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): You estimate that this is about the level of the requirements on your Department's workload for CDIC—about 10 per cent?

Mr. Humphrys: I would think that would be a fair estimate. It is hard to judge at this stage, but on a continuing basis, unless there is trouble, we do not expect much more than that.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I have one last area on which I would like to ask questions, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Humphrys, I believe it was two years ago when you had some rather pithy comments to make on the reliance of the general insurance companies on their income from non-earned premiums in order, shall we say, to balance their books.

In other words, the premiums they were charging for fire and auto insurance were not actuarially sound on the basis of their loss ratio and you felt that the industry as a whole should look to regularizing this position. The premiums should pay for the losses and the companies should not rely on the interest on the non-earned premiums or the prepaid premiums that they held. Has your position changed or are your views still the same?

Mr. Humphrys: Mr. Chairman, at the time I made those remarks in our Annual Report the industry was suffering quite heavy underwriting losses and we were concerned about the future of the industry and its ability to survive and provide for the insurance needs of the public.

• 1615

I felt that the premium structure had to be revised or the expenses of operation had to be cut. It did not seem to be within control of the companies to alter the claims rate, so the only thing they could do was either to cut their expenses or to raise their premiums in order to make ends meet. I felt that if continued heavy losses were to be experienced it would be most difficult to attract new capital into the industry to provide the necessary financial backing for expansion that would have to take place because the property values and the needs—the volume—for insurance are growing.

I felt it would not be a safe position to depend solely on the investment income to make up the difference because if that were done then the persons who had put capital into the company would find that they were contributing the interest on their investment income capital to meet losses and it would quickly appear to the investors that they would be better off to invest their capital elsewhere and take the full amount of interest for themselves rather than having part of it drained off in insurance claims. I was much concerned lest there not be an adequate market to meet the insurance needs of the economy. I was especially concerned because in Canada we depend to such an enormous extent on companies from outside Canada to meet the insurance needs in the fire and casualty field.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): But is there not a counter argument or, at least, a partial argument against that—that those people who prepay their premiums should receive the benefit of the income that is earned on those prepaid premiums by way of, say, reduced premiums or something towards the administrative expenses of the companies?

If, on the other hand, this should be turned over to the shareholders, then those people who have prepaid their premiums get no benefit of the prepayment. We know in the fire insurance field that the policies are normally on a three-year basis and this represents a considerable reserve, shall we say, for the fire insurance companies. Therefore, I do not think I would entirely agree with you, Mr. Humphrys, that the policyholders should not derive some benefit from this.

The other point is, of course, that the Minister of Finance has, presumably, taken care of this because he is going to siphon off that income in any event. I think, if I may say so, this was a retrograde step and that this was not a proper step to take.

Mr. Blair: That was only for life insurance companies.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): No, this was also for the general insurance companies.

Mr. Humphrys: There has not been any change in that respect, Mr. Lambert, as far as the general insurance companies are concerned. Their tax position in that respect has not been changed.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): It is strange then that the Minister of Finance should anticipate that he is going to get an increase of revenues from this additional field of taxation. I am subject to correction, but—

Mr. Humphrys: Not from the point of view of taxing investment income of domestic companies. I stand corrected here, your comment is correct as respects the non-resident companies.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): And they represent a rather heavy proportion in the industry.

Mr. Humphrys: Hitherto the investment income in Canada of such companies has not been subject to tax and as an offset they have never been allowed to take credit for any portion of head office expenses and charge it against the Canadian operation. It is my understanding that the tax rules are to be changed in order to tax the investment income, but they will be granted an allowance for head office expenses.

The Chairman: Mr. Harkness, would you mind not leaving for a few moments. I have a motion which has to be approved by the Committee.

(See Minutes of Proceedings)

[Interpretation]

Mr. Trudel, I think you are next on the list.

• 1620

Mr. Trudel: Mr. Chairman, the question was asked by Mr. Lambert and answered by Mr. Humphrys. Thank you.

[English]

Mr. Roberts: Could you tell me, Mr. Humphrys, how many of the executive, scientific and professional officers in your Department are French-speaking?

Mr. Humphrys: Mr. Clarke and Mr. Taylor will look through their papers and give you the number.

Mr. Roberts: Fine, and perhaps I could also have the number as the ratio of the establishment as a whole.

Mr. Saltsman: I would like to ask Mr. Humphrys if his Department has done any research into the costs of selling insurance. My specific question is what percentage of every dollar collected goes toward administration, overhead and selling costs? Do you have any figures on that?

Mr. Humphrys: Yes, we have figures on that, Mr. Chairman. For Canadian life insurance companies, in 1967, 16 per cent of their income went to pay commissions and general expenses.

Mr. Gray: Are you quoting from a public document?

Mr. Humphrys: Yes, it is our Annual Report. Mr. Chairman, these figures are shown in our Annual Report.

Mr. Roberts: May I have that again, did you say 15 per cent?

Mr. Humphrys: Sixteen per cent for life insurance companies.

Mr. Saltsman: What about casualty, automobile, fire and theft?

Mr. Humphrys: I have not calculated the ratio to total premiums. We do show in our Report the underwriting income earned, which would be the premium income less claims—no, I am sorry, the underwriting income earned would be the total premium income applicable to the year.

Thus, if a policyholder paid a three-year premium, the premium income earned in the year would be a third of that. So the underwriting income earned was distributed as follows: 63 per cent to claims; 13 per cent to commissions; 2.3 per cent to premium taxes; 17.5 per cent to general expense; 1.3 per cent to dividends to policyholders and 3 per cent to underwriting gains. These figures are shown on page 9A of Volume 1 of our Report for 1967.

Mr. Saltsman: I am sorry I did not realize this was available in your Report. Are general expenses equivalent to overhead expenses?

Mr. Humphrys: Yes.

Mr. Saltsman: With 17.5 per cent for general expenses and 13 per cent for commission roughly 30 per cent would cover administration and sales.

• 1625

My reason for asking this question, Mr. Humphrys, is to see if it is possible to evaluate the cost of selling and administering insurance under private competitive agencies as against a government insurance program. I know the comparison cannot be exact. Do you have any idea what the administration and selling costs would be for the Canada Pension Plan?

Mr. Humphrys: Perhaps Mr. Clarke may be able to make a comment on that point. Neither Mr. Clarke nor I can give you that figure, Mr. Saltsman.

Mr. Saltsman: I was wondering whether there is any indication of the percentage of moneys collected under the Canada Pension Plan which will actually go for a pay-out later on?

Mr. Humphrys: I am sorry, Mr. Chairman, I am not able to answer that question.

Mr. Saltsman: A number of years ago I had a chance to take a look at the Ontario Hospital Insurance program and the administration costs seemed remarkably low, I think the figure was something like  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. About 97½ cents of every dollar collected were to cover hospital services. Would it be possible for your Department to get an answer to that question for me? It would be an interesting comparison for Members of Parliament to have.

Mr. Humphrys: Concerning the Canada Pension Plan?

Mr. Saltsman: Yes. In other words what percentage of the moneys collected will be used as pay-out, and how much of the moneys collected will be used for administration and overhead costs?

Mr. Humphrys: Mr. Chairman, we could inquire of the Department of Health and Welfare whether they have those figures.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, is not that an amalgamation of the expenses of the Department of National Revenue to collect the money in the first place, and the expenses of the Department of National Health and Welfare to then administer the payment out? It has nothing to do with you.

Mr. Gray: Perhaps this question might better be asked when the estimates of the minister responsible for the Canada Pension Plan are before the relevant committee. The information may also be available in the Annual Report of the Canada Pension Plan which, I think, under the act has to be tabled in Parliament each year.

Mr. Saltsman: I appreciate the difficulty, Mr. Humphrys; my reason for asking the question at this time was to see if we could make a comparison in this Committee. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: Mr. Émard.

Mr. Émard: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Humphrys, does your Department have any authority over mutual fund companies?

[English]

Mr. Humphrys: No, Mr. Chairman. Mutual funds are not at present supervised by any agency of the federal government or provincial governments, except to the extent that provincial securities legislation applies to mutual funds issuing securities within a province.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Can you tell me the initial salary of an actuary, in your Department?

[English]

Mr. Humphrys: The range of salaries for actuaries?

Mr. J. P. Taylor (Administrative Officer, Department of Insurance): In the executive, scientific and professional category, we have 14 out of 44.

The Chairman: No, it is the salary.

Mr. Taylor: I will have to look that up.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: I am interested in the initial salary, the starting salary.

[English]

Mr. Taylor: It varies, of course, with the number of examinations. It starts around $6200.

• 1630

Mr. Humphrys: We would start a student out of university, with very little in the way of actuarial training or qualifications, at $6200. However, if he had progressed further in his actuarial studies, and had better technical qualifications, we would pay him a higher wage.

The necessary training for an actuary is obtained by studying and passing examinations set by the Society of Actuaries on this continent. There are ten examinations and we would gauge our starting salaries in accordance with the number of examinations the student had passed at the time he applied for a job.

Our starting salaries are gauged very closely to those offered by life insurance companies and consulting actuaries because we compete directly with them for students graduating from university who wish to pursue actuarial studies.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: I do not think they get too high a salary. On the contrary. I see here an increase of $20,200 in contributions to the pension plan. I also see that there are 19 new employees. Does this amount represent the contributions of these 19 employees or have you increased the retirement contributions?

At the beginning of your report, you mentioned "Housing"...

[English]

Mr. Humphrys: These contributions are a proportion of the salaries of all the employees of the Department. If I have understood the question properly, they would increase as the total... The contributions would depend upon the total salaries of all the employees in the Department. Because salaries have been increasing every time there is a general change in the salary level, our total salary bill has increased and the contributions for pensions are proportional to the total salaries.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Did your employees receive salary increases in 1968 during the course of the year?

[English]

Mr. Humphrys: Our employees get the same salary increases that are granted to the Public Service generally, and I understand there has not been a general salary increase this year.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: I see here: "Contributions to the Canada Pension Plan and the Quebec Pension Plan". Does the fact that you contribute to the Quebec Pension Plan give you the right to supervise the Quebec Pension Plan?

[English]

Mr. Humphrys: No, Mr. Chairman, these contributions are in respect of those of our employees who are resident in Quebec. They are contributions by the employees, and we have no jurisdiction or responsibility in connection with the Quebec Pension Plan.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Do you know if a federal government department exists which has jurisdiction over, or rather, which may have a right to control or to examine the Quebec Pension Plan?

• 1635

[English]

Mr. Humphrys: Not to my knowledge, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Downey: Just as a point of interest, Mr. Chairman, would Mr. Humphrys care to make a projection on the changing birth rate pattern and comment on the effect this may have on the Canada Pension Plan?

Mr. Humphrys: I would have to ask Mr. Clarke if he could make any comments in that connection.

Mr. Gray: I wonder if we are not placing Mr. Humphrys and his colleagues in a rather unfair position because I do not think it is amongst their responsibilities to supervise the operations of the Canada Pension Plan. I think one branch of the Department offers technical information in the actuarial field as requested but beyond that—I may be mistaken—I do not think they have any direct contact with the Plan.

Mr. Downey: Mr. Chairman, I was just wondering as a matter of personal interest if Mr. Humphrys would care to make a comment on this.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Humphrys' associate might be able to make a comment on the actuarial projections of trends of birth rates, but in so far as the implications to the Canada Pension Plan are concerned we might want to reserve that question for the people administering the Plan.

The Chairman: Mr. Gray, I think if Mr. Clarke feels he cannot reply to that question he will so indicate.

Mr. Clarke: I may say that the lower the birth rates the higher the cost of the Plan in the future. The effect will not be noticeable for the next 20 or 30 years, but lower birth rates generally result in a greater proportion of contributors at the older ages rather than at the younger ages. The cost will be greater, as the birth rates decrease beyond what we predict.

The Chairman: Have you any other questions, Mr. Downey?

Mr. Downey: Is not the birth rate now actually below what the Plan had anticipated initially?

Mr. Clarke: Yes, I believe it is, but the effect on the cost will not be noticeable for a long time in the future.

Mr. Downey: Very good, thank you.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Humphrys, about two years ago we passed legislation in the House dealing with the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, does it come under your jurisdiction?

Mr. Humphrys: It is not under the jurisdiction of the Department of Insurance, Mr. Chairman. The Superintendent of Insurance is named in the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Act as one of the directors, and our Department does provide certain services to the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation on request. However, the Act is not administered by our Department.

Mr. Hales: As I recall, the provinces that wanted to come under these regulations could do so if they met certain standards in order to be certified. Does your Department investigate the provincial companies that wish to come under this Act?

Mr. Humphrys: Yes, Mr. Chairman, we have carried out investigations on behalf of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation and made reports to the Corporation in connection with such companies.

Mr. Hales: Would it be a fair question to ask if when you were looking into these various companies for certification you were appalled at the safety features that were available in these various companies? Or, would you like to answer that in another way?

Mr. Humphrys: I do not think I could make a general statement to that effect, Mr. Chairman, no.

Mr. Hales: Could you assure the Committee that many of these companies in the provinces are being certified and that they do come up to your specifications?

Mr. Humphrys: Yes, Mr. Chairman, we have insured many provincial trust and loan companies.

• 1640

Mr. Hales: There is nothing to make it compulsory for them to come under this Act?

Mr. Humphrys: No, Mr. Chairman, it is voluntary. Any provincial institution that wishes to become insured must apply. It must obtain the concurrence of its home government and it must be acceptable to the corporation with respect to its financial position.

Mr. Hales: I think the public should know whether a company has been certified or not. Is there any way the average man would know this? Supposing a person were deciding to invest some money in a trust company, is there anything on the trust company's literature to show that they have been certified?

Mr. Humphrys: They are required to post a notice on their entrance doors, and to display a notice on their public counters to the effect that they are members of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. They may, if they wish, include information on their stationery and in their advertising indicating that they are a member. A list of members is given in the Annual Report of the Corporation.

Mr. Hales: Your Department sees that this is done?

Mr. Humphrys: On behalf of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, yes, and on request by the Corporation.

Mr. Hales: I ask these questions because we pick up the newspaper and read, for instance, about the Commonwealth company in British Columbia and its associate companies, and I think it is up to us to see that the public is protected in this regard.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I take it, Mr. Humphrys, that the operations of the CDIC will come in as a Crown corporation report under statutory regulations?

Mr. Humphrys: That is correct, Mr. Chairman, it is regarded as a Crown corporation.

The Chairman: Mr. Humphrys, I am sure any companies that are certified by your Department would be very, very pleased to advertise the fact?

Mr. Humphrys: That has been our experience, Mr. Chairman. They wish to indicate on their literature and in their advertising that they are members.

Mr. Gray: May I ask a supplementary question? Is it not true that certain provinces have made it obligatory for trust and loan companies incorporated under their own laws to apply for certification?

Mr. Humphrys: Yes, Mr. Chairman, that has happened in some provinces.

Mr. Gray: Could you tell us which provinces they are?

Mr. Humphrys: They are Alberta, Manitoba, I think Saskatchewan, and Ontario. I think those are all the provinces where it has become obligatory.

Mr. Gray: You could supplement that later if others occur to you.

Mr. Humphrys: I think those are the only provinces that have required it. Quebec has its own plan of deposit insurance and when that comes into effect it will insure all deposit-taking institutions in the province.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I have a supplementary question. Is it not a fact, because the provinces have entered into, shall we say, stand-by arrangements whereby they insist that all trust companies operating under provincial supervision shall endeavour to obtain certification from the CDIC, that there is an undertaking by the province, in the event of loss arising from the operations of a company which did not really meet the standards of the CDIC, although it had a provisional certificate, that the province would assume a portion of the loss?

Therefore these provinces are interested in minimizing their potential losses and are pressing the companies to come up to the standards of CDIC. My question is: do you feel that in the two years of operation there has been a substantial upgrading in various provinces in the ratios and the various standards you would impose on these trust companies, and that ultimately we will be able to get away from the provisional certificates?

• 1645

Mr. Humphrys: Yes, Mr. Chairman I think there has been a definite improvement in the quality of legislation and in the quality of supervision. Financial strength is improving. It sometimes takes a period of time to change the direction of a company, and to bring it into a strong position. I think there has been very marked progress in the quality and effectiveness of the supervision, and I believe this is leading to stronger institutions and greater protection for the public.

The Chairman: Mr. Hales have you any other questions to direct to Mr. Humphrys?

Mr. Hales: Not on this matter.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Mr. Chairman. Mr. Humphrys, how do you explain the reduction in your contributions to the medical insurance plan? This is a reduction of more than 50 per cent. You indicate here that for 1967-68, you have a contribution of $5,100, and for 1968-69, you have $2,400 only.

[English]

Mr. Humphrys: Mr. Chairman, I will ask Mr. Taylor to reply to that question.

Mr. Taylor: I am sorry I cannot explain. These figures are furnished to us by the Treasury Board, and I do not know the answer offhand.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman may I suggest that Mr. Taylor might inquire and submit the answer to us in written form to be printed in our Proceedings?

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Mr. Gray, I don't understand a thing. Could I have the interpretation, please.

Mr. Gray: I said that perhaps Mr. Taylor could inquire about your question and give the answer—written answer—and have it added to the committee's minutes.

The Chairman: Or else he could send the answer directly to Mr. Émard.

Mr. Gray: Or directly, yes.

Mr. Émard: Well this is only out of curiosity because I understood that your Department is paying a certain percentage of the various contributions to the medical insurance plan and it seemed funny to me that there was a decrease this year. But it is not terribly important.

The Chairman: Are you through, Mr. Émard?

Mr. Émard: Yes.

[English]

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Humphrys we have noticed within the past three or four years, and you may have seen the pattern earlier, the merger of many general and casualty insurance companies, particularly those companies of foreign origin, for instance, the British groups. Former companies that we already thought were giant, in a relative sense, have merged with two or three or more companies.

Do you foresee a continuing trend in that direction amongst United Kingdom companies, presumably most of them come from London, European companies represented in Canada and American companies?

Mr. Humphrys: It is hard to predict how far this movement will go. In the insurance world there are now some very large groups, and it seems to me there is not really much room now to go further in this type of amalgamation and joining forces.

I think there are strong economic pressures in that direction because of the desire to improve efficiency of operation and more importantly to improve and to increase the capacity of an insurance company to cover the very large risks that are now requiring insurance.

• 1650

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): With the advance in technology is there perhaps a risk that British-based and European-based companies that have even now merged may have to carry on their operations under greater mergers to compete with the American companies whose branch operations in Canada form part of the greater operations in the United States and which are now all becoming computerized? Shall I say, from my knowledge of the industry, particularly out on the West Coast, that we are not far away from that. Certainly a number of companies have already moved into it and are suffering certain growing pains at the present time.

However, within at least two or three years we should see them cranking out the policies with as little manual help as possible. These British and European groups will have to conform with that, bearing in mind that they cannot feed the information from Canada over to the United Kingdom or to the Continent and get the same kind of service that you can, say, working with Seattle and other places in the United States.

Mr. Humphrys: There is certainly an advantage, Mr. Chairman, in being able to use a computer that is at much closer range, as is the case where the head office is in the United States instead of in Europe.

However, I think the competitive forces will require the British and European groups to adopt the same techniques, and I think they will do it either by making use of computer services on a consulting basis or by combining into large enough units here to justify the use of computers in their operations. It is certainly going to be, and has already become, a major competitive factor.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Humphrys: Mr. Chairman, in reply to an earlier question about the number of French-speaking persons in our scientific and professional group, we have 44 in total and 14 French-speaking.

Mr. Roberts: Could you tell us how many of those are in Montreal and how many are in Ottawa?

Mr. Humphrys: How many of the French-speaking persons are in Montreal and in Ottawa?

Mr. Roberts: Yes.

Mr. Humphrys: We have seven employees stationed in Montreal and four of them are French-speaking.

Mr. Roberts: So the rest would be here in Ottawa?

Mr. Humphrys: Yes.

Mr. Roberts: Thank you.

Mr. Hales: I have one further question before we carry the item. I notice under the heading "Travelling Expenses" that an increase of $15,000 is shown. I would like to ask Mr. Humphrys or the comptroller what control there is over travelling expenses in your Department? How does one in your Department get a certificate or voucher to travel? What steps are taken to see there is no overlapping, to prevent, for instance, an inspector of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation and another inspector arriving in the same place at the same time? Just how is travelling expenditures controlled?

Mr. Humphrys: Mr. Chairman, the main part of our travel expense arises from our Examination Branch. The companies we have to examine are known to us; we schedule our work each year, and we designate the companies that will be subject to examination. The head of the Examination Branch plans the work and allocates the teams to go into each company.

Thus we avoid the type of confusion such as you have referred to. The persons who are sent on work away from their home base may apply for and obtain an advance to cover their travel expenses, and when they finish the trip they submit the details of the expenses they have incurred. These expenses are reviewed by the branch head and by Mr. Taylor, and they are required to conform with general regulations applicable to travel expenses laid down by the Treasury Board. Does that answer your question, Mr. Hales?

• 1655

Mr. Hales: Yes, thank you.

Mr. Humphrys: The increase in travel expense that was indicated merely follows the work that had to be done. It would result from higher hotel costs, higher meal costs and possibly an increase in travelling because of the necessity of examining a number of provincial companies this last year which we did not have to do the previous year.

Mr. Hales: So any trip that is made must be okayed by the head of the Department?

Mr. Humphrys: Yes, Mr. Chairman, it is all planned in allocating the work of the Department. I would not say the head of the Department, but the head of the appropriate branch.

The Chairman: Mr. Humphrys, I do not think there is any possibility of duplication with the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation because you said they have only four employees?

Mr. Humphrys: Yes, we do all the examination work for the Corporation, so there is no duplication there.

Mr. Gray: I just want to say that to some extent the increase referred to by Mr. Hales would be covered also by increases in the rates charged by airlines or railway companies. I think Air Canada had a fares increase.

Mr. Humphrys: Travel costs have gone up as well as hotel rates.

Mr. Gray: So the same amount of travelling might well cost more.

The Chairman: Shall Item 55 carry?
Item agreed to.

The Chairman: This concludes the study by this Committee of the estimates of the Department of Insurance. Shall I report them to the House?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Thank you very much, gentlemen.

Appendix E

No. of Vote	Service	1968-69	1967-68	Change
				Increase	Decrease
		$	$	$	$
	B—CANADIAN ARSENALS LIMITED
30	Administration and Operation (Details, page 494).....	1	1
35	Construction, Improvements and Equipment (Details, page 494).....	340,200	461,400		121,200
		340,201	461,401		121,200

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—CANADIAN ARSENALS LIMITED
		Vote 30—Administration and Operation..... (12)	1	1
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 1,494,945
		1966-67..... 832,757
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 1
		Vote 35—Construction, Improvements and Equipment
		Construction and Improvements..... (8)		15,000
		Equipment..... (9)	340,200	446,400
			340,200	461,400
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 181,317
		1966-67..... 420,340
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 461,400

Appendix F

No. of Vote	Service	1968-69	1967-68	Change
				Increase	Decrease
		$	$	$	$
40	C—CANADIAN COMMERCIAL CORPORATION Administration and Operation (Details, page 494).....	2,387,000	2,058,000	329,000

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		C—CANADIAN COMMERCIAL CORPORATION Vote 40—Administration and Operation Payment to Department of Defence Production for Administrative Services, and interest on loans..(12)	2,387,000	2,058,000

Appendix G

No. of Vote	Service	1968-69	1967-68	Change
				Increase	Decrease
		$	$	$	$
	B-DEFENCE CONSTRUCTION (1951) LIMITED
55	Expenses incurred by Defence Construction (1951) Limited in procuring the construction and maintenance of defence projects on behalf of the Department of National Defence and procuring the construction of such other projects as are approved by Treasury Board (Details, page 338).....	2,295,000	2,350,000	.....	55,000

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B-DEFENCE CONSTRUCTION (1951) LIMITED
		Vote 55-Expenses incurred by Defence Construction (1951) Limited in procuring the construction and maintenance of defence projects on behalf of the Department of National Defence and procuring the construction of such other projects as are approved by Treasury Board..... (12)	2,295,000	2,350,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 1,963,878
		1966-67..... 2,191,990
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 2,252,000

Appendix H

No. of Vote	Service	1968-69	1967-68	Change
				Increase	Decrease
		$	$	$	$
	C—DOMINION BUREAU OF STATISTICS
40	Administration and Operation including the fee for membership in the Inter-American Statistical Institute and a contribution of $500 to the International Statistical Institute (Details, page 251).....	27,405,000	23,780,900	3,624,100

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		C—DOMINION BUREAU OF STATISTICS
		Approximate Value of Major Services not included in these Estimates
		Accommodation (provided by the Department of Public Works).....	1 740,400	1,661,600
		Accounting and cheque issue services (Comptroller of the Treasury).....	129,800	60,600
		Contributions to Superannuation Account (Treasury Board).....	1,373,400	1,038,800
		Contributions to Canada Pension Plan Account and Quebec Pension Plan Account (Treasury Board)....	232,400	267,800
		Employee surgical-medical insurance premiums (Treas- ury Board).....	47,200	102,700
		Employee compensation payments (Department of Labour).....	4,700	6,700
		Carrying of franked mail (Post Office Department).....	613,000	437,400
			4,140,900	3,625,600
		Vote 40—Administration and Operation including the fee for membership in the Inter-American Statistical Institute and a contribution of $509 to the International Statistical Institute
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
1	1	Dominion Statistician ($26,500)
1	1	Senior Officer 3 ($20,500-$25,750)
3	2	Senior Officer 2 ($18,500-$23,500)
3	1	Senior Officer 1 ($16,500-$21,250)
29	8	($18,000-$21,000)
50	33	($16,000-$18,000)
128	124	($14,000-$16,000)
115	111	($12,000-$14,000)
138	141	($10,000-$12,000)
40	55	($8,000-$10,000)
5	7	($6,000-$8,000)
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
6	4	($16,000-$18,000)
16	9	($14,000-$16,000)
40	39	($12,000-$14,000)
61	19	($10,000-$12,000)
208	92	($8,000-$10,000)
96	14	($6,000-$8,000)
		Administrative Support:
6	7	($8,000-$10,000)
279	324	($6,000-$8,000)
1,419	1,451	($4,000-$6,000)
160	226	(Under $4,000)
		Technical, Operational and Service:
	4	($12,000-$14,000)
5	11	($10,000-$12,000)
94	66	($8,000-$10,000)
112	147	($6,000-$8,000)
16	9	($4,000-$6,000)
	23	(Under $4,000)
3,031	2,934

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		C—DOMINION BUREAU OF STATISTICS (Continued)
		Vote 40 (Continued)
(3,031)	(2,934)	Continuing Establishment.....	20,828,200	16,885,600
(408)	(269)	Casuals and Others.....	1,441,000	1,436,800
(3,439)	(3,203)	Salaries and Wages.....(1)	22,269,200	18,322,400
		Overtime.....(1)	156,700	211,600
		Travelling Expenses.....(2)	543,000	474,400
		Freight, Express and Cartage.....(2)	22,800	21,200
		Postage.....(2)	54,500	56,600
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	197,500	147,200
		Printing of Publications.....(3)	928,800	857,400
		Informational Publicity and Advertising.....(3)	78,300	83,700
		Remuneration and Expenses of Enumerators.....(4)	982,000	1,009,700
		Other Professional and Special Services.....(4)	1,253,200	532,300
		Rental of Office Equipment.....(5)	495,900	513,500
		Office Stationery, Supplies and Equipment.....(7)	1,357,100	1,394,700
		Publications for Crop Correspondents and Miscellaneous Materials and Supplies.....(7)	71,600	88,100
		Membership Fee, the Inter-American Statistical Institute.....(10)	11,300	11,100
		Contribution to the International Statistical Institute.....(10)	500	500
		Sundries.....(12)	22,300	51,500
			28,444,700	23,780,900
		Less—Amounts recoverable from Manpower and Immigration ($969,700) and the Atlantic Development Board ($70,000).....(13)	1,039,700
			27,405,000	23,780,900
		Expenditure Revenue
		1965-66..... $ 14,499,979 $ 211,491
		1966-67..... 26,634,200 100,472
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 23,650,000 110,000

Appendix I

No. of Vote	Service	1968-69	1967-68	Change
				Increase	Decrease
		$	$	$	$
	B—ECONOMIC COUNCIL OF CANADA
20	Administration (Details, page 386).....	1,601,000	1,622,800	.....	21,800

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—ECONOMIC COUNCIL OF CANADA
		Approximate Value of Major Services not Included in these Estimates
		Accommodation (provided by the Department of Public Works).....	90,000	85,000
		Accounting and cheque issue services (Comptroller of the Treasury).....	5,600	10,000
		Contributions to Superannuation Account (Treasury Board).....	117,100	100,000
		Contributions to Canada Pension Plan Account and Quebec Pension Plan Account (Treasury Board)....	10,100	11,200
		Employee surgical-medical insurance premiums (Treas- ury Board).....	2,500	5,400
		Carrying of franked mail (Post Office Department)....	6,600	3,200
			231,900	214,800
		Vote 20—Administration ADMINISTRATION
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
		Chairman ($30,000)
		Director ($25,250)
		Senior Officer 3 ($20,500-$25,750)
		Senior Officer 2 ($18,500-$23,500)
		Senior Officer 1 ($16,500-$21,250)
		($18,000-$21,000)
		($16,000-$18,000)
		($14,000-$16,000)
		($12,000-$14,000)
		($10,000-$12,000)
		($8,000-$10,000)
		($6,000-$8,000)
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
		($14,000-$16,000)
		($10,000-$12,000)
		($6,000-$8,000)

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—ECONOMIC COUNCIL OF CANADA (Continued)
		Vote 20 (Continued)
		ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Salaried Positions: (Continued)
		Technical, Operational and Service:
1	1	($6,000-$8,000)
1	1	($4,000-$6,000)
		Administrative Support:
13	10	($6,000-$8,000)
38	37	($4,000-$6,000)
5	7	(Under $4,000)
117	113
(117)	(113)	Continuing Establishment.....	1,131,000	1,145,000
(3)	(3)	Casuals and Others.....	14,000	12,000
(120)	(116)	Salaries and Wages..... (1)	1,145,000	1,157,000
		Travelling and Removal Expenses..... (2)	68,300	67,000
		Freight, Express and Cartage..... (2)	800	800
		Postage..... (2)	200	200
		Telephones and Telegrams..... (2)	14,700	14,500
		Publication of Reports and Studies..... (3)	15,800	15,500
		Advertising..... (3)	200	200
		Professional and Special Services..... (4)	73,400	72,000
		Rental of Office Machines..... (5)	7,200	7,000
		Repair of Office Equipment..... (6)	800	500
		Office Stationery, Supplies and Equipment..... (7)	15,000	15,000
		Acquisition of Furniture..... (9)	2,800	2,800
		Sundries..... (12)	15,800	15,500
			1,360,000	1,368,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 1,031,550
		1966-67..... 1,326,811
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 1,368,000
		SPECIAL STUDIES AND REFERENCES
(12)	(11)	Casuals and Others..... (1)	105,900	122,300
		Travelling and Removal Expenses..... (2)	1,500	1,500
		Professional and Special Services..... (4)	133,600	131,000
			241,000	254,800
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 84,812
		1966-67..... 109,122
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 254,800
		Total, Vote 20.....	1,601,000	1,622,800
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 1,116,362
		1966-67..... 1,435,933
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 1,622,800

Appendix J

No. of Vote	Service	1968-69	1967-68	Change
				Increase	Decrease
	C—INSURANCE	$	$	$	$
55	Supervision of Companies and Actuarial Services (Details, page 155).....	1,467,300	1,271,000	196,300

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		C—INSURANCE
		Approximate Value of Major Services not Included in these Estimates
		Accommodation (provided by the Department of Public Works).....	83,600	76,000
		Safe-keeping of securities, accounting and cheque issue services (Comptroller of the Treasury).....	106,000	104,000
		Contributions to Superannuation Account (Treasury Board).....	90,900	70,700
		Contributions to Canada Pension Plan Account and Quebec Pension Plan Account (Treasury Board)...	10,500	8,200
		Employee surgical-medical insurance premiums (Treas- ury Board).....	2,400	5,100
		Carrying of franked mail (Post Office Department)....	14,200	8,000
			307,600	272,000
		Vote 55—Supervision of Companies and Actuarial Services
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
		Superintendent of Insurance ($26,500)
1	1	Senior Officer 3 ($20,500-$25,750)
2	2	Senior Officer 1 ($16,500-$21,250)
2	2	($18,000-$21,000)
4		($16,000-$18,000)
3	2	($14,000-$16,000)
7	10	($12,000-$14,000)
14	12	($10,000-$12,000)
8		($8,000-$10,000)
14	16	($6,000-$8,000)
	10	Administrative and Foreign Service:
		($16,000-$18,000)
2	2	($12,000-$14,000)
3	1	($10,000-$12,000)
2	3	($8,000-$10,000)
12	6	($6,000-$8,000)
6		Administrative Support:
		($6,000-$8,000)
15	12	($4,000-$6,000)
43	44	(Under $4,000)
5	2
144	125
(144)	(125)	Continuing Establishment .....	1,204,000	1,022,000
(2)	(2)	Casuals and Others .....	8,000	8,000
(146)	(127)	Salaries and Wages .....(1)	1,212,000	1,030,000
		Travelling Expenses .....(2)	51,000	36,000
		Freight, Express and Cartage .....(2)	500	600
		Postage .....(2)	600	400
		Telephones and Telegrams .....(2)	8,000	5,000
		Publication of Departmental Reports and Other Material .....(3)	160,000	167,000
		Professional and Special Services .....(4)	6,500	5,000
		Repair of Office Furniture and Equipment .....(6)	300	300
		Office Stationery, Supplies and Equipment .....(7)	25,700	24,000
		Acquisition of Furniture and Furnishings .....(9)	2,500	2,500
		Sundries .....(12)	200	200
			1,467,300	1,271,000
		Expenditure Revenue
		1965-66.....$ 967,573 $ 847,041
		1966-67.....1,124,626 968,142
		1967-68 (estimated).....1,325,000 1,226,000

Appendix K

No. of Vote	Service	1968-69	1967-68	Change
				Increase	Decrease
		$	$	$	$
	A—CUSTOMS AND EXCISE
(S)	Minister of National Revenue—Salary and Motor Car Allowance (Details, page 371)....	17,000	17,000
1	General Administration, Operation and Maintenance including authority, notwithstanding the Financial Administration Act, to spend revenue received during the year from firms and individuals requiring special services (Details, page 371).....	61,429,000	59,720,000	1,709,000
	SUMMARY
	To be voted.....	61,429,000	59,720,000	1,709,000
	Authorized by Statute.....	17,000	17,000
		61,446,000	59,737,000	1,709,000
	B—TAXATION
5	General Administration and District Offices including recoverable expenditures on behalf of the Canada Pension Plan (Details, page 374).....	62,725,600	57,833,900	4,891,700
	C—TAX APPEAL BOARD
(S)	Salaries of Members of the Board (Details, page 377).....	130,250	113,000	17,250
10	Administration Expenses (Details, page 377)...	211,300	193,400	17,900
		341,550	306,400	35,150
	SUMMARY
	To be voted.....	211,300	193,400	17,900
	Authorized by Statute.....	130,250	113,000	17,250
		341,550	306,400	35,150

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		A—CUSTOMS AND EXCISE
		Approximate Value of Major Services not Included in these Estimates
		Accommodation (provided by the Department of Public Works).....	12,570,900	11,356,700
		Accommodation (in this Department's own buildings)...	162,000	157,000
		Accounting and cheque issue services (Comptroller of the Treasury).....	966,200	903,900
		Contributions to Superannuation Account (Treasury Board).....	9,263,600	7,236,100
		Contributions to Canada Pension Plan Account and Quebec Pension Plan Account (Treasury Board)....	1,284,500	1,040,600
		Employee surgical-medical insurance premiums (Treas- ury Board).....	326,500	756,300
		Employee compensation payments (Department of Labour).....	30,600	39,500
		Carrying of franked mail (Post Office Department)....	681,000	551,500
			25,285,300	22,041,600
		Statutory—Minister of National Revenue—Salary and Motor Car Allowance
		Salary.....(1)	15,000	15,000
		Motor Car Allowance.....(1)	2,000	2,000
			17,000	17,000
		Vote 1—General Administration, Operation, and Maintenance including authority, notwith- standing the Financial Administration Act, to spend revenue received during the year from firms and individuals requiring special services
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
		Deputy Minister, Customs and Excise ($26,500)
		Senior Officer 2 ($18,500–$23,500)
		Senior Officer 1 ($16,500–$21,250)
		($14,000–$16,000)
		($12,000–$14,000)
		($10,000–$12,000)
		($8,000–$10,000)
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
		($18,000–$21,000)
		($16,000–$18,000)
		($14,000–$16,000)
		($12,000–$14,000)
		($10,000–$12,000)
		($8,000–$10,000)
		($6,000–$8,000)
		Technical, Operational and Service:
		($8,000–$10,000)
		($6,000–$8,000)
		($4,000–$6,000)
		(Under $4,000)

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		A—CUSTOMS AND EXCISE (Continued)
		Vote 1 (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Salaried Positions: (Continued)
		Administrative Support:
1	1	($8,000-$10,000)
36	33	($6,000-$8,000)
324	356	($4,000-$6,000)
144	139	(Under $4,000)
1	1	Prevailing Rate Positions:
		(Full Time)
786	797	Continuing Establishment.....	4,490,000	4,431,000
(786)	(797)	Casuals and Others.....	43,000	20,000
(12)	(5)
(798)	(802)	Salaries and Wages.....(1)	4,533,000	4,451,000
		Overtime.....(1)	5,000	2,000
		Travelling and Removal Expenses.....(2)	509,000	570,000
		Postage.....(2)	21,000	98,000
		Freight, Express and Cartage.....(2)	21,000	6,000
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	66,000	61,000
		Departmental Publications.....(3)	60,000	2,000
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	39,000	40,000
		Rental of Buildings.....(5)	1,000	2,000
		Rental of Equipment.....(5)	30,000
		Repairs of Equipment.....(6)	16,000	9,000
		Office Stationery and Supplies.....(7)	78,000	212,500
		Materials and Supplies.....(7)	24,000	12,000
		Acquisition of Equipment.....(9)	127,000	22,500
		Sundries.....(12)	38,000	4,000
			5,568,000	5,492,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 3,338,000
		1966-67.....3,703,000
		1967-68 (estimated).....4,662,000
		CUSTOMS OPERATIONS
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
2	2	Senior Officer 3 ($20,500-$25,750)
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
16	16	($18,000-$21,000)
1	1	($16,000-$18,000)
21	21	($14,000-$16,000)
62	62	($12,000-$14,000)
72	69	($10,000-$12,000)
594	535	($8,000-$10,000)
121	115	($6,000-$8,000)
		Technical, Operational and Service:
79	106	($4,000-$6,000)
10	6	(Under $4,000)
24	24	(Part Time)
		Administrative Support:
140	140	($8,000-$10,000)
3,288	3,288	($6,000-$8,000)
2,105	2,079	($4,000-$6,000)
294	294	(Under $4,000)
		(Part Time)
45	46	(Seasonal)

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		A—CUSTOMS AND EXCISE (Continued)
		Vote 1 (Continued)
		CUSTOMS OPERATIONS (Continued)
		Salaried Positions: (Continued)
12	9	Prevailing Rate Positions: (Full Time)
16	11	Local Assistance Abroad: (Full Time)
6,902	6,825	Continuing Establishment.....	42,293,000	41,840,000
(6,882)	(6,805)	Casuals and Others.....	300,000	549,000
(65)	(137)
(6,947)	(6,942)	Salaries and Wages.....(1)	42,593,000	42,389,000
		Overtime.....(1)	1,082,000	1,088,000
		Allowances.....(1)	322,000	292,000
		Travelling and Removal Expenses.....(2)	1,065,000	712,000
		Postage.....(2)	309,000	213,000
		Freight, Express and Cartage.....(2)	125,000	85,000
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	303,000	227,000
		Departmental Publications.....(3)	319,000	44,500
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	150,000	101,000
		Rental of Buildings.....(5)	38,000	27,500
		Rental of Equipment.....(5)	78,000
		Repairs of Buildings and Works.....(6)	160,000	130,000
		Repairs of Equipment.....(6)	15,000	12,500
		Public Utility Services.....(7)	70,000	60,000
		Office Stationery and Supplies.....(7)	536,000	1,084,000
		Materials and Supplies.....(7)	1,243,000	1,266,000
		Construction or Acquisition of Land, Buildings and Works.....(8)	300,000	260,000
		Acquisition of Equipment.....(9)	434,000	77,500
		Sundries.....(12)	17,000	8,000
			49,159,000	48,077,000
		Less—Amount recoverable from firms and individ- uals requiring special services.....(13)	1,934,000	2,000,000
			47,225,000	46,077,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 38,152,000
		1966-67.....43,271,000
		1967-68 (estimated).....45,787,000
		EXCISE TAX
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
1	1	Senior Officer 3 ($20,500-$25,750)
2	2	Senior Officer 1 ($16,500-$21,250)
3	3	($18,000-$21,000)
3	3	($16,000-$18,000)
21	21	($14,000-$16,000)
35	35	($12,000-$14,000)
133	143	($10,000-$12,000)
225	247	($8,000-$10,000)
122	135	($6,000-$8,000)

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		A—CUSTOMS AND EXCISE (Continued)
		Vote 1 (Continued)
		EXCISE TAX (Continued)
		Salaried Positions: (Continued)
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
9	9	($18,000-$21,000)
3	3	($14,000-$16,000)
10	10	($12,000-$14,000)
36	28	($10,000-$12,000)
146	140	($8,000-$10,000)
11	8	($6,000-$8,000)
		Administrative Support:
17	17	($6,000-$8,000)
214	187	($4,000-$6,000)
24	24	(Under $4,000)
1,015	1,016
(1,015)	(1,016)
		Salaries.....(1)	7,681,000	7,171,000
		Overtime.....(1)	1,000	2,000
		Travelling and Removal Expenses.....(2)	637,000	700,000
		Postage.....(2)	20,000	19,000
		Freight and Express.....(2)	2,000	8,000
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	39,000	12,000
		Departmental Publications.....(3)	12,000	11,000
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	90,000	100,000
		Rental of Buildings.....(5)	4,000
		Rental of Equipment.....(5)	52,000	41,000
		Repairs of Equipment.....(6)	5,000
		Office Stationery and Supplies.....(7)	60,000	55,000
		Acquisition of Equipment.....(9)	30,000	30,000
		Sundries.....(12)	3,000	2,000
			8,636,000	8,151,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 6,200,000
		1966-67.....6,826,000
		1967-68 (estimated).....7,771,000
		Total, Vote 1.....	61,429,000	59,720,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 47,690,000
		1966-67.....53,800,000
		1967-68 (estimated).....58,220,000
		B—TAXATION
		Vote 5—General Administration and District Offices
		including recoverable expenditures on behalf
		of the Canada Pension Plan
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
1	1	Deputy Minister, Taxation ($26,500)
2	1	Senior Officer 3 ($20,500-$25,750)
2	2	Senior Officer 2 ($18,500-$23,500)
1	4	Senior Officer 1 ($16,500-$21,250)
2		Director 7, Taxation ($21,840-$22,880)

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TAXATION (Continued)
		Vote 5 (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Salaried Positions: (Continued)
		Executive, Scientific and Professional: (Continued)
24	10	($18,000—$21,000)
23	3	($16,000—$18,000)
36	54	($14,000—$16,000)
49	57	($12,000—$14,000)
29	25	($10,000—$12,000)
	10	($8,000—$10,000)
	2	($6,000—$8,000)
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
3		($18,000—$21,000)
6	4	($16,000—$18,000)
25	12	($14,000—$16,000)
48	18	($12,000—$14,000)
66	81	($10,000—$12,000)
189	144	($8,000—$10,000)
10	19	($6,000—$8,000)
		Technical, Operational and Service:
2	1	($6,000—$8,000)
11	8	($4,000—$6,000)
3	12	(Under $4,000)
		Administrative Support:
3		($8,000—$10,000)
16	10	($6,000—$8,000)
191	179	($4,000—$6,000)
84	94	(Under $4,000)
826	751
(826)	(751)	Continuing Establishment.....	6,287,000	5,171,800
(24)	(24)	Casuals and Others.....	90,000	85,000
(850)	(775)
		Salaries and Wages..... (1)	6,377,000	5,256,800
		Travelling Expenses..... (2)	488,000	410,000
		Postage..... (2)	18,000	14,000
		Freight, Express and Cartage..... (2)	6,500	5,000
		Telephones and Telegrams..... (2)	90,000	70,000
		Informational Services..... (3)	665,000	700,000
		Law Costs..... (4)	190,000	125,000
		Training and Educational Services..... (4)	6,500	2,900
		Other Professional and Special Services..... (4)	170,000	135,900
		Rental of Computer Facilities, Office Machines and Equipment..... (5)	19,000	16,500
		Repairs of Equipment..... (6)	10,200	2,000
		Materials and Supplies..... (7)	230,000	115,000
		Acquisition of Equipment and Furnishings..... (9)	35,000	9,000
		Expenditures chargeable to the Canada Pension Plan Account for services normally rendered by other Departments free of charge..... (12)	25,000	400,000
		Sundries..... (12)	5,000	2,500
			8,315,200	7,264,600
		Less: Amount recoverable from the Canada Pension Plan Account..... (13)	910,600	938,000
			7,404,600	6,326,600
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 5,307,269
		1966-67..... 5,656,452
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 6,301,058

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TAXATION (Continued)
		Vote 5 (Continued)
		DISTRICT OFFICES
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
		Director 7, Taxation ($21,840-$22,880)
2	2	($18,000-$21,000)
15	11	($16,000-$18,000)
11	4	($14,000-$16,000)
83	86	($12,000-$14,000)
342	296	($10,000-$12,000)
436	448	($8,000-$10,000)
319	426	($6,000-$8,000)
6	6	Administrative and Foreign Service:
		($16,000-$18,000)
1	1	($14,000-$16,000)
8	6	($12,000-$14,000)
44	37	($10,000-$12,000)
113	105	($8,000-$10,000)
1,519	1,397	($6,000-$8,000)
977	1,047	Technical, Operational and Service:
		($4,000-$6,000)
20	6	(Under $4,000)
3	18	Administrative Support:
		($8,000-$10,000)
2	5	($6,000-$8,000)
106	94	($4,000-$6,000)
2,351	2,289	(Under $4,000)
1,178	1,252	(Seasonal)
	44
7,536	7,580	Continuing Establishment.....	46,210,000	42,834,600
(7,536)	(7,551)	Casuals and Others.....	5,168,000	5,150,000
(1,633)	(1,493)
(9,169)	(9,044)	Salaries and Wages.....(1)	51,378,000	47,984,600
		Allowances.....(1)	9,400	8,700
		Travelling Expenses.....(2)	2,004,000	1,800,000
		Postage.....(2)	1,200,000	1,032,000
		Freight, Express and Cartage.....(2)	177,000	160,000
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	575,000	335,000
		Informational Services.....(3)	8,000	7,000
		Publication of Departmental Reports.....(3)	217,000	208,000
		Law Costs.....(4)	310,000	285,000
		Registry Searches.....(4)	10,000	9,000
		Training and Educational Services.....(4)	37,500	23,000
		Other Professional and Special Services.....(4)	325,000	265,000
		Rental of Computer Facilities, Office Machines and Equipment.....(5)	1,582,000	1,149,500
		Repairs of Equipment and Furnishings.....(6)	122,000	45,000
		Municipal or Public Utility Services.....(7)	11,000	12,000
		Materials and Supplies.....(7)	3,174,500	2,633,500
		Acquisition of Equipment and Furnishings.....(9)	298,000	160,000
		Expenditures chargeable to the Canada Pension Plan Account for services normally rendered by other Departments free of charge.....(12)	788,000
		Sundries.....(12)	4,000	3,000
			62,230,400	56,120,300
		Less: Amount recoverable from the Canada Pension Plan Account ($6,894,400) and a portion of amount recoverable for computer service ($15,000).....(13)	6,909,400	4,613,000
			55,321,000	51,507,300

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TAXATION (Continued)
		Vote 5 (Continued)
		DISTRICT OFFICES (Continued)
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....	$ 41,688,355
		1966-67.....	46,112,658
		1967-68 (estimated).....	51,532,738
		Total, Vote 5.....	62,725,600	57,833,900
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....	$ 46,995,624
		1966-67.....	51,769,110
		1967-68 (estimated).....	57,833,796

Appendix L

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		C—TAX APPEAL BOARD
		Statutory—Salaries of Members of the Board— (Chap. 148, R.S. as Amended)
1	1	Chairman ($25,250)
1	1	Assistant Chairman ($22,000)
4	4	Member ($20,750)
6	6
(6)	(6)	Salaries.....(1)	130,250	113,000
		Vote 10—Administration Expenses
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
1	1	($12,000-$14,000)
2	2	($8,000-$10,000)
		Administrative Support:
7	7	($6,000-$8,000)
7	5	($4,000-$6,000)
1	1	(Under $4,000)
18	16
(18)	(16)	Salaries.....(1)	109,000	101,400
		Travelling Expenses.....(2)	30,000	27,000
		Postage, Freight, Express and Cartage.....(2)	2,000	1,500
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	2,500	2,000
		Court Reporters' Fees.....(4)	46,000	46,000
		Rentals.....(5)	300	300
		Purchased Repair and Upkeep.....(6)	1,000	500
		Materials and Supplies.....(7)	15,000	9,700
		Acquisition of Equipment and Furnishings.....(9)	5,000	4,500
		Sundries.....(12)	500	500
			211,300	193,400
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 165,000
		1966-67.....160,894
		1967-68 (estimated).....191,000

Appendix M

No. of Vote	Service	1968-69	1967-68	Change
				Increase	Decrease
		$	$	$	$
	B—TRADE AND COMMERCE
(S)	Minister of Trade and Commerce—Salary and Motor Car Allowance (Details, page 240)....	17,000	17,000
	GENERAL ADMINISTRATION
20	Departmental Administration (Details, page 240).....	2,146,271	1,833,100	313,171
25	Trade Development including fees for membership in the International Organizations listed in the details of the Estimates (Details, page 241).....	19,889,800	17,428,500	2,461,300
(S)	Pensions to former locally-engaged employees of offices abroad (Details, page 248).....	1,100	1,700	.....	600
30	Canadian Government Travel Bureau—To assist in promoting the Tourist Business in Canada including a grant of $60,000 to the Canadian Tourist Association (Details, page 248).....	10,274,900	9,991,000	283,900
		32,312,071	29,254,300	3,057,771
	WORLD EXHIBITIONS
35	Canadian Government Participation in World Exhibitions (Details, page 249).....	2,394,000	6,750,800	.....	4,356,800
	SPECIAL
(S)	Payment of carrying costs of temporary wheat reserves and payments in connection with the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act (Details, page 249).....	49,878,500	33,940,000	15,938,500
—	Appropriation not required for 1968-69 (Details, page 250).....	.....	1,441,243	.....	1,441,243
		49,878,500	35,381,243	14,497,257
	SUMMARY
	To be voted.....	34,704,971	37,444,643	.....	2,739,672
	Authorized by Statute.....	49,896,600	33,958,700	15,937,900
		84,601,571	71,403,343	13,198,228

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TRADE AND COMMERCE (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Vote 20 (Continued)
		Freight, Express and Cartage.....(2)	4,100	3,100
		Postage.....(2)	34,000	28,000
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	53,700	38,500
		Publication of Departmental Reports.....(3)	13,200	6,000
		Advertising.....(3)	10,100	1,000
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	43,200	59,200
		Office Stationery, Supplies and Materials.....(7)	109,700	61,000
		"Canadian Trade Index".....(7)	20,000	20,000
		Trade Promotion at Home and Abroad.....(12)	63,500	93,500
		Sundries.....(12)	300	100
			2,146,271	1,833,100
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 1,259,070
		1966-67.....1,677,022
		1967-68 (estimated).....1,833,100
		Vote 25—Trade Development including fees for membership in the International Organizations listed in the Details of the Estimates
		TRADE POLICY
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
2	2	Senior Officer 2 ($18,500-$23,500)
5	5	Senior Officer 1 ($16,500-$21,250)
1	1	($10,000-$12,000)
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
12	12	($18,000-$21,000)
9	9	($14,000-$16,000)
11	11	($12,000-$14,000)
12	12	($10,000-$12,000)
5	5	($8,000-$10,000)
		Technical, Operational and Service:
4	4	($8,000-$10,000)
		Administrative Support:
2	2	($6,000-$8,000)
28	28	($4,000-$6,000)
		Local Assistance Abroad:
1	1	(Full Time)
92	92
(92)	(92)
		Salaries.....(1)	847,800	863,900
		Allowances.....(1)	31,300	34,300
		Travelling and Removal Expenses.....(2)	95,200	50,000
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	21,300	16,000
		Publication of Reports.....(3)	5,000	3,300
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	1,300
		Office Stationery, Supplies and Equipment.....(7)	14,900	21,700
		International Customs Tariffs Bureau Fee.....(10)	13,000	13,000
		Sundries.....(12)	200	300
			1,030,000	1,002,500
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 569,296
		1966-67.....789,997
		1967-68 (estimated).....1,002,500

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TRADE AND COMMERCE (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Vote 25 (Continued)
		ECONOMIC RESEARCH AND REPORTING
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
		Senior Officer 2 ($18,500-$23,500)
1	1
3	3	($18,000-$21,000)
2	1	($16,000-$18,000)
10	8	($14,000-$16,000)
5	4	($12,000-$14,000)
5	5	($10,000-$12,000)
2	2	($8,000-$10,000)
		Technical, Operational and Service:
1	1	($8,000-$10,000)
7	5	($6,000-$8,000)
1	1	($4,000-$6,000)
		Administrative Support:
11	11	($4,000-$6,000)
48	42
(48)	(42)
		Salaries.....(1)	425,900	379,500
		Travelling and Removal Expenses.....(2)	9,300	10,000
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	6,000	5,000
		Publication of Reports.....(3)	5,000	3,000
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	12,000	1,500
		Office Stationery and Supplies.....(7)	9,000	7,100
		Acquisition of Equipment.....(9)	5,500
			472,700	406,100
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 322,198
		1966-67.....351,061
		1967-68 (estimated).....406,100
		INDUSTRY LIAISON
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
		Senior Officer 1 ($16,500-$21,250)
3	3
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
13	13	($18,000-$21,000)
34	31	($14,000-$16,000)
68	64	($12,000-$14,000)
37	37	($10,000-$12,000)
2	2	($8,000-$10,000)
		Technical, Operational and Service:
1	1	($8,000-$10,000)
		Administrative Support:
42	42	($4,000-$6,000)
12	12	(Under $4,000)
26		Less: positions to be deleted during 1968-69 as a result of reorganization
186	205
(186)	(205)
		Salaries.....(1)	1,765,600	1,493,500
		Travelling and Removal Expenses.....(2)	257,500	207,200
		Freight and Cartage.....(2)	4,700	5,200
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	42,300	35,300
		Publication of Reports.....(3)	10,000	9,600
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	1,000
		Office Stationery and Supplies.....(7)	30,600	30,200

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TRADE AND COMMERCE (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Vote 25 (Continued)
		INDUSTRY LIAISON (Continued)
		Acquisition of Equipment.....(9)	4,500
		International Wheat Council Fee.....(10)	29,700	29,700
		International Sugar Agreement Fee.....(10)	12,400	12,400
		International Coffee Organization Fee.....(10)	17,500	17,000
		International Cocoa Conference Fee.....(10)	6,000	6,000
		International Cotton Advisory Committee Fee.....(10)	4,500	4,000
		International Tin Council Fee.....(10)	5,500	5,200
		International Rubber Study Group Fee.....(10)	2,300	2,300
		International Lead and Zinc Study Group Fee.....(10)	4,000	4,600
		Sundries.....(12)	600	600
			2,198,700	1,862,800
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 1,004,639
		1966-67.....1,494,155
		1967-68 (estimated).....1,862,800
		INTERNATIONAL DEFENCE PROGRAMS
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
1		Senior Officer 2 ($18,500-$23,500)
2		Senior Officer 1 ($16,500-$21,250)
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
1		($18,000-$21,000)
11		($16,000-$18,000)
15		($14,000-$16,000)
10		($12,000-$14,000)
6		($10,000-$12,000)
4		($8,000-$10,000)
3		($6,000-$8,000)
		Administrative Support:
25		($4,000-$6,000)
12		(Under $4,000)
		Local Assistance Abroad:
11		(Full Time)
101		Salaries.....(1)	921,200
(101)		Overtime.....(1)	5,200
		Living Allowances.....(1)	221,600
		Travelling and Removal Expenses.....(2)	149,300
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	30,300
		Freight, Express and Cartage.....(2)	200
		Postage.....(2)	1,000
		Publication of Reports.....(3)	31,000
		Exhibits, Advertising and Displays.....(3)	1,000
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	85,900
		Repairs and Upkeep of Equipment.....(6)	600
		Office Stationery, Supplies and Equipment.....(7)	10,400
		Acquisition of Equipment.....(9)	2,400
		Sundries.....(12)	12,500
			1,472,600

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TRADE AND COMMERCE (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Vote 25 (Continued)
		PROMOTIONAL SUPPORT SERVICES
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
1	1	Senior Officer 1 ($16,500-$21,250)
1	1	($12,000-$14,000)
2	2	($10,000-$12,000)
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
2	2	($18,000-$21,000)
11	1	($16,000-$18,000)
6	16	($14,000-$16,000)
13	12	($12,000-$14,000)
29	28	($10,000-$12,000)
21	21	($8,000-$10,000)
2	2	($6,000-$8,000)
		Technical, Operational and Service:
1	1	($10,000-$12,000)
7	7	($8,000-$10,000)
6	6	($6,000-$8,000)
1	1	($4,000-$6,000)
		Administrative Support:
4	4	($6,000-$8,000)
66	65	($4,000-$6,000)
9	9	(Under $4,000)
12		Less: positions to be deleted, during 1968-69 as a result of reorganization
170	179
(170)	(179)	Continuing Establishment.....	1,324,900	1,233,400
(8)	(9)	Casuals and Others.....	24,000	27,000
(178)	(188)
		Salaries and Wages.....(1)	1,348,900	1,260,400
		Travelling and Removal Expenses.....(2)	112,800	122,500
		Freight and Express.....(2)	41,600	40,700
		Postage.....(2)	17,400	14,900
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	58,300	44,400
		Trade Promotion at Home and Abroad.....(2)	503,400	597,400
		"Foreign Trade".....(3)	89,100	83,800
		Other Publications.....(3)	532,500	554,800
		Advertising and Publicity.....(3)	534,200	510,500
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	58,500	23,800
		Office Stationery and Supplies.....(7)	65,600	55,400
		Materials and Supplies.....(7)	4,200	14,400
		Acquisition of Equipment.....(9)	8,500
		Sundries.....(12)	1,800	2,000
			3,376,800	3,325,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 1,905,296
		1966-67.....2,542,157
		1967-68 (estimated).....3,325,000

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TRADE AND COMMERCE (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Vote 25 (Continued)
		TRADE COMMISSIONER SERVICE— ADMINISTRATION AND OPERATION
		Salaried Positions:
		Executive, Scientific and Professional:
1	3	Foreign Service Officer 9, Trade and Commerce ($22,880)
10	8	Foreign Service Officer 8, Trade and Commerce ($21,580)
28	20	($18,000-$21,000)
		Administrative and Foreign Service:
50	50	($16,000-$18,000)
31	20	($14,000-$16,000)
28	20	($12,000-$14,000)
80	45	($10,000-$12,000)
33	50	($8,000-$10,000)
1	35	($6,000-$8,000)
		Technical, Operational and Service:
1		($8,000-$10,000)
	1	($6,000-$8,000)
	2	($4,000-$6,000)
		Administrative Support:
12	1	($6,000-$8,000)
73	79	($4,000-$6,000)
2	4	(Under $4,000)
514	500	Local Assistance Abroad: (Full Time)
864	838
(864)	(838)
		Salaries.....(1)	5,848,600	5,562,100
		Allowances.....(1)	2,423,000	2,310,000
		Special Benefits for Personal Services.....(1)	100,300	80,000
		Removal and Home Leave Expenses.....(2)	574,400	530,000
		Other Travelling Expenses.....(2)	423,800	564,000
		Freight, Express and Cartage.....(2)	108,300	80,000
		Postage.....(2)	98,700	95,000
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	198,400	180,000
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	91,100	80,000
		Rental of Offices Abroad.....(5)	636,600	580,000
		Repairs and Upkeep of Offices and Residences Abroad.....(6)	168,100	115,000
		Repairs and Upkeep of Equipment.....(6)	32,100	25,000
		Municipal or Public Utility Services.....(7)	56,600	53,000
		Office Stationery and Supplies.....(7)	268,400	280,000
		Materials and Supplies.....(7)	21,100	15,000
		Compensation for Loss or Damage to Personal Effects.....(12)	4,000	4,000
		Sundries.....(12)	29,500	26,000
			11,083,000	10,579,100

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TRADE AND COMMERCE (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Vote 25 (Continued)
		TRADE COMMISSIONER SERVICE—ADMINISTRATION AND OPERATION (Continued)
		(Further Details)
105	92	Head Office.....	932,200	1,655,900
		Posts Abroad:
5	5	Accra.....	94,300	73,100
11	10	Athens.....	141,400	99,635
9	9	Beirut.....	146,400	108,055
1	1	Belfast.....	9,000	12,400
4	4	Belgrade.....	39,300	2,100
9	9	Berne.....	113,800	98,705
8	8	Bogota.....	81,700	84,475
15	14	Bonn.....	203,200	160,235
13	12	Boston.....	208,500	199,950
18	14	Brussels.....	227,800	134,810
12	12	Buenos Aires.....	116,100	88,375
5	6	Cairo.....	47,000	49,375
4	4	Canberra.....	65,600	72,960
10	10	Cape Town.....	93,900	70,590
11	10	Caracas.....	178,400	131,985
19	19	Chicago.....	324,900	283,305
12	11	Cleveland.....	181,200	146,520
4	4	Colombo.....	35,000	31,675
8	7	Copenhagen.....	107,000	77,545
8	10	Dallas.....	155,000	135,300
17	16	Detroit.....	266,500	239,305
6	6	Dublin.....	64,400	41,230
14	12	Dusseldorf.....	167,000	136,390
5	5	Glasgow.....	74,600	76,535
12	11	Guatemala.....	159,800	133,565
13	11	Hamburg.....	187,800	111,000
2	1	Havana.....	53,400	8,400
20	20	Hong Kong.....	231,100	198,255
11	9	Islamabad.....	122,000	76,010
12	11	Johannesburg.....	135,900	78,570
	9	Karachi.....		89,095
12	11	Kingston.....	127,200	87,190
7	7	Kuala Lumpur.....	80,500	60,305
6	6	Lagos.....	115,400	95,650
9	8	Lima.....	127,200	86,565
7	7	Lisbon.....	70,200	78,390
7	7	Liverpool.....	71,600	73,460
45	43	London.....	442,900	450,900
10	10	Los Angeles.....	181,900	130,495
10	9	Madrid.....	105,000	89,125
14	12	Manila.....	159,400	88,300
12	12	Melbourne.....	129,000	114,840
12	12	Mexico.....	153,300	128,230
14	13	Milan.....	213,600	148,030
6	5	Montevideo.....	53,700	46,885
8	8	Moscow.....	132,900	96,240
9	10	Nairobi.....	91,900	77,500
14	13	New Delhi.....	115,500	106,170
7	8	New Orleans.....	107,600	109,735
24	17	New York.....	406,600	271,750
7	7	Oslo.....	89,600	77,670
25	23	Paris.....	333,100	266,765
11	9	Philadelphia.....	180,700	126,565
14	12	Port of Spain.....	152,500	90,250
8	9	Rio de Janeiro.....	127,800	94,425
14	12	Rome.....	234,600	125,175

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1963-69	1967-68		1963-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TRADE AND COMMERCE (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Vote 25 (Continued)
		TRADE COMMISSIONER SERVICE—ADMINISTRATION AND OPERATION (Continued)
		(Further Details) (Continued)
		Posts abroad: (Continued)
8	9	Santiago.....	124,200	80,040
6	7	Santo Domingo.....	81,300	59,025
12	11	Sao Paulo.....	123,600	88,100
8	9	San Francisco.....	186,500	120,100
2	2	Seattle.....	16,900	12,800
12	11	Singapore.....	136,900	120,290
9	8	Stockholm.....	131,300	86,705
16	15	Sydney.....	179,900	131,970
10	9	The Hague.....	140,800	96,095
7	6	Tehran.....	74,400	60,900
8	8	Tel Aviv.....	93,300	70,550
16	16	Tokyo.....	258,300	188,685
13	12	Vienna.....	194,200	139,660
15	14	Washington.....	256,400	236,850
7	6	Wellington.....	84,700	79,790
	23	Unallocated and Miscellaneous.....	32,400	981,530
864	838		11,083,000	10,579,100
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 7,424,208
		1966-67..... 8,841,969
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 10,579,100
		CONSTRUCTION OR ACQUISITION OF BUILDINGS, LAND, EQUIPMENT AND FURNISHINGS
		Construction or Acquisition of Land, Buildings and Works..... (8)	30,000	100,000
		Construction or Acquisition of Machinery, Equip- ment and Furnishings..... (9)	226,000	153,000
			256,000	253,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 377,529
		1966-67..... 198,200
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 253,000
		Total, Vote 25.....	19,889,800	17,428,500
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 14,433,416
		1966-67..... 18,475,766
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 22,586,500

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TRADE AND COMMERCE (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Statutory—Pensions to former locally engaged employees of offices abroad
		Claire Roquier, France (Vote 412, Appropriation Act, No. 5, 1958).....	300	300
		Thomas Davis, West Indies (Jamaican £ 258) (Vote 413, Appropriation Act, No. 5, 1958).....	800	800
		Ryuji Yoshimura, Japan (Vote 391, Appropriation Act, No. 5, 1959).....		600
			1,100	1,700
		Expenditure
		1965-66..... $ 1,783
		1966-67..... 1,279
		1967-68 (estimated)..... 1,100
		Vote 30—Canadian Government Travel Bureau—To assist in Promoting the Tourist Business in Canada including a grant of $60,000 to the Canadian Tourist Association
		Salaried Positions:
1	1	Executive, Scientific and Professional:
		Senior Officer 1 ($16,500-$21,250)
2	2	Administrative and Foreign Service:
4	8	($16,000-$18,000)
7	8	($14,000-$16,000)
7	6	($12,000-$14,000)
39	60	($10,000-$12,000)
25		($8,000-$10,000)
		($6,000-$8,000)
	1	Technical, Operational and Service:
17	3	($8,000-$10,000)
67	8	($6,000-$8,000)
15	7	($4,000-$6,000)
		(Under $4,000)
	2	Administrative Support:
13	42	($8,000-$10,000)
34	91	($6,000-$8,000)
29	11	($4,000-$6,000)
		(Under $4,000)
32	32	Local Assistance Abroad:
		(Full Time)
292	282	Continuing Establishment.....	1,592,000	1,588,000
(292)	(282)	Casuals and Others.....	200,000	175,000
(74)	(74)
(366)	(356)	Salaries and Wages.....(1)	1,792,000	1,763,000
		Living and Rental Allowances.....(1)	520,000	415,000
		Membership Fees.....(1)	8,000	6,000
		Travelling and Removal Expenses.....(2)	325,800	195,000
		Freight, Express and Cartage.....(2)	182,000	135,000
		Postage.....(2)	185,000	130,000
		Telephones and Telegrams.....(2)	47,000	37,000
		Publication of Departmental Reports and Other Material.....(3)	1,490,000	1,624,000
		Exhibits, Advertising, Broadcasting and Displays....(3)	626,000	589,000

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TRADE AND COMMERCE (Continued)
		GENERAL ADMINISTRATION (Continued)
		Vote 30 (Continued)
		Advertising in Foreign Newspapers, Magazines and Other Media.....(3)	3,226,100	3,099,000
		Federal-Provincial Inter-Provincial Advertising Program.....(3)	260,000	250,000
		Special Centennial Advertising Program.....(3)		400,000
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	523,000	416,000
		Rental of Offices Abroad.....(5)	300,000	275,000
		Rental of Computers.....(5)	170,000	132,000
		Repairs and Upkeep of Buildings.....(6)	150,000	130,000
		Municipal or Public Utility Services.....(7)	27,000	25,000
		Office Stationery, Materials and Supplies.....(7)	258,000	240,000
		Acquisition of Furnishings and Equipment.....(9)	70,000	55,000
		Grant to Canadian Tourist Association.....(10)	60,000	55,000
		Sundries.....(12)	55,000	20,000
			10,274,900	9,991,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 6,332,549
		1966-67.....10,004,355
		1967-68 (estimated).....9,991,000
		WORLD EXHIBITIONS
		Vote 35—Canadian Government Participation in World Exhibitions
(22)	(147)	Salaries.....(1)	463,000	929,700
		Travelling and Removal Expenses.....(2)	50,000	59,900
		Professional and Special Services.....(4)	161,000	4,908,100
		Materials and Supplies.....(7)	420,000	212,000
		Construction or Acquisition of Buildings.....(8)	1,300,000	558,900
		Sundries.....(12)		82,200
			2,394,000	6,750,800
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 4,556,113
		1966-67.....8,411,461
		1967-68 (estimated).....6,750,800
		SPECIAL
		Statutory—Payment of carrying costs of temporary wheat reserves and payments in connection with the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act
		PAYMENT OF CARRYING COSTS OF TEMPORARY WHEAT RESERVES (CHAP. 2, STATUTES OF 1956).....(10)	49,080,500	33,300,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 36,806,707
		1966-67.....29,838,316
		1967-68 (estimated).....31,419,505

Positions (man-years)		Details of Services	Amount
1968-69	1967-68		1968-69	1967-68
			$	$
		B—TRADE AND COMMERCE (Continued)
		SPECIAL (Continued)
		Statutory (Continued)
		PAYMENT IN CONNECTION WITH THE PRAIRIE GRAIN ADVANCE PAYMENTS ACT (CHAP. 2, STATUTES OF 1957-58 AS AMENDED).....(10)	798,000	640,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 668,604
		1966-67.....583,325
		1967-68 (estimated).....912,158
		Total, Statutory Item.....	49,578,500	33,940,000
		Expenditure
		1965-66.....$ 37,475,311
		1966-67.....30,421,641
		1967-68 (estimated).....32,331,663
		Appropriation not required for 1968-69
		Grant to the Pacific National Exhibition, Vancou- ver, towards the cost of constructing a trade fair and sports building at Exhibition Park, Van- couver; the Government of Canada's share not to exceed $2,000,000.....(10)		1,441,243

APPENDIX N

DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE
DÉPARTEMENT DES ASSURANCES

Ottawa 8, Canada

November 13, 1968

Miss D. F. Ballantyne,
Clerk of the Standing Committee in Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs,
House of Commons,
Ottawa, Ontario.

Dear Miss Ballantyne,

At a meeting of the Finance Committee in connection with the study of this Department's estimates for the year 1968-69, the question was raised as to why the Employee surgical-medical insurance premiums decreased from $5,100 in 1967-68 to $2,400 in 1968-69. These are the figures that were furnished us by the Department of Finance and I understand that the decrease resulted from a reduction in the premiums in 1968-69.

Yours very truly,

John P. Taylor
Chief, Administrative Branch

---

HOUSE OF COMMONS

First Session—Twenty-eighth Parliament

1968

DEC 10 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE

ON

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. GASTON CLERMONT

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

No. 9

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1968

Respecting

WHITE PAPER ON ANTI-DUMPING

Including

Appendix O—Brief of The Canadian Chemical Producers Association
Appendix P—Brief of the Graphic Arts Industries Association
Appendix Q—Letter from Canadian Paper Trade Association

WITNESSES:

From the Canadian Chemical Producers Association: Messrs. D. D. Stokes, Chairman, Trade and Economic Affairs Committee; D. D. Hart, Canadian Industries Limited; K. B. Mathewson, Shawinigan Chemicals Limited; J. Mitchell, Dupont of Canada Limited. From the Graphic Arts Industries Association: Messrs. Gaston Boulanger, Association President; W. W. Buchanan, Consultant; David Maclellan, General Manager; W. E. Curry, of W. J. Gage Ltd. And also: C. D. Arthur, International Economic Relations Division, Department of Finance; A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; and H. D. MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise).

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
QUEEN'S PRINTER AND CONTROLLER OF STATIONERY
OTTAWA, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON
FINANCE, TRADE, AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman:

and Messrs.

Blair,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
Downey,
Émard,

Flemming,
Gauthier,
Givens,
Gleave,
Gray,
Hales,
Harkness,

Lambert (*Edmonton
West*),
Latulippe,
Noël*,
Perrault,
Roberts,
Trudel—20.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

*Replaced Mr. Gillespie on November 13, 1968.

ORDER OF REFERENCE

HOUSE OF COMMONS,
WEDNESDAY, November 13, 1968.

Ordered,—That the name of Mr. Noël be substituted for that of Mr. Gillespie on the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

ATTEST:

ALISTAIR FRASER,
The Clerk of the House of Commons.

(Text)

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

THURSDAY, November 14, 1968.

(11)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 11.15 a.m. this day.

Members present: Messrs. Blair, Burton, Clermont, Comtois, Danson, Emard, Flemming, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton West), Noël, Perrault, Roberts, Saltsman, Trudel—(16).

In attendance: From the Canadian Chemical Producers Association: Messrs. D. D. Stokes, Chairman, Trade and Economic Affairs Committee; D. D. Hart, Canadian Industries Limited; K. B. Mathewson, Shawinigan Chemicals Ltd.; J. Mitchell, Dupont of Canada Limited.

Also in attendance: Messrs. C. D. Arthur, International Economic Relations Division, Department of Finance; A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division; H. D. MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise); V. R. St. Louis, Commercial Policy Division, Department of Industry.

The Clerk explained that the Chairman was unavoidably absent and the Vice-Chairman had been temporarily removed from the Committee while absent on government business, and therefore requested nominations for an Acting Chairman to take the Chair for this session.

On motion of Mr. Gray, seconded by Mr. Trudel,
Resolved,—That Mr. Blair do take the Chair for this morning's sitting.

Mr. Blair, having taken the chair, called the witnesses and introduced Mr. Stokes who, in turn, introduced the other representatives of the Chemical Producers Association. At the request of the Acting Chairman, Mr. Stokes summarized the brief of his Association.

At the request of the Acting Chairman, Mr. Arthur commented on the brief, section by section as it was considered by the Committee. Messrs. Stokes, Hart, Mathewson and Mitchell were questioned and Messrs. Hind and MacDermid also answered questions directed to them by the Committee.

The questioning having been concluded, the Acting Chairman thanked the witnesses, who then retired.

At 1.12 p.m. the Committee adjourned until 3.30 p.m. this afternoon.

AFTERNOON SITTING

(12)

The Committee resumed at 3.45 p.m., the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Blair, Clermont, Danson, Emard, Flemming, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton West), Noël, Perrault, Trudel—(11).

In attendance: From the Graphic Arts Industries Association: Messrs. Gaston Boulanger, Association President; R. P. White, O.B.E., Vice-President for Government Affairs; W. W. Buchanan, Consultant; David Maclellan, General Manager; W. E. Curry, W. J. Gage, Ltd.; Representing the Canadian Paper Box Manufacturers Association: J. A. Doucette and George C. Gardiner.

Also in attendance: The same government officials as listed for the morning sitting.

The Chairman introduced Mr. Boulanger, who in turn introduced the other witnesses. At the request of the Chairman, Mr. Boulanger summarized the brief of his Association.

At the invitation of the Chairman, Mr. Arthur commented on the brief. Messrs. Buchanan, Maclellan and Curry were questioned. Mr. Hind also answered questions directed to him by the Committee.

During the meeting Mr. Maclellan tabled a copy of a letter addressed to him from the Canadian Paper Trade Association expressing support for the brief submitted by the Graphic Arts Industries Association and it was agreed that the letter should be printed as an appendix to this day's Proceedings. (See Appendix Q).

Briefs presented to the Committee this day are also included herewith as Appendices O and P, in accordance with the resolution passed at the meeting of October 24, 1968.

The questioning having been concluded, the Chairman thanked the witnesses who then withdrew.

At 5.55 p.m. the Committee adjourned until Tuesday, November 19, 1968 at 11.00 a.m.

Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Thursday, November 14, 1968

• 1112

The Clerk of the Committee: Gentlemen, you have a quorum, but the Chairman is unavoidably absent and the Vice Chairman has temporarily been removed from the Committee, so I would ask nominations for an Acting Chairman for this session.

Mr. Gray: I nominate Gordon Blair as Acting Chairman.

Mr. Trudel: I second the motion.

The Clerk of the Committee: Is it agreed that Mr. Blair take the Chair for this Committee session?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Acting Chairman, I think the record should note that our permanent Chairman is temporarily absent because he has a doctor's appointment for an eye examination and that our Vice Chairman is off the Committee because he has been asked to be a member of our delegation to the Fourteenth Annual Conference of the North Atlantic Assembly and he will be resuming his duties on his return from the Conference.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Gentlemen, this morning we are going to hear the presentation of the Canadian Chemical Producers' Association. May I ask first if all members of the Committee have received their brief which was circulated at the beginning of the week?

• 1115

Perhaps it would be advisable for me to make a general comment about the procedure which has prevailed in the Finance Committee in previous sessions and which I think has worked very well. That procedure has been to hear the briefs which are presented and then to ask the officials to comment on the proposals made in the briefs before throwing the meeting open for questions, which can then be directed either to the members of the delegations or the officials. I should say to our friends from the Chemical Producers' Association that if they wish to have a dialogue with the officials to clarify a point that is quite permissible.

I will introduce to you the Chairman of the Trade and Economic Affairs Committee of the Canadian Chemical Producers' Association, Mr. D. D. Stokes. Mr. Stokes will introduce the other members of his delegation.

Mr. D. D. Stokes (Chairman, Trade and Economic Affairs Committee, The Canadian Chemical Producers' Association): Mr. Chairman I would like to introduce my colleagues. Mr. Jack Mitchell on the far right; Mr. Ken Mathewson, and Mr. David Hart, thank you.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Could you please repeat the last two names?

[English]

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Mr. Mitchell, Traffic Manager of Dupont of Canada; Mr. D. S. Hart of Canadian Industries Limited and Mr. K. B. Mathewson of Shawinigan Chemicals. Mr. Mitchell is on my far right, Mr. Mathewson is sitting beside him and Mr. Hart is sitting beside Mr. Stokes.

I should tell our delegation that the procedure of this Committee is better served if they sit down so they are not too far removed from the microphones.

Mr. Stokes: Mr. Chairman, the Canadian Chemical Producers' Association welcomes this opportunity to appear before your Committee in support of our brief and to offer our comments and recommendations. It is not our intention to read our brief unless it is your wish that we do so. However, I do have some comments to make and a summary which I would like to read.

The Canadian Chemical Producers' Association represents chemical producers manufacturing 90 per cent of the basic chemicals made in Canada. The members range in size from small, privately owned companies to some of the larger companies in Canadian industry.

The Canadian chemical industry is one of Canada's key industries with assets of $2½ billion, an annual gross value of shipments of 2¼ billion and exports of $400 million. It pays $475 million in salaries and wages each year to some 74,000 employees.

The chemical industry is basic in the Canadian industrial structure, pervasive in its interindustry relations and characterized by rapid technological change. It is, therefore, potentially a major vehicle for economic growth.

We believe that Canada is more vulnerable to injurious dumping than most other countries. Our government has committed itself on several occasions through speeches made by Cabinet Ministers that dumping duties will be quickly and effectively applied where dumping is causing or threatens to cause injury to Canadian industry. Unless this objective is adequately fulfilled, investment and manufacturing in Canada will be retarded.

• 1120

Our Association brief covers some recommended changes in the sections of the draft legislation listed in numerical order.

In our general comments, we have expressed our concern that the proposed legislation does not provide for assessment of dumping duty to be applied on the first import that causes material injury except in the case of massive dumping.

When our brief was prepared, the draft regulations, relating to clauses 9 and 10 of the proposed bill, were not available for comment. In the short time at our disposal since they have become available, we have concluded in general terms that they appear to be well designed and a definite improvement over present regulations. A great deal of discretion is left to the administration.

The proposed legislation and regulations, well designed though they may be, will prove totally ineffective against injurious dumping unless they are administered effectively and expeditiously.

On that point, Mr. Chairman, there is a statement in our brief that might be misconstrued. This appears on page 4, part b) under the heading of Administration. It is the second sentence of the first paragraph which reads:

Under our present Canadian anti-dumping law, the administrative authorities have been, in many cases, slow to investigate and equally slow and at times reluctant to declare dumping.

I would like to clarify our intent. We had two major concerns in this area.

The first was the length of time that has been required to determine whether or not dumping has occurred and the margin thereof.

The second concern was that we have gained the impression that the authorities on occasion have been reluctant to pursue a dumping case and that this was the result of pressure to cease and desist either from another department or possibly from a foreign government. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Thank you, Mr. Stokes. Before calling upon Mr. Arthur are there any comments which the other members of your delegation wish to make, or will they simply assist you in dealing with questions?

Mr. Stokes: This is right.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): We have with us Mr. Arthur of the Department of Finance, who I think can assist us by making some comments on the detailed proposals made in this brief. I should also mention that the officials of the Department of National Revenue are in the room and are also available to take part in the discussion.

Mr. C.D. Arthur (International Economic Relations Division, Department of Finance): Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to make any comment regarding the statement just made by Mr. Stokes, but if it your wish I have one or two comments regarding the various modifications which the Association has suggested. I think the best way to proceed is to deal with them as they appear in the brief.

The first, Mr. Chairman, relates to the suggested amendments to clause 7 of the Bill.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): This is set out on page one of the brief?

• 1125

Mr. Arthur: That is right, it is set out on page one. The Chemical Producers are suggesting that decisions by the Governor in Council under this clause to exempt any goods from the application of this Bill should be published in the Canada Gazette. Mr. Chairman, under the Regulations Act such determinations by the Governor in Council are required to be published in the Canada Gazette, and it is for that reason that the legal draftsmen felt it was not necessary to put such a provision in this particular clause.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Should we discuss these recommendations section by section or should we permit Mr. Arthur to make his comments on all the proposals before we enter into the discussion?

Mr. Hales: Section by section, I think.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Emard: I think we should take them one by one. It would be much easier.

[English]

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Is there any comment on clause 7?

Mr. Hales: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I take it, from what Mr. Arthur has said, that he is accepting this recommendation. It is already done, so this recommendation is redundant?

Mr. Gray: It was well intended but it was covered by another provision of the law.

Mr. Hales: All right.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Mr. Chairman, I am not of this opinion. It says here: "It should be mentioned in the Canada Gazette." But you know that this legislation is very complicated and I believe that those who are before us today were unaware of the fact that it was to be published in the Canada Gazette. And this is a good reason why, in my opinion, it would not be superfluous to mention precisely the request that we have today.

[English]

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Émard's point is well taken and I think one of the things that makes these hearings so useful is that these things can be made known not only to the group appearing before us, but to the general public through the publication of our Proceedings and the coverage by the press.

Mr. D. S. Hart (Advisor, Exports and Government, Canadian Industries Limited): Mr. Chairman, may I make an observation on that point? We were aware that the Governor in Council was required to make public through the Canada Gazette any such action, and that notice would be given in that way. Nevertheless we think this is quite a significant matter; we wish to know that this will be done. As mention is made throughout the legislation of other cases where notice will be published, we feel that it is not departing too much from the intent to say that it shall be published in this particular case.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I presume the reason the draft Bill we are studying today specifically calls for a certain type of notice is that this requirement is not contained in any other existing act.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, a requirement for publication can be loosely interpreted. Publication six months hence is still publication. Mr. Émard has a good point but I would go even further and say that the publication shall be made forthwith, which means that it gets into the next Canada Gazette. I think the industry would be prejudiced if, for reasons of its own, the decision were withheld from publication for, say, three or four months.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Might I make a suggestion? We are talking now about a detailed provision of the statute, and I think it would be advisable for us to have our officials review for us the proper governing sections of the Regulations Act and the procedure which is followed in publishing Orders in Council, particularly with the point Mr. Lambert has made as to whether these regulations and Orders in Council are published promptly. My impression is they are, but I could be wrong. Could we pass on to the comments on clause 9(2)(b)?

• 1130

Mr. Danson: Excuse me, Mr. Chairman, are we passing this over until we have heard comments from the officials, or did you want to get a consensus of the feeling of the Committee on this matter? It seems like a reasonable request as a matter of clarification.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, actually I think we have a third stage in our proceedings at which time we are going to be in a sense debating the proposals of the government in the Committee and amongst ourselves as members. It may be more expeditious and more orderly if we reserve this type of detailed discussion, which is for the purpose of formulating our report to House, until we have heard not only these gentlemen but the many others who wish to appear before us. It may be easier to clear up some of these things at that time, unless of course it is possible to do so now.

If we stop and debate in detail each proposal by each witness and we have, I think 17 or more who have offered to come before us, we will find it very difficult to meet our obligations to the house in the time allowed us.

Mr. Danson: Yes, I can see the procedure.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): If there are no further comments on clause 7 may I suggest we move on to clause 9(2)(b).

Mr. Aurihur: Mr. Chairman, the Chemical Producers' Association have suggested that the intent of this clause requires clarification. This is the clause which reads as follows:

(2) In the application of subsection (1) in the case of any goods,

(b) if there was not a sufficient number of sales of like goods made by the exporter by reason of the fact that the exporter sold goods solely or primarily for export, but there were sales of like goods for home consumption in the country of export by other vendors, there shall be substituted for the exporter the said vendors.

The Association is suggesting first that these sales by other vendors might be relatively low and on the basis of that, as I understand it, they have suggested an amendment to the wording as follows:

If there was not a sufficient number of sales of like goods made by the exporter by reason of the fact that the exporter sold goods solely or primarily for export, but there were sales by other vendors of like goods produced in and for home consumption in the country of export, there shall be substituted for the exporter the said vendors.

Mr. Chairman, my comment is that, as I understand this proposed amendment, the Association is suggesting that only those sales of like goods produced in and for home consumption should be substituted for sales. Throughout the Code and the proposed Bill only sales are considered. The Code does not suggest nor does the proposed legislation, that the sales be of goods that are produced in and for home consumption. It relates only to sales.

The only provision in the proposed Bill which talks about country of origin is clause 12(1) which deals with direct shipments. I therefore suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this proposed amendment would not be in keeping with our obligations under the Code.

• 1135

In answer to the first part of the suggestion made by the Association that the sales by vendors may be relatively low, I suggest that this subclause refers back to subclause (1) of clause 9 and all of those conditions, (a), (b), (c), and (d), as prevail on goods sold by the exporter would indeed be transported in considering sales by vendors. Therefore the terms and conditions are similar to those that would prevail under subclause (1) of clause 9.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Thank you, Mr. Arthur. Would it be a good idea to hear the Chemical Producers with reference to this clause before we have questions?

Mr. Hart: Mr. Chairman, if I may answer that question, our concern was that it is possible for goods to be imported into a country under a quota at very low prices. Then, the goods having been imported at very low prices to be sold in the country at prices lower than the prices quoted for goods produced in that country. We feel that there may be an opportunity here for the Deputy Minister, in the determination of price, perhaps to pick up a price quoted by sellers of goods that came in under quota at very low prices. This is the reason for our saying that we wish as much as possible to confine it to prices for goods produced in the country of export for consumption in the country of export.

Mr. Gray: What if the price of the imported goods is higher?

Mr. Hart: That is possible.

Mr. Danson: Does this not bring us back to the question of country of origin that we dealt with at a previous meeting? As I understand it in effect the dumping consideration is to be based on the export price from the original country?

Mr. Stokes: Those goods you just mentioned, Mr. Danson, would not come into the picture as the sort of first country because those goods are not coming in. It is just the prices that are involved, and if they are abnormally low prices it is conceivable that somebody with an intent to establish prices in that country could use those prices on goods coming into Canada.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Following further along that same line, I think I raised the point the other day in determining the country of origin in the Common Market where goods like chemicals would move within the Common Market without any internal tariff restriction. My point concerned precisely what has been illustrated here, say chemicals manufactured in Belgium, imported into France under quota at a low price, and then re-exported to Canada. What is the price the Deputy Minister must look at? Is it the domestic price for goods produced in France, or is it the price of the Belgian commodity sold in France? I think that is the problem put forward by the Association in their brief.

What is to be deemed the country of origin? Are these Belgian chemicals or are they French chemicals? I think we were told these would be classified as French chemicals.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, in answer to Mr. Lambert's question, when he cited this example the other day, the answer was that the normal value would be determined by the price of the sales of chemicals in France. Notwithstanding the fact that the origin may have been Belgium the Code says that it is sales of like products, and it does not refer to the country of origin of the goods. It is open to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue to determine whether or not those sale prices for the sale of chemicals in France, if it were the Belgian chemicals that were being sold, truly reflected a normal value of like goods.

• 1140

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Mr. Chairman, I must leave and I wonder if I could ask a couple of questions before I do.

I would like to know if Bill C-102 proposes the liberalization of export and import permits for drugs and pharmaceutical products. Will your industry be affected by these permits? Does this apply also to your industry?

[English]

Mr. Stokes: We do not really know.

The Acting Clairman (Mr. Blair): Gentlemen we have heard the comments on clause 9(2)(b), are there any other questions or comments on this clause?

Mr. Danson: I would just like to ask the gentlemen, in view of the explanation does this still present possible difficulties for your industry?

Mr. Stokes: We think so.

Mr. Danson: This would depend on the interpretation of the Deputy Minister?

Mr. Stokes: Yes.

Mr. Danson: Thank you.

Mr. K. B. Mathewson (Manager, Traffic and Marketing, Shawinigan Chemicals Ltd.): Mr. Chairman, may I ask Mr. Arthur a question?

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Mathewson.

Mr. Mathewson: You say there is no direct reference in the Code to the fact that the domestic price is really referring primarily to the price of domestically-produced goods and yet it seems to me there is by inference. If you will look at page 11 of the White Paper, paragraph 7 where reference is made to a system for the stabilization of the domestic price or of the return to domestic producers, they seem to relate these as being the same thing. I wonder if this is implied, if not stated? Is it normally the case that domestic price is the price of domestic goods?

Mr. Arthur: I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that in many instances it would be the sale price of domestically-produced goods. In most instances it would probably be so. However, it is not confined to sales only of domestically-produced goods. I think that is similar to the circumstance under the present Customs Act.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Trudel: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask Mr. Arthur a question.

With regard to these presentations made by the Chemical Producers' Association, there seems to be some difference, some distinction made between imports under quotas and the relative value of these items on the domestic market. I do not see any such distinction in the proposed legislation. Could Mr. Arthur clarify this point raised by the Chemical Producers?

[English]

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, as I understand the import of the question or the suggestion of the Chemical Producers' Association, if the goods were imported under quota and these were the goods subsequently exported to Canada, that the normal value of these goods in the country of export may not in fact be normal value. In other words the sale price of those goods may in fact not be the normal value.

• 1145

I suggested in my answer that in the consideration of normal value the Deputy Minister would take into account sales by other vendors that met the full conditions of subclause (1) of clause 9. In other words, if there were sales of goods imported under quota it is open to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue to look at other sales by those vendors or at other vendors' sales.

I think the assumption here, Mr. Chairman, and I may be reading something into this suggestion, is that they would be the only sales if they were goods brought into the country of export under quota. I am suggesting that while that situation prevailed it would be open to the Deputy Minister to suggest that normal value be established under some other subsection.

Mr. Trudel: The normal value then assessed by the Deputy Minister would take priority regardless of the import under quota?

Mr. Arthur: Yes, it is the value established by the Deputy Minister under this act, not necessarily the price under quota.

Mr. Trudel: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): The effect of your answers, Mr. Arthur, is that you are persuaded that under the present wording of the legislation, if this problem arose, the Deputy Minister of National Revenue would be equipped to meet it?

Mr. Arthur: Yes sir.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, it would appear that the Chemical Producers are concerned about the meaning of normal value. Is normal value not set out anywhere in this Bill, so it would take care of the recommendation they are making?

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): It is defined in clause 9, Mr. Hales. It is defined more particularly in subclause (1).

Mr. Hales: Does this definition not meet with the agreement of the Chemical Producers?

Mr. Hari: Mr. Chairman, generally speaking it does. We may have one or two views on particular aspects of this determination of normal value and the times during which such normal value should be determined.

However, the point we were trying to make here is that we would be concerned if prices of goods that are imported under a quota, where such prices are low in a country, were used. We hope that such prices would not be used to determine the normal value in the country from which the goods were exported. We are not concerned in this particular situation with the import into Canada of goods that enter another country under the quota arrangement. We are just concerned with the determination of the normal value in the country of export. We hope that the Deputy Minister would not be influenced unduly by the fact that there was a very low price that was low under a quota system.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, my only comment is that such sales in the country of export would probably not be looked on by the Deputy Minister of National Revenue as in the ordinary course of trade under competitive conditions. Therefore he would determine normal value by some other means.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Is the Committee satisfied that we have had a sufficient discussion of the considerations applying to clause 9(2)(b)? If so, could we invite comment on the further proposals? In speaking of the Committee I also ask the delegation from the Chemical Producers' Association if they have any further comments to make on this clause?

Mr. J. Mitchell (Traffic Manager, Dupont of Canada Ltd.): Mr. Chairman, may I make a statement? I am just not sure I am in accord with the last statement about imports from a third country being imported into another country. While Mr. Hart has talked about these being on quota, I do not think they have to be on quota. They might be just low price goods from one country going into another country, and they might be sold in that second country and have complied with all the requirements.

• 1150

They might be sold to the same purchasers that the importer or vendor deals with in his ordinary course of trade. Actually they might be taken care of by clause 9, but our concern, as Mr. Harkness said, is that these could be low-priced products in the country of export—not exported to here—and which could be used as a basis for value because they might be freely offered in the country of export by other vendors.

In consideration of the proposed draft Regulations, paragraph 1 of which says:

...the said sale is the period ending on the day of the said sale and commencing ( ) days immediately preceding that day or for such longer period, as in the opinion of the Deputy Minister, is required by virtue of the nature of the trade.

this paragraph has to be read in conjunction with clause 9 and I suggest if this period is extensive, perhaps the Deputy Minister could take a domestically-produced vendor's price, he may take the price of a vendor who is selling cheap imports in the export country or, indeed, he may perhaps be permitted to take an averaging or a combination of both of them and then arrive at a normal value for duty on exports to Canada that would bother Canadian producers.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I take some exception to what Mr. Arthur said that this might not be in the ordinary course of trade. For example—I think this will parallel what Mr. Hart has been trying to say—if we take the case of men's cotton shirts made in Britain and brought into Canada. A complaint is made that they are being dumped; the Deputy Minister goes to Britain and looks at the normal value in Britain for these shirts sold in like quantities to similar customers. As Mr. Hart said, we know there are cheap shirts—cheaper cotton shirts—being distributed in Britain but made in Hong Kong, which is in the normal course of trade. Mr. Hart has asked that you exclude the sales of Hong Kong-made shirts from the determination of normal value of men's cotton shirts made in Britain.

I think I have made my point. Certainly the sale of men's cotton shirts in Britain which were made in Hong Kong is in the normal course of trade and would not be the exception—possibly they even might not be subject to quota. I think we have the clarification and I would suggest that it is a valid point.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, to further clarify this as I think Mr. Lambert has raised something of significance perhaps we should make a distinction between shirts made in Hong Kong and sold both in Britain and Canada and shirts made in Britain and sold in Canada. If we are talking about a possible import of shirts made in Britain as distinguished from the shirts made in Hong Kong and sold in Britain and Canada, then it may well be that the officials with regard to the former case will say the Hong Kong shirts are not like goods. Is that possible, Mr. Arthur?

• 1155

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, if these shirts were imported from Hong Kong and depending on what basis they were imported, the United Kingdom authorities may well have established a value under their export system which would raise the value of these particular shirts. If they were, of course, imported directly from Hong Kong, we have dealt with the amendment to the Customs Act which proposed that if they are causing injury to Canadian producers it is possible to establish an arbitrary value base.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): The Hong Kong shirts that I talked about were not being imported to Canada. They were imported only into Britain. I was talking about the complaint that there was a dump by an English textile manufacturer of English made men's cotton shirts and in order to establish the normal value of those shirts you should exclude the value or the price of men's cotton shirts made in Hong Kong but sold in Britain.

Mr. Gray: But my question to Mr. Arthur is, can the Hong Kong shirts be deemed to be "like" goods? If they are not, then, as I understand the Bill and Regulations, they cannot be taken into account in determining normal value in the country of export, mainly Britain.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Having bought shirts in both countries, Mr. Gray, I would put you to the test. They are "like" goods.

Mr. Gray: Perhaps we could hear from Mr. Arthur.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I do not think I would care to comment on whether they are "like" in that sense, but I am quite satisfied that the Deputy Minister of National Revenue in undertaking the investigation to establish normal value would, if these shirts that had caused the investigation were, in fact, made in the United Kingdom, take "like" shirts as a basis for determining normal value. I do not really think they would include imported shirts in that kind of a determination.

Mr. Stokes: Mr. Chairman, this is exactly what we have mentioned here: "...goods produced in and for home consumption in the country of export..."

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Are there any further comments, gentlemen?

Mr. Danson: I just wanted to bring up the other possibility—I can understand my Conservative friends dealing with cotton undershirts...

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Cotton shirts.

Mr. Danson: ...and use another example of a chemical or a product like polyethylene which is produced, say, in Germany, but not produced in Guatemala. Now, Germany might very well have some excess production which they could sell to Guatemala where there is no producer at all. This would come in at a very low price and it would not be considered dumping. It would not have been dumped because it would not injure any industry in Guatemala. As a matter of fact, it would help some of their industries. However, Guatemala then would be in a position to import great quantities of polyethylene and ship them into the Canadian market. This would not be considered dumping, as I understand it, because Guatemala would be considered the country of origin.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, in response to the last question I think clause 12(1) and (2) deals with that circumstance. Particularly, I would direct your attention, Mr. Chairman, to clause 12(2).

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): In other words, Mr. Arthur, you are suggesting that the Deputy Minister under the power given to him in clause 12 can look through a transaction such as the one described by Mr. Danson and say in effect that the value which prevails here will be the value in determining the market of origin?

Mr. Arthur: Yes, sir.

Mr. Danson: Clause 12(1) uses the words "in transit". Does that mean the same thing?

• 1200

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): The other clause I would suggest, Mr. Danson, and the more governing one in this circumstance, would be subclause (2) on page 58. This clause appears to deal with two conditions, "in transit" shipments and then what are described as indirect shipments which would fall into your category.

Gentlemen, I do not want to appear to be rushing ahead, but I do have to say that we have a heavy schedule ahead of us. We have another delegation appearing this afternoon and if we begin to fall behind we will get into extreme difficulty. I am sure the Canadian Chemical Producers' Association appreciate this. Do you think we could now proceed with the discussion of the proposed rewording of clause 13?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, the proposal before us is that:

The Deputy Minister is required to make an investigation forthwith.

which is under clause 13(1) and it is the suggestion of the Chemical Association:

It is equally essential that he reach his initial opinion in 13(1) or his decision under 13(2) expeditiously.

If I might just refer to clause 13(1), initially, the opening words of this clause read as follows:

The Deputy Minister shall forthwith cause an investigation to be initiated respecting the dumping of any goods, on his own initiative or on receipt of a complaint in writing by or on behalf of producers in Canada of like goods, if

(a) he is of the opinion that there is evidence that the goods have been or are being dumped; and

(b) either

(i) he is of the opinion that there is evidence, or

(ii) the Tribunal advises that it is of the opinion that there is evidence,...

I would suggest to you, sir, that in the proposal made here that clause 13(1) (b) (ii) be worded in the same manner—I take it with either the word “expeditiously” or “forthwith”—that that is covered by the opening words of that particular paragraph and that the word “forthwith” there applies to both subclauses (a) and (b).

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Gentlemen, are there any further comments on this particular proposal, either from the Committee or the delegation?

Mr. Hart: Mr. Chairman, our concern in this is that, admittedly, he does cause an investigation to be initiated forthwith, but it seems to us that his opinion can be withheld while this investigation is going on and it is possible in certain cases that he would not make an opinion for three or four months.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, in response to that, I think the draftsmen considered this at great length and it did not seem to them to be desirable to set any specific time limitation on the determination by the Deputy Minister nor was it the draftsmen's view that the adding of a word such as “expeditiously” would cause him to necessarily reach his conclusion any faster than he would normally do. The main concern, I would suggest, is that he begin the investigation “forthwith” and, presumably, when he has sufficient evidence for him to reach a preliminary determination, he will so do.

• 1205

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Chairman, you might perhaps remember this was one of the points I raised earlier when we were considering the White Paper. I think this point is well taken. I think there is a need for something definite here to ensure that the Deputy Minister takes action and just does not investigate and investigate because time is the most important element as far as a lot of these matters are concerned. Unless action is taken speedily, the damage is done; the injury has taken place and there is no redress.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, perhaps we could ask Mr. Arthur and also his colleagues from the Department of National Revenue if it is their intention to apply these provisions of the Bill “expeditiously”. Perhaps we should find out how they intend to carry out the obligations that will be imposed upon them by this law if it is adopted by Parliament.

Mr. Arthur, could you inform us on behalf of your own Department and also the Department of National Revenue?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, since the Department of Finance will not be directly involved in the administration of this proposed Bill I do not wish to speak for the officials of the Department of National Revenue. However, I do believe that during the last session of this Committee the Deputy Minister of National Revenue gave evidence to the effect that they were reorganizing their department in the light of this proposed legislation and they would be moving quickly in these investigations. Probably Mr. Hind would care to comment on this.

Mr. A. R. Hind (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise): Mr. Chairman, we certainly intend to do the best we can to make a success of this new legislation and do it as quickly and effectively as we can.

We have tried to anticipate what staff we might need to carry out the provisions of the proposed Bill and I think most of you will accept that it is very difficult to try to determine just how many people you should have for a case of this kind.

We rather expect that in the early days there may be a flurry of complaints received by the Department and we will have some anxious moments for a period, in any event. We would hope, though, as time goes on and people have a few cases which have been dealt with that they will begin to understand how the law reads and how it is being administered and we would like to hope that we would not receive too many frivolous cases.

We have added to our staff in Ottawa; we have increased our investigational staff abroad; we have added an additional man to our office in Brussels; we have an office in London, England where we have three people; we have added one man to our office in Chicago; we have opened a new office in San Francisco; we hope to open another office in the United States next year and we have added an additional investigator to our investigational staff in Tokyo, Japan. We think we are geared up with qualified staff. However, only time will tell whether we have too many or too few.

• 1210

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, this is the most important part of this legislation and I reiterate what Mr. Harkness said. I think it is the wish of the whole Committee that we protect the chemical industry in Canada and that none of the existing companies will be put out of business nor will people lose their jobs. It is fine for us to sit here and talk about "forthwith", "expeditiously" and so on, but if you have a large company with a good number of employees and some product is dumped into the country which is about to put you out of business and that owner has to wait for three months for a decision to be made, he can be put out of business. I wonder why there is not some place in this Bill where an injunction could be instituted. When a manufacturer learns that something is being dumped that could be injurious to his company and he has registered his complaint with the Deputy Minister or with the Department—it is a legitimate complaint of dumping—why do we continue to allow these products to be dumped while the investigation is being made? Why do we not set up some form of legislation that will, by the duty, say that immediately there will be no more importations of this product until a decision has been handed down? This would give some kind of protection to our existing chemical industry or any other industry, for that matter. Would this be possible?

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): May I just make a suggestion? I hope Mr. Hales will not misunderstand me. The question he asked is an exceedingly important one, it ranges right across all the provisions of the statute. I am afraid, Mr. Hales, if we ask our officials to more or less indicate the different parts of the statute which may or may not cover your point that we might become quite diverted from hearing the case of the Canadian Chemical Producers' Association. I think you will agree with me that you are probing right into the middle of the statute and all its aspects in an attempt to ensure that adequate protection is given.

Mr. Hales: May I ask a supplementary question? Is there any place in this legislation whereby future importations can be stopped immediately a legitimate complaint has been made or do we have to wait up to three months for an investigation?

Mr. Gray: Could I make a comment? Mr. Hales' first question, I believe, raised a matter of policy which I do not think the officials would want to attempt to deal with. It is something we might possibly want to discuss when we get to our third stage of formal and final debate on the draft legislation before us. If I am not mistaken, there is nothing by way of an injunction procedure either in the proposed Bill or in the existing legislation under we are presently operating. Instead there are provisions for applying duty on a provisional basis or, under the existing legislation, perhaps on an actual basis in the case of a situation referred to by Mr. Hales.

I would like to ask Mr. Arthur if he could tell me, at the same time as he is answering Mr. Hales, if there is anything by way of an injunction procedure contemplated in the Anti-Dumping Code which was signed by the various nations which took part in the Kennedy Round and is there anything by way of an injunction procedure in the present laws of our major trading partners?

Mr. Arthur: No.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Mr. Arthur has answered.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me if this suggestion were followed it would open up a whole new area of abuses. I do not think it would be a feasible possibility at all as far as making this legislation work more effectively.

Mr. Hales: I would like to hear from one of our witnesses on this.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Are you finished, Mr. Perrault?

Mr. Perrault: I do not think it is possible to put in a word like "expeditiously". I think the only assurance we can obtain from the officials is that they will treat the applications in sequence and order and act as quickly as possible. How can we establish any other criteria?

Mr. Danson: It seems to me that we are asking the Departmental officials to be efficient which, I am sure, they are now. The actual practical impact of this is that if something is being investigated, any businessman is going to be very careful if he knows this is under review before he starts bringing in other like goods under like circumstances. The threat of the legislation is good enough.

• 1215

We must realize, too, that we are all on the same side. We are trying to protect Canadian interests. Is that not what our officials will be doing? The fact that the investigation takes place immediately should be enough of a deterrent to any further abuses. Possibly the gentlemen from the chemical industry are not satisfied on that score.

Mr. Hart: Mr. Chairman, I fully agree that we will be very happy and pleased to see investigations starting forthwith, to see investigations starting within a matter of days after a complaint has been made—a complaint substantiated by sufficient evidence to induce or persuade the Deputy Minister to reach an opinion.

However we are concerned that the Deputy Minister should reach his opinion quickly because until he reaches an opinion he does not initiate an investigation. There is no concern on our part about getting on with the investigation forthwith, but we are anxious that he make up his mind quickly that there is justification for investigation.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Again, I do not wish to brush aside the very important point made by Mr. Hales, but I do suggest that it is the kind of thing we should look at when we made our final report. I have looked at the clock and note that we have several other sections in this submission to deal with. In order to perhaps save a little time I wonder if we might ask Mr. Arthur to make comments on the remaining sections which would give us an indication of where the weight and importance might lie and then we could discuss them seriatim in order. Would that be agreeable?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, the next suggestion of the Canadian Chemical Producers' Association related to clause (6)(a)(ii). The suggestion of the Association is that the wording should be amended as follows:

...the margin of dumping of the goods

the word "or" changed to "and"

and the actual or potential volume of dumped goods are negligible, or ...

Mr. Chairman, this particular paragraph relates to the termination of an investigation by the Deputy Minister and I would suggest it may be more clearly understood by the Committee if I were to read it in the following manner. Under subclause (a):

(a) where he is satisfied that

(i) there is insufficient evidence of dumping to justify proceeding with the investigation, or

(ii) the margin of dumping of the goods, or

(iii) the actual or potential volume of dumped goods is negligible ...

In other words, there are three conditions set out here which may cause him to terminate his investigation. The first is insufficient evidence; the second is that the margin of dumping of the goods is negligible and the third is that the potential volume of dumped goods is negligible. It is a matter of whether or not either the margin of dumping or the potential volume would, indeed, cause injury. I would suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this wording is carried forward from the Code.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): We will now move to the comments on clause 14.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I would say that the amendment the Association has suggested to clause 14(1)(b) flows out of their suggestion with regard to clause 13(6). I think the argument that was given for clause 13(6) would apply here. Clause 14 deals with the preliminary determination of dumping and, again, as a result of his investigation the Deputy Minister has to be satisfied that the goods have been or are being dumped and the margin of the dumped goods and the potential volume thereof is not negligible. In those two circumstances there is likely to be injury and on that basis he comes to his preliminary determination. So, these two requirements need to be met before he makes his preliminary determination.

• 1220

I suggest, sir, that the proposal which the Association has made with respect to clause 14(1) would only apply if the changes they proposed in clause 13(6) were met.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Would you now proceed with clause 16(5)?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, clause 16(5) of the proposed legislation says:

The Secretary shall forward by registered mail a copy of each order or finding to the Deputy Minister, the importer, the exporter and such other persons as may be specified by the rules of the Tribunal.

The Association has suggested that the subclause:

...be amended to add "complainants, if any" to the list of parties to be forwarded a copy of each order or finding, and such notice should also be published.

Mr. Chairman, under clause 25 of the proposed Bill the Tribunal is given authority to:

... make rules respecting

(a) the sittings of the Tribunal; and

(b) the procedure for making representations to the Tribunal and generally the manner of conducting any business before the Tribunal.

It was the draftsmen's view that this would give the Tribunal sufficient latitude to make rules regarding those that should be notified as a result of any order or finding they make.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): And finally, on clause 30?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, this is a rather long suggestion that has been made by the Association. The suggestion, as I understand it, is that the Association believes the Panel is "redundant and undesirable" and they recommend therefore, the deletion of clause 30 of the draft legislation which sets up this Panel.

Mr. Chairman, the only comment that I would care to make at this time, as Mr. Grey mentioned to you in an earlier sitting, is that the purpose of this clause is to provide some formal means by which the Tribunal would have made available to it information about the state of economic activities in a particular industry in Canada. It is quite clear, however, from the proposed legislation that the Tribunal is not bound by this advice; they are only bound to seek it, but are not bound to heed it. I have no other comments that I would care to make on that particular suggestion.

• 1225

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Thank you, Mr. Arthur. Gentlemen, I suggest that we now retrace our steps and deal with the specific clauses in turn. I will ask the Canadian Chemical Producers' Association if they wish to make any further comments on their proposal for the rewording of clause 13 (6) (a) (ii).

Mr. Stokes: Mr. Chairman, the reason we are concerned in this area is that a large volume of goods which, say constituted negligible dumping could be as damaging to a Canadian industry as could a small volume with a large degree of dumping. It seems to us that the legislation certainly would not cover this.

Mr. Hart: Mr. Chairman, the prime purpose of this particular recommendation is to further strengthen the legislation for the protection of Canadian producers against injurious dumping.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, possibly the misconception is in my mind, but it seems to me there may be a misconception. The words referred to by the witnesses refer to circumstances under which the Deputy Minister can reach a certain decision. They do not mean that these circumstances are such that after, say, reference to the Tribunal these circumstances will not be finally deemed such that will oblige the imposition of dumping duty. Am I right or wrong in that, Mr. Arthur?

Mr. Arthur: That is correct if I understand the import of the question.

Mr. Gray: The circumstances you mentioned and which are covered by the wording cited in your brief are not such that they will always be excluded from the imposition of dumping duty. These circumstances just enable the Deputy Minister to act in a certain way, but this does not mean that the other provisions of the Bill will not enable those concerned to refer the matter to the Tribunal which may come to a different conclusion such that duty will finally end up being imposed.

Mr. Hart: Mr. Chairman, this provides another aspect of discretion. If the wording were to remain as is the discretion to be exercised by the Deputy Minister would be somewhat greater than would be the case if the wording that we are proposing were adopted.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): What the industry is suggesting is that before the Deputy Minister is entitled to make a determination that this is not a case to be proceeded with further, he would have to be satisfied that both the margin of dumping was negligible and the potential volume of dumped goods was negligible.

Mr. Gray: Would this not limit the area of discretion of the Deputy Minister in a way which might be adverse to Canadian producers? The Canadian producers might want to argue either of these situations and your proposal would make it necessary for both to be in existence.

Mr. Hart: In this particular case, Mr. Chairman, it is desirable that the investigation should not be terminated because, for example, the margin of dumping alone is negligible, but the volume may be very substantial or vice-versa. We are just asking that the investigation continue.

Mr. Gray: Would it not be better if the conclusion were reached as quickly as possible so, if necessary, it could go to the Tribunal which would lead to final action being taken?

Mr. Stokes: He may decide to terminate the whole matter.

Mr. Gray: Yes, he has to give notice and the domestic producer who does not agree then can proceed immediately to appeal to the Tribunal. It seems to me—I may be in error in this—that what you are proposing could lead to a stretching out of things when you have just been complaining about the risk of that.

• 1230

Mr. Stokes: Mr. Chairman, I doubt if this would lead to any lengthening of the situation. Surely the Deputy Minister will have the facts in front of him on the volume and the degree of dumping at this time. It is just a matter of combining the two rather than looking at one and then the other individually, in which case he could terminate on one or the other.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Gentlemen, are there any further comments on clause 13(6)? Could we then proceed to a discussion of clause 14(1)(b) which is not unrelated?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, may I make a correction in my previous comment. The question of dumping rather than injury, of course, under this agreement is something to be appealed to the Tariff Board rather than the Tribunal. I should correct my previous comment.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Mr. Stokes have you any further comment to make on the proposal regarding clause 14(1)(b)?

Mr. Stokes: No, Mr. Chairman. If the Committee accepts our reasons for changing clause 13 then automatically they would accept our amendment to clause 14(1)(b).

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Are there any further comments or questions, gentlemen? Then may we look at the proposal with reference to clause 16(5) dealing with the procedure of the Tribunal. Has the delegation any comments on Mr. Arthur's remarks, or any further observations to add?

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, I do not recall Mr. Arthur giving us any reasons why the complainants should not receive a copy of each order. I think it would be of great interest to the complainants to have the findings of the Tribunal. I cannot see any reason why they should not receive it.

Mr. Stokes: Mr. Chairman, I may be assuming something here that is not correct, but it seems to me that it is almost an error or omission in the drafting, because the complainant after all is the man most affected in all this.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I think the answer was that it is assumed the Tribunal will make the specific rules to cover this particular point. However, with the greatest respect to the draftsmen of the proposed legislation, I agree that I am not going to assume anything in this particular case. It seems to me there should be a provision here. A long road has been paved with pious intentions and pious hopes.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman I think that Rod Grey already indicated to us in his evidence that during the final stage of our proceedings he may well be proposing for our consideration certain changes in wording and so forth. This may be something that the officials will take note of and which we will be able to consider during the final stage of our proceedings.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, may I suggest at this point, supposing the draftsmen do not do this, that then it will be before the House and we will have an opportunity of making an amendment in the House to see that it is done.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): I think, hopefully, Mr. Hales, that in the final round of discussions in the Committee we will come to a consensus on all of these points. I think for the benefit of our delegation and for the benefit of everyone present, we should explain that while we are giving careful consideration to the points raised it would be obviously very premature for the Committee to say yes or no to any specific suggestion.

• 1235

With reference to clause 30 a rather fundamental change is proposed and it has been commented upon. Have you some observations on this proposal Mr. Stokes?

Mr. Stokes: Yes, I would like Mr. Hart to deal with this.

Mr. Hart: Mr. Chairman, we have a number of reasons for being quite concerned with this particular provision to establish a Panel. We are concerned that a Tribunal composed of five capable, experienced men appointed by the government, a Tribunal which shall be deemed to be a court of law, a court of justice, should be required, whether it wishes or not, to seek advice from a Panel of civil servants who may be at the level of Deputy Minister or who may be below the level of Deputy Minister. It seems to us that this may imply a lack of confidence in the Tribunal.

Another point is that the Deputy Minister of Customs and Excise is involved in every case of dumping. He has an opportunity in that position to direct to the attention of every other department likely to be interested, any views he may have, and he is also in a position to express his views to the Tribunal.

The Tribunal itself is authorized under clause 26(2) of the proposed legislation, to obtain advice from any department of government. Therefore, there is nothing to preclude the Tribunal from issuing a standing invitation to all departments of government to indicate their interest in any case of an investigation into dumping and the reasons they are interested. Now every department of government will be made aware of every investigation through publication of notice in the Canada Gazette.

Another point mentioned in our submission is that though the Tribunal is required to seek advice it is not required or bound to accept the advice of the Panel. We say, therefore, why make it mandatory to seek such advice?

Although the Panel is required to consider any matter as soon as possible these words "as soon as possible" indicate to us the prospect of delay. We are most anxious that there should be a minimum of delay in arriving at decisions by the Tribunal.

Also, we do recognize that Canada has certain obligations under Articles XV and XVI of the Anti-Dumping Code to account for all its actions to all other participants in this agreement with respect to dumping. We feel it is quite reasonable to assume that the members of the Tribunal will be fully aware of this obligation Canada has to account for its actions, and being aware of this obligation it would be governed accordingly. In these circumstances we feel that a Panel would be redundant and in fact undesirable.

Mr. Roberts: I wanted to say, Mr. Chairman, that I have been troubled by this clause and I do not think, in reading over the testimony, there has been a sufficiently good case made out, at least not yet. I am almost in entire agreement with the remarks of Mr. Hart. This does inevitably fudge the lines of responsibility in the administration of the act. It will impose a delay.

It seems to me what the clause really does is try to square the circle. It tries to open up an avenue of influence for deputy ministers or their representatives while at the same time holding the Tribunal absolutely independent. I suggest you cannot really do that. You cannot square that circle. You are going to arouse at least the suspicion of belief in the minds of certain of the public that there is a control or strong influence being exercised against Tribunal members even though they carry, formally in the act, the responsibility.

• 1240

We have to deal here not only with the legal wording of the act, we have to deal with the almost spontaneous reflexes of the public servants. Even though you hold out in the act that the Tribunal alone is responsible, the fact that you require the advice of a Panel will make the Tribunal give certain weight to the Panel's views. I am not at all convinced that we should really split the public image, at least, of how responsibility in this act is to be exercised.

I would like to have some comments from the officials on this. I am not really quite happy with their repeating Mr. Grey's words and not saying any more.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): I believe Mr. Hales had a question. Would you like to put it before we go any further?

Mr. Hales: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I have just a short question. Perhaps Mr. Arthur could tell us what they have done in this respect in other countries? Has the United States set up a panel to advise their tribunal or have any other countries followed a similar pattern?

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Mr. Harkness has a question. I do not want to make Mr. Arthur's position too difficult but perhaps he could take notice of all the points.

Mr. Harkness: In discussing this previously I pointed out that I thought there was a very considerable danger of considerable delay being imposed by this clause, and particularly subclause (2), which Mr. Hart has referred to. It reads:

The Panel shall as soon as possible consider any matter ...

It is very indefinite language and the Panel might well not meet for quite a lengthy period. Thus you might once more have the type of delay which causes considerable injury before any determination can be made by the Tribunal just because the Panel has not reported to it yet.

I think when we discuss the matter finally we should give considerable attention to this. I see quite a lot of difficulty and delay arising from the wording that appears here.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address my remarks to those made by Mr. Harkness and by Mr. Hart as to a possible delay in the Tribunal receiving advice from the Panel. In the paragraph regarding the activity of the Panel it says "as soon as possible". You will recall, sir, the other time this particular clause was discussed we pointed out our view that subclause (3) of clause 16 which says that the Tribunal shall, within a period of three months from the date of receipt of a notice of a preliminary determination of dumping and so on, is an overriding clause, and if indeed the Tribunal had not received advice from the Panel it would nevertheless be required to meet its obligations under this particular subclause. So I do not think on the matter of delay that this would necessarily follow.

Mr. Harkness: That provides at least three months' delay though.

Mr. Hales: You are out of business for that time.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Arthur do you have the information for us on what trading partners are doing or may be doing with respect to panels and this type of thing?

Mr. Hales: That was my question.

Mr. Gray: I wanted to know if you could give the information to Mr. Hales at this point?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, as members of the Committee are well aware the setting up of this particular Tribunal is a new departure for Canada. It was therefore considered because their decisions were economic in nature that it would be advisable to have available to them information that may be in various departments regarding the economic strength of any industry.

● 1245

As to the United States and the United Kingdom, both of these countries have for many years had legislation in effect which required determination of injury before dumping duty was assessed. Therefore neither of these, because they have a long precedent to go on, have the same panel as such. However, they do have available to them the information of their various governments.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Without prejudicing my previous stand about pious hopes or intentions, surely to goodness an enlightened Tribunal operating under these circumstances will avail itself of the powers given to it under clause 26(2) as suggested in the brief. They have ample opportunity there to seek the advice of any government department or agency they see fit. I am wondering why we again have to tighten nooses, so to speak. Well, this is real bureaucracy with more and more red tape and I do not think it is necessary.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I think the officials present from the departments concerned have noted the views expressed by members of the Committee representing various parties, and I think this is something to which we should give very serious consideration when we reach our final discussion stage.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Gentlemen, on page 3 of the brief there is a section headed General Comments. It deals, if I might suggest, with the matter that has been very much in the minds of everyone of the expeditious handling of complaints and the extreme danger which could be created for Canadian industry by the initial importation.

Similarly paragraph (b) deals with the question of administration. Again I might suggest that the considerations on this matter have been discussed amongst ourselves and with the delegation. We have also discussed the question of circulation of regulations inviting public comment before they become binding.

However, I think at this stage we should regard ourselves as open to final statements from the Chemical Producers' Association, and any concluding comments that members of the Committee might wish to make.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I think paragraph (a) could almost be called what some people have termed "one free dump". In discussing this with the Minister of Finance and others it has been pointed out that really the administration does provide for catching the goods retroactively and so forth. However, I would like to hear the views of either Mr. Stokes or Mr. Hart on just what is meant by the one free dump, and how they feel their industry could be affected by goods being dumped with a dumping duty then being assessed, but in the interval the goods would still be here. And what has happened to the industry whose inventory may still be sitting in tanks or on shelves, unsold.

Mr. Stokes: Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Mathewson has an excellent example of this that he has documented. I would like him to read it, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Mathewson: Actually I have two cases which I think will illustrate the point you are making, or the question you are asking, Mr. Lambert, and the need for expeditiousness in other areas.

Let us take the case of chemical "X". There are two producers in Canada with ample production to take care of the whole market. In the month of April a shipment of chemical "X" was made to Canada with the alleged objective of making a bridgehead in the Canadian market. The quantity shipped was roughly 10 per cent of the Canadian annual consumption. The advance offers and sales of the product subsequent to its arrival broke the Canadian price. As soon as the seriousness of the matter was recognized the member company that was hurt lodged a complaint with the Department of National Revenue in early May. It was not until early September after several follow-ups that the exporter was advised of what the Department considered to be the proper fair market value.

• 1250

Here is a straightforward case; the shipper and the importer were known; the port of entry and the approximate date of entry were known and yet it took four months to complete an investigation.

Mr. Gray: Under the existing law?

Mr. Mathewson: Yes, that is right, Mr. Gray.

In view of this, one might wonder how long a complex case might take. The new legislation allows for no retroactivity except in the case of massive dumping. Let us examine this case if it had occurred under the proposed legislation. I would assume that a shipment of this magnitude would be considered massive; by breaking the Canadian price it certainly was injurious; therefore, prompt determination on whether there was a dump or not would be vital.

The question that bothers us is while effective remedial action theoretically would be available under the proposed legislation through the prompt imposition of provisional measures, would the Customs and Excise Division think it necessary to await the pleasure of the exporter in providing price data before applying provisional duties? If they had in this case, the ninety-day retroactive period available in a case of massive injurious dumping would already have expired. For that matter, would a quantity representing 10 per cent be regarded as massive so that there would have been any possibility of retroactive action at all? That is my first illustration.

Mr. Gray: Perhaps we might invite Mr. Arthur or Mr. Hind to comment both on your example and the suggestions made in Part III(a) of your brief. I note Mr. Arthur has a few notes in front of him and perhaps we could have the benefit of this document.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, it is a little difficult to comment on such an involved statement as the one that has just been put to us. I think, though if, as has been suggested, it were injurious and massive that the Association has possibly overlooked or not taken into account clause 5. Under both the Code and the proposed Bill dumping duty will apply when goods imported have caused, are causing or are likely to cause material injury. Their comments in the brief relate to material injury and I would suggest that the first import, if it were large or the entered goods formed part of a series of importations in the aggregate that were massive and an injury were proven that the retroactivity would be 180 days rather than the 90 days to which you referred.

I would merely point out here, Mr. Chairman, that when the dumping action comes to the attention of the authorities it can be dealt with within 90 days of the date of the original importation and it may be that it would be subject to duty retroactively as much as 180 days from the date of entry. This would be covered by clause 5. Therefore, I would suggest that in the circumstance that has been put before you that it would be possible for this particular importation to be subject to dumping duty.

In this connection, Mr. Chairman, in answer to the more general questions about the first dump or the first entry being a free dump, as we mentioned earlier, clauses 3, 4 and 5 of the proposed legislation must be considered together. I would, however, say that even if the administration acts with due haste it is possible to have one importation that would escape dumping duty, but that importation may well trigger an investigation that would subsequently result in the application of dumping duty to imports after the date of the preliminary determination by the Deputy Minister.

• 1255

On the other hand, if, as has been suggested in the illustration, it were very large and was determined by the Tribunal to have been injurious or was one of a series of importations that were considered to have been massive, the retroactivity under clause 5 would also apply.

Mr. Mathewson: Mr. Chairman, could I ask a question for clarification? Where do you get the 180 days? I see 90 days mentioned here, but where is the other 90?

Mr. Arthur: Well, 90 and 90.

Mr. Mathewson: Could we take them one at a time and see if they apply in this case?

Mr. Arthur: Clause 4 deals with the application of provisional duty between the time of the preliminary determination and the time of the finding or order of the Tribunal which would be a maximum of 90 days.

Mr. Mathewson: But not going back. This is after the fact.

Mr. Arthur: Then I would suggest to you, sir, that you look at clause 5 (b) which says:

There shall be levied, collected and paid upon all dumped goods entered into Canada...

(b) that were entered into Canada during the period commencing 90 days before the Deputy Minister made a preliminary determination of dumping...

Mr. Mathewson: But that is only 90 days.

Mr. Arthur: There is another 90 days upon the decision of injury.

Mr. Mathewson: Yes, but I do not think in this illustration, unless I am completely wrong, that this would do me any good. The goods came in April, but if the decision were not made until September, I think that would be it if he waited that long to make it. I do not feel that this other 90 days comes in there. In this case the man had not even made his preliminary decision in 120 days.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I think we are dealing with a rather hypothetical circumstance.

Mr. Mathewson: They are very real, Mr. Arthur.

Mr. Arthur: I suggest that the illustration that has been put before us suggests that the Deputy Minister would not make his preliminary determination within 90 days of the importation that caused material injury. However, I was suggesting, and I think officials also have said that they hope it will be possible to make these decisions in circumstances where the decision could be made—the preliminary determination by the Deputy Minister—within 90 days of the importation that is alleged to have caused the massive injury. The Tribunal will make its determination of injury or order or finding of injury within 90 days and then that particular importation to which you referred would, indeed, be subject to dumping duty. In those circumstances there would not be one free dump.

Mr. Mathewson: Right, but what I am saying is that here is a practical case—you said it was a complicated case, but it is as simple as you can get. You knew all the people involved; you had all the data, but under today's condition it took 120 days for somebody to have made this preliminary decision. The question I was asking was, if the proposed legislation were in effect today and that same decision had taken 120 days, that would have been it. There would not only have been a first bite, it would have been a massive first bite. This is why we are worried about how expeditiously these decisions can be made. If they have to wait for the whim of the exporter to reply to letters at his convenience and so on, he can drag the thing and carefully avoid the provisions.

• 1300

Mr. Gray: Mr. Mathewson, I think there are some things that we should keep in mind here. First of all, the officials in question have stated it is their intention to proceed expeditiously and it would appear to me from the evidence given by Mr. Hind this morning in which he set out the additional staff and the additional administrative set-ups that he is putting into effect that they intend to proceed, without reflecting on what they did before, even more promptly than is the case today. In addition to that, I think there are provisions in the Bill where if the exporter does not provide information in response to requests by the Deputy Minister, then the Deputy Minister can and, in fact, is obliged under the Bill to make a decision on the information he has available.

Mr. Mathewson: Expeditiously?

Mr. Gray: My understanding of the proposed law is that the exporter cannot stall the proceedings so that his transaction will be escaped merely by not responding to letters or requests for information. I presume it is intended if the exporter tries to do this that the Deputy Minister under the provisions of this Bill shall make his determination on the basis of information available to him. I think I should ask Mr. Hind if I am correct in my interpretation of this.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, that is my understanding of the way the law is proposed.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, I have a final observation. Provided that preliminary decision is made within the 90 days, fine, but if it is made 92 days after, there is a free dump.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Gentlemen, if I might intervene for a moment, I see we have arrived at 1 o'clock. I feel we have come very close to the end of our discussion and I would invite the comments of the Committee on whether we should continue for a few more minutes or should we adjourn and reconvene at 3.30?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I propose we continue for a few minutes.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Is that agreeable to the Committee?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): I think the Canadian Chemical Producers' association have highlighted this question of the timing and I would suggest that we are now fully familiar with the problem.

Mr. Mathewson you said you had another example. Is it of the same kind?

Mr. Mathewson: No; it is somewhat in the same class, but it is of a different kind.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Very good. Mr. Mathewson is an expert in "class or kind".

Mr. Mathewson: Let me take another case to illustrate a different facet.

A single shipment of chemical "Y" representing roughly 30 per cent of the Canadian annual requirement of this type of chemical arrived in Canada in April. This product has a duty of 15 per cent; but was allowed duty-free entry for certain end uses. The goods were reportedly cleared under a free end-use item even though they were not sold to qualified users and were offered on the market at prices substantially below the market price in the country of origin. Complaints were lodged by member companies with the Department on the scores of dumping and the wrong item.

Apparently the prompt action of the Customs and Excise Division in querying the importer after the complaints resulted in the importer putting the material into bond. All through the summer this potential bomb sat in Canada in the midst of the market with its status unresolved. Its presence caused the Canadian market price of the competitive

Canadian product to be reduced. It also harmed legitimate importers of the same product who were not trying to dump by undercutting their lowest possible price. The exporter was advised of the proper fair market value almost six months after the complaint or roughly six and a half months after arrival in the country.

To the best of our knowledge this bomb is still in Canada. Since the goods have not been sent back, it might be concluded that the importer is waiting for January 1, 1969 in the hope that he can then sell on the market with impunity.

Surely this should be a product which can be ruled on now to preclude injurious dumping when it comes to the market. Is this a reasonable assumption?

Mr. Gray: First of all, let me clarify something. Has this situation you have outlined taken place under the existing law?

Mr. Mathewson: Yes, the goods are in here under the existing law. That is correct, Mr. Gray.

Mr. Gray: I just wanted to clarify something which I raised on your previous example. Neither of these situations are forbidden or prevented from taking place under the existing law.

• 1305

Mr. Mathewson: No. This example was not intended as a criticism of the administration, I was just stating a fact. Here are two cases and this is how long they have taken. This is perhaps typical, I do not know. These are ones I know of in my experiences.

Mr. Gray: Typical of the administration under the existing law?

Mr. Mathewson: Perhaps this is the best they can do with the people and the facilities they have available. I was just stating that this is what is happening today. Even with one or two more people I do not know how this can be greatly improved tomorrow. It is the pious hope problem.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): But if it happens under the new law, it is a free dump.

Mr. Mathewson: Yes, under today's law you can go back, but next year you cannot.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Hind, could you comment on this? What is the effect of these goods being here in bond and possibly being here in bond on January 1, 1969?

Mr. Hind: This may be a situation that should be examined. Unfortunately, I did not participate too actively in the designing of the proposed Bill, but the situation that you have here is one where people may, at the present time and in future, be able to bring goods into Canada and put them in bond which means that they do not pay any duty as long as those goods do, indeed, remain in bond. The duty is collected only when the goods are removed from the bond for consumption in Canada. I wonder if this might conceivably work back to what constitutes a perfect entry.

Mr. Gray: I think one of your colleague from the Department who, in fact, did take part in the preparation of the proposals, has a comment on when the entry will be perfected. Would the entry be perfected on the date the goods were put in bond or on the day they were taken out? Perhaps I have not phrased this properly.

Mr. H. D. MacDermid (Chief, Valuation Section, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise)): Under the definition clause, the entry, I think, would be perfected on the date on which the goods were released from customs' possession. I think if we were aware of this importation within 90 days and since we already have a ruling out it would be quite possible for us to catch this importation because we would have already gone through the process of establishing value for duty. The exporter now has a ruling. All we need to know is the date on which the goods are released and apply the ruling which is—I may not be quite right there because we would have to establish the value under the new law, but we would use essentially the same information. It would be a matter of establishing the normal value within the 90 days.

Mr. Gray: As a layman, can I ask you if the date of entry would be the date they were released from customs' possession or the date on which they were put into bond?

Mr. MacDermid: Under the new law the date of entry would be the date on which the goods were released from customs' possession.

Mr. Gray: At the moment the goods are in customs' possession, being under bond? Is that right?

Mr. MacDermid: Yes.

Mr. Mathewson: Would it be possible to determine injury in advance of the official entry when it is released from bond?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, you cannot determine the liability to dumping duty, but this would be open to the Deputy Minister to refer the matter to the Tribunal if he felt, on the basis of the circumstances of the normal value of the product in the country of export and the selling price to the importer in Canada there was such variance that it could cause an injury once it was released, that it was possible to establish a liability for dumping should it be cleared at that particular price. I think, sir, that is the intent of clause 3 of the proposed Bill, that a liability under certain circumstances can be determined. Of course, dumping duty would not be collected until the goods were properly entered into Canada.

• 1310

Mr. Mathewson: I have one final question, Mr. Chairman.

What would happen if for some reason or other the Tribunal were not appointed by January 1, 1969? If it were not appointed for several months or, shall we say, 90 days?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, my only comment on that is that I would take it that the government will assure if the legislation is in place there will be a Tribunal in place by January 1, 1969.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Gentlemen, are there any further questions?

Mr. Danson: I have one question on the last point. Would the new legislation, in effect, because there is a threat of injury by the bomb being in bond, diffuse the bomb? This is obviously a threat which has been going on for six to nine months.

Mr. Mathewson: The injury has already been done. The price has gone.

Mr. Danson: That is right.

Mr. Mathewson: Even though the product has not yet come onto the market.

Mr. Danson: I mean subsequent to a situation such as this.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, as I understand it one of the circumstances suggested here is that the price in Canada has declined as a result of knowing that this particular product was being held in bond. I take it that if those circumstances were referred to the Tribunal and the Tribunal were asked to make an order of finding on injury, that this certainly would be one of the factors taken into account.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): Just on this question which is a very intriguing one, now that the Department has full knowledge of all the aspects of this importation, and the goods are here in bond—I am not sure whether this question was answered—is it possible in this case for the protective measures and the proper valuation to be applied prospectively when the goods come out of bond and are formally entered?

Mr. Gray: I think Mr. MacDermid of the Department of National Revenue wants to deal with your question.

Mr. MacDermid: Mr. Chairman in my view it is possible to apply dumping duty provided the volume of the goods in warehouse is sufficient to cause injury. As far as establishing the value for duty is concerned we have now pretty well completed this process. I think the definition section would enable customs to catch this provided we got track of it and placed a value on it before 90 days and providing the importation was massive. Given those circumstances, then we would put the preliminary values on and it would go to the Tribunal. If the Tribunal were satisfied that there were injury then the dumping duty would be applied to this importation.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Blair): It may be reassuring to Canadian industry to know if people have stashed imported goods away in bond in the hope of putting them on the market after January 1 the Department is not defenceless.

May I say to the delegation, unless there are further questions, that we greatly appreciate your coming here, and I think we are all of the opinion that you have contributed very much to our proceedings. Thank you very much.

AFTERNOON SITTING

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: I must apologize for my absence this morning which meant you had to find an acting chairman, as our Deputy Chairman is abroad on special business. I would thank Mr. Blair for taking the Chair this morning.

[English]

This afternoon we have as witnesses a delegation from the Graphic Arts Industries Association. I will introduce the Association President, Mr. Gaston Boulanger and ask him to introduce the Association officials with him.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Gaston Boulanger (President Graphic Arts Industries Association): Mr. Chairman, allow me to introduce the members of our association who are with me this afternoon: Mr. R. P. White, Vice-Chairman. I will name the other members in the order they are seated: Mr. Maclellan, our General Manager; Mr. Buchanan, our Consultant; behind them are Mr. George C. Gardiner who represents the Canadian Lithographers' Association; Mr. J. A. Doucette representing the Canadian Paper Box Manufacturers' Association; and one of our Association's directors, Mr. W. E. Curry.

[English]

The Chairman: We also have with us Mr. C. D. Arthur of the Department of Finance, and I think Mr. A. R. Hind from the Department of National Revenue.

[Interpretation]

Has Mr. Boulanger a résumé for the Committee?

Mr. Boulanger: I do not have a résumé of the brief we presented; however I do have some notes I would like to read to you before I begin, if you don't mind.

The Chairman: Fine Mr. Boulanger.

Mr. Boulanger: Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, as President of the Graphic Arts Industries Association I would like to thank you for the opportunity you have given us of appearing before you.

Gentlemen, our brief is already before you and I would like to point out some of the reasons which cause us concern and why we are seeking assurance that nothing in the new legislation will make it easier to practice dumping than is the case at the present time, or to practice it more extensively.

I would also like to confirm as indicated in the letter accompanying our memorandum that the Canadian Paper Box Manufacturers Association and the Quebec Society of Paper Box Manufacturers, this first group is represented here this afternoon, gives us unqualified support.

The same applies to the Canadian Paper Trade Association which represents the paper trade.

A copy of the letter which we have received from this Association confirms their endorsement and will be given to you for your records.

[English]

• 1550

The Canadian Book Publishers Council through its President, Mr. Marsh Jeanneret, Director of the University of Toronto Press, has notified us that it wishes to endorse our submission fully.

This endorsement is given on the assumption that nothing in the proposed Canadian legislation or regulations would preclude eventual Canadian ratification of the Florence Agreement at an appropriate time when it may be in the Canadian interest to ratify that agreement.

In the opinion of the Council and of this Association the time for such ratification would not be appropriate until Canada is relieved of the non-tariff barrier to trade maintained by the manufacturing clause of the United States copyright law.

The Canadian Lithographers Association consisting of some 50 companies primarily engaged in printing by the lithographic process shares our concern with respect to any dumping of imported printed matter.

Domestic printing, publishing and allied industries comprise one of the largest manufacturing groups in Canada, with plants in all ten provinces. We believe they employ more skilled and creative Canadians than any other manufacturing industry. You will find the principal statistics for the domestic industry in Appendix A of our brief.

Appendix B presents the recorded statistical information regarding printed imports in 1966 and 1967, a) from all countries and b) from the United States. The footnote explains that the recorded volume of imports in 1968 is expected to exceed $200 million. However, because a very large volume cannot be recorded statistically the actual total may well be nearer $400 million.

Even if we ignore the immense volume which is never recorded statistically the $200 million level is higher than the volume of imports recorded by any other country, than by the United States, which has ten times our population, and which is the source of most of Canada's printed imports and which is our most serious competitor.

[Interpretation]

It is interesting to note that the Canadian imports from the United States are not limited to English language printed matter. A great and increasing volume of French printed matter, mostly educational, is now invading the publishing markets of Quebec and New Brunswick.

[English]

For purposes of comparison to help you visualize the scale and significance of our printed imports, I might mention that in 1967 the total Canadian imports of food, beverages and tobacco were $861 million according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The printing industry is contending with imports worth very nearly half as much and more.

Total Canadian imports in 1967 of all personal and household goods amounted to $417 million, while the total volume of imported furniture and fixtures was only $33 million. Thus actually and relatively you can see that our import problem is large and that it is serious in relation to the whole economy. Our own exports by contrast are negligible, not having reached $15 million annually according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures.

Now, Mr. Chairman, there is no question that a lot of our printed import is undervalued. It is dumping in the commercial sense whether or not it is so classified officially. Therefore it is unfair competition.

Since the government does not publish details of cases of dumping there are no statistics to specify. However, a year ago a senior officer of the Department of National Revenue told our General Manager that it would be fair to say that dumping of printed matter is a daily occurrence. In view of the immense volume of printed matter which pours into Canada every day through every port of entry, we can believe that dumping is a daily if not hourly occurrence.

• 1555

How are Canadian customs officials, who are dealing with goods of all kinds which must be cleared to make way for more goods, to know whether or not the declared value of a particular shipment is correct or not?

Normally the goods will be assessed for duty and taxed on the basis of the declared value and they will be in the marketplaces from coast to coast very quickly.

When a glaring example of dumping comes to the attention of somebody in industry or in government it may be that eventually anti-dumping duty will be applied. The process is slow, especially as the Department of National Revenue is expected to establish fair market value in the place of origin, whether it be New York or Los Angeles or Tokyo or somewhere else.

Meanwhile the cumulative effect of undervalued imports coming on top of a massive volume of normal imports are bound to be very damaging to the Canadian industry.

With changes in our society during recent years it has been plainly recognized by the government, by the business community and by all students of the Canadian economy, that more employment must be found in the manufacturing and services industry if we are going to provide for a rapidly growing urban population.

This will not be easy if there is any relaxation of our present anti-dumping procedure which is far from being ideal.

To conclude my remarks perhaps I should observe that there frequently are suggestions to the effect that anti-dumping measures are protectionist in the narrow negative sense, as if those who support such measures were advocates of high tariffs and afraid of competition.

So far as we are concerned in the printing industry we have always lived with tough competition and we get more of it than the printers of any other country. What motivates us in any discussion of dumping is the legitimate and reasonable concern to see that we are not subjected to more serious inroads by unfair competition. We will live with fair competition even if it is massive. But we hope and expect that our government will use its powers to check and to penalize dumping of undervalued goods.

[Interpretation]

Mr. Chairman, I thank you and the members of your Committee, and we are ready to answer any of your questions.

[English]

The Chairman: Thank you, Mr. Boulanger. Now, Mr. Arthur, are you ready to make any comments on either the brief or the remarks made by Mr. Boulanger for his Association? I understand the brief deals with clause 9 and material injury.

Mr. C. D. Arthur (International Economics Relations Division, Department of Finance): Mr. Chairman, the first matter raised in the brief I believe is the one relating to the provisions of paragraph 3(2) of the proposed draft regulations. These regulations relate to clause 9 of the proposed Bill which provides for the establishment of normal value of like goods, "like" meaning identical, that are sold at arm's length and in the ordinary course of trade in the country of export at approximately the same time as the goods imported into Canada.

Subclause (9) of clause 9 provides for detailed adjustments for differences in the terms and conditions of sale, taxation and other differences. Its purpose is to arrive at price comparability in the country of export in relation to the status of the importer in Canada. Subparagraph (2) of paragraph 3 of the regulations relates to a specific quantity of sales when those quantities are less than are sold in the home market of the exporter. I believe the point raised by the Association is that the proposed regulation does not specify the method to be used in determining what adjustment should be made because of the smaller quantity.

• 1600

I think, Mr. Chairman, it would be useful to look at paragraph 3(2) of the regulations which states:

...where the quantity of the goods sold to the importer in Canada was smaller than the smallest quantity of goods used in computing the normal value of the goods, the said normal value of the goods, as otherwise determined, shall be increased by an allowance to an amount which, in the opinion of the Deputy Minister, reflects the price for which such smaller quantity would be sold for home consumption.

While no specific method of computing this difference has been set out it is left here to the discretion of the Deputy Minister, and I assume that he would take into account the quantity discount schedule applying for those particular goods.

The Chairman: Are those your comments for the time being? Does any member of the delegation care to comment on that?

Mr. Boulanger: Before I make any comments on that may I say that I understand fully the problem on the assessor in the port of entry in establishing the value of every different production. I am not going to be bogged down in the same thing so I will ask Mr. Buchanan, our consultant, to answer that question.

Mr. W. W. Buchanan (Consultant, Graphic Arts Industries Association): Mr. Arthur we are not so much concerned here with what would normally be thought of in the trade as quantity discounts.

In the printing industry the problem for a particular run of printing is usually a cut, and it is not usually a question of having a series of discounts for different volumes of goods. I may go into a print shop and make an arrangement for wrappers for Palmolive soap or labels for bottles of whiskey. In the United States, if I am Colgate-Palmolive Pete, I probably need 200 million wrappers or something in that order. If I am the Canadian subsidiary I might need 15 million. It is obvious, I am sure, to everyone here that it is very much cheaper to manufacture 115 million wrappers for Palmolive soap, or indeed to make 100 million than it is to make 15 million.

We are concerned that the normal value should reflect what it would cost a consumer in the United States if he were to buy not 100 million but 15 million wrappers. As we understand the legislation, we believe that the Deputy Minister could take this into account, and indeed, would take it into account.

We put this story the way we did in the brief simply to give this Committee a chance to confirm or to deny our interpretation of the Bill and the proposed regulations as we understand them. Quite specifically we believe that the Deputy Minister could say the cost of producing the Palmolive soap wrappers I am speaking of is the selling price at which the United States company bought them plus 30 per cent, which is roughly what he does today.

If that is so, if we properly understand the legislation and that is its import, then we are moderately satisfied. In other words we are not going backwards.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I would say that understanding is correct, that the provisions of clause 9 in the establishment of normal value in the country of export provides under subclause (d) for taking into account the differences in the terms and conditions of sale and so forth. I suggest these provisions of clause 9 would allow that difference in quantity or volume to be taken into account by the Deputy Minister of National Revenue in determining normal value.

• 1605

I might say, Mr. Chairman, that the regulation to which I referred has been placed for that purpose, recognizing that there may well be sales to Canada that are smaller in volumes or quantities than in the home market of the exporter.

Mr. Buchanan: I think, Mr. Arthur, this is a problem which is peculiarly acute in our industry. We appreciate that in a great many other industries normal purchase in the United States might be larger than in Canada. However in the case of a print run it is not only likely to be larger, but it is likely to be larger by a factor of 15 to 1. As I say, the Deputy Minister hitherto has taken that into account and we were very pleased to see the Bill and the regulations because as we construe them they would permit him to continue to do so.

Mr. Arthur: That is correct.

The Chairman: Are there any other comments from the Association delegation? Has Mr. Hind any comments to make on the brief?

Mr. A. R. Hind (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise)): No sir, we have nothing to say at this point. We agree with the answer given by Mr. Arthur.

The Chairman: Thank you, Mr. Hind. Are there any questions gentlemen, on clauses 3 or 9, or the brief presented by the Association?

Mr. Trudel: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question of Mr. Buchanan. You have used examples, both regarding labels I understand, and from the information you have given to the Committee I gather that the overrun printing in the United States could be used in Canada. Am I correct in assuming that for the two examples you gave this is not so? You cannot use the original printing in that form because it is not acceptable in Canada?

Mr. Buchanan: I understand this is feasible with very minor changes in the plates. However, I think that question would be better answered by some other member of the delegation who is more familiar with printing than I am.

Mr. David Maclellan (General Manager, Graphic Arts Industries Association): Mr. Chairman I am not altogether sure of the point that the gentleman is making, but we have a tremendous volume of material coming in from the United States which is usable here. I have in front of me a reminder of a case a year ago where 200,000 circulars in single sheets were imported into Winnipeg by the Canadian subsidiary of a United States organization.

The Department of National Revenue held up this shipment because of marking regulations—there was no imprint—with the result that a Winnipeg printer was called in to imprint every sheet with “Printed in U.S.A.”. The importer complained about the cost and it became more understandable when we found he had apparently paid nothing as this came from the parent company, and there may have been no sale involved.

However, this type of thing is commonplace. We drew it to the attention of the Department and then found to our surprise that they had great difficulty tracing the shipment, although they had held it up because of marking regulations. We brought it to the attention of the Department because we had reason to question the possibility of dumping, or certainly of undervaluation. Of course we are not told what is the conclusion.

There are many other instances. You might pick something like Lifesaver wrappers. You can imagine that at this moment there are millions of these on sale across Canada in every confectionery store, every hotel newsstand and so on, in many different colours. As it happens these are sometimes printed in Canada and sometimes in the United States. For the Canadian run they have only to add the words “Printed in U.S.A.” which are not noticeable to most people, and they ship these into Canada. This must be done at a fraction of what the cost would be to produce the Canadian requirement in this country. I could cite many other examples but perhaps these will serve.

• 1610

Mr. Buchanan: If labels became more commonly bilingual we would have less trouble.

Mr. Trudel: I asked the question, Mr. Chairman, because both the examples put forth related to labels. Now you are speaking of circulars which is in an entirely different field. If you are labelling food, as you can well understand, the labelling has to be different and it has to be another run.

Mr. Maclellan: It touches the whole range sir. You can imagine books of all kinds; the periodicals we read, regardless of valuation; advertising material for companies doing business in both countries. The same might apply to an English, or French, or German company, but it is most obvious in the case of the United States because the same products are advertised and sold in both countries. Here, of course, we run up against the purchasing policies of some of these companies. I might cite Imperial Oil as an example of a company which is controlled in the United States but whose policy is to buy everything possible in Canada, to Canadianize their operation. However, another American company may take everything from its parent and we might lose everything, and there are all kinds of companies in between.

Mr. Buchanan: On this point, it is fair to say there are some things printed in the United States that would not be suited for this market, and to that extent we are not in too serious trouble. However, there are a great many things which are perfectly suitable to supply the Canadian market from an overrun of the United States printing; sometimes with no changes and sometimes with minor changes.

Mr. Trudel: This is the reason I raised the question, thank you.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, the graphic arts industries in this country have made great progress in the past ten or fifteen years. I have had an indirect connection through advertising with these industries and some great advances have been made. I realize that the printing and allied trades are in an extremely competitive business now, and the margins are very narrow for some companies. I notice that the growth in the number of establishments between 1962 and 1966 really has been quite small compared to the growth in some other industries.

Have there been many bankruptcies or mergers in the industry during that period of time? I am interested, Mr. Chairman, in any special difficulties which may have arisen in the past ten years in this industry. Do you detect, for example, new trends developing in the United States which pose a special challenge to the industry in Canada? Are there special or new trends developing which should be brought to the attention of the Committee? Are United States companies posing a more difficult challenge now than they did, perhaps, five years ago, and if so, in which direction?

Mr. Maclellan: Mr. Perrault, the American companies, of course, are taking a constantly increasing part in our economy and we are all aware of this. Nearly everyone of them must use printing in one way or another.

First in answer to your initial question about bankruptcies, there have been quite a few in the past month. In the course of a year, just using rough figures, there would be something like 175 or 200 companies out of over 3,000 which would either go out of business or merge or be sold. However, a similar number might start up so you will find over the years we are discussing that there has been very little change in the total number of companies. However, there is quite a turnover.

Mr. Perrault: There have been some difficulties?

Mr. Maclellan: Yes. In five years something close to 900 or 1,000 companies would disappear. Most of these are small, although occasionally there is a bigger one that falls by the wayside. Two companies, to my knowledge, have gone bankrupt in Montreal within the last month.

There have been great changes technologically, and in merchandising, and these are bound to affect printers.

Mr. Perreault: In that connection, Mr. Chairman, can you tell me where most of the equipment is purchased for the graphic arts industries now?

Mr. Maclellan: We buy most of our equipment from our main competitor, the United States; some comes from Europe and very little from Japan. Most of it comes from the United States.

Mr. Perrault: What kind of duty would you pay?

• 1615

Mr. Maclellan: Presses for newspapers and magazines, and curiously enough telephone directories, used to come in duty free. As of July 1 the duty has been removed from all presses above a certain size. The sheet size or image size happens to be 17 by 22 inches. Smaller presses of the duplicator size are still dutiable at 10 per cent. For other equipment, composing room equipment, there are variations, and if my memory serves me correctly, duty might range to over 20 per cent. This recent removal of duty was a result of representations to the Tariff Board and the Department of Finance and the GATT became involved in it also. However, the problem had been, and with regard to other equipment still is, that we are buying largely from the United States, and we are cutting our own throats by increasing the capital costs or financing costs. This is a serious problem.

The Americans are coming into this country more and more, particularly through ownership of Canadian operations. Then the purchasing practices of these companies become a real problem, especially if the subsidiary takes from the parent and there is no sale involved, or perhaps a nominal valuation.

Mr. Perrault: Do you mean the literature prepared for the parent company and then distributed in Canada?

Mr. Maclellan: Yes.

Mr. Perrault: Do you mean, for instance, automobile companies or publishing companies?

Mr. Maclellan: It might be advertising literature, or forms for internal company use, or ratebooks, or price lists. There are all sorts of things these companies use.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, our witnesses have referred to the fact that one of their difficulties arises from their not having the economies which result from long production runs. Is the industry investigating the possibility of doing printing in Canada for the entire North American market for certain lines or products. This is working successfully, is it not, in the automobile industry from a production standpoint?

Mr. Maclellan: We have talked about this but you can imagine, Mr. Perrault, that this means talking to thousands and thousands of companies. This is a long-term proposition.

A couple of years ago one member of our board of directors went after a large United States company which happened to be a supplier to our industry, and he said: Look here, if we cannot get the printing of the Canadian requirements for your company, how about giving us a North American run once in a while.

Mr. Perrault: That would seem logical.

Mr. Maclellan: Well, this company did react to the extent that shortly after for the first time a North American run was done in Canada. However, to the best of my knowledge this has not been repeated. That company is a very difficult one that wants to centralize everything in its head office. There are many others like that.

Mr. Perrault: It would seem to be at least one of the ways to improve the competitive position of the industry, which is what we would like to encourage.

Mr. Buchanan: Mr. Perrault there is a problem, and it is the manufacturing clause in the copyright law of the United States. I do not know whether you are familiar with it, but copyright material which is printed outside the United States in the English language and distributed in excess of 1500 copies loses its copyright. Most people are not very anxious to lose copyright even in their advertising literature. The consequence is that as long as the manufacturing clause is in the United States copyright law we are going to be at a very serious disadvantage in seeking to do printing for the United States market along with our own.

Mr. Perrault: They would have to obtain a Canadian copyright on this material?

Mr. Buchanan: That would not help us in the United States. The United States copyright is lost, there is no owner of the United States copyright and anyone else in the United States may freely copy. This is, of course, something that owners of copyright are not very anxious to have happen.

Mr. Maclellan: If I might clarify that the manufacturing clause in the United States copyright law says that any material under American copyright, written by an American citizen or a person domiciled in the United States, to be distributed in the United States must be printed there. This prevents us from soliciting the printing of companies in the United States because most of them want to keep their material under copyright, whether it is a book or advertising literature or a periodical.

So here we have a powerful trade barrier, and I think perhaps it should be pointed out for the record that this is not the only problem with the United States. We have been working in Washington to get relief from this, so we are hopeful in that respect.

• 1620

The United States last year implemented the Florence Agreement which has to do with promoting the free flow of educational, scientific and cultural materials amongst different countries. This means removing tariffs on books and other material of that nature. The Americans implemented this and they want us to do the same. However, in doing so they specifically kept the manufacturing clause of the United States copyright law. So it is not as free a picture as it appears on the surface.

Also in implementing the Florence Agreement the Americans had a protocol written in which enables them to maintain protection against imports whether dumped or not. This protocol points out that as a result of adhering to the Florence Agreement if there are imports in such relatively increased quantities, and under such conditions as to cause or threaten serious injury to the domestic industry, then the country in question—it means the United States—can suspend in whole or in part, any obligation under this agreement with respect to such products. This is mainly printed material.

Mr. Perrault: In effect, you will have that same reserve under the proposed Bill.

Mr. MacLellan: While we are so concerned with the United States, we are anxious not to give away any more until we know what they are going to do. They have free play in our market, but we do not have free play in their market.

The Chairman: Mr. Curry, if you would like to comment would you please come to the head table?

Mr. W. E. Curry (Vice-President, W. J. Gage Ltd.): There are a couple of things I would like to say to help further the hon. gentlemen's questions or clarify them as far as the United States is concerned.

I believe the growth of the U.S. printing industry in two years was greater than the entire employment in Canada, both in numbers of people and in dollars. You raised the point that you saw very little growth in Canadian industry. This is correct. Canadian industry is relatively stagnant whereas U.S. industry has been booming. The reason, of course, is not hard to discover if you can have a tremendously favourable balance of payments in favour of the United States with very few imports coming from Canada.

One other point we might make is that Canadian industry and labour have been co-operating on a program in an attempt to get the manufacturing clause removed in the United States. We have spent $20,000 or $30,000 in organized efforts to educate and to persuade. We have a consultant in Washington working with us in trying to get the manufacturing clause eliminated so we can do what you have suggested, make it a two-way trade.

However, the printing industry in Canada has been working under very serious handicaps of tremendous imports without the same rights of going back into the U.S. market.

Mr. Perrault: Are you making any progress in Washington on this matter? Do you foresee any progress?

Mr. Curry: Yes, we do. In the last year and a half we have accomplished a fair amount. In fact, we now have what we call the Toronto Agreement where U.S. industry and labour—all industry affected and all labour unions affected—joined with Canadian industry and labour to sign an agreement which says that if they will support the Florence Agreement in Canada we will support the elimination of the manufacturing clause in the United States.

This was a bit of a milestone because there had been a fair amount of opposition in the United States to giving anything to Canada. When it comes to trade they are a little bit hard to move.

So, in the last two years, I would say the atmosphere for getting any action has been good. Unfortunately, they would not delay the U.S. elections, so we did not accomplish what we hoped to during this session. There is no single U.S. group in industry or labour opposed to the elimination of the manufacturing clause as far as Canada is concerned. To this degree, we have made some progress.

Mr. Perrault: It is heartening to hear this.

Mr. Curry: However, the imbalance is still very, very serious.

• 1625

Mr. Maclellan: I might also mention, Mr. Perrault, in connection with your remarks, that part of the boom in the United States is the expenditure of millions of dollars by government in the educational field and this is very largely reflected in the increased production of books of all kinds for schools and universities. There has been a boom in this respect in the last few years and I think Mr. Curry will bear me out on that.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, I have one final question. There are many, many American textbooks prescribed for Canadian schools. Together with many other members I know I would like to see far more textbooks produced in Canada and written by Canadian authors. What kind of challenge does that pose from your production standpoint? Many school districts have a great number of American texts. Are most of these texts printed in the United States or are they printed on Canadian presses from modified U.S. plates?

Mr. Maclellan: This is a mixed picture and I think Mr. Curry could answer this question better as he is in this business.

Mr. Curry: It is a very difficult question to answer in a couple of words. It is quite true that a tremendous amount of textbooks are coming in from the United States, particularly for use in the high schools and in universities where the volume of usage is such that the runs do not justify the Canadian editorial content and the Canadian printing.

However, in Ontario the regulations are such that textbooks in use in high schools and public schools must be written by Canadians and printed in Canada. Considerable progress has been made in the past four or five years to develop a Canadian textbook industry built around this regulation of Circular 14 of the Province of Ontario.

However, the big problem is the cost of editorial work and, again, the cost of printing spread over a small market which makes these textbooks pretty expensive. The textbook business is not as profitable a business as it used to be because of the enormous investment needed in editorial work for small runs.

Again, we have the problem in Canada of small runs with high initial expense spread over a small quantity of books, but progress has been made in this direction.

Mr. Perrault: I was very interested to hear that. It would be helpful to the industry, I suppose, to have Canadian texts produced which could be used on a more widespread basis from coast to coast and which would enable the longer production runs?

Mr. Maclellan: Provincial autonomy in education makes this tough.

Mr. Curry: We need a co-ordinating agency for that purpose.

Mr. Trudel: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct my question to Mr. Curry which deals with Mr. Perrault's line of questioning regarding textbooks and schoolbooks that are being circulated in Canada at the present time. We now find that American interests are buying into Canada and have recently purchased a very large textbook printing concern in Montreal. They are going to reverse the table, from what I gather, and are going to start printing here and exporting from Canada to other countries.

Do you feel that this is contrary to what you mentioned? You have been trying to establish a market and now they have come into our market and are starting to print here for distribution from Canada either to English or French countries.

Mr. Curry: The trend in educational publishing is toward larger and larger units. Raytheon has bought out a publishing house; General Electric and Time have bought out a publishing house; Xerox have bought out several publishing houses and I.B.M. have bought out a publishing house. I could continue down the list.

The movement is toward larger and larger units because of the high expense in developing educational material, not only in textbooks, but in film strips, records and everything that today goes along with the educational package. This is making it harder for Canadian companies to maintain an independent Canadian identity.

The trend towards the Americanization of the educational business through these mergers and purchases is certainly one that should be watched because it is hard to avoid when you consider the cost of developing some of these programs. I do not know if that will help you in your thinking.

Mr. Trudel: Fine, that has answered my question. Thank you.

• 1630

Mr. Maclellan: Mr. Chairman, there is a good deal of educational material, whether it is on the curriculum of a given institution or not, coming in from the United States in the French language, such as the Books of Knowledge and many other books.

Mr. Danson: It would appear on the surface of the thing that what is considered dumping in other industries seems to be almost a way of life in the graphic arts industry. It is astounding to see that we are the largest importers of printed matter in absolute terms in the world. What percentage of your figures would be for periodicals?

Mr. Maclellan: I think the statistics, Mr. Danson, attached to our brief will give you some indication. However, may I point out that these statistics do not include periodicals coming through the mail.

Mr. Danson: That is what I was interested in. Those would be in addition to the D.B.S. figures?

Then, we have the question of educational publications which has just been covered and which is a particular subject on its own, I would think. Is the big problem that you face the one of labels, packaging and advertising, particularly the over-runs on promotional literature and things of that nature? Is this where your greatest problem is today in so far as dumping is concerned?

Mr. Buchanan: I do not think there is any doubt but that the answer to that is, yes.

You see, when you get into the area of books and so on the relief from dumping which we get by way of Ministerial discretion in raising the fair market value or the normal market value as it will be in the new legislation, probably does not apply. Most books would be sold in representative quantities to any one of perhaps two or three dozen or fifty or sixty agencies in the United States and the value for duty or the normal value would probably reflect that kind of a price, notwithstanding the fact, of course, that the production run is enormous.

It is when you get into labels and advertising circulars and things of that sort that we have had in the past some measure of protection by way of adjustments in price and which we would expect to have in the future. It would not apply to anything like the same degree as with the textbooks and things of that sort, but I would expect—officials of the Department of National Revenue who are present can correct me if I am wrong—in most of those situations the value for duty would reflect the normal selling price in the United States.

Mr. Danson: Has there been an increase or a decrease in the percentage of printing for Canadian purposes over the past years, bearing in mind the technology, our own expanding domestic market, perhaps the increase in bilingualism and even, perhaps, good corporate behaviour? In other words, are we getting a higher percentage?

Mr. Maclellan: Of the market?

Mr. Danson: Yes.

Mr. Maclellan: I would not think that our percentage of the market is improving. The increases in imports are fairly dramatic, but another factor in this situation which you did not mention, Mr. Danson, is the question of new uses for printing.

As you know, of course, packaging has grown tremendously since the war and new uses for printing and growth of population have been our salvation. However, more and more we find our growth potential being tapped by our foreign competitors, particularly, the United States. We now have the Japanese showing quite a bit more interest in our market. It is not, as yet, very significant, but they are interested in our market.

Mr. Danson: So much of this deals with our existing tariff structure and I recognize the serious problems here having been in a business where you represent American companies and use a very small quantity of literature which you just automatically bring over from the United States, England or wherever it may be. The tariffs on them, if properly applied, are fairly stiff. Are you satisfied with the present tariff structure as opposed to the dumping regulations?

• 1635

Mr. Maclellan: Perhaps there would be some, sir who would not be altogether happy, but the fact is that we are living with the present tariff structure under which a tremendous amount of the imports come in duty free and tax free. However, we are living with it, but we would not want to see any further relaxation of tariffs, certainly not before we get some reciprocity from the United States.

Mr. Danson: I have just had an interesting thought which really is far beyond the scope of this Committee. Under the Automotive Agreement, I would not think that the printing and advertising of the automotive companies would come under that Agreement in any way. I am talking about the parts for the vehicles themselves. It would be a very interesting thing if, concurrent with this type of an agreement when a specific industry is involved and where it can be particularly related, something such as the advertising promotion could be tied in. This is the only industry which has this type of an arrangement at present and it appears to have been very successful. Has there been any initiative in this way to include such things in the Automotive Agreement?

Mr. Maclellan: We do know some loss, here, Mr. Danson. For instance, the owner's manual which you find on the dashboard of a new car...

Mr. Danson: ...and never look at.

Mr. Maclellan: ...is treated as a part of the car and I believe it has a part number. When these cars come in from the United States the manuals may come in duty free as a part of a car whereas if they came in as a shipment of printed matter, they would be dutiable. We have had complaints from some people supplying this market that there has been a loss of business since the auto pact came into force.

I do know of one company that did get the job of printing an advertising brochure for an automotive company for shipment to the United States. This, of course, is in a different category.

One of our directors is very interested in this type of business. He has written to one if not two of the large automotive companies urging that Canadian companies be given an opportunity to do North American runs. This, of course, happened fairly recently and it remains to be seen whether or not it is going to mean anything.

Mr. Danson: But you would have to compete with the existing U.S. tariff on printing, in that case. It would not come under the Automotive Agreement.

Mr. Maclellan: Not unless it went in as part of the car.

Mr. Buchanan: It definitely would not, if it were an instruction manual.

Mr. Danson: In that case, yes. That is very interesting.

I have only one more comment. You mentioned the increase in printing because of governments' requirements. In my short experience here I have found a great deal of dumping on my desk every morning. There are tons of the stuff.

Mr. Maclellan: We would like to have another day for a hearing on that subject, sir.

The Chairman: Do you have a supplementary question, Mr. Hales?

Mr. Hales: Yes, I have a supplementary to Mr. Danson's. I was very interested in Mr. Maclellan's observation that the owner's handbook was considered part of the car. It is hard for me to believe that a ruling would have been accepted or received by any official of our government in Canada that would label or say that an owner's manual printing job was part of a car.

I would like to hear if the Canadian firm who previously was printing this manual in Canada—I presume at one time they did—and who lost this printing business when it started coming in from the United States head office with the car, raised an objection with the officials.

Mr. Maclellan: This was taken up, Mr. Hales, as I mentioned earlier, with the companies concerned by one of directors, but I understand the attitude was that a car cannot really be taken care of without the manual. It is a must and it is treated as a part of the car. There are, perhaps, gentlemen in the room who could give further clarification regarding the official interpretation.

Mr. Hales: I do not think I am prepared to accept that a manual is part of a car at this stage of the operation. I would like to have some further word on this.

Mr. Maclellan: I agree with you, Mr. Hales. Since the officials from the Department of National Revenue are here, perhaps they could clarify this.

● 1640

Mr. Hales: I would like to know who made the official ruling that a manual is part of a car. If the people are in this room I would like to hear from them.

Mr. Buchanan: It is conceivable we have been misinformed, of course.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, if we are talking about a car coming into Canada with the manual in it—I do not think we are—but if we are, I would not expect a customs officer to withdraw the manual from the glove compartment and classify it separately. I would expect, therefore, that the car together with what was in the car would come in duty free under the Automotive Agreement.

On the other hand—I think perhaps Mr. Maclellan had this in mind—if he was speaking of manuals coming in in bulk for use in Canadian-made cars, I must say that I do not know if we have ever regarded such a thing as a part. I would have to say, though, that I believe the tariff item involved provides for the duty-free entry not only of parts but for accessories, attachments and so on. It may well be, if these manuals are coming in duty free under the Automotive Agreement, that they have been regarded as accessories to the car rather than parts of the vehicle.

Mr. Maclellan: You are quite right, Mr. Hind, I was talking about manuals coming in with the cars. I think I mentioned if they were coming in separately they would be classified as printed matter.

Mr. Hind: Yes.

Mr. Hales: May I pursue that a little further? For instance, all the Falcon cars for the Ford organization are made in St. Thomas for the whole of the North American market. Those Falcons are supplied with manuals before they leave Canada and are shipped into the United States. Are these manuals printed in the United States, brought in duty free in bulk, classified as car parts, put in the glove compartment and sent back with the Falcon, say, to any place in the North American market?

Mr. Maclellan: It would be impossible, sir, for me to answer for the makers of Falcon cars.

Mr. Hales: Yes, but possibly Mr. Hind would like to rule on that?

Mr. Perrault: I want to ask a supplementary along that same line. If there is free trade in automotive products and accessories, then surely there should be free trade in the matter of the accessory known as the manual of instruction.

I wonder if anyone in the room, whether from the Graphic Arts Industries Association or from the Department of National Revenue, could inform us, if, in fact, the manuals are produced in Canada as part of our participation in this Automotive Agreement? I think it is a rather significant question and additionally so, in view of the fact that we are talking about getting longer production runs for Canadian printed material.

Mr. Maclellan: The manuals have been produced in Canada for these cars. However, as to what...

Mr. Perrault: Are they still being produced in Canada?

Mr. Maclellan: I believe they are still being produced, but as I said in the beginning, I believe there has been some loss.

Mr. Perrault: I would certainly object...

Mr. Maclellan: Mr. White has reminded me that we have had one complaint about this.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Chairman, I would certainly object to any process which involves the shipping in of thousands of copies of United States manuals as you, sir, have stated without any duty being levied on them and putting them in the cars to be sent back to the United States market. I think if that condition exists we should correct it.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, in answer to that question, even if we were required under the law to collect duties initially on the imported manual, the fact that the manual later goes out of Canada in the car would enable the importer to recover 99 per cent of the duty that he had paid.

The Chairman: Did you hear Mr. Hind's reply?

Mr. Perrault: Yes, I did. I certainly think it is a flaw in the Automotive Agreement. However, if the situation exists, particularly when our graphic arts industries is facing these difficulties, I think it is rather worth pursuing as a matter of further study by this Committee.

The Chairman: Not for the time being, I hope, Mr. Perrault, because we are dealing with anti-dumping.

Mr. Perrault: I know, but this relates to it.

The Chairman: Anti-dumping does not relate to the Automotive Agreement.

Mr. Perrault: But, Mr. Chairman, this relates to whether or not this industry is being damaged. It is a form of dumping, I should think.

• 1645

Mr. Hales: Are we then to assume that car manuals printed in the United States are coming into Canada in large quantities, duty free, because they are looked upon as accessories or parts of cars? Is the answer to that question, yes?

The Chairman: I will ask Mr. Hind to reply to that question. I cannot.

Mr. Hind: I am sorry, Mr. Chairman, but at the moment I cannot give a definitive answer to that. I will undertake to get on the telephone immediately, find out and report back to the Committee.

The Chairman: Thank you.

Mr. Hales: My other question, then, would be to the Graphic Arts Industries Association. Mr. Maclellan, has your industry made a complaint on this specific kind of importation?

Mr. Maclellan: I do not have the letter here, sir, but one of our directors specifically complained to one, if not two, of the large automotive companies and urged that Canadian printers be given their fair share. I cannot quote the letter from memory and I do not have it with me but this whole discussion has stemmed from the fact that I mentioned the one complaint. I would not like to blow up a larger picture than necessary.

Mr. Hales: Do you know whether the printer registered a complaint with the administrators of the Act in Ottawa?

Mr. Maclellan: I would assume there is some awareness. This was discussed with the Printing and Publishing Division of the Department of Industry which is represented here by its Chief this afternoon. I do not know whether he would be allowed to speak or not, but he would know more about it than I would.

The Chairman: Mr. Blair, do you have a supplementary question?

Mr. Blair: On this question of the automotive manuals, perhaps Mr. Buchanan or one of his colleagues could tell us whether they, too, would be caught by the copyright provision of the United States law?

Mr. Buchanan: I think we would be. In the normal course of events I would expect the automotive manual to have been prepared by citizens or residents of the United States.

Mr. Maclellan: The only difficulty there, sir, would be that the owner's manual for a Chevrolet car would not be of much use to a Ford owner.

Mr. Buchanan: I would not think infringement would be a matter that anybody would be too concerned about in this particular case.

I wonder, Mr. Hind, if these manuals would be subject to duty as such, aside from the Automotive Agreement altogether?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I do believe they would attract duty otherwise.

The Chairman: Mr. Trudel has a supplementary. I am sorry, Mr. Danson, if we have cut into your line of questioning, but there have been a few supplementaries.

Mr. Trudel: My question relates to the opinion or question that was put forth by Mr. Danson previously. We have heard Mr. Buchanan, Mr. Curry and the other gentlemen describe the graphic arts industry very well, but it seems to me they have put forth the opinion that we are removing from the existing law a protection that will not be found in the new law. Is this correct? Either Mr. Buchanan or one of the other gentlemen could answer that one.

Mr. Buchanan: I think we said that as we construe the draft Bill and the draft Regulations, we are reasonably satisfied. We do not feel in so far as the Bill and the Regulations are concerned that we are seriously prejudiced by comparison with the existing legislation.

We have not yet touched on the crucial matter of how dump is to be applied and we do have some opinions about that. They necessarily relate to matters of administration rather than matters of legislation. It is much easier to tolerate the devil you know than the devil you do not know. We do have some concern as to how this new method of assessing dumping duty is going to work out as a matter of administration.

• 1650

We foresee a need, for example, for rather more expeditious determination of dump than was our experience in the past or was even very important in the past for reasons which anyone will understand who has read the legislation. It is in this area that we are principally apprehensive. As regards the legislation, we have said and are prepared to repeat it here, we are reasonably happy with it, but we are somewhat apprehensive about its administration.

[Interpretation]

The Chairman: I am very sorry Mr. Trudel, your supplementary question was not quite pertinent to the matter discussed by Mr. Hales.

Mr. Trudel: It is a question previously raised by Mr. Danson, Mr. Chairman.

[English]

I have one more question which I hope will be found to be in order, Mr. Chairman.

Is there any part of the existing law that you would like to see, Mr. Buchanan—this is a hypothetical question—carried directly into this law as it would relate to the graphic arts in general?

Mr. Buchanan: Mr. Trudel we have set out in our brief what we deem to be a proper interpretation of the Bill and the proposed regulations. If our interpretation is correct then the answer is that we are satisfied.

The Chairman: Had you finished, Mr. Danson? I am very sorry that again I cut your line of questioning.

Mr. Danson: No, no. I was just going to say that as interesting and important as the question of manuals in automobiles is it was not really my concern. I think Mr. Trudel has asked my other question about the real problems that concern the people here today with the anti-dumping legislation. I think this is pretty much the question you have asked, is it not Mr. Trudel?

Mr. Blair: It may be that the Association made this point before I came in, but I am interested in finding out what the present scales of duty are on different types of printed material imported into Canada.

Mr. Maclellan: Perhaps I might answer the question, Mr. Chairman? I think it is fair to say that apart from fiction most books enter duty free. Works of fiction are normally subject to a duty of 10 per cent. As to general commercial printing and advertising matter, the old Tariff Item 178 applies a duty of not more than 25 per cent. I think 25 per cent is the rate. This would apply to the general run of advertising literature, catalogues and general commercial printing.

There are other tariff items for certain things such as bank notes, blank forms and so on. The rate was, I think, 22½ per cent and it was reduced under the GATT by 2½ per cent this year. It will go down slowly.

Tariff Item 178 is the main item. Newspapers, periodicals and parts of newspapers enter duty free, including comics and advertising inserts. There is an inequity here, incidentally, advertising inserts, for instance the full colour ones that come in the daily newspapers now, enter duty free but advertising inserts for periodicals are dutiable. This is an inequity in the present situation.

Mr. Danson: You might be interested in knowing that the greatest work of fiction has just been published in Canada, I received a copy of the Platforms of All Political Parties Since 1867.

The Chairman: Have you any further questions, Mr. Hales?

Mr. Hales: I have another question but not on this particular subject.

Mr. Perrault: I am interested in the competitive situation with respect to Great Britain. You described rather well the impost which exists on the entry of United States printed material, but I remember one incident a few years ago when I ordered a book, Shirer's massive work on Nazi Germany, from Foyle's Book Shop in England.

• 1655

When it arrived in Vancouver I found it had been printed in Boston, Massachusetts, and it was a good third less in price than any comparable editions in the United States or Canada although it was identically the same volume, printed in the United States.

As I understand it, Mr. Chairman, there is no duty payable on books within the Commonwealth because there is no tariff and there is no restriction on the import of this book from Foyle's in Britain. I am rather mystified about a regulation which would permit a book to be printed in the United States, shipped to Britain and then sent to Vancouver for sale at one-third the price available in any book shop in Canada. It seems to me it must pose a competitive problem for the graphic arts industries in Canada, if the British can send books into Canada on this kind of basis. Do you think that dumping is taking place from Britain?

Mr. Maclellan: You are speaking about one book, sir.

Mr. Perrault: I am speaking not only of one book but of several books. I have since purchased a great many books from Britain and I have invariably found the price to be one-third less.

Mr. Maclellan: I can say that I do not know about the book printed in the United States and shipped to England and then to Canada, but books from Britain generally have been cheaper primarily because of lower labour rates. A large book like Shirer's, supposing it were printed in England, requires an enormous typesetting job and the economies they could achieve on the typesetting alone would give them a great advantage over a Canadian book printer. The same would apply, let us say, to Webster's Dictionary or the Bible or some other voluminous work. The typesetting would obviously be an enormous factor and we pay very high wage rates.

I wonder if I might say, Mr. Chairman, apropos Mr. Trudel's remark earlier, that there is another aspect to this. The new regulations are perhaps a bit of a two-edge sword to us. Under the present situation the Department can act perhaps automatically when it is satisfied that dumping has occurred. It may be that quite an interval might take place, the Department may not be too well staffed to detect all kinds of dumping, but then it can act on its own. Under the new situation much more of an onus would be placed on the industry. We would, perhaps, have to initiate a complaint, then appear before a Tribunal, do a lot of documentation, and demonstrate material injury. So as the victims, in a sense, we would be put to all this trouble and the individual company, of course, could not do it. With respect to dumping, under the present situation our hands are largely tied. The officials of the Department may not know they are handling dump material or undervalued material, and it does not come to our attention, perhaps until quite some time has passed. Then the damage has been done.

I have used the example before, and I use it again, I suppose in September or October 1969 calendar desk pads arrived in large quantities from the United States. They are on the market being sold during October, November and December, and the 1969 market could be ruined with one importation.

It might not put a Canadian competitor out of business but it could do him grave harm, although eventually, perhaps, duty might be applied. This type of thing goes on all the time and as there is so much of it and it is so widely diffused it is a real problem here.

Another aspect is that we are not talking merely about printing production. It will be obvious that all imported printing, undervalued or not, involves paper and we are a papermaking country. This is very important to bear in mind. Also, as far as the Canadian industry is concerned our activity or our product is very largely to move the goods and services of all Canadian industries and businesses. So we hope for a thriving prosperous industry keeping in step with the rest of the Canadian economy.

The Chairman: I think Mr. Arthur would like to make a comment on that subject.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman this morning we dealt at considerable length with the matter of one massive dump, and I do not believe it would be appropriate at this time to go through the procedures that have been laid out in this Bill to ensure that if the investigations are done within the period prescribed that a massive dump importation would be subject to dumping duty.

• 1700

However, there is one point on which I would like to comment Mr. Chairman. On page 3 of the brief the Graphic Arts Industries Association suggests that it would be difficult for their industry to prove material injury because of the geographic diversity of the industry. I do not believe that either in the Code or in the proposed Bill the suggestion is made that the onus is on the producers in Canada to prove there has been injury or that they have been threatened with injury.

The obligation here is very much on the government, or it is the responsibility of the Tribunal to establish material injury. I think one of the suggestions made in the White Paper is that it is hoped government departments would be able to assist you in this. I do want, though Mr. Chairman, to put on the record that it is not necessarily an onus on the industry to prove that they have been materially injured. Rather it is the responsibility of the Tribunal to determine material injury and presumably to gather information and to measure the indices that have been suggested in making that determination.

Mr. Maclellan: I wonder if Mr. Arthur would answer this question, Mr. Chairman? Is there not an onus perhaps on the industry to start the wheels turning to initiate a complaint? Is the Department going to initiate a complaint to start a case?

Mr. Arthur: I think, Mr. Chairman, an investigation can be started by the Deputy Minister or it can be on the basis of a complaint lodged by an industry. There is provision for the Deputy Minister to initiate an investigation on his own.

Mr. Blair: It would appear to me from the answer we had a few minutes ago for the generality of printing, apart from books, that the industry now enjoys a fairly substantial protection; is that correct? Twenty-five per cent is a high rate in the present context of the Canadian tariff.

Mr. Maclellan: I would not like to suggest, Mr. Blair, that it is high in relation to other countries.

Mr. Blair: In other countries comparable levels of duty apply against the importation of printed material.

Mr. Maclellan: The United States, for example, has had a pound rate which has been very substantial in the case of lithographic matter. In some cases duty might be as much as the cost of the job. I recall this happening a year or two ago to a Montreal printer. He telephoned me, screaming because he found the United States duty was almost as much as he was charging for the printing to a United States customer.

Mr. Blair: Not only do you face the copyright problem in the United States but you face a very high rate of duty if you export Canadian printed material to the United States?

Mr. Maclellan: This would be commercial work or advertising material, yes.

Mr. Danson: Just on that same question, I thought we had a pound rate that was pyramided by the number of colours as well. Do we not have that type of tariff at the present time?

The Chairman: Mr. Hind would you care to make a comment on the question asked by Mr. Danson?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I believe the reference that has just been made perhaps relates to the matter of valuation for duty purposes rather than the rate of duty on imported printed material, be it specific or an ad valorem.

Mr. Danson: This is the method that is used?

• 1705

Mr. Hind: Yes. Expressed differently, I do not think that the advertising item carries a specific rate of duty in stages such as you have suggested. Mention of that point earlier on had to do with the establishment of the value for duty purposes of printed matter coming into Canada in smaller quantities than are sold in the country of export.

Mr. Maclellan: I have a letter here on this point from your Department, Mr. Hind. It was written some years ago, but I think it is still true. It states that in the absence of a fair market value for the quantity imported it has been prescribed that the lowest acceptable value for customs duty purposes of printed and lithographic matter is held to be the exporters large quantity purchase price plus an advance of 30 per cent for materials of one colour and 35 per cent for materials of two or more colours.

In the case of printed or lithographic matter produced in the exporters own printing plant the lowest acceptable value for customs duty purposes is held to be the exporters production cost plus an advance of 40 per cent for materials of one colour and 45 per cent for materials of two or more colours. Now this would help to compensate somewhat, although not altogether, for the difference between short runs in Canada and long runs in a foreign country. It still would not bridge the gap in many cases.

Mr. Danson: Where is your principal concern in so far as the anti-dumping legislation is concerned? I think your industry is really in a very special position. Particularly I am very much in favour of the new postal regulations; I do not imagine your group are highly enthusiastic and also our paper industry is not exactly in buoyant condition at the present time. It is important that we find out where or what we should watch for.

Mr. Maclellan: There are a couple of points there which Mr. Buchanan might wish to supplement, I would like to take another day to talk about postal rates.

However, on this question, one area of concern is detection. There is so much of it, how can we detect it? We simply cannot, and can the government do it? We are not sure.

Test cases may prove to be deterrents. However, there is a lot of undervalued printed matter coming into the country and we are concerned about this, and about the growth of the whole thing. On top of imports at normal valuations it is added injury. We cannot complain about fair competition but unfair competition is another matter. This is our major area of concern.

Next to that, of course, is the burden thrown on the victim. He must suffer direct injury and he may be involved in cases before the Tribunal.

Mr. Buchanan: Mr. Danson to try to answer your question specifically about what this Committee can do, I think it is clear from our brief—I hope it is clear from our brief—that we are not asking for any specific changes in either the Bill or the proposed regulations. Our area of principal concern relates to the inevitable uncertainty which is attendant on any radical change in legislation.

Particularly, I think we are concerned about the matter of expeditious administration. As a matter of fact I might tell you, at one stage we had thought of asking this Committee to give consideration to recommending an increase in the staff of the Department of National Revenue for the purpose of the administration of this act. But we are taxpayers and we think you have a big enough operation now.

The Chairman: This morning a representative of the Department of National Revenue said that they have increased their staff in some capacities; perhaps not as much as you would hope.

Mr. Buchanan: I still am somewhat apprehensive that preliminary determination to dump will not occur with the expedition that we think is essential if this legislation is not to prove detrimental.

• 1710

We notice, for example, that there has been a consolidation of a couple of departments in Ottawa, and we suspect there may be some redundancy in the public service, as a consequence of these amalgamations. We hope there is, as a matter of fact. Maybe the Committee could give some thought to reallocation of some of these bodies to beef up the Department of National Revenue by transferring some of the redundant people from other departments. In this way we would hope to get more expeditious administration of this legislation without having to pay any more taxes.

The Chairman: I am sorry, Mr. Danson, I think we should return to Mr. Blair.

Mr. Blair: I will not be too long I hope. I wanted to find out whether there were any British preferential tariff items that applied in the publishing tariff rates?

Mr. Maclellan: There are a number of instances, I think Mr. Hind will bear me out, where material that is dutiable from Most Favoured Nations is duty free in the case of Britain. I do not have the tariff schedule with me.

Mr. Blair: Does that apply to the main Tariff Item 178, or whatever its new number may be.

Mr. Buchanan: As you know, Mr. Blair, it applies to most tariff rates.

Mr. Blair: Notwithstanding the existence of a British preferential item it is clear that the majority of printed material coming into this country comes from the United States.

Mr. Maclellan: Eighty-five to ninety per cent. There is quite a bit from Britain and there is a growing volume from France. This naturally can be expected to grow with the cultural agreements between France and Quebec. There is bound to be more printed material imported in the French language.

Mr. Blair: The impression I had was that your industry is concerned about the importations of what might be called printed material generally as opposed to books. I want, perhaps, to develop this for the consideration of the people who are here. I think as parliamentarians we have to be concerned about the free flow of information. I would hate, for example, to think that my friend Mr. Perrault who made a favourable purchase of a book in Britain might become the subject of a dumping duty assessment. I suppose the statute of limitations has run out.

Mr. Perrault: This is part of the Commonwealth agreement on free flow of information.

Mr. Blair: In any event this is one consideration. On the other hand it may well be the case that this new law presents the industry with an opportunity and it now might be able, on the basis that it has the potential of developing a greater degree of book publishing in Canada, to seek higher valuation of books which heretofore have perhaps come in without any particular attention being paid.

Mr. Buchanan: I would not have thought, Mr. Blair, that this new legislation would lead to any higher valuation being placed on books. Having read it I would not expect that result. I would expect that normal value for books under the proposed legislation would in all likelihood be the same value as would be determined under section 36 of the existing Act, for purposes of regular duty.

Mr. Maclellan: There will be higher valuations in the normal course because of higher costs. This is an inevitable progression.

If I may speak to your first point, Mr. Blair, about the free flow of information, nobody is more eloquent about the free flow of information than our American friends. However, again we must point out though they are talking so much about this they are very careful to try to ensure that as much will be manufactured in the United States as possible. We can still have free flow of information but printed here on Canadian paper.

Mr. Blair: I am not suggesting for a minute that anybody in this Committee would want to defend the principle of the tyrannical United States copyright laws which presents a very serious obstacle.

I have one final question which perhaps Mr. Buchanan with his expertise on the subject could answer. If the United States law deals with copyright, what is the position with regard to wrappers which may just have a trade mark on them. Is trade mark protection lost if this kind of material is printed outside the United States.

• 1715

Mr. Buchanan: I would not have thought so, Mr. Blair, but I would not want to parade as an expert.

Mr. Maclellan: There might be some jeopardy for the copyright in the original art work.

Mr. Buchanan: There might well be for slogans of one sort or another.

Mr. Danson: I am sorry, I probably have been as much to blame as anyone, but it seems we get very close to the tariff regulations rather than the anti-dumping law so many times. The question of detection seems to be particularly difficult, I would think, because many of the transactions about which you would be concerned—I am making an assumption—would be non-arm's length transactions. For instance, without mentioning any soap company by name, the parent company in Cincinnati might ship material up to their company in Hamilton, and no one might know about it.

We are mostly talking about competitive items on the market and this does apply to a certain extent in your case, I guess to a very large extent. Also to a very large extent there are transactions that might never be detected. In your opinion does this present a serious problem?

Mr. Buchanan: I think this is a very real problem, Mr. Danson. So many of these would relate to importations which in themselves are small but which in the aggregate are very important. I am not persuaded as to what the solution to this kind of problem is. With great respect I entertain a certain scepticism about the capability of public servants ferreting out this kind of information. I do not say this in any derogatory sense because I do not think they are equipped to do it. In the final analysis detection of dumping is going to be done by our membership.

As I say, so much of the importations are relatively small in themselves that it probably is not going to be worth anybody's while to pursue some little importation here and another little importation there. However, in aggregate they are impressive, as you can see from the figures on imports. Mind you, this is a problem which exists now and this problem is not going to be changed by the new legislation. This is a problem inherent in our kind of business.

We are going to have an added burden under this new legislation. Notwithstanding what Mr. Arthur says, we are still going to be a factor in determining material injury. We are going to have to provide evidence. I cannot conceive of anybody else effectively doing it. This is going to be an added burden to us, and one which we are not... Like other people we do not like new burdens. We appreciate the injury is there and we have to show it, and we are gratified that we are going to get some help. In the final analysis, speaking for myself, I am convinced this industry is going to shoulder the major part of the burden as is every other industry that sets out to establish material injury before a Tribunal.

Mr. Blair: But your main purpose in coming here was to seek the reassurance you have received that the valuation proceedings will occur as they have in the past?

Mr. Buchanan: That is right. Our interpretation of the Bill is one which this Committee appears to agree with, and that is a matter of gratification to us.

I do not know whether it is the Committee's function to make recommendations with respect to the administration of the legislation but if it is we hope the Committee will take account of the fact that expeditious administration is going to become relatively much more important in the future than it has been in the past. While we are not anxious that a large new army of people should be put on the public payroll we would like you to take a look with a rather fishy eye at some of the other departments to see if you cannot beef up the Department of National Revenue at somebody else's expense.

The Chairman: Is your question along the same line, Mr. Perrault?

Mr. Perrault: It is relevant to the matter of dumping as it relates to countries other than the United States.

The Chairman: Well, Mr. Perrault...

• 1720

Mr. Perrault: I am not talking about the administration because I do not think it is relevant to the problem we are discussing.

The Chairman: I think Mr. Hales mentioned previously that he would like to ask some questions.

Mr. Hales: My question has been introduced by Mr. Danson. It is relative to this question of detection or of administration. Let us take, for example, a United States subsidiary in Canada which has been buying labels and printed material from a Canadian printer. They generally buy six months or a year's supply of this material. All of a sudden due to these new regulations and the Kennedy Round they feel it is advantageous to buy from a United States printer or from their home office. Who is going to detect this dumping and who is going to alert the Department about this? It is quite evident that the American subsidiary in Canada is not going to register any complaint, but who is going to...

Mr. Buchanan: Shall we say, Mr. Hales, that it will be the printer who lost the order?

Mr. Hales: Well, yes, that is right.

Mr. Buchanan: If he does not do it, it will not get done.

Mr. Hales: He will not know for six months to a year when he fails to get the second order and a lot of harm will have been done in the meantime.

Mr. Maclellan: All sorts of things can happen, Mr. Hales. As an example, if I could use something else, but which is relevant, the playing card business. The playing card business in Canada is largely dominated in Canada by two large American companies, one in particular, which I happen to know was an enormously profitable operation. This company had a plant near Windsor. We only became aware of what was going on because we had a strike and the union brought this to our attention and then the duty question arose. This company found during the strike that it could bring the playing cards into Canada in flat sheets from Cincinnati, including the duty, for less than it cost to manufacture them in Canada. As a result they decided not to resume printing in Windsor and have continued to bring in their cards in flat sheets.

I recall quite a few years ago that some question arose about the valuation and this company looked to me, at first, for a little support. However, we were not too sympathetic because they were importing rather than manufacturing here. But here is a situation between the Canadian subsidiary and the parent company which ordinarily we would never have known about.

It so happened that in this case a gentleman from that company came to me and was, perhaps, more frank than he should have been. He showed me profit figures which were then huge. He wanted less duty—he was practically monopolizing the market anyway—and the climate that has developed, sir, is such that it is not practical for a Canadian company to get into the business. Then when all was said and done, they manufactured and brought them in in the flat sheets and put them in a pack with the words "made in Canada" on them.

Mr. Perrault: I have a short question about dumping from various sources.

Have you any evidence to suggest that dumping is taking place from nations other than the United States? I have noticed some printing in Canada—fine quality printing of calendars and so on—from Switzerland, Holland and Czechoslovakia of a very high order. Is there any implication of dumping in this type of printing which is coming into Canada or is United States the main concern? I asked a question about Britain and you never directly answered whether or not you thought any dumping was taking place from Britain.

Mr. Maclellan: Actually, I do not think there is much from Britain. These other items from Switzerland, Austria and Germany are highly specialized. Some of them are beautiful and this material is, perhaps, turned out to the whole world—the whole English-speaking world or the whole French-speaking world. We have not had a complaint about that, but last evening when I was at the news-stand of the Lord Elgin Hotel and I saw a pile of three-dimensional postcards from Japan. The words “printed in Japan” appeared where you would affix the stamp so it would be concealed after the postage had been put on. I have no way of knowing, but I wonder if those cards are being dumped or not and I wonder what valuation has been given. They are competitive, in a sense, with postcards printed in Canada, although they are quite different. We are not, at the moment, producing three-dimensional cards, but we might at any time.

• 1725

The Chairman: Do you have any more questions, Mr. Hales?

Mr. Hales: I am finished, thank you.

The Chairman: I think Mr. Hind has some information for the Committee?

Mr. Hind: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I was asked to determine how we treat automotive manuals when they come into Canada, as such. The answer I received is that when imported under the Automotive Agreement they do, indeed, come in duty free as accessories.

Mr. Hales: May I ask a question of Mr. Hind, Mr. Chairman? What department would make the ruling that car manuals were accessories or part of a car?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, that ruling would be the responsibility of the Department of National Revenue.

Mr. Hales: Was there any legal advice sought on this interpretation?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I cannot answer that question honestly as I do not really know. There are a number of things on an automotive vehicle that really are not part of the automobile, but they can, I think, reasonably be regarded as accessories in the sense that their use is tied up with the car itself.

I could mention such things as jacks for cars, possibly trouble lights for cars, possibly car radios and so on. The cars will function perfectly well without jacks, radios and trouble lights, but on the other hand, these articles are, indeed, fabricated for the sole purpose of making the operation of the cars practical.

Consequently, the word “accessories” is in the law—in the tariff item—and we must give some meaning to that word. We should be able to come up with something that is regarded in the trade as an accessory. Consequently, we have, indeed, regarded the owner's manual as falling into that class.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, it would appear then that all the—not all, but a large percentage—of the car manuals are being printed in the United States and are coming into Canada duty free to be put into cars that are manufactured in Canada and sent any place in the world. So, printed car manuals are coming in duty free. Is that right, Mr. Hind?

Mr. Hind: Yes, Mr. Chairman, that is correct.

Mr. Hales: I am surprised that the Graphic Arts Industries Association did not discover this and raise a strong objection. Possibly they have done so, but have not said so today. Would Mr. Maclellan care to say whether or not they did?

Mr. Maclellan: Obviously, Mr. Hales, we are talking about our customers who do buy a lot of printing in Canada and the one complaint, as I said, which was brought to our attention came from one of our directors who was printing car manuals and who had lost some business. He went directly to his customers about this. We were not asked at that point to take it up formally with the Department of National Revenue, but it was certainly discussed with the Department of Industry, perhaps informally rather than formally. Since I have refreshed my own memory by mentioning it today, I would be quite prepared to look into the present situation.

Mr. Hales: Would this be a very sizable business?

Mr. Maclellan: Yes, cars are being produced in very large quantities so obviously the press runs for these manuals should be very substantial.

• 1730

Mr. Hales: Would you like to estimate the value of such business?

Mr. Maclellan: It would be hard to say because some might have more colour in them than others. However, even on a black and white basis considering the very good paper used, it is hard to believe these books are worth less than 25 to 40 cents apiece, depending on the press run.

Mr. Hales: I understood, Mr. Maclellan, that earlier you mentioned the name of somebody who was here. I wonder whether he might be allowed to speak on this.

Mr. Maclellan: That was Mr. Roberts, the Chief of the Printing and Publishing Division of the Department of Industry who is in the audience.

Mr. Hales: If he would take the stand I would like to ask him a question.

The Chairman: I think before we do that, Mr. Arthur would like to make some comments.

Mr. Arthur: I think, Mr. Chairman, while this has been related to the automotive program, if this printed material were dutiable, imported into Canada and then re-exported in any form, there is a drawback provision in the tariff of long-standing that would apply which would give drawback of 99 per cent of the duty that was paid. These drawback provisions apply in many countries. Therefore, I think it should be put into that context. The question Mr. Hales raised was that if these goods were imported and re-exported and were dutiable at the time of the importation, they would be subject to 99 per cent drawback when they were re-exported.

Mr. Blair: Mr. Chairman, if I might make a comment? I think anybody who is familiar with the total customs tariff is well aware of the fact that many things fall into the category, and quite properly so, of accessories, parts and so forth.

I should think, even though these gentlemen have a particular interest to defend, it would be pretty hard for anybody here to explain to the purchaser of a car that the manual was something different and had to be treated differently than an automobile which was the subject of this international agreement with the United States.

It presents many complexities to me and I really do not think the fact that these books are treated as accessories represents any departure from the established canons of interpretation by the officials under the customs tariff. This kind of thing has been going on for years and if we had the ability here to examine the vast number of rulings that have been made, we would find a number of things that have been rated as accessories, parts and so forth.

Mr. Maclellan: You cannot very well use a telephone unless you have a telephone book. That is another accessory.

Mr. Hales: I do not think we, as Parliamentarians, when we accepted the Canada-United States Automotive Products Agreement thought for a moment that printed material was part of this agreement. It is difficult for me to realize that printed material is part of a car.

Mr. Flemming: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if it would be a proper question to ask Mr. Hind if he agrees with the fifth paragraph from the bottom on page 3 which says:

In short we presume that the proposed regulations would permit the Deputy Minister to appraise printed matter for purposes of dump duty in the same manner as he now appraises such goods for regular duty.

Would Mr. Hind care to comment on that paragraph?

Mr. Hind: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I would be pleased to comment on that. It is not true that the value for normal duty purposes as set out in the proposed draft Bill for printed matter will be calculated in precisely the same manner as the value for regular duty purposes which means as computed under the Customs Act. Mr. Grey made this clear when he was outlining the Bill to the Committee at, I believe, the first or second meeting. There are some points of difference in the calculation of the value under the proposed Bill and the value as contemplated under the Customs Act.

• 1735

I might mention two or three areas that I had in mind and this has been said before. Under the current Act, as officers of the Department of National Revenue, we may allow a discount which is for trade status which is not allowed in the country of export. Under the proposed Bill there is power for the Deputy Minister to allow an extra discount for trade level even though it does not exist in the country of export. That is one point.

Similarly, under the Customs Act in establishing the value for regular duty purposes, we cannot allow an extra discount for especially large quantities coming to Canada. Under the proposed law we can do this.

Another area of difference relates to the time at which the Department of National Revenue must determine the value for duty purposes. Under the Customs Act, this again is the value for regular duty purposes, we must have regard for sales at the time the goods were shipped to Canada. Under the proposed Bill the relative period is a period so many days preceding the date of sale. I said "so many days", because this area has not been decided upon, as yet. In other words, there is a blank number of days. I have heard it said that it might be a matter of 60 days. This would establish the period of time in which we must find the normal value in the country of export.

Mr. Chairman, in summary, to answer Mr. Flemming's question, the value under the proposed Bill will not necessarily be the same as the value for regular duty purposes.

The Chairman: Does that answer your question, Mr. Flemming?

Mr. Flemming: Yes, Mr. Chairman, thank you. Could I make a comment on that, Mr. Chairman? The relevant information with respect to the present duty and the present situation as compared with what is provided for under the anti-dumping regulations shows many differences—advantages in some cases and disadvantages in others—which is what this Committee is really interested in. I think we are reasonably familiar with the present situation. If we were not familiar with it, I think Mr. Hind has cleared up the matter very well as far as the interpretation and the application of the law is concerned.

Mr. Buchanan: I wonder if I could comment on Mr. Hind's observations?

You will note that the paragraph referred to is phrased: "... would permit the Deputy Minister to..."

What we were concerned with when we made that statement, and I understood Mr. Arthur to say he thought we had correctly interpreted the proposed legislation, was that the proposed legislation would permit the Deputy Minister to make a finding with respect to normal value—I will put it simply—based on cost plus 25, 30 or 40 per cent, as he sees fit and as he now does with respect to printed matter which is imported in quantities which are less—substantially less—than the sales in the home market. As I understand it, the new legislation will permit this. If it permits this and this is the proper thing to do, we are satisfied that the Deputy Minister will do it. That is the basis upon which we expressed our views in this particular paragraph.

• 1740

In respect of the matter of time, this affects us to some extent, too. I take it that under the existing legislation the Deputy Minister may have regard, in determining the value for regular duty, to the fact that certain goods are, to use the jargon of the trade, end-of-season, end-of-line. We have this in the printing industry and I take it that under the Code he may have regard for the fact that the sales today of an item that is a sell-out, an end-of-line, is not normal value for the purposes of the Code; just as it is not necessarily normal value for the purposes of regular duty. I took that to be the significance of the reference to time in this proposed Bill and regulations. We did not comment at length, in fact we did not comment at all, because we took it to be self-evident that was the purpose of the legislation, and we, of course, approve of it and agree with it. We think it is essential.

We were more particularly concerned, and we continue to be concerned, with this matter of establishing a value for the relatively small quantity shipped to Canada as opposed to the large amount sold in the home market, which is the United States. If we are right in thinking that the Deputy Minister under the proposed legislation would be permitted to do what is now done, and we believe he is, then we are satisfied.

Mr. Hind: In that narrower context the answer is in the affirmative. In other words the proposed law will permit the Deputy Minister to act in exactly the same manner as the legislation under which we are currently operating.

The Chairman: Are there any further questions or comments on the brief, either from the department officials or from the Association?

Mr. Maclellan: Mr. Chairman, there is one matter, although I do not know whether anything can be accomplished today on this or not. In the first paragraph on page 4 of our brief we refer to the question of "like" goods, and the concluding sentence of that paragraph reads:

It is arguable that all printed matter has a close resemblance and accordingly that any dumped imports of printed matter are a potential cause of material injury to the industry as a whole.

I would just like to point out that this is a very disturbing aspect of the whole matter. I have a paper here with scores, perhaps hundreds, of different product headings of printed matter, taken from Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports and from the tariff items for books.

I do not know where we are going to begin and end with "like" products. I see bridge scores, calendar pads, boxes, books, periodicals, decalcomanias, gummed sets, printed games and all sorts of things. This makes me wonder if we are going to have to go through perhaps hundreds of test cases before the Tribunal to establish what "like" goods are or whether broader definitions are needed.

We have for instance talked about advertising material. This encompasses a vast range of material. You may advertise your product today with a booklet; you may advertise it tomorrow with a billboard poster. There are all kinds of advertising material, all used for the same purpose but not identical. This poses very real questions.

At the moment we are told that billboard posters are being dumped. I do not know whether they are being dumped in the legal sense but they are being dumped in the commercial sense. Would billboard posters be treated in terms of other billboard posters or all advertising matter or all printed matter? Most printers can produce posters of some kind or other. They may not be able to do billboard posters but they can do posters of all kinds and most kinds of advertising, forms, and letterheads. Practically every printer in the country might be said to be affected either directly or indirectly by a lot of dumping.

• 1745

How precisely are we going to have to pin things down. Can anything be spelled out more specifically in the legislation or regulations or are we left with test cases before the Tribunal? Perhaps Mr. Arthur might care to comment?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, the definition of "like" goods is in section 2(1)(g) of the interpretation clause of the proposed Bill. First,

"like" goods are identical goods or goods that are identical in all respects, and so on. In the absence of any goods that are identical in all respects then the definition is goods the characteristics of which closely resemble those of the said goods. It would appear that the words "the characteristics of which closely resemble" are fairly broad, or at least as broad as the concept of "similar" which is in the present customs provisions.

While it is not possible to deal directly with the goods that have been mentioned here, I would say that the definition of "like" goods as contained in this Bill is similar to those that appear in the Code. Of course it will have to await the decision of the Tribunal, findings or orders of the Tribunal, and presumably the description of the goods when interpreted by the Dominion Customs Appraiser or the Department of National Revenue on any appeals that are made on the amount of dumping or the description of the goods assigned by that Department either to the Tariff Board or the Exchequer Court. That is similar, Mr. Chairman, to the procedure that is presently invoked.

Mr. Maclellan: Mr. Chairman may I say it is an awesome prospect for us to establish whether a booklet is in the same category as a book. Before we could satisfy ourselves with the Department and now it will be a bigger exercise.

Mr. Buchanan: I do not want to prolong the meeting this hour of the evening, Mr. Arthur, but I am instructed that at the present time all printed material is deemed to be of a class or kind made in Canada. This particular problem is to some extent not a factor today.

The Chairman: Are there any further questions, gentlemen? If not, I have a copy of a letter addressed by the Secretary of the Canadian Paper Trade Association to Mr. David Maclellan which the Graphic Arts Industries Association would like to have printed as an appendix to today's Proceedings.

(See Minutes of Proceedings)

On behalf of the Committee, I thank the members of the Graphic Arts Industries Association for their brief and comments presented to this Committee.

APPENDIX "O"

SUBMISSION OF THE CANADIAN CHEMICAL PRODUCERS' ASSOCIATION ON THE WHITE PAPER ON ANTI-DUMPING

I. Introduction

This Association appreciates the opportunity provided by the Minister of Finance to express its views on the Draft Anti-Dumping Legislation to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs before the Government introduces this legislation in the House of Commons. It takes this opportunity to commend the Minister for adopting this procedure, and to compliment the persons responsible for the drafting of the legislation.

We believe that the amendments suggested hereunder will improve the clarity and the practicability of the proposed legislation and enable the authorities to take prompt and effective action to stop injurious dumping.

II. Recommended modifications to the draft

For convenience the following recommendations are recorded in numerical order of the sections of the draft legislation.

7.

The legislation should require publication in the "Canada Gazette" when the Governor-in-Council exempts any goods or classes of goods from the application of this Act.

9. (2)(b)

The intent of this section requires clarification. As drafted, other vendors in the country of export may be selling imported goods at relatively low prices. (Subject to quota restrictions.)

The following wording is therefore suggested:

- (b) If there was not a sufficient number of sales of like goods made by the exporter by reason of the fact that the exporter sold goods solely or primarily for export, but there were sales by other vendors of like goods produced in and for home consumption in the country of export, there shall be substituted for the exporter the said vendors.

13. (1)(a), 13(1)(b)(ii) and 13(2)

The Deputy Minister is required to make an investigation forthwith. It is equally essential that he reach his initial opinion in 13(1) or his decision under 13(2) expeditiously.

13. (6)(a)(ii)

The wording should be amended as follows: "the margin of dumping of the goods and the actual or potential volume of dumped goods are negligible, or"

14. (1)(b)

The wording should be amended as follows: "the margin of dumping of the dumped goods or the actual or potential volume thereof is not negligible".

16. (5)

This sub-section should be amended to add "complainants, if any" to the list of parties to be forwarded a copy of each order or finding, and such notice should also be published.

30.

While it is gratifying to see provision for an Anti-Dumping Tribunal to be appointed by the Governor-in-Council, it is cause for concern that this Tribunal which shall be deemed to be a Court of Justice responding direct to the Government, is required, "—before making any order or finding or before rendering any advice on any reference made to it pursuant to Sub-Section (3) or (7) fo Section 13", to seek the advice of a panel consisting of certain Deputy Ministers or their representatives nominated by the Minister of each Department involved. Although the Tribunal is not bound by any advice received on any matter from the Panel, this restriction detracts significantly from the freedom of action of the Tribunal, and from the status of the Tribunal as a court. Such a procedure will also cause an unnecessary delay in the working of the Tribunal.

Section 26 (2) provides authority for the Tribunal to obtain the advice and assistance of any agency or department of the Government of Canada. Consequently, there does not seem to be any need for a Panel.

As the creation of the Panel is redundant and undesirable, we recommend the deletion of Section 30 of the draft legislation.

III. GENERAL COMMENTS

(a) Initial Import of Dumped Goods

The new anti-dumping legislation has a fundamental weakness in that it does not provide for assessment of dumping duty on the first import that causes material injury. Consequently, it precludes complete fulfillment of the undertaking by the Minister of Finance on 10th July 1967 "to see to it that Canadian anti-dumping duties are quickly and effectively applied". It is essential, therefore, that the Deputy Minister of Customs and Excise should express his opinion promptly where there is prima facie evidence of dumping and injury, and reach a decision expeditiously after receipt of a written complaint respecting dumping.

(b) Administration

The proposed legislation in contrast to the present legislation will require the exercise of considerably more judgment and discretionary powers in its administration. Under our present Canadian anti-dumping law, the administrative authorities have been, in many cases, slow to investigate and equally slow and at times reluctant to declare dumping.

It is of paramount importance, therefore, that the officials who will administer this legislation should not only be well qualified but also prepared and willing to exercise their responsibilities fully and expeditiously within the framework of an efficiently organized department.

(c) Regulations

In the absence of a draft of the numerous regulations stipulated in the legislation, it is not possible to evaluate adequately all of the provisions. As these regulations have an important bearing on administration, it is highly desirable that interested parties should have adequate opportunity to study and express their views on the proposed regulations before approval by the Governor-in-Council.

APPENDIX "P"

Graphic Arts Industries Association
Suite 906, Fuller Bldg.,
75 Albert St.,
Ottawa 4, Canada

SUBMISSION TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS STANDING COMMITTEE ON FINANCE, TRADE AND
ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

RE: DRAFT ANTI-DUMPING ACT AND PROPOSED REGULATIONS

To the Chairman and Members of the Committee:

This brief is presented on behalf of the Graphic Arts Industries Association—Association des Industries Graphiques. The active membership of the Association consists of 514 companies engaged in the design and production of all kinds of printed matter, as well as such preliminary, intermediate and finishing operations as typesetting, platemaking, and binding.

Collectively these companies are estimated to produce approximately 80% of all commercial printing originating in Canadian plants. The industry as a whole probably is the largest and best-paying employer in Canadian manufacturing of creative and skilled people. According to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics (see Appendix A), the printing, publishing and allied trades in 1966 employed 83,586 Canadians and paid them an average of $5,547 each in salaries and wages, for a total of $463,661,000.

The scope, character and geographic distribution of the industry, with plants in every province, are indicated in the statistical tables appended to this submission.

The basic concern of our membership collectively is that of manufacturers of general commercial printing, books, periodicals, mail advertising, business forms and all other kinds of specialty printing.

This industry has an importance to Canada far greater than the substantial dollar volume of its shipments. Its products are required in large measure as the main force in moving goods and services for all other trades and industries; and the print media have been and are essential to the development of our national identity.

That we conduct business in a difficult environment is too well understood to require extensive elucidation. However, it should be emphasized that Canada is the largest importer of printed matter in the world; both in absolute terms and on a per capita basis, these imports are much greater than those of any other nation, including the United States, our main competitor. Whereas nature has placed a language barrier between American printers and the Mexican market, American printed material and enterprise flood the Canadian domestic market. With similar facility, substantial printed imports come from Great Britain and France.

On the one hand, the smaller Canadian population does not permit the long manufacturing runs which sharply reduce the cost per unit or per item for the larger countries. On the other hand, thousands of the biggest Canadian print users are companies controlled from abroad, mostly from the United States; and that country, our nearest and most logical export market, maintains serious obstacles to Canadian printed exports.

This situation reflects, unchangeably and to a large degree, the inexorable linguistic and geographic facts of life. Nonetheless, we do have a major role to preserve and a potential for growth which should not be jeopardized through inadvertence or lack of awareness.

While we cannot escape our geography or language we do suggest that the continued viability of our industry depends on policies which take our inherent vulnerability fully into account. No area of government policy is more vital to our industry than is trade policy as this affects the determination of normal value for the purpose of the application of dump duty.

In this connection our industry was seriously apprehensive about any substantial revision of Canadian legislation in this area. We are reasonably satisfied with the existing situation but certainly regard the protection it affords as no more than barely adequate. Existing legislation does not preclude the importation of a very substantial volume of printed matter. Statistics relative to imports are appended to this brief.

In most situations geography, language or interests or a combination of one or more of them minimize trade in printed matter. Canada has common interest and language with two large publishing countries (France and Britain) and a common border, a common language, and interest with a third. It seemed to us hardly likely that an international dumping code would have adequate regard for the unique situation facing the graphic arts industry in Canada. Other leading nations do not have a comparable problem.

Your committee, we are sure, has heard from others of the cost disadvantages facing those who produce goods in relatively short runs. In the printing business this matter of short runs relative to runs of like goods in the United States poses an exceedingly difficult problem.

If our membership is to compete with any degree of effectiveness with imports from the United States, the determination of a "normal value" that takes full account of short run costs is imperative.

We note with due relief that Section 9 of the proposed bill would presumably permit the taking into account—in establishing normal value—the differences in the size of orders between those sold for home consumption (in the United States) and those exported to Canada.

In this connection we are particularly gratified by the provisions of Section 3, Sub-section (2) of the proposed draft regulations.

If we correctly construe the substance of this sub-section, it will be the duty of the Deputy Minister, in determining "normal value" of a sale of printed matter to Canada which is smaller than the smallest sale for home consumption, to take account of the difference in the volume by an upward adjustment so as "to reflect the price for which such smaller quantity would be sold for home consumption."

While Sub-section (2) of Section 3 of the proposed regulations does not specify the method of determining such upward adjustment—and we do not suggest that a particular method should be specified—we assume the Deputy Minister might have regard for the cost of producing such smaller quantity in the country of export.

In short we presume that the proposed regulations would permit the Deputy Minister to appraise printed matter for purposes of dump duty in the same manner as he now appraises such goods for regular duty.

If we are correct in this assumption the regulations, in our opinion, should be reasonably effective so far as a finding of dumping is concerned.

There remains, however, the matter of whether dumped imports are causing or threatening to cause material injury.

It would be enormously difficult for the graphic arts industry, widely dispersed geographically and fragmented into approximately 2,500 firms (Excluding firms predominantly engaged in publishing), effectively to gather the necessary evidence to establish the proof of material injury. We would hope and expect assistance from appropriate Government departments in this task.

Naturally we are seriously concerned that the proof of material injury should not be unduly onerous. While we cannot offer criteria which we feel should bind the proposed tribunal in its findings, we do contend that the highly vulnerable position of the graphic arts industry—particularly with respect to imports from the United States—leads to a strong presumption that dumped imports or the threat of dumped imports would cause or threaten to cause material injury to our industry.

In determining whether in a specific case dumped imports of printed matter are a cause of material injury to Canadian producers of "like goods" (as defined in Section 2 (1) (9) of the draft bill) the question of close resemblance arises. Only very rarely would imported printed matter be "identical in all respects" with printed matter produced in Canada. It is arguable that all printed matter has a close resemblance and accordingly that any dumped imports of printed matter are a potential cause of material injury to the industry as a whole.

In our submission it is open to the Deputy Minister, if a preliminary determination of dumping in respect of printed matter is made, to levy provisional dump duty on all imported printed matter found to be dumped since all printed matter closely resembles that which is provisionally found to be dumped.

Similarly the Tribunal, if it finds that printed matter has been or is being dumped and has caused, is causing, or likely to cause material injury to Canadian producers of printed matter, may declare all printed matter imported at dump prices to be liable for dump duty.

We would hope that the Deputy Minister and the Tribunal will each exercise jurisdiction in the manner indicated above, so as to accord to our industry the full level of protection from dumping which is consistent with the legislation.

We have no specific proposals for amendment to the draft bill and regulations. We believe they are susceptible to the interpretation we have placed upon them. If there is any doubt in the minds of the members of the Committee as to the validity of our interpretation, we urge that the appropriate amendments to the bill or regulations be recommended to remove such doubt.

Our industry is, of course, vitally interested that those charged with the responsibility for administering this legislation should execute their duties without undue delay. Experience in the past has not always been entirely satisfactory in this regard. We suggest that your Committee recommend an increase in the staff of officers of National Revenue engaged in the determination of dumping if this is deemed to be necessary for prompt detection of dumping.

Officers of our Association are prepared to appear before your Committee to develop the matters raised in this brief and to attempt to answer any questions which may occur to members of the Committee.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Yours truly,

GRAPHIC ARTS INDUSTRIES
ASSOCIATION

ASSOCIATION DES INDUSTRIES
GRAPHIQUES

Gaston Boulanger
President
Encl.

APPENDIX "A"

GRAPHIC ARTS INDUSTRIES IN CANADA—1966

	Printing, Publishing and Allied Industries	Corrugated Box Manufacturers	Folding and Set-up Box Manufacturers	Paper and Plastic Bag Mfrs.	Miscellaneous Paper Converters	Totals
No. of Establishments.....	1962 3,499 1963 3,501 1964 3,439 1965 3,465 1966 3,507	44 46 48 49 58	138 131 128 121 121	64 70 74 74 77	190 199 204 204 213	3,935 3,947 3,893 3,913 3,976
No. of Employees.....	1962 75,601 1963 76,015 1964 75,448 1965 78,737 1966 83,586*	7,049 7,010 7,117 7,769 8,180	8,183 8,016 8,167 8,229 8,283*	4,013 4,550 4,909 4,954 5,445*	10,310 10,703 11,795 12,215 14,123*	105,156 106,294 107,436 111,904 119,909*
Salaries and Wages.....	1962 $ 361,468,000 1963 375,671,000 1964 385,687,000 1965 422,226,000 1966 463,661,000	$ 32,277,000 33,007,000 35,830,000 39,975,000 44,330,000	$ 33,137,000 34,090,000 35,908,000 37,483,000 39,963,000	$ 14,979,000 18,319,000 20,919,000 22,447,000 26,227,000	$ 44,291,000 47,687,000 54,371,000 58,412,000 71,344,000	$ 486,152,000 508,774,000 532,715,000 580,543,000 645,525,000
Selling Value of Shipments.....	1962 $ 925,443,000 1963 960,484,000 1964 983,921,000 1965 1,085,229,000 1966 1,204,665,000	$158,946,000 166,333,000 179,183,000 193,053,000 211,493,000	$125,393,000 129,327,000 136,801,000 143,876,000 156,685,000	$ 90,543,000 105,958,000 115,256,000 120,918,000 144,046,000	$197,443,000 208,553,000 236,412,000 261,964,000 301,326,000	$1,497,758,000 1,570,698,000 1,651,573,000 1,804,040,000 2,018,215,000
1966 Breakdown.....
Geographical Breakdown of Factory Shipments by Province <sup>[1]</sup>
Newfoundland.....					Nil	(incomplete see X)
Prince Edward Island.....					X
Nova Scotia.....	26,444,000				Nil
New Brunswick.....					Nil
Quebec.....					Nil
Ontario.....	339,349,000	62,995,000	39,835,000		75,464,000	881,328,000
Manitoba.....	638,593,000	105,786,000	95,904,000		203,658,000	1,096,788,000
Saskatchewan.....	51,502,000		6,293,000		10,342,000	74,064,000 <sup>[4]</sup>
Alberta.....	18,623,000				X	X
British Columbia <sup>[2]</sup> .....	42,822,000				3,074,000	49,242,000 <sup>[3]</sup>
	80,151,000				14,102,000	98,565,000 <sup>[5]</sup>

*Includes working owners and partners.

[1] Totalling of provincial figures will not agree with grand totals above for selling value of shipments due to incomplete sub-totals, resulting from omission of confidential figures as explained in final footnote.

[2] Incomplete. [3] Includes Yukon and N.W.T.

[4] Excludes corrugated boxes.

(X) Figures included in totals for industry, provincial totals being confidential where there are only one or two producers.

Source: Graphic Arts Industries Association from DBS

APPENDIX "B"
CANADA'S PRINTED IMPORTS

	Imports from All Countries		Imports from United States
	1966	1967	1966	1967
	$	$	$	$
NEWSPAPERS, MAGAZINES AND PERIODICALS
Newspaper Supplements Section and Pts.....	1,566,000	1,732,000	1,566,000	1,732,000
Newspapers, Unbound n.e.s.....	1,513,000	1,704,000	1,467,000	1,602,000
Magazines and Periodicals n.e.s.....	47,859,000	53,773,000	44,454,000	48,233,000
BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS
Religious Books and Pamphlets.....	4,575,000	4,526,000	3,705,000	3,777,000
Books Pub. by Foreign Govt. UN and NATO.....	198,000	317,000	176,000	228,000
Dictionaries, Encyclopaedias, Atlases.....	5,983,000	8,552,000	5,301,000	7,741,000
Books and Pamphlets n.e.s. Excl. English .....	6,534,000	9,520,000	440,000	516,000
Novels and Works of Fiction n.e.s.....	8,843,000	11,657,000	7,513,000	9,934,000
Books and Pamphlets n.e.s.....	51,772,000	61,660,000	45,580,000	54,020,000
MAPS, GREETING CARDS AND MUSIC
Globes, Geographic Topographic and Pt.....	406,000	551,000	391,000	520,000
Charts and Maps.....	744,000	946,000	685,000	868,000
Photographs.....	374,000	688,000	358,000	577,000
Greeting Cards.....	967,000	1,023,000	829,000	833,000
Pictorial Post Cards.....	165,000	175,000	154,000	118,000
Picture Reproductions n.e.s.....	1,638,000	1,752,000	1,296,000	1,430,000
Music, Printed.....	567,000	942,000	537,000	872,000
Children's Picture Books.....	1,266,000	1,406,000	1,223,000	1,331,000
OTHER PRINTED MATTER
Labels, Tags and Wrappers.....	2,410,000	2,487,000	2,283,000	2,287,000
Blueprints, Plans and Designs.....	6,316,000	4,632,000	6,064,000	4,397,000
Decalcomania Transfers.....	627,000	991,000	603,000	969,000
Playing Cards in Sheets.....	814,000	822,000	809,000	818,000
Playing Cards in Packs.....	195,000	236,000	69,000	94,000
Paper Patterns, Printed.....	751,000	859,000	750,000	859,000
Tourist Literature.....	654,000	1,568,000	372,000	537,000
Advt. Matter for Free Distribution.....	3,317,000	2,933,000	2,909,000	2,306,000
Printed Matter n.e.s.....	11,205,000	14,267,000	9,854,000	12,295,000
	161,200,000	189,719,000	139,388,000	158,894,000

SOURCE: D.B.S., correlated by Graphic Arts Industries Association

NOTE: Further substantial increases in imports during 1968, mostly from the United States, make it evident that this total will exceed $200,000,000 for the year. However, it should be realized that the actual total volume of imports may well be closer to $400,000,000, because Customs records and D.B.S. reports do not include the enormous daily influx of books, newspapers, periodicals, and direct mail advertising flowing through postal channels, or the very large volume of printed matter accompanying other goods, such as packages, instruction booklets, warranty cards, re-order forms, etc.

APPENDIX "C"

CANADA'S PRINTED IMPORTS FROM FRANCE

Description	1965	1966	1967
	$	$	$
NEWSPAPERS, MAGAZINES AND PERIODICALS
Newspaper Supplements Sections and Pts.....	2,604	—	—
Newspapers, Unbound n.e.s.....	715	1,832	—
Magazines and Periodicals n.e.s.....	2,081,117	1,911,775	3,071,000
BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS
Religious Books and Pamphlets.....	386,296	359,487	153,000
Books Pub. by Foreign Govt. UN and NATO.....	1,020	8,954	23,000
Dictionaries, Encyclopaedias, Atlases.....	122,200	159,813	280,000
Books and Pamphlets n.e.s. Excl. English .....	3,619,003	4,621,017	7,066,000
Novels and Works of Fiction n.e.s.....	—	—	—
Books and Pamphlets n.e.s.....	469,059	226,858	283,000
MAPS, GREETING CARDS AND MUSIC
Globes, Geographic Topographic and Pt.....	—	—	2,000
Charts and Maps.....	4,873	5,010	10,000
Photographs.....	684	1,505	11,000
Greeting Cards.....	9,188	3,808	2,000
Pictorial Post Cards.....	2,984	2,300	4,000
Picture Reproductions n.e.s.....	33,442	37,446	45,000
Music, Printed.....	6,299	1,944	33,000
Childrens Picture Books.....	343	—	—
OTHER PRINTED MATTER
Labels, Tags and Wrappers.....	7,905	4,860	6,000
Blueprints, Plans and Designs.....	—	137,476	2,000
Decalcomania Transfers.....	2,114	—	4,000
Playing Cards in Sheets.....	—	—	—
Playing Cards in Packs.....	—	—	1,000
Paper Patterns, Printed.....	—	—	—
Tourist Literature.....	62,169	25,113	321,000
Advt. Matter for Free Distribution.....	67,008	44,139	61,000
Printed Matter n.e.s.....	57,435	62,384	135,000
	6,936,458	7,615,721	11,513,000

SOURCE: Dominion Bureau of Statistics, extracted by Graphic Arts Industries Assn.

GRAPHIC ARTS INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION

GALA / AIG

ASSOCIATION DES INDUSTRIES GRAPHIQUES

MEMBERS AS OF MAY 1, 1967 - MEMBRES, LE 1<sup>ER</sup> MAI 1967

AFFILIATED LOCAL, REGIONAL AND NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

ASSOCIATIONS LOCALES, RÉGIONALES ET NATIONALES
QUI SONT AFFILIÉES

L'Association des Maîtres-Imprimeurs de Montréal Inc.
L'Association Patronale des Arts Graphiques de
Québec
Atlantic Provinces Graphic Arts Association
Calgary Graphic Arts Association
Canadian Lithographers' Association (Windsor-
London-Hamilton-Toronto-Ottawa-Montreal-Halifax)
Canadian Printing Ink Manufacturers' Association
Council of Printing Industries, Toronto
East Central Ontario Graphic Arts Association

Employing Printers' Association of Montreal, Inc.
Graphic Arts Association of British Columbia
Graphic Arts Industries Association, Edmonton Branch
Graphic Arts Industries Association, West Central Ontario Branch
Graphic Arts Industries Association of Winnipeg
Hamilton & District Graphic Arts Association
Niagara Peninsula Graphic Arts Association
Saskatchewan Graphic Arts Association
Southwestern Ontario Graphic Arts Association

ACTIVE MEMBERS BY REGIONS FROM EAST TO WEST

MEMBRES ACTIFS PAR RÉGION DE L'EST À L'OUEST

ATLANTIC PROVINCES GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

Acadia Printing Ltd., Moncton
Art Craft Press, Saint John
Atherton Printing Ltd., Lancaster
Atlantic Print Ltd., Halifax
Barnes-Hopkins Ltd., Saint John
Brodie Printing Service Ltd., Glace
Bay, N.S.
Colpitts The Stationer, Moncton
Commercial Printers Ltd., Sydney
R. H. Davis & Co., Yarmouth, N.S.
Globe Printing Co., Saint John
Halcraft Printing Ltd., Halifax
Herald Stationers Ltd., North Sydney,
N.S.

Kentville Publishing Co. Ltd., Kentville
N.S.
Keystone Printing & Litho Ltd., Saint John
LeBlanc Printing Co., Sydney
Lynk Printing Service, Sydney
Maritime Press Ltd., Moncton
Maritime Publishing Co., Sussex, N.B.
McCurdy Printing Co., Halifax
Moncton Publishing Co. Ltd., Moncton
Howard Neill The Printer, Saint John
Northern Light Ltd., Bathurst, N.B.
F. M. O'Neill & Co., Halifax
Positive Plates Ltd., Saint John

Robertson Print-Craft, New Waterford,
N.S.
Rolph-Clark-Stone Eastern Ltd., Halifax
Royal Print & Litho Ltd., Halifax
Saint John Vocational School, Saint John
Skerry & Leonard Co. Ltd., Armadale,
N.S.
Tribune Press Ltd., Sackville, N.B.
Truro Printing & Publishing Co., Truro,
N.S.
Type & Composition Service, Moncton
H. W. Wilson Printing Co. Ltd.,
Fredericton

L'ASSOCIATION PATRONALE DES ARTS GRAPHIQUES DE QUÉBEC

L'Action Sociale Ltée, Québec
Angers & Frère Engr., Québec
Ateliers Optima, Québec
Audet Photogravure Inc., Québec
L. G. Chabot Inc., Québec
Charrier & Dugal Inc., Québec
Chateau Frontenac, Québec
Joseph Clermont Inc., Québec
Composition Québec Typesetters Inc.,
Québec
J. B. Deschamps Inc., Québec
Les Éditions Marquis Ltée, Montmagny
Enveloppe Québec Ltée, Québec
Roger Faber Engr., Loretteville
Louis Fréchette, Québec
Gravel Photogravure Engr., Québec
Guay & Frères Engr., Lévis
Imprimerie Marc Boiteau Inc., Québec

Imprimerie Commerciale Ltée, Québec
Imprimerie Fernand Engr., Ste-Anne-de-Beaupré
Imprimerie Industrielle, Québec
Imprimerie J. L. M. Inc., Québec
Imprimerie Laflamme Ltée, Québec
Imprimerie Laurentide, Loretteville
Imprimerie Médéric Parent, Québec
Imprimerie Provinciale Engr., Québec
Imprimerie Québec Métropolitain Inc.,
Québec
Imprimerie Royale Engr., Québec
Imprimerie Sainte-Croix, Sainte-Croix
Imprimerie Veilleux Ltée, Québec
Imprimerie Vitray Engr., Québec
L'Imprimeur Engr., Charlesbourg
L'Imprimeur Raymond Lemay Inc.,
Québec

Labiberté & Frère Engr., Québec
Litho Presses Inc., Québec
Mono-Lino Service Inc., Québec
T. J. Moore & Cie Ltée, Québec
Office d'Information et Publicité, Québec
Photogravure Artistique Inc., Québec
Photo-Lithographie Inc., Québec
Presses de l'Université Laval, Ste-Foy
Québec Newspapers Ltd., Québec
Émile Robitaille, Québec
St. Lawrence Paper Bag Co., Ltd.,
Québec
La Semaine Commerciale Engr., Québec
Stellar Publications Inc., Québec
Tremblay & Dion Inc., Québec
Au Vestement du Livre, Loretteville

L'ASSOCIATION DES MAÎTRES-IMPRIMEURS DE MONTRÉAL, INC.

Artistic Press Reg'd., Montréal
Ateliers des Sourds-Muets, Montréal
Ateliers Paul Ltée, Montréal
Ateliers Roger Press Ltée, Montréal
Bilodeau, Inc., St-Michel
J. Bouchard, Inc., Montréal
Bou langer Inc., Montréal
Yvon Boulanger Ltée, Montréal
City Printing & Lithographing, Montréal
Composition Typofilm, Inc., Montréal
De Guise Reglage & Reliure, Montréal
Roger Désautels Ltée, Montréal
Pierre DesMarais, Inc., Montréal
Eugène Doucet Ltée, Montréal
Editions Fides, Montréal
Film Titles Reg'd, Montréal
C. Galarneau & Cie, Montréal
D. Gratton Ruling & Bookbinding Inc., Montréal
Imprimerie Artistique Engr., Montréal
Imprimerie Atwater Engr., Montréal
Imprimerie R. Bayard, Montréal
Imprimerie Bourguignon Ltée., Montréal
Imprimerie Champlain Engr., Montréal
Imprimerie Claude Engr., Montréal
Imprimerie Comet, Montréal
Imprimerie Desjardins, Ste-Adèle-en-bas

Imprimerie Edouard Dion, Montréal
Imprimerie Tomet, Inc., Montréal
Imprimerie Economique, Montréal
Imprimerie Falcon, Montréal
Imprimerie Ferrol, Montréal
Imprimerie Gibraltar, Montréal
Imprimerie Hebdo Inc., Montréal
Imprimerie Jacques-Cartier Inc., Ville St-Michel
Imprimerie Judiciaire Engr., Montréal
Imprimerie Lemieux, Montréal
Imprimerie A. Marchand, Montréal
Imprimerie Raymond Massie, Montréal
Imprimerie du Messenger, Montréal
Imprimerie Multiple, Montréal
Imprimerie R. M. H. Printing, Montréal
Imprimerie Richelieu Ltée, Montréal
Imprimerie Royale Ltée, Montréal
Imprimerie Saint-Joseph, Montréal
Imprimerie Maurice Simard, Montréal
Imprimerie Simon Ltée, Montréal
Imprimerie Sylvain Engr., Montréal
Imprimerie Thibault, St-Antoine des Laurentides
Imprimerie Lucien Trempe, Montréal
Imprimerie Vaillancourt, Montréal
Imprimerie Wilco, Montréal

Imprimerie Youville, Montréal
Laplante & Langevin Inc., Montréal
Librairie Beauchemin Ltée, Montréal
Lidec Inc., Montréal
Lithographie Saint-Paul Ltée, Montréal
Maison H. Roy Ltée, Montréal
Métropole Lithographing Inc., Montréal
Monat & Bleau Ltée, Montréal
Montreal Printing Reg'd., Montréal
Paul Paradis Inc., Montréal
Paradis-Vincent Ltée, Montréal
Progress Printing, Montreal
Publitech, Montréal
Réglage Riendeau Ruling, Montréal
Richelieu Roto-Litho, St-Jean
J. Émile Roy & Fils, Montréal
Jacques Sénécal Engr., Montréal
Service d'Imprimerie Duro, Montréal
Service Inter Ltée, Montréal
E. Thérien & Fils Ltée, Montréal
Thérien Frères Ltée, Montréal
Typographie Éclair, Montréal
Typographie Métro, Montréal
Vae Off-Set & Printing Co., Montréal
Villemaire Frères Ltée, Montréal

EMPLOYING PRINTERS' ASSOCIATION OF MONTRÉAL, INC.

Alliance Press Ltd., Montreal
Apex Press Ltd., Montreal
Art Bookbinding & Loose Leaf Co., Montreal
Barwick & Son Ltd., Montreal
Belgrave Press Ltd., Montreal
Brown Press Ltd., Lachine
Cameo Crafts Inc., Montreal
Canadian Printing & Lithographing Co. Ltd., Montreal Century Press Ltd., Montreal
Churchill Press Ltd., Montreal
Clen-Mathers Press Ltd., Montreal
Condor Printing Inc., Montreal
C. R. Cornell Ltd., Montreal
Crites & Riddell Ltd., Montreal
Desbarats Printing Co. Ltd., Montreal
Pierre DesMarais Inc., Montreal
Ditto (Quebec) Ltd., Montreal
Fred F. Esler Ltd., Montreal
Ever Ready Tag & Label Co. Ltd., Montreal
Fast Typesetters of Canada Ltd., Montreal
Forrest Lithographing Ltd., Montreal
Gazette Printing Co. Ltd., Montreal

Herald-Woodward Press Inc., Montreal
Hufford Printers Ltd., Montreal
International Railway Publishing Co. Ltd., Montreal
Jonerin Co. Inc., Verdun
Knight Graphics Ltd., Montreal
John Lovell & Son Ltd., Montreal
Manning Hobbs Press Ltd., Montreal
McLean Bros. Ltd., Montreal
Mercury Press Co., Montreal
Metcalfe Robinson Printing Service Ltd., Montreal
Metro Graphic Corp., Montreal
Modern Binding Ltd., Montreal
Mono Service Inc., Montreal
Montreal Bindery Service Ltd., Montreal
O-A-S Limited, Montreal
Page-Sanger Printing Co. Ltd., Sherbrooke
Wm. F. Palmer Ltd., St. Lambert
Payette & Payette Inc., St. Jean
Peck Printing Co., Montreal
Perry Printing Ltd., Montreal
Plow & Waters Ltd., Montreal
Powter's Printing Ltd., Montreal
Prestige Graphics Ltd., Ville St-Michel

Rapid Press Ltd., Montreal
Regal Ticket & Printing, Montreal
Mac Roberts Press Inc., Montreal
Robson Printers Ltd., Montreal
Rolph-Clark-Stone-Benallack Division of Rolph-Clark-Stone Ltd., Montreal
Ronalds-Federated Ltd., Montreal
Gordon W. Ross Ltd., LaSalle
Scotia Ticket Printing Ltd., Verdun
Simpson Press Ltd., Montreal
The Southam Printing Co., Ltd., Montreal
George Sully (1958) Ltd., Montreal
Super Press Inc., Montreal
Taylor Printing & Mailing Ltd., Montreal
Typographic Service Co. Ltd., Montreal
University Press of New Brunswick, Fredericton, N.B.
The Upton Co. Ltd., Montreal
Victoria Press Ltd., Montreal
Villemaire Frères Ltée, Montreal
Wade Reproduction Services Inc., Montreal
Wallace Press Ltd., Montreal

OTTAWA REGION—DIRECT MEMBERS

Akins Printing Limited, Ottawa
Beauregard Press Limited, Ottawa
British American Bank Note Co. Ltd., Ottawa
Campbell Reproductions Ltd., Ottawa

Canadian Bank Note Co. Ltd., Ottawa
R. L. Crain Ltd., Ottawa
Dept. of Public Printing & Stationery, Ottawa
Dominion Loose Leaf Co. Ltd., Ottawa

Lowe-Martin Co. Ltd., Ottawa
Mutual Press Ltd., Ottawa
National Printers Ltd., Ottawa
Noffke Press, Ottawa
The Runge Press Ltd., Ottawa
The Waltham Press Ltd., Ottawa

EAST CENTRAL ONTARIO GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

Almey Press, Trenton
Arjay Printers, Oshawa
Barrie Press Ltd., Barrie
Bo-Plan Photo Engraving Co. Ltd., Kingston
Brooklin Bulletin Publishing Co., Brooklin
Canada Year Book Services, Whitby
John Deyell Ltd., Lindsay

Richard Ellis Printing, Belleville
General Printers Ltd., Oshawa
Guide Publishing Co., Ltd., Port Hope
Haynes Printing Co., Cobourg
The Lindsay Paper Box Co., Lindsay
Magill Business Systems Ltd., Oshawa
Maracle Press Ltd., Oshawa
Maxwell Printers & Lithographers Ltd., Peterborough

Midland Printers, Midland
The Napanee Beaver, Napanee
Ontario Intelligencer Ltd., Belleville
The Picton Gazette Printing Co., Picton
Review Printing Co. Ltd., Peterborough
The Stayner Sun, Stayner
Stubley Printing, Orillia

TORONTO REGION—DIRECT MEMBERS

---

Anthes Business Systems Ltd., Toronto
 Artistic Stationery Co. Ltd., Toronto
 Auty Printing Ltd., Port Credit
 Baker, Gurney & MacLaren Press Ltd., Toronto
 T. H. Best Printing Co. Ltd., Don Mills
 Blackhall & Co. Ltd., Toronto
 Bolander & Co. Ltd., Toronto
 Brigdens Ltd., Toronto
 The Brown Brothers Ltd., Toronto
 The Bryant Press Ltd., Toronto
 Canada Binding Ltd., Toronto
 Canadian Charts & Supplies Ltd., Oakville
 Cape & Co. Ltd., Toronto
 Carswell Co. Ltd., Toronto
 Charters Publishing Co., Brampton
 Consolidated Graphics Ltd., Don Mills
 Cooper & Beatty, Limited, Toronto
 Copeland-Chatterson Ltd., Brampton
 Croft Printers Ltd., Toronto
 Data Business Forms Ltd., Malton
 Davis & Henderson Ltd., Don Mills
 Atwell Fleming Printing Co. Ltd., Toronto

Fullerton-Weston Publishing Ltd., Don Mills
 W. J. Gage Ltd., Scarborough
 C. F. Houghton Ltd., Scarborough
 Houstons Standard Publications Ltd., Toronto
 Howarth & Smith Monotype Ltd., Toronto
 Howell Printing Co. Ltd., Toronto
 Litho-Print Ltd., Toronto
 M & S Printers Ltd., Toronto
 Macdonald-Downie Ltd., Toronto
 Maclean-Hunter Publishing Co. Ltd., Toronto
 Marnoch Office Supply Ltd., Don Mills
 McCorquodale & Blades (Printers) Ltd., Toronto
 Millprint Corporation Ltd., Toronto
 Mono Lino Typesetting Co. Ltd., Toronto
 Morris Graphics Ltd., Toronto
 Newsome & Gilbert Ltd., Toronto
 Noble Scott Co. Ltd., Toronto
 Northern Miner Press Ltd., Toronto
 Offset Print & Litho Ltd., Don Mills

The Printing House, Toronto
 Redi-Set Business Forms Ltd., Don Mills
 E. S. & A. Robinson (Canada) Ltd., Leaseide
 Rolph-Clark-Stone Ltd., Toronto
 Ronalds Lithographers & Printers Ltd., Toronto
 Rous & Mann Press Ltd., Toronto
 The Ryerson Press, Toronto
 The Salvation Army Printing & Publishing House, Toronto
 Service Typesetting Ltd., Toronto
 Southam • Murray, Weston
 Swan Service Ltd., Toronto
 Thorn Press, Don Mills
 The Toronto Star Ltd., Toronto
 University of Toronto Press, Toronto
 VISIrecord of Canada Ltd., Toronto
 Wallace-Davey Industries Ltd., Toronto
 Welch & Quest Ltd., Toronto
 West Toronto Printing House Ltd., Toronto
 Willow Press, Toronto

HAMILTON & DISTRICT GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

---

Graham Baldock Printing, Hamilton
 City Linotyping Co., Hamilton
 City Press, Hamilton
 Cloke & Son Ltd., Hamilton
 Davis-Lisson Ltd., Hamilton
 The Fairclough Printing Co., Hamilton
 J. H. French & Co. Ltd., Hamilton

Frid-Mullin Ltd., Hamilton
 Glen Gray Printing Co., Hamilton
 W. L. Griffin Ltd., Hamilton
 Griffin & Richmond Co., Hamilton
 Grimsby Independent Ltd., Grimsby
 Halton Press, Burlington

Hamilton Ruling & Bindery Service Ltd., Hamilton
 Hughes & Wilkins Ltd., Hamilton
 Kidner Printing Co., Ltd. Hamilton
 McDonald Printing Co. Inc., Hamilton
 Moore Printery Ltd., Hamilton
 Walsh Printing Service, Hamilton

NIAGARA PENINSULA GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

---

Advance Printing Co., St. Catharines
 Bertie Printers, Stevensville
 Citizen Press Ltd., Port Colborne
 Commercial Photo Copy Service, St. Catharines
 Horton Steel Works Ltd., Fort Erie
 Industrial Printers, Fort Erie
 Johnson Press, Niagara Falls

Gordon Kaumeyer Industries Ltd., Chippawa
 F. H. Leslie Ltd., Niagara Falls
 Lincoln Graphics Ltd., St. Catharines
 Lindsay Press Ltd., Niagara Falls
 Manning Press, St. Catharines
 Moss Press, Port Colborne
 Niagara Offset Ltd., Niagara Falls
 Pakfold Continuous Forms Ltd., Niagara Falls

Peninsula Press, St. Catharines
 The Renown Printing Co. Ltd., Niagara Falls
 Rewbury Printing Co., Welland
 Rockel Job Printing Ltd., Welland
 Super Service Rubber Plate Co., Port Colborne
 Welland Printing Co., Welland
 Williamson & Lalonde, St. Catharines

NEW MEMBERS SINCE MAY 1, 1967

ATLANTIC PROVINCES GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

Bridgewater Bulletin, Bridgewater, N.S.
Cape Breton Printers, Sydney, N.B.
Centennial Print & Litho Ltd., Fredericton, N.B.

Sentinel Printing Ltd., Yarmouth, N.S.
Williams & Crue Limited, Summerside, P.E.I.

L'ASSOCIATION DES MAÎTRES-IMPRIMEURS DE MONTRÉAL, INC.

Les Entreprises Gérard Engr., Montreal
Imprimerie Electra, Montreal

Lith-O-Graphic, Montreal

EMPLOYING PRINTERS' ASSOCIATION OF MONTREAL, INC.

Dennison Mfg. Co. of Canada Ltd., Montreal

Laurain Printing Limited, Montreal

EAST CENTRAL ONTARIO GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

The Canadian Register Ltd., Kingston

TORONTO REGION—DIRECT MEMBERS

Artercraft Printing Co. Ltd., Toronto
Associated Printers Limited, Toronto
Bell Offset Printing Ltd., Toronto
Benson-Kingsway Typesetting Co., Toronto
Burd-Barrett Limited, Toronto
Clarke Lithographing Ltd., Rexdale
Cornish & Wimpenny Ltd., Toronto
Fullerton Typesetting Ltd., Toronto
Haig Continuous Forms Ltd., Toronto

C. E. Hunter Printing (Toronto) Ltd., Toronto
Miln-Bingham Limited, Toronto
Paramount Typesetting Co. Ltd.
Reliable Bookbinders Ltd.
Sampson-Matthews, Limited, Don Mills
Sanderson Binding Ltd., Toronto
Service Graphics Ltd., Toronto
Wareham & Hutton Ltd., Toronto
Wilson Publishing Co. of Toronto Ltd.

HAMILTON & DISTRICT GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

Phil Aggus & Son Ltd., Hamilton
Hamilton Litho Arts Ltd., Hamilton
Hamilton Typesetting Limited, Hamilton

Hunt Printing Studio, Hamilton
Thompson Printing Co., Hamilton

NIAGARA PENINSULA GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

Dunnville Printery, Dunnville
G. A. Moggride Co. Ltd.

Rainbow Colour Plate Service

GRAPHIC ARTS INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION, WEST CENTRAL ONTARIO BRANCH

Fastforms Ltd., Guelph

John Kerr & Sons Limited, Galt

GRAPHIC ARTS INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION OF WINNIPEG

Reid & Ebner Limited

CALGARY GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

Apache Superior Printing Ltd., Calgary

GRAPHIC ARTS INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION, EDMONTON BRANCH

Home Label Manufacturers Ltd., Edmonton

Mercantile Press Ltd., Edmonton

GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Atlas Printers Ltd., Vancouver
Blaine Trade Bindery Ltd., Vancouver
Hazeldine Press Ltd., Vancouver
Kingsway Quick Printers, Ltd., Vancouver
Rapid Print Ltd., Vancouver

Security Printing Corp., Ltd., Vancouver
Roy L. Shilvoek Ltd., Vancouver
Smith Lithograph Co. Ltd., Richmond
Uneeda Printers Ltd., Vancouver

OTHER AREAS—DIRECT MEMBERS

Graphic Controls Canada Ltd., Gananoque
United Western Printing, Brandon, Man.

Alex Wilson Publications Ltd., Dryden, Ont.

G.A.I.A. NATIONAL SUPPLIERS' SECTION

Bowers Printing Ink Co. of Canada Ltd., Toronto

ASSOCIATE MEMBERS OF AFFILIATED ASSOCIATIONS

General Graphic Services Ltd., Saskatoon

Teese & Persse, Saskatoon

DIRECT MEMBERS—LONDON

The Chas. Chapman Co., London

Murray Kelly Printing & Lithographing
Ltd., LondonLondon Printing & Lithographing Co.
Ltd., LondonGRAPHIC ARTS INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION, WEST CENTRAL ONTARIO BRANCH —

Allon Print-Craft Ltd., Kitchener
Anderson Press, Guelph
The B-H Press Ltd., Stratford
Bean Printing & Publishing Co. Ltd.,
Waterloo
Brant Litho Ltd., Brantford
Burnell Binding & Printing, Guelph
Chowhan Printers & Lithographers,
Brantford
Commercial Print Craft Ltd.,
Woodstock
Commercial Printers, Stratford
Exeter Times-Advocate, Exeter

Galt Printers Ltd., Galt
Guelph Printing Service, Guelph
Huddleston & Barney Ltd.,
Woodstock
Hurley Printing Co. Ltd., Brantford
International Artcrafts Co. Ltd.,
Stratford
Kelso Printing Co., Guelph
John Kerr & Sons Ltd., Galt
Kitchener Printing Service, Kitchener
C. E. Knowles Printing Co., Galt
Listowel Publishers Ltd., Listowel
Melrex Printing, Paris

Mercantile Press, Brantford
Mirror Press Ltd., Stratford
Moyer Printing Co. Ltd., Brantford
Paris Printing Co., Paris
Pearce Publishing Co., Simcoe
Phibbs Printing Ltd., St. Thomas
Progress Printing Co. Ltd., Preston
Reeve Press Ltd., Kitchener
T & T Press, Hespeler
A. Talbot Ltd., London
Thompson Printing, Paris
The Wallace Printing Co., Guelph

SOUTHWESTERN ONTARIO GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

Border Press, Windsor
Commercial Printing Co., Windsor
Curtis Co. Ltd., Windsor
Eppert Printing Ltd. (Maple Leaf Press)

Jacques Printing, Windsor
Lacasse Printing, Windsor
Modern Press, Windsor
Planet Printing Co., Chatham
Summer Printing & Publishing Co.
Ltd., Windsor

University Press, Windsor
Walkerville Printing Co. Ltd.,
Windsor
Windsor Print & Litho, Windsor

GRAPHIC ARTS INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION OF WINNIPEG

Baker & Sons Ltd., Winnipeg
Bulman Bros. Ltd., Winnipeg
Canadian Publishers Ltd., Winnipeg
Derksen Printers Ltd., Steinbach
Duha Printers Ltd., Winnipeg
D. W. Friesen & Sons Ltd., Altona
Garry Press Ltd., Winnipeg

Henderson Directories Ltd., Winnipeg
Hignell Printing Ltd., Winnipeg
Ketchen Printing Co., Winnipeg
Kingdon Printing Co., Winnipeg
Kromar Printing Co. Ltd., Winnipeg
The Public Press Ltd., Winnipeg
Regent Press Ltd., Winnipeg

Saults & Pollard Ltd., Winnipeg
Spartan Printing Ltd., Winnipeg
Stovel-Advocate Press Ltd., Winnipeg
Systems Equipment Ltd., Winnipeg
Universal Printers Ltd., Winnipeg
Wallingford Press Ltd., Winnipeg
Western Business Forms Ltd., Winnipeg
Zenith Printing Co. Ltd., Winnipeg

SASKATCHEWAN GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

A B C Printing, Saskatoon
Allied Printers Ltd., Regina
Business Printers Ltd., Regina
Caxton Printing Ltd., Regina
Central Press (1953) Ltd., Regina
Commercial Printers Ltd., Regina
Craft Litho Ltd., Saskatoon

A. Hargreaves Co. Ltd., Saskatoon
The Houghton Boston Press, Saskatoon
Mercury Printers Ltd., Saskatoon
Mid-West Litho Ltd., Saskatoon
Modern Press, Saskatoon
Paper & Stationers Ltd., Regina
Peerless Printers, Regina

Printcraft Ltd., Regina
Saskatchewan Gov't Printing Co.,
Regina
Service Printing Co. Ltd., Regina
Weyburn Review, Weyburn
The World Spectator, Moosomin

CALGARY GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

Albertan Job Press Ltd., Calgary
Alcraft Printing Ltd., Calgary
Atomic Press Ltd., Calgary
Burnand Printing Co. Ltd.,
Calgary Photo Engraving Ltd.,
Calgary
Canniff Printing Ltd., Calgary
Commercial Printers (Calgary) Ltd.,
Calgary
Continuous Forms (Alberta) Ltd.,
Calgary
Economy Bookbindery Co. Ltd.,
Calgary

Fletcher Printing Co. Ltd., Red Deer
Foothill Printers Ltd., Calgary
Graphic Arts Western Ltd., Calgary
Humphries Printing Ltd., Calgary
Kent Job Printers, Calgary
Kyle Printing Ltd., Calgary
Marshall & Donlevy Printing Ltd.,
Calgary
Val Marshall Printing Limited,
Medicine Hat
John D. McArA Ltd., Calgary
Milder Printing Ltd., Calgary
Modern Photo-Lith Services Ltd.,
Calgary

Northwest Printing & Lithographing
Ltd., Calgary
Offset Service Co. Ltd., Calgary
Phoenix Press Co. Ltd., Calgary
Rainbow Lithographers Ltd., Calgary
Reliable Typesetters, Calgary
Robins Printing Co. Ltd., Lethbridge
Universal Engravers Ltd., Calgary
W. J. Trade Bindery, Calgary
West Canadian Graphic Industries
Ltd., Calgary
Western Printing & Lithographing Co.
Ltd., Calgary

---

GRAPHIC ARTS INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION, EDMONTON BRANCH

---

A B C Press, Edmonton
 Atlas Book Bindery, Edmonton
 Bradburn Printers Ltd., Edmonton
 Bulletin Printers Ltd., Edmonton
 Coles Printing Co. Ltd., Edmonton
 Commercial Printers Ltd., Edmonton
 Co-Op Press Ltd., Edmonton
 Douglas Printing Co. Ltd., Edmonton

Graphic Arts Western Ltd., Edmonton
 Industrial Printing & Litho Ltd.,
 Edmonton
 Jasper Printing Ltd., Edmonton
 Metropolitan Printing Co., Edmonton
 Modern Press Ltd., Edmonton
 Moore Printing Co. Ltd., Edmonton
 Peerless Printers, Edmonton

Pioneer Press, Edmonton
 Preston Press, Edmonton
 Reliable Printing Co. Ltd., Edmonton
 Roberts Ltd., Edmonton
 Speedfast Printers, Edmonton
 La Survivance, Edmonton
 Willis Printing & Lithographing Co.
 Ltd., Edmonton

---

GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

---

Agency Press Ltd., Vancouver
 Anderson Printing Co. Ltd., Vancouver
 Belkin Paper Box Ltd., Richmond
 Benwell-Atkins Ltd., Vancouver
 Bindon's Ltd., Vancouver
 J. W. Boyd Ltd., Vancouver
 Brock Webber Printing Co. Ltd.,
 Vancouver
 Cariboo Observer, Quesnel
 Coast Colour Reproductions, Vancouver
 College Printers, Vancouver
 Columbian Craftsman Printers, New Westminster
 DeLong Printing Ltd., Chilliwack
 Duncan & Cowichan Leader, Duncan

Economy Printers & Mailers, Vancouver
 Evergreen Press Ltd., Vancouver
 Farwest Lithograph Ltd., Vancouver
 Gehrke Stationery & Printing Co.,
 Vancouver
 Grant-Mann Lithographers Ltd.,
 Vancouver
 A. Hazeldine Printing Co., Vancouver
 Horizon Publications Ltd.,
 North Vancouver
 Keystone Business Forms Ltd.,
 Vancouver
 Leno-Whimster Printing Ltd., Nelson
 Mills Printing & Stationery Co. Ltd.,
 Vancouver

Mitchell Press Ltd., Vancouver
 Murphy Stationery Co. Ltd., Vancouver
 Nicholson Printing Co. Ltd., Vancouver
 Price Printing Ltd., Vancouver
 Prince George Printers, Prince George
 The Richardson Press Ltd., Vancouver
 G. A. Roedde Ltd., Vancouver
 Shears Printing Ltd., Vancouver
 Oswalt Smith Print & Litho Ltd.,
 Vancouver
 Talax Printing Ltd., Vancouver
 Vancouver Printers Ltd., Vancouver
 Vancouver Stationers Ltd., Vancouver
 Wayside Press Ltd., Vernon
 Williams & Mackie Ltd., Vancouver

---

OTHER AREAS—DIRECT MEMBERS

---

The Advance Publishing Co.,
 Liverpool, N.S.
 The Blackmore Printing Co.,
 Grand Falls, Nfld.
 Colonist Printers Ltd., Victoria, B.C.
 Drummond Business Forms Ltd.,
 Drummondville, Que.

Fort Frances Times, Fort Frances, Ont.
 Journal Printing Company, Sudbury,
 Ont.
 Northern Printing Co., Timmins, Ont.
 Pakfold Western Ltd., Brandon, Man.
 The Porcupine Advance, Timmins, Ont.

Richardson, Bond & Wright Ltd.,
 Owen Sound, Ont.
 Richelieu Roto-Litho, St-Jean, Que.
 Temiskaming Printing Co., New Liskeard, Ont.

MEMBERS—G.A.I.A. NATIONAL SUPPLIERS' SECTION

MEMBRES—DIVISION DES FOURNISSEURS, A.I.G.

Robert Allworth Ltd., Toronto,
Montreal, Calgary, Winnipeg
Anglo Paper Products Ltd., Toronto
Ashton Press Mfg. Co. Ltd., Montreal
The Ault & Wiborg Co. of Canada Ltd.,
Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg, Calgary,
Vancouver
Booth Supply Ltd., Toronto, Montreal,
Winnipeg
Buntin Reid Paper Co., Toronto,
London, Ottawa
Canada Paper "Wholesale" Ltd.,
Toronto
Canada Printing Ink Co., Toronto,
Montreal, Winnipeg, Edmonton,
Vancouver
Canadian Fine Color Co., Toronto,
London, Montreal
Canadian Linotype Ltd., Toronto,
Montreal, Halifax, Ottawa, London,
Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver
Columbia Finishing Mills, Ltd.,
Cornwall, Ont.
W. V. Dawson Ltd., Montreal, Toronto

Domtar Ltd. (Howard Smith Div.),
Montreal and branches
Du Pont of Canada Ltd., Montreal,
Toronto
The E. B. Eddy Company, Hull,
Quebec
Federal Paper Co. Ltd., Montreal
Fine Papers Ltd., Toronto, North Bay
Fine Papers London Ltd., London,
Hamilton, Windsor
General Printing Ink Corp. of Canada
Ltd., Toronto, Montreal, London,
Winnipeg
Harris-Intertype (Canada) Ltd., Don
Mills, Ont., Montreal
T. Havill Paper Co. Ltd., Montreal
Koenig & Bauer Ltd., Scarborough,
Ont.
Latimer Ltd., Toronto, Montreal,
Vancouver
Lawson-McMullen-Victoria Limited,
Ottawa, Ont.
MGD Canada Ltd., Don Mills, Ont.
Manton Printing Inks Ltd., Toronto,
Montreal

Minnesota Mining & Mfg. of Canada
Ltd., London
Monotype Co. of Canada Ltd., Toronto
Perma-Flex Industries Ltd., Toronto
Provincial Paper Ltd., Toronto &
branches
Rolland Paper Co. Ltd., Montreal &
branches
Sears Ltd., Toronto, Montreal, Quebec,
Ottawa, Hamilton, London, Winnipeg,
Regina, Calgary, Edmonton,
Vancouver
Simcoe Paper & Binders Supply Co.,
Toronto
Sinclair & Valentine Co. of Canada Ltd.,
Toronto, Montreal, Quebec, Hamilton,
London, Winnipeg, Calgary,
Edmonton, Vancouver
Sydney R. Stone Ltd., Toronto
Stroud-Bridgeman Press Ltd., Toronto
& McKellar, Ont.
United Paper Mills Ltd., Toronto,
Hamilton, London
The Wilson-Munroe Co. Ltd., Toronto,
Montreal

ASSOCIATE MEMBERS OF AFFILIATED ASSOCIATIONS

MEMBRES ASSOCIÉS DES ASSOCIATIONS AFFILIÉES

N.B.—The affiliations of the associate members of local and regional groups are indicated by the small capitals after their names. The key which follows explains the abbreviations. (Note that five groups do not have associate members)

N.B.—Les affiliations des membres associés des groupes locaux et régionaux sont indiquées par les petites majuscules qui suivent leurs noms. La légende suivante indique les abréviations. (Veuillez noter que cinq groupes n'ont pas de membres associés)

QUE	L'Association Patronale des Arts Graphiques de Québec
AMI	L'Association des Maîtres-Imprimeurs de Montréal, Inc.
EPA	Employing Printers' Association of Montreal, Inc.
ECO	East Central Ontario Graphic Arts Association
HAM	Hamilton & District Graphic Arts Association
NIAG	Niagara Peninsula Graphic Arts Association
WCO	West Central Ontario Graphic Arts Association
SASK	Saskatchewan Graphic Arts Association
CALG	Calgary Graphic Arts Association
BC	Graphic Arts Association of British Columbia

Anglo Canadian Pulp and Paper Mills Limited, Quebec, QUE
The Ault & Wiborg Co. of Canada Ltd., Toronto.
NIA-G-QUE-WCO
Barber-Ellis of Canada Ltd., Toronto & branches.
ECO-HAM-NIAG-WCO-SASK-CALG-BC
Blaine Trade Bindery Ltd., Vancouver, BC.
Blair-Behnen Ltd., Vancouver, BC
British American Bank Note Co., Ottawa. EPA
Buntin-Gillies & Co., Ltd., Hamilton. HAM-NIAG-WCO Buntin Reid Paper Co., Ltd., Toronto.
ECO-HAM-WCO-NIAG
Cal/Ink Chemical Co. of Canada, Vancouver. BC
Canada Printing Ink Co. Ltd., Toronto. QUE
Canadian Bank Note Co., Ottawa. EPA
Canadian Fine Color Co., Toronto. ECO-QUE

Canadian Linotype Ltd., Toronto & branches.
QUE-EPA-ECO-WCO-HAM-NIAG-CALG-BC
Canadian Paper "Wholesale" Ltd., Toronto. ECO
Christie Chemical Co. Ltd., Montreal. QUE
Cleland-Kent Western Ltd., Vancouver. BC
Coast Paper Co., Vancouver. BC
Commercial Litho Plate Graining Ltd., Montreal. QUE
Cossette & Associés, Quebec. QUE
R. H. Cowie Sales Ltd., Calgary. CALG
Crown Zellerbach Paper Co., Vancouver & branches.
SASK-CALG-BC
W. V. Dawson Ltd., Montreal, Toronto. AMI
Didde-Glaser Inc., New York. EPA
Domtar Ltd. (Howard Smith Div.), Montreal & branches.
QUE-EPA-AMI-WCO-BC

- Dymet Ltd., Montreal. EPA
 Eastman Photographic Materials Ltd., Calgary. CALG
 The E. B. Eddy Co., Hull. QUE-BC
 Équipement d'Art Graphique de Québec Ltée, Quebec. QUE
 Fairchild Graphic Equipment, Scarborough. QUE
 Federal Paper Co., Ltd., Montreal. EPA
 Federated Metals Canada Ltd., Toronto. ECO
 Fine Papers Ltd., Toronto. NIAG
 Fine Papers London Ltd., London. NIAG-HAM-WCO
 W. J. Gage Ltd., Scarborough. WCO
 Globe Envelopes Ltd., Toronto. HAM-WCO
 Globe Envelopes Western Ltd., Regina. SASK
 Graphic Industries Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 The Fred W. Halls Paper Co. Ltd., Toronto. WCO
 Hamilton Litho Arts, Hamilton. HAM
 Hamilton Ruling & Bindery Service Ltd., Hamilton.
 NIAG-WCO
 Harris-Intertype (Canada) Ltd., Don Mills, Ontario & Montreal.
 QUE-EPA-AMI-WCO
 T. Havill Paper Co., Ltd., Montreal. EPA-AMI
 Hilroy Envelopes & Stationery Ltd., Toronto & branches.
 ECO-NIAG-WCO-CALG
 Hoechst Chemicals Co., Montreal. QUE
 I.B.M. Graphic Products Division, Don Mills. ECO
 Ingraham Offset Plate Ltd., Hamilton. HAM
 Island Paper Mills Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 Kolok Pacific Carbon & Ribbon, Vancouver. BC
 Kruger Paper Co., Ltd., Montreal. AMI
 Latimer Ltd., Toronto. ECO-BC
 Lauzier Paper Ltd., Montreal. EPA-AMI-QUE
 M. Lemieux Inc., Quebec. QUE
 T. B. Little Papers Ltd., Montreal. EPA-AMI-QUE
 MacMillan, Bloedel Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 MacPhail Engravers Ltd., Kitchener. WCO
 McFarlane, Son & Hodgson Ltd., Montreal. EPA-AMI
 Manton Printing Inks Ltd., Toronto. NIAG
 Mid-West Paper Ltd., Winnipeg. SASK-CALG
 Monarch Papers Typesetting Co., Ltd., Toronto. ECO
 Mono-Lino Typesetting Co., Ltd., Toronto. ECO
 Montreal Envelope Inc., Montreal. AMI
 Morgan Adhesives of Canada Ltd., Brampton, Ont. QUE
 National Paper Goods Ltd., Hamilton. HAM-NIAG
 Northwest Engravers Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 Paste-Up Services Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 Perma-Flex Industries Ltd., Toronto. ECO
 Le Petit Journal, Montréal. AMI
 Photogravure Ideal Inc., Montréal. AMI
 Pioneer Envelopes Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 Printing Equipment of Canada, Montréal. AMI
 Printing Papers Ltd., Saskatoon. SASK
 "The Printing Review", Montreal. EAP
 Provincial Paper Ltd., Toronto. QUE-EPA-AMI
 The Reader's Digest Assn. of Canada Ltd., Montreal. EPA
 J. S. Robertson Reg'd., Montreal. EPA
 Rolland Paper Co., Ltd., Montreal. QUE-EPA-AMI-BC
 La Cie J. B. Rolland & Fils, Montréal. QUE-AMI
 Schmidt Printing Inks of Canada Ltd., Toronto. EPA-HAM
 Sears Ltd., Toronto & branches.
 QUE-EPA-AMI-ECO-HAM-NIAG-WCO-CALG-BC
 Roy L. Shilvock, Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 Sinclair & Valentine Co. of Canada Ltd., Toronto.
 QUE-EPA-AMI-CALG
 Smith, Davidson & Lecky Ltd., Calgary. CALG-BC
 Springer Engraved Stationery Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 Geo. M. Stewart Ltd., Montreal. EPA-AMI-QUE
 Sydney R. Stone Ltd., Toronto. HAM-NIAG
 Trade Engraving Co. Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 Pierre Tremblay & Associés, Quebec. QUE
 Tri-Graphic Engravers, Regina. SASK
 L. P. Turgeon & Fils, Québec. QUE
 United Paper Mills, Ltd., Toronto. ECO-HAM-NIAG
 Vancouver Pacific Paper Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 Vancouver Typesetting Co., Ltd., Vancouver. BC
 Victoria Paper Co. Ltd., Scarborough. ECO
 W. P. T. Typesetting Ltd., Guelph. WCO
 Western Engraving Co., Vancouver. BC
 Whyte-Hooke Paper Ltd., Toronto. ECO-NIAG-WCO
 The Wilson Munroe Co., Toronto, Montreal. EPA-AMI
 Zenith Engraving Co., Ltd., Vancouver. BC

APPENDIX "Q"

Canadian Paper Trade Association
55 York Street, Toronto,
Canada—Telephone 363-8374

November 8, 1968

Mr. David Maclellan,
General Manager,
Graphic Arts Industries,
Suite 906, Fuller Bldg.,
75 Albert Street,
Ottawa 4, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Maclellan:

We appreciate being given the opportunity to examine a copy of the submission being made by your Association to the House of Commons Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs in respect of the draft anti-dumping act and proposed regulations.

The Canadian Paper Trade Association, for the wholesale paper merchants comprising its membership, endorses fully the points generally covered in your submission, and specifically —The vulnerability of the graphic arts to import competition as evidenced by the high level of printed materials imported, not exceeded by any other nation regardless of population.

—The need for full and practical consideration to be given in examining and determining "normal value" with due regard to the more limited requirements of the Canadian market in comparison with larger producing countries.

—To avoid undue delay in considering situations which may involve "material injury" arising from the fact that the individual company or trade has not the facility or expert knowledge to produce or develop evidence essential to the purpose.

We hope that the hearing may prove to be most informative. If in any way we can assist in your preparations, please ask.

Yours Faithfully,

Ivan Moffit,
Secretary.

THE LIBRARY OF THE MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY
AND ZOOLOGY
OF THE
SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION
WASHINGTON, D. C. 20560

OFFICIAL REPORT OF MINUTES
OF
PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

This edition contains the English deliberations and/or a translation into English of the French.

Copies and complete sets are available to the public by subscription to the Queen's Printer. Cost varies according to Committees.

Translations under the direction of the Bureau for Translations, Secretary of State.

ALISTAIR FRASER,
The Clerk of the House.

OFFICIAL BILINGUAL ISSUE
(see panel on back cover)

HOUSE OF COMMONS

First Session
Twenty-eighth Parliament, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE
ON

FINANCE, TRADE
AND
ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

FASCICULE BILINGUE OFFICIEL
(voir au verso du fascicule)

CHAMBRE DES COMMUNES

Première session de la
vingt-huitième législature, 1968

COMITÉ PERMANENT
DES

FINANCES, DU COMMERCE
ET DES
QUESTIONS ÉCONOMIQUES

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Président: M. Gaston Clermont

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

No. 10

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1968

Respecting
White Paper on Anti-dumping

Witnesses:

From the Canadian Textiles Institute: Messrs. Eric Hehner, Consultant; C. S. Malone, President, Chemcell Ltd.; E. F. King, President, Dominion Textile Co. Ltd.; G. Payette, Canadian Co-Director, United Textile Workers of America; B. Demers, Quebec Director, United Textile Workers of America. From the Canada Japan Trade Council: R. L. Houston, Executive Director; Geoffrey Wasteneys, Consultant. From the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise): A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister. From the Department of Finance: C. D. Arthur, International Economics Relation Division.

PROCÈS-VERBAUX ET TÉMOIGNAGES

N° 10

RÉUNIONS DU
MARDI 19 NOVEMBRE 1968

Concernant
Le Livre blanc sur l'antidumping

Témoins:

Représentant l'Institut canadien des textiles: MM. Eric Hehner, conseiller; C. S. Malone, président, Chemcell Ltd.; E. F. King, président, Dominion Textile Co. Ltd.; G. Payette, co-directeur pour le Canada des Ouvriers Unis des Textiles d'Amérique; B. Demers, directeur de l'Union des Ouvriers du textile d'Amérique pour le Québec. Représentant le Conseil du commerce canado-japonais: MM. R. L. Houston, directeur général; Geoffrey Wasteneys, conseiller. Représentant le ministère du Revenu national (Douanes et Accise): M. A. R. Hind, sous-ministre adjoint. Du ministère des Finances: M. C. D. Arthur, Division des relations économiques internationales.

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
Queen's Printer and Controller of Stationery
Imprimeur de la reine et contrôleur de la papeterie
Ottawa, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON FINANCE, TRADE
AND
ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

COMITÉ PERMANENT DE LA
FINANCE, DU COMMERCE
ET DES
QUESTIONS ÉCONOMIQUES

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Président: M. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. Alastair Gillespie
and Messrs.

Vice-président: M. Alastair Gillespie et MM.

Blair,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
Downey,
Emard,
Flemming,
Gauthier,

<sup>2</sup>Gillespie,
Givens,
Gray,
Hales,
Harkness,
<sup>1</sup>Howard (Okanagan-Boundary),

Lambert (*Edmonton
West*)
Latulippe,
Roberts,
Saltsman,
Trudel—(20)

*La secrétaire du comité,
Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.*

<sup>1</sup>Replaced Mr. Perrault on November 19, 1968.

<sup>1</sup>Remplace M. Perrault, le 19 novembre
1968.

<sup>2</sup>Replaced Mr. Noël on November 19, 1968.

<sup>2</sup>Remplace M. Noël le 19 novembre
1968.

ORDER OF REFERENCE

TUESDAY, November 19, 1968.

Ordered,—That the names of Messrs. Howard (Okanagan Boundary) and Gillespie be substituted for the names of Messrs. Perrault and Noël on the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

ATTEST

ORDRE DE RENVOI

Le MARDI 19 novembre 1968

Il est ordonné,—Que les noms de MM. Howard (Okanagan Boundary) et Gillespie soient substitués à ceux de MM. Perrault et Noël sur la liste des membres du comité permanent des finances, du commerce et des questions économiques.

ATTESTÉ

Le Greffier de la Chambre des communes,

ALISTAIR FRASER

Clerk of the House of Commons.

(Text)

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

TUESDAY, November 19, 1968

(13)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 11.10 a.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Burton, Clermont, Danson, Emard, Flemming, Gauthier, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton West), Noël, Roberts, Saltsman, Trudel—(14).

Also present: Messrs. Gillespie, Howard (Okanagan Boundary), Portelance and Ritchie.

In attendance: Representing the Canadian Textiles Institute: Messrs. Eric Hehner, Consultant; C. S. Malone, President, Chemcell Ltd.; E. F. King, President, Dominion Textile Co. Ltd.; B. Demers, Quebec Director, Textile Works' Union of America; G. Payette, Canadian Co-Director, United Textile Workers of America; W. M. Berry, President and J. I. Armstrong, General Manager, Canadian Textiles Institute.

Also in attendance: From the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise): Messrs. A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; H. D. MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section; M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division. From the Department of Finance: C. D. Arthur, International Economics Relation Division.

The Chairman announced that in future the Proceedings of this Committee will be published in a bilingual edition.

The Committee resumed consideration of the White Paper on Anti-Dumping and the representatives of the Canadian Textiles Institute were called and introduced.

In accordance with the resolution passed on October 24, 1968 the Textiles Institute brief is included herewith as Appendix R.

(Traduction)

PROCÈS-VERBAUX

Le MARDI 19 novembre 1968

(13)

Le Comité permanent des finances, du commerce et des questions économiques se réunit à 11 h. 10 du matin sous la présidence de M. Clermont.

Présents: MM. Burton, Clermont, Danson, Émard, Flemming, Gauthier, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest), Noël, Roberts, Saltsman, Trudel—(14).

Aussi présents: MM. Gillespie, Howard (Okanagan Boundary), Portelance et Ritchie.

Et aussi: Représentant l'Institut canadien des textiles: MM. Eric Hehner, conseiller; C. S. Malone, président, Chemcell Ltd.; E. F. King, président, Dominion Textile Co. Ltd.; B. Demers, directeur de l'Union des Ouvriers du textile d'Amérique pour le Québec; G. Payette, co-directeur pour les Canada des Ouvriers Unis des Textiles d'Amérique; W. M. Berry, président, et J. I. Armstrong, gérant général de l'Institut canadien des textiles.

Et aussi: Du ministère du Revenu national (Douanes et Accise): MM. A. R. Hind, sous-ministre adjoint; H. D. MacDermid, chef, Section de l'évaluation; M. T. Keam, directeur, Section de l'appréciation aux douanes. Du ministère des Finances: C. D. Arthur, Division des relations économiques internationales.

Le président annonce qu'à l'avenir, les délibérations du Comité seront publiées dans une édition bilingue.

Le Comité reprend l'étude du Livre blanc sur l'antidumping et on entend les représentants de l'Institut canadien des textiles.

Conformément à la résolution adoptée le 24 octobre 1968, le mémoire de l'Institut canadien des textiles figure à l'appendice R.

Mr. Hehner made an opening statement, copies of which were distributed to the members.

The Committee then proceeded to study the brief, section by section, and Mr. Hehner was questioned. Mr. Hind and Mr. Arthur also commented on matters brought to their attention.

The questioning continuing, at 12.55 p.m. the Committee adjourned until this afternoon.

AFTERNOON SITTING

(14)

The Committee resumed at 3.35 p.m., the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Clermont, Danson, Emard, Gauthier, Gillespie, Givens, Hales, Harkness, Howard (Okanagan Boundary), Roberts, Saltsman, Trudel—(12).

Also present: Messrs. Portelance and Ritchie.

In attendance: Representing the Canadian Textiles Institute: The same as at the morning sitting.

Also in attendance: The same government officials as at the morning sitting.

Mr. King read a telegram from the Fédération Canadienne des Travailleurs du Textile and the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CSN) endorsing the brief presented by the Textiles Institute.

Messrs. Payette and Demers made statements explaining the reasons for their Unions joining with the Textiles Institute in presenting the brief.

Questioning was resumed and Messrs. Hehner, Hind and Arthur answered questions directed to them.

The presentation of the Textiles Institute brief was concluded by comments from Messrs. Malone and King.

The Chairman thanked the witnesses who then withdrew.

At 5.45 p.m. the Committee adjourned until 8.00 p.m.

M. Hehner fait une déclaration liminaire dont des exemplaires sont remis aux membres du Comité.

Le Comité passe alors à l'étude du mémoire, paragraphe par paragraphe, et M. Hehner répond aux questions. MM. Hind et Arthur expriment aussi leur avis sur les questions portées à leur attention.

Comme l'interrogatoire se poursuit. A midi cinquante-cinq, le Comité décide de s'ajourner à l'après-midi.

SÉANCE DE L'APRÈS-MIDI

(14)

Le Comité reprend ses délibérations à 3 h. 35 de l'après-midi sous la présidence de M. Clermont.

Présents: MM. Clermont, Danson, Émard, Gauthier Gillespie, Givens, Hales, Harkness, Howard (Okanagan Boundary), Roberts, Saltsman, Trudel—(12).

Aussi présents: MM. Portelance et Ritchie.

Et aussi: Représentant l'Institut canadien des textiles: les mêmes personnes que ce matin.

Et aussi: Les mêmes hauts fonctionnaires du gouvernement que ce matin.

M. King lit un télégramme de la Fédération canadienne des travailleurs du textile et de la Confédération des syndicats nationaux (CSN) endossant le contenu du document de l'Institut des textiles.

MM. Payette et Demers expliquent pourquoi leurs syndicats se sont joints à l'Institut pour présenter le mémoire.

La période des questions reprend et MM. Hehner, Hind et Arthur répondent aux questions.

La présentation du mémoire de l'Institut se termine avec les commentaires de MM. Malone et King.

Le président remercie les témoins qui se retirent.

A 5 h. 45 de l'après-midi, le Comité s'ajourne jusqu'à 8 heures du soir.

EVENING SITTING

(15)

The Committee resumed at 8.15 p.m., the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Blair, Burton, Clermont, Danson, Emard, Gillespie, Hales, Harkness, Howard, (Okanagan Boundary), Lambert (Edmonton West), Trudel—(11).

In attendance: Representing the Canada-Japan Trade Council: Mr. R. L. Houston, Executive Director; Mr. Geoffrey Wasteney, Consultant.

Also in attendance: The same government officials as at the morning and afternoon sittings.

Messrs. Houston and Wasteney were called and introduced by the Chairman. Mr. Houston made an opening statement and he and Mr. Wasteney were questioned.

Messrs. Hind and Arthur also answered questions.

The questioning being concluded, the Chairman thanked the witnesses who then withdrew.

At 9.25 p.m., the Committee adjourned until 11.00 a.m., Thursday, November 21, 1968.

*La secrétaire du Comité,
Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.*

SÉANCE DU SOIR

(15)

Le Comité reprend son travail à 8 h. 15 du soir sous la présidence de M. Clermont.

Présents: MM. Blair, Burton, Clermont, Danson, Émard, Gillespie, Hales, Harkness, Howard (Okanagan Boundary), Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest), Trudel—(11).

Et aussi: Représentant le Conseil du commerce canado-japonais: M. R. L. Houston, directeur général; M. Geoffrey Wasteney, conseiller.

Et aussi: Les mêmes hauts fonctionnaires du gouvernement que ce matin.

Le président présente MM. Houston et Wasteney. M. Houston fait un exposé et répond aux questions en compagnie de M. Wasteney.

MM. Hind et Arthur répondent aussi à des questions.

L'interrogatoire étant terminé, le président remercie les témoins qui se retirent alors.

A 9 h. 25 du soir, le Comité s'ajourne jusqu'à 11 heures de l'avant-midi le jeudi 21 novembre 1968.

[Text]

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Tuesday, November 19, 1968.

• 1110

The Chairman: Gentlemen, I will begin the meeting. As you are no doubt aware beginning this morning there will not be two publications of our Proceedings, one in English and one in French. Instead we will have only one publication and it will be bilingual, so may I ask you to address yourselves to the microphones. May I also suggest to the witnesses and the officials of the Department, if it is possible, when you refer to a statute or a clause in the Bill that you mention the page number. For instance if you were referring to clause 15 of the White Paper would you mention the page you are referring to.

This morning we have as witnesses the following groups: the Textile Workers' Union of America, with one representative from Don Mills, Ontario and one from Hamilton, Ontario, and the Canadian Textiles Institute. May I introduce Mr. Malone, who is head of the delegation, and I will ask him to introduce the individuals with his delegation.

Mr. C. S. Malone (President, Chemcell Ltd.): Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Gentlemen we wish to thank you for the opportunity of appearing before you here today. This submission on the White Paper on Anti-Dumping is made by the Canadian Textiles Institute, which represents the Canadian textile industry as you can ascertain; by the Textile Workers' Union of America; the United Textile Workers of America and the Confederation of National Trade Unions.

Representing the Canadian Textiles Institute are Mr. G. L. Bruck, President of Bruck Mills Ltd.; Mr. E. F. King, President of Dominion Textile Co. Ltd.; Mr. W. M. Berry, President, Canadian Textiles Institute and Mr. J. I. Armstrong, General Manager of the Canadian Textiles Institute, and myself, Mr. C. S. Malone, President of Chemcell Ltd.

Our brief today will be presented by Mr. Eric Hehner, he will act as our spokesman and co-ordinator. I would like to call on Mr. King at this time to introduce the members of the various unions who are here.

[Interpretation]

TÉMOIGNAGES

(Enregistrement électronique)

[Interprétation]

Le président: Messieurs, vous savez sans doute qu'à partir de ce matin, il n'y aura pas deux publications, une en français et une en anglais, du compte rendu. Nous n'aurons qu'une publication bilingue. Je vous demanderais, par conséquent, de parler directement dans les microphones. Si possible, je vous demanderais, M. Malone ou M. Arthur, lorsque vous vous reportez à un statut ou à une disposition de la Loi, de mentionner le numéro de la page. Lorsque vous parlez de la page 15 du Livre blanc, par exemple, spécifiez la page à laquelle vous référez.

Ce matin, nous entendrons les témoins suivants: l'Union des travailleurs du textile d'Amérique, dont un des représentants est de Don Mills, Ontario, et l'autre de Hamilton, Ontario et l'Institut canadien des textiles. M. Malone est le chef de la délégation et je lui demanderais de présenter ses collègues.

M. C. S. Malone (président, Chemcell Ltée): Messieurs, nous vous remercions de l'occasion qui nous est donnée de comparaître devant vous aujourd'hui. La présentation de ce Livre blanc sur l'antidumping est faite par l'Institut canadien des Textiles qui représente l'industrie du textile au Canada; aussi par les Ouvriers unis des Textiles d'Amérique et la Confédération des syndicats nationaux.

Pour représenter l'Institut canadien des textiles, M. G. L. Bruck, président de Bruck Mills Ltd; M. E. F. King, président Dominion Textile Co. Ltd. Monsieur Bruck, voulez-vous vous lever, s'il vous plaît? Monsieur King? M. W. M. Berry, président de l'Institut canadien des textiles, M. J. I. Armstrong, gérant général, Institut canadien des textiles et moi-même, C. S. Malone, président de Chemcell Ltd.

Notre mémoire sera présenté par M. Eric Hehner, qui sera notre porte-parole et notre coordinateur. Je demanderais à M. King de vouloir bien présenter les membres des divers syndicats, ici présents.

[Text]

Mr. E. F. King (President, Dominion Textile Co. Ltd.): Thank you, Mr. Malone. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I am very happy to have this opportunity to appear here with the group from the Canadian Textiles Institute and with the unions concerned with the industry. I have had long and varied experience with the problems created by dumping and with the measures involved in trying to contain that dumping.

We from the industry look on this really as of extreme importance both to the continuance of the present industry and the future of the industry. I cannot emphasize too greatly the importance on the future both from the point of view of capital investment and the maintenance of employment. The administration of this new dumping law is going to be of vital importance to the industry both from the management and the labour point of view.

I think that members of the Committee, sir, would be interested in getting a little background on what we in the industry have been doing over the past two or three years to try to arrive at some common point of view between management and the labour unions involved in the industry.

● 1115

About two years ago, as Chairman of the Industrial Relations Committee of the Canadian Textiles Institute, I was empowered by the Institute to form a committee which would be comprised of the heads of the various textile unions, the UTWA, the TWUA and the CNTU, along with representatives from top management of industry.

We have met several times over the past two years to discuss problems of general interest from all angles of the industry. We, of course, many, many times do not agree, and I guess that is one of the things that will probably prevail over the years.

On the other hand I think we have done a lot for each other in getting to know each other and putting some of our problems on the table. I am very happy today we are in concert with the management of the industry, and the representatives of the unions.

We have with us today, and I would like to introduce to the members, sir, Mr. B. Demers of the TWUA, on my far right and Mr. George Payette of the UTWA. We should have with us representatives of the CNTU, but perhaps due to weather conditions they have been delayed and will put in an appearance later.

[Interpretation]

M. E. F. King (président, Dominion Textile Company Ltd.): Merci, monsieur Malone. Monsieur le président, messieurs, je suis très heureux d'avoir eu l'occasion de venir ici avec le groupe de l'Institut canadien des textiles et les syndicats intéressés dans cette industrie. J'ai eu une longue expérience des problèmes créés par le dumping et des mesures prises pour le contrôler.

Dans l'industrie, nous considérons cette réunion comme en étant une de très grande importance tant pour le maintien de l'industrie que pour son avenir. Je ne saurais trop insister sur l'importance de cet avenir tant au point de vue des investissements que de l'emploi. L'administration de cette nouvelle loi sur l'antidumping est d'importance vitale pour l'industrie, et pour les patrons et pour les ouvriers.

Je pense que les membres de votre Comité seraient heureux d'entendre un peu quelques détails sur notre expérience depuis quelques années pour en arriver à un point de vue commun entre les patrons et les syndicats intéressés dans cette industrie.

Il y a environ deux ans, en qualité de président du comité des relations extérieures de l'Institut canadien des textiles, j'ai été chargé par l'Institut de former un comité composé des chefs des divers syndicats des textiles dont la Confédération des syndicats nationaux, l'Union des ouvriers du textile d'Amérique, et les Ouvriers unis des Textiles d'Amérique et les représentants supérieurs de l'industrie. Nous avons tenu plusieurs réunions au cours des deux dernières années pour parler de problèmes d'intérêt général à tous les points de vue. Nous ne sommes pas toujours d'accord et c'est probablement une des choses qui se produira encore pendant quelques années.

Nous allons faire beaucoup, de part et d'autre, pour venir à mieux nous connaître et à discuter nos problèmes. Je me réjouis d'être parmi vous aujourd'hui. Nous avons, en plus des représentants du patronat, des représentants des syndicats.

Nous avons avec nous aujourd'hui, et j'aimerais les présenter à votre Comité, monsieur le président, tout d'abord à ma droite M. Demers, de l'UOTA, et M. Payette de l'OUTA. Les représentants du CSN devraient également être parmi nous, mais sans doute est-ce dû aux intempéries, ils ont été retardés, ils viendront peut-être plus tard.

[Texte]

Perhaps Mr. Payette and Mr. Demers have other members of their organizations present whom they would like to introduce.

Mr. B. Demers (Quebec Director, Textile Workers' Union of America): I would like to introduce Clare Easto, Manager of the Southwestern Joint Board, and Mr. Vic Skurjat, Manager of the Toronto Joint Board.

M. G. Payette (directeur conjoint des Ouvriers unis des textiles d'Amérique): Je regrette de constater que je suis le seul représentant de notre union ici. M. William Foley qui est directeur conjoint canadien et M. Vernon Mustard, représentant international de notre union, n'ont pu venir, étant retenus ailleurs pour des raisons sérieuses découlant de leurs activités syndicales.

Mr. Eric Hehner (Consultant, Canadian Textiles Institute): Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, our written submission filed in advance deals clause by clause with the draft anti-dumping act. These detailed points are of importance and not susceptible to summarization. However we will make a brief statement of our over-all views with respect to the proposed legislation.

Adequately administered, the new draft legislation has a potential for greater effectiveness for both Canadian industry and for importers than the existing legislation. The wording of our present legislation has prevented the application of dumping duties to dumped imports, which have in fact caused or threatened injury to existing industries, or have materially retarded establishment of new production. It should in fairness also be said that under the existing legislation, in some cases dumping duties have been applicable even though no injury has been caused. Also there have been loopholes which have made it impossible to apply dumping duties, where warranted, because of legal technicalities. It has been easy to arrange transactions in such a manner that the intent of the law was frustrated. Efforts appear to have been made to provide in the new law for these situations.

Having said that the proposed new anti-dumping Act has a potential for more effective application of dumping duties than the existing law, it must also be stated that the form of the proposed law requires a much greater degree of administrative vigilance and effort, with more exercise of administrative

[Interprétation]

Peut-être M. Payette et M. Demers auraient-ils d'autres membres de leur association à nous présenter?

M. B. Demers (directeur pour la région de Québec de l'Union des Ouvriers du Textile d'Amérique): J'aimerais vous présenter M. Clare Easto, gérant du Southwestern Joint Board et de M. Vic Skurjat, gérant du Toronto Joint Board.

Mr. George Payette (Canadian Co-Director, United Textile Workers of America): I am sorry I am the only one to represent our union here. Mr. William Foley, who is a Canadian Co-Director and Mr. Vernon Mustard, who is the International Representative of our union, were unable to attend, being detained elsewhere due to pressing union business.

M. Eric Hehner (conseiller Institut canadien des textiles): 1. Notre soumission écrite en ce qui concerne le code anti-dumping, qui a été déposée à l'avance, traite chaque article séparément. Les sujets étudiés en détail sont de très grande importance et il est peu probable qu'ils soient résumés. Nous vous donnerons, cependant, un bref rapport de nos points de vue en ce qui concerne la loi proposée.

2. Le nouveau projet de loi, administré d'une façon adéquate, a un potentiel d'un plus grand effet et pour l'industrie canadienne et les importateurs que la présente législation. Les termes de la présente législation ont empêché l'application des droits de dumping sur certaines importations qui ont été déversées et qui ont, en effet, causé ou failli causer des dommages aux industries déjà existantes, ou qui ont matériellement retardé l'établissement d'une nouvelle production. En toute franchise nous devrions aussi vous dire que dans certains cas sous la présente législation, des droits de dumping ont été appliqués même si aucun dommage n'avait été causé. Il y a eu aussi quelques cas où il a été impossible d'appliquer les droits de dumping jugés nécessaires à cause de certaines techniques légales. L'arrangement très facile de certaines transactions d'une telle façon pour contourner la législation a aussi empêché l'application des droits. Il semble que des efforts ont été faits dans ce nouveau projet afin de remédier à ces situations.

3. Nous avons déjà dit que le projet du code anti-dumping a un potentiel d'application de droits de dumping plus grand que la formule de la loi proposée demande un plus haut degré de vigilance administrative, d'effort et un plus grand exercice de jugement que le présent acte. Les changements judgment, than our existing statute. This is not just a case of technical changes in the law. The changes required by the Code are fundamental, basic and sweeping.

[Text]

• 1120

We now have an individual transaction basis to establish the fact of dumping, with a consequent imposition of dumping duties in the case of goods of a class or kind made in Canada, a system developed during six decades of experience. We must now move to a concept of injury, of an industry, and of dealing with all dumped imports of a given kind rather than just goods imported under a particular customs entry. Because of the new restrictions on retroactivity, the element of speed in administration has assumed vital importance. Errors caused by delay in forming opinions, and taking action, are no longer retrievable. If there is not an effective administration of the new law, we will have nothing.

We reiterate this point. We feel it is the most important aspect.

The new law will require a fundamental reorganization of the customs administration in order to conform to the new functions and the new powers, if we are to have the quick and effective application of anti-dumping duties which has been stated to be government policy. It is not sufficient to have a law with good potential. The principle of quick and effective application of anti-dumping duties, where there is injurious dumping, must be not only expressed in law, but translated into action at all stages of administration. The primary stages of deciding that an investigation of alleged or apparent injurious dumping should be initiated, and the taking of provisional measures are areas of major concern. There is, however, another aspect of administration of importance.

The scheme of the draft Bill spells out in considerable detail the definition of dumping, and the part to be played by the Customs Division in determining whether dumping is taking place. Because of this, and perhaps because the Customs Division is an existing organization represented at these hearings, discussion of the need for effective administration of the proposed new law has tended to focus on effective administration by the Customs Division in its function of discovering requis par le code sont essentiels, de base et englobent tout.

[Interpretation]

4. Nous avons maintenant une base de transaction individuelle pour établir l'évidence d'un cas de dumping et par conséquent appliquer l'imposition des droits dans le cas d'un déversement de marchandise de qualité ou variété semblable à la même marchandise fabriquée au Canada; ceci représente une méthode qui a été développée au cours de soixante années d'expérience. Nous devons maintenant considérer le concept de dommages à une industrie et la considération de dumping de toutes importations d'une même sorte au lieu de chaque catégorie douanière séparément.

A cause des nouvelles restrictions sur la rétroactivité, la rapidité avec laquelle ces restrictions sont mises en vigueur est d'une importance vitale. Les erreurs commises à cause des délais à se faire une opinion et à agir ne sont plus réparables. S'il n'y a pas une administration efficace de la nouvelle loi, les négociations n'aboutiront à rien. Nous réitérons ce point. Nous croyons que ceci est l'aspect le plus important.

5. La nouvelle loi exigera une réorganisation fondamentale de l'administration des douanes afin de se conformer aux nouvelles fonctions et aux nouveaux pouvoirs si nous devons avoir une application rapide et efficace de droits où il y a un dumping nuisible ne doit pas seulement être exprimé dans une loi mais mis en pratique à tous les stades de l'administration et en particulier aux premiers stades où nous devons instituer une enquête sur une cause apparente de dumping et dans la décision à prendre des mesures provisoires dans les causes qui nous concernent le plus.

Il semble qu'il y ait un autre aspect d'importance quant à l'administration.

6. Le bill projeté détaille la définition du mot «dumping» d'une façon très minutieuse ainsi que le rôle qu'aura à jouer la division des douanes dans le but de déterminer s'il y a dumping ou pas. A cause de ces détails et peut-être du fait que la division des douanes est une organisation déjà existante représentée à ces débats, la question du besoin d'une administration efficace de la loi projetée a eu tendance à se refléter dans le rôle de la division des douanes pour découvrir et évaluer le and measuring dumping. There has been lesser attention given to "material injury".

[Texte]

We hope it is accepted that the Customs Division will require only prima facie evidence that there may be injury, or threat of injury, leaving the detailed consideration of injury to the Tribunal. Very little has been said as to the criteria which will be accepted by the Tribunal as proof of material injury, or threat thereof. We agree this would be a difficult matter to try to define, and we are not suggesting that there should be a statutory definition. Nevertheless, this is too important an area to be left entirely to as yet unknown members of the Tribunal, without discussion in advance.

I would like to make an added comment that is not on the sheet we distributed. In our opinion an injury can be caused to healthy industry as well as an unhealthy industry. If dumping adversely affects an industry it should be found to be injurious dumping. Indeed, if dumping prevents an industry from improving its position this is causing an injury and should bring an injury finding. We do not think it would be a proper function of the anti-dumping Tribunal to form judgments as to the reasonableness or otherwise of the prosperity of Canadian industry. In other words it should not become a price and wage guidelines board in disguise.

To us it is injury when a dumped import takes over business which we, as Canadian producers, could supply, and consequently limits our ability to produce and to employ. This is a process which, if not dealt with, will prevent the Canadian textile industry from planning and making capital expenditures as it should.

We are disturbed at some comments which have been made from time to time on this subject of injury, and we hope your Committee will inquire into this aspect of our proposed new anti-dumping law.

• 1125

Gentlemen that completes our brief statement of our over-all views. We are available now to answer any and all questions which you may wish to address to us arising from either this statement or the brief which we submitted in advance.

The Chairman: Thank you, Mr. Hehner. We also have with us Mr. C. D. Arthur from the Department of Finance and Mr. A. R. Hind, the Assistant Deputy Minister of the Department of National Revenue. As you know, the brief is divided into a number of paragraphs. Paragraphs 1 to 10 deal with general com-dumping. Il y a eu moins d'importance accordé au «préjudice matériel».

[Interprétation]

7. Nous espérons que vous approuverez le fait que la division des douanes n'exige que les preuves de première vue de dommages ou possibilité de dommages et que l'enquête détaillée soit laissée au tribunal. Très peu de choses ont été dites en ce qui concerne le critère accepté par le tribunal comme preuve de menace de dommages ou de dommages. Nous sommes d'accord que ceci serait un sujet très difficile à définir et nous ne vous suggérons pas de lui donner une définition statutaire. Cependant, ce domaine est trop important pour être laissé à un tribunal dont les membres ne sont pas encore connus sans considération antérieure.

J'aimerais ajouter quelque chose qui ne fait partie du document que nous avons distribué. C'est celle-ci:

A notre avis, un préjudice peut être fait à une industrie saine aussi bien qu'à une industrie malsaine. Si le dumping fait du tort à une industrie, il sera certainement considéré comme un dumping préjudiciable, et si cela empêche l'industrie de s'améliorer, cela cause également préjudice. Nous ne croyons pas que ce soit le rôle du tribunal de l'antidumping de porter des jugements quant à l'état de prospérité de l'industrie canadienne.

En d'autres mots, le tribunal ne doit pas devenir un organisme fixant des normes.

A notre avis, il y a un préjudice lorsqu'une importation de dumping nuit au développement de l'industrie. C'est une procédure qui, si on ne l'arrête pas, empêchera l'industrie canadienne du textile de faire des projets et d'établir un programme.

Certaines personnes ont fait des commentaires sur le préjudice causé par le dumping, et nous souhaitons que vous étudiez ce sujet.

Messieurs, voilà qui est notre exposé, notre vue d'ensemble, et nous sommes prêts à répondre aux questions que vous voudrez bien nous poser, au sujet de l'exposé que je viens de vous lire ou du mémoire que nous vous avons distribué.

Le président: Comme vous savez, messieurs, le mémoire est divisé en articles. Nous avons également parmi nous des fonctionnaires des ministères des Finances et du Revenu national. Le mémoire est divisé en articles: les articles 1 à 10 ont trait aux commentaires d'ordre général, et si vous avez des questions ments. Do you have any comments to make on those paragraphs?

[Text]

Le président: Oui, monsieur Émard.

M. Émard: Je voudrais demander au témoin s'il voudrait répéter la dernière phrase qu'il a dite «an injury is when dump import prevent...», je n'ai pas tellement saisi. Auriez-vous l'obligeance de répéter ce que vous avez dit en terminant.

Mr. King: Yes sir.

Mr. Hehner: Our statement was that an injury can be caused to a healthy industry as well as an unhealthy one. If dumping affects an industry adversely it should be found to be injurious dumping. I think I could express the point that concerns us in blunter words. We believe that the injury Tribunal should not look at dumping and then look at the industry and say: We think you are making a very healthy profit now, and in our opinion if dumping affects your production, and it affects your price levels, that should not be called injury; your business is too healthy to be injured.

We would express it in other terms. I just used the word "profit". If an industry is providing a high volume of employment and dumping affects the level of employment, requiring lay-offs of men by taking over business which the Canadian industry could supply, we do not think it should be the function of an anti-dumping Tribunal to say: This industry has had such a high level of employment that if it has to lay-off some people we do not really think that is causing an injury.

It may sound absurd to express it this way but this is the point we are afraid of.

We think if an injury is caused that the healthiness or otherwise of the employment level and of the profits should not enter into the judgement. The question is: Has dumping caused an injury to that industry?

The Chairman: Are there any questions on the first ten paragraphs?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Hehner, perhaps you could clarify a point for me. Naturally we want to see very high degrees of production and employment in your industry but you have also related your comment to price levels. Are you suggesting that your industry should be insulated completely from the price competition of foreign goods?

[Interpretation]

à poser à propos de ces articles, c'est le moment.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Émard?

Mr. Émard: I would like to ask the witness whether he would like to repeat the last sentence. I did not quite understand what he said about grounds for claiming injury. Would he please repeat what he said in the last sentence concerning dumping, and damage.

M. King: Oui monsieur.

M. Hehner: J'ai dit qu'un préjudice peut être causé à une industrie saine, aussi bien qu'à une industrie qui n'est pas trop prospère. Si le dumping cause préjudice à une industrie, il devrait être considéré comme préjudiciable.

Je crois que ce qui nous concerne ici peut s'exprimer ainsi. Nous croyons que le tribunal du préjudice ne doit pas considérer le dumping puis l'industrie et dire: «Vous faites un bon profit à l'heure actuelle, vos recettes sont bonnes, et à notre avis, si le dumping affecte votre production ou vos prix, cela ne fera pas de préjudice à votre industrie parce que vous êtes trop prospères.»

On peut l'exprimer autrement; j'ai utilisé le mot «profit», mais si, dans un district à niveau d'emploi assez élevé, le dumping affecte le niveau de l'emploi, et cause des mises à pied, je ne crois pas que ce soit le rôle du tribunal de l'antidumping de dire: «Voilà une industrie qui a un niveau si élevé d'emploi que même si certaines personnes sont mises à pied, ce n'est vraiment pas un préjudice dans leur cas.» C'est peut-être un peu ridicule de l'exprimer ainsi, mais c'est cela que nous craignons.

Nous croyons que s'il y a un préjudice, la situation financière ou le niveau d'emploi ne doivent pas entrer en ligne de compte. Il faut décider si le dumping a causé un préjudice en fait.

Le président: Questions à poser sur les 11 premiers articles?

M. Gray: J'aimerais que vous éclaircissiez ce point.

Un haut degré de production et un fort niveau d'emploi nous intéressent aussi, mais vous avez rattaché votre commentaire au niveau des prix. Laissez-vous entendre que l'industrie doit être complètement isolée de la concurrence des prix des marchandises importées?

[Texte]

Mr. Hehner: No sir, I am suggesting the exact opposite. We are talking about one thing only, injurious dumping. We do think this industry and all Canadian industries should be insulated from the price competition of injurious dumping.

Mr. Gray: Does that not beg the question?

Mr. Hehner: I do not think it does sir. I am not trying to beg the question at all.

Mr. Gray: May I interrupt for a moment? Perhaps you did not intend to but you seem to be suggesting that anything involving price competition should be defined per se as injurious dumping.

Mr. Hehner: No sir. I said if it is dumping. Price competition from goods that are not dumped is not subject to this legislation, and we are not suggesting it should be. We are quite definitely suggesting that if the price competition is caused by dumping and causes injury that the purpose of this legislation is to stop that particular type of competition.

• 1130

Mr. Gray: You go on to say that the Tribunal should decide, if there is dumping and if the effect is to cause you to lower prices to meet the competition of the goods coming in on this basis, that is, per se, injurious.

Mr. Hehner: I am saying that is exactly what we understand this legislation is intended to stop.

Mr. Gray: Even if the effect has really caused you to lower your prices to Canadian consumers and caused you to lay off people or not to make a reasonable rate of profit?

Mr. Hehner: Mr. Gray you have, I think, raised a very interesting point. The question of what is a reasonable rate of profit is a very difficult question to answer. As you know it varies with every industry; it varies with the degree of obsolescence of processes and the need to have heavy investment in new capital equipment.

I would not like to enter into a discussion as to whether or not there should be a government body designed to control profit levels, and designed to control wage levels. I do not think this is the matter before the Committee at the moment.

However, I am suggesting that the anti-dumping Tribunal should not turn itself into such a government body. We feel that there are only two things at issue. First, are goods

[Interprétation]

M. Hehner: Au contraire, nous songeons à une chose seulement, au dumping qui cause préjudice. Nous croyons que toute industrie doit être protégée contre la concurrence des prix causée par le dumping préjudiciable.

M. Gray: Ne me retournez-vous pas la question?

M. Hehner: Je ne crois pas que nous nous écartons de la question. Au contraire.

M. Gray: Je ne veux pas vous interrompre, mais vous semblez dire que tout ce qui a trait à la concurrence des prix doit être défini comme du dumping préjudiciable.

M. Hehner: Non. La concurrence des prix au sujet de marchandises ou de denrées qui ne font pas partie du dumping, ne regarde pas cette mesure législative. Mais nous disons que si la concurrence des prix est causée par le dumping et cause un préjudice, c'est l'objectif de cette mesure législative que d'empêcher ce genre de dumping.

M. Gray: Vous dites que le rôle du tribunal devrait être de juger s'il y a dumping, et que, si le dumping amène une baisse des prix afin de concurrencer le produit étranger, c'est du dumping préjudiciable en soi.

M. Hehner: Je dis que c'est précisément ça que nous entendons arrêter par la mesure législative.

M. Gray: Même si cela vous a obligé à réduire vos prix au consommateur et à mettre à pied de la main-d'œuvre tout en vous empêchant de réaliser un profit raisonnable?

M. Hehner: Monsieur Gray, vous avez soulevé un point très intéressant. La question de savoir ce qui constitue un niveau raisonnable de profit est un problème difficile à résoudre. Comme vous le savez cela varie selon l'industrie et cela dépend du niveau de désuétude des procédés de production et des besoins considérables.

Je ne voudrais pas débattre la question de savoir si nous devrions avoir un organisme du gouvernement pour contrôler le niveau des profits et des salaires. Ce n'est pas cela qui est à l'étude ici.

Mais je répète que le tribunal de l'anti-dumping ne doit pas devenir un organisme gouvernemental de ce genre. Nous croyons qu'il n'y a que deux choses à régler. Est-ce being dumped? This is a responsibility of the Customs and Excise Division to determine.

[Text]

Second, if goods are being dumped is it dumping causing injury? This is all that the draft Bill ostensibly sets out to do. We are merely expressing the hope that the anti-dumping Tribunal restricts its activities to this activity and does not turn itself, as I say, into either a wage control body or a price control body.

Mr. Gray: Thank you.

Mr. Roberts: Just along the line of Mr. Gray's questioning, I think the real point he is getting at is: what is the concept of injury? How extensive is it? Would you agree that in the consideration of injury one should not only consider the effect on the industry concerned but also the public interest, which includes consumers and others in the economy, as well as the people applying under the legislation. Is injury to be restricted simply to the interested industry or the industry concerned, or is injury to be considered in the light of the needs of the economy as a whole including consumers?

Mr. Hehner: Under the functions of the injury Tribunal, I suggest that injury to the industry is the only thing being considered.

The question of overriding interests can be dealt with separately. For example, the government recently decided that certain pharmaceutical products should not be subject to dumping duty, as a matter of overriding public interest.

We feel if there are to be any decisions made on overriding public interest that they should be made by the government or by Parliament, rather than being made by a Tribunal which was ostensibly set up to fulfil one function only.

Mr. Roberts: So you are suggesting really that there should be a narrow interpretation of injury rather than a broad one, and that it should be limited simply to the interest of the industry concerned?

Mr. Hehner: This, sir, is what the Code says and this is what the Bill says.

• 1135

May I refer you, sir, to one of several clauses, and I am looking at page 46 of the White Paper, or look at page 44, if you will, at clause 4. It is the first clause dealing with the levying and collecting of dumping duties. It says:

There shall be levied, collected and paid upon all dumped goods entered into Canada

[Interpretation]

que les denrées, les marchandises sont l'objet du dumping. La direction des douanes doit déterminer cette question.

Deuxièmement, s'il y a du dumping, est-ce que ce dumping est préjudiciable? Et c'est tout ce que le projet de loi semble proposer. Nous espérons simplement que le tribunal se limitera à cette activité et ne se constituera pas en un organisme pour contrôler les prix ou les profits.

M. Gray: Je vous remercie.

M. Roberts: Je crois que le point que M. Gray veut faire ressortir c'est le concept de préjudice. En utilisant ce concept est-ce qu'on doit uniquement considérer l'effet sur l'industrie en cause ou bien tenir compte aussi de l'intérêt public, c'est-à-dire l'intérêt du consommateur et l'économie en général? Est-ce que le préjudice doit être limité seulement à l'industrie en cause ou est-ce qu'on doit tenir compte aussi du consommateur et de l'économie du pays en général?

M. Hehner: D'après les fonctions du tribunal je pense qu'il s'agit du préjudice à l'industrie. C'est la seule chose dont on tient compte.

Pour ce qui est de la question de l'intérêt général, c'est une question à part. Le gouvernement, par exemple a récemment décidé que certains produits pharmaceutiques ne devraient pas être sujets aux droits de dumping parce qu'il s'agissait de l'intérêt général.

Nous pensons que si l'on doit prendre des décisions au sujet de l'intérêt général, que ces décisions doivent être prises par le gouvernement et par le Parlement plutôt que par un tribunal qui a été manifestement constitué pour ne remplir qu'une seule fonction.

M. Roberts: Vous dites donc que le préjudice doit être interprété restrictivement et ne doit s'appliquer qu'à l'intérêt de l'industrie.

M. Hehner: C'est ce que le code et la loi disent.

Je me reporte à plusieurs dispositions, page 46 du Livre blanc, ou à l'article 4 en page 44 si vous le voulez. C'est le premier article qui parle de l'imposition des droits de dumping. Cet article dit:

«Il est levé, perçu et payé sur toutes les marchandises sous-évaluées entrées au Canada

[Texte]

(a) in respect of which the Tribunal has made an order or finding, after the entry of the goods, that the dumping of the goods or of goods of the same description (i) has caused material injury to the production in Canada of like goods.

In other words it is expressed in terms of causing damage to production. The other clauses are, of course, all expressed in the same terms.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Hehner could you direct your attention to paragraph (b) of the Anti-Dumping Code on page 14 of the White Paper and relate what that says to your remarks?

Mr. Hehner: Yes sir. The Code in Article 3, paragraph (b) says:

The evaluation of injury—shall be based on examination—

If I may interpolate here, it refers to the evaluation of the effects of the dumped imports on the industry in question. This is the subject of your immediately preceding question. It goes on:

—shall be based on examination of all factors having a bearing on the state of the industry in question—

It then suggests what some of these factors are, although it is not an exclusive list.

—development and prospects with regard to turnover, market share, profits, prices—

The way I read this paragraph, sir, I may also say the way in which it has been represented to Canadian industry at large in explanations given by government officials following the publication of the Code, more than a year ago, these are factors which you should look at to make certain, if an industry is suffering injury, that the injury has been caused by dumping, and that you shall not attribute to dumping a malaise in an industry which has in fact been caused by other factors.

The fact that an industry's profits are going down; the fact that employment is going down; the fact that it is losing a share of the market; need not result from dumped imports at all. Perhaps an industry has priced its goods too high and it is losing its market by competition from lower-priced goods which are not dumped.

As I read this paragraph, to which you have directed my attention, it says to examine all of the factors and not to blame the troubles of an industry on dumping if they are attributable to some other factor.

[Interprétation]

(a) pour lesquelles le Tribunal a rendu une ordonnance ou pris des conclusions, après l'entrée des marchandises, portant que le dumping des marchandises ou de marchandises de la même sorte, (i) a causé un préjudice sensible à la production au Canada de marchandises semblables,»

En d'autres termes on dit que le dumping doit causer un préjudice à la production. Les autres articles sont formulés dans des termes semblables.

M. Gray: Monsieur Hehner, voulez-vous lire l'article b) à la page 14 du Livre blanc sur l'anti-dumping et relier ce que dit cet article à ce que vous venez d'affirmer?

M. Hehner: Oui. Le code à l'article 3, au paragraphe b) déclare que:

L'évaluation du préjudice—se fondera sur l'examen...

Permettez-moi de vous dire qu'on y parle de l'évaluation de l'effet du dumping sur l'industrie. C'est le sujet de votre question précédente. Ensuite on dit qu'elle se fondera sur l'examen de tous les facteurs qui influent sur la situation de ladite production.

Ensuite on continue en donnant une liste de ces facteurs. Cette liste n'est pas tout à fait complète «L'évolution et les perspectives, le chiffre d'affaires, les bénéfices, les prix etc.»

La façon dont je comprends cet article et je dirais même la façon dont on l'a expliqué à l'industrie après la publication du code, il y a plus d'un an, c'est qu'il s'agit de facteurs qui devaient être étudiés pour s'assurer que lorsqu'une industrie subit un préjudice, c'est à cause du dumping. On ne doit pas attribuer au dumping un malaise qui règne dans une industrie et qui peut avoir été causé par d'autres facteurs.

Le simple fait que les profits diminuent dans une industrie, que l'emploi diminue, que l'industrie ne parvient pas à avoir sa part des marchés ne résulte peut-être pas du dumping; peut-être que les prix sont trop élevés et peut-être que l'industrie perd ses marchés au profit de concurrents qui vendent à des prix inférieurs et non à raison de dumping.

A mon avis ce paragraphe dit qu'il faut examiner tous les facteurs et qu'il ne faut pas jeter le blâme sur le dumping pour tous les malheurs de l'industrie s'il y a d'autres facteurs en cause.

[Text]

Mr. Gray: If you read the balance of the paragraph I think it would help support your interpretation because it goes on to say amongst the factors to be examined are:

...export performance, employment, volume of dump and other imports, utilization of capacity of domestic industry, and productivity and restrictive trade practices. No one or several of these factors can necessarily give decisive guidance.

Mr. Hehner: Thank you sir, that is as I have read it, and as I say, as it has also been explained to Canadian industry at large and other interested parties in a number of very helpful briefings given by government officials trying to explain the then brand new Code.

The Chairman: Have you any other questions, Mr. Roberts? Mr. Harkness?

Mr. Harkness: In the preliminary statement you put a great deal of emphasis on the effective administration of the new law, and particularly on the speed of making a determination on whether dumping has taken place, and then speed in taking the following action in an effective manner.

On page 3 of your brief...

The Chairman: Which brief, Mr. Harkness?

• 1140

Mr. Harkness: The regular brief. On page 3 of the brief in paragraph 8 you state:

...our facilities for establishing the facts promptly have been inadequate.

Then in paragraph 10:

One essential to investigations is an improved mechanism for the determination of value abroad.

How do you think the facilities for establishing the facts promptly have been inadequate? How do you think this and the way in which investigations need to be carried on can be improved?

In other words, what steps do you suggest should be taken as far as the Department of National Revenue is concerned in order to enable them to determine rapidly and effectively whether a dump has taken place?

Mr. Hehner: I think, sir, they have been in need of more adequately dispersed staff. Mr. Hind, the Assistant Deputy Minister of the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise) while answering some questions asked in this Committee last week said there were some new overseas appointments being

[Interpretation]

M. Gray: Si vous lisez le reste de la disposition on mentionne comme facteurs à être examinés:

les résultats obtenus à l'exportation, le taux d'utilisation de la capacité de la production nationale et la productivité. Un seul ni même plusieurs de ces critères ne constitueront pas nécessairement une base de jugement déterminante.

M. Hehner: Je vous remercie. Je crois que j'ai bien compris cet article, lorsqu'on l'a expliqué à l'industrie en général. Nous avons eu des consultations très utiles avec les fonctionnaires du ministère lorsque l'on a établi le code.

Le président: Y a-t-il d'autres questions? Monsieur Roberts? Monsieur Harkness?

M. Harkness: Dans votre mémoire et dans la déclaration préliminaire que vous avez lue, on a beaucoup insisté sur l'administration efficace de la nouvelle loi et en particulier sur la détermination rapide du dumping et la rapidité avec laquelle on agit d'une façon efficace. A la page 3 de votre mémoire...

Le président: De quel mémoire s'agit-il?

M. Harkness: Le grand mémoire. A la page 3, article 8 vous dites: «...nos moyens d'établir les faits avec célérité n'ont pas été efficace.»

Puis au paragraphe 10:

Une condition essentielle des enquêtes, ce serait l'amélioration du mécanisme de détermination de la valeur à l'étranger.

De quelle façon pensez-vous que le mécanisme nécessaire pour déterminer rapidement le dommage sont insuffisants et comment pensez-vous que les enquêtes peuvent être faites plus rapidement ou améliorées?

Quelles sont les mesures qui doivent être prises, à votre avis, au ministère du Revenu national pour leur permettre de déterminer rapidement et avec efficacité les cas de dumping?

M. Hehner: Je pense qu'ils ont besoin sur place de personnel mieux distribué. M. Hind, le sous-ministre du Revenu national a répondu à certaines questions posées dans ce Comité la semaine dernière. Il a dit, entre autres qu'il fallait envoyer plus d'agents outre-mer. Mais je pense que le personnel de made. Even so, I suspect that the overseas staff of the Customs and Excise Division will be rather badly swamped. I think they have been overworked in the past and at any projected staff level of which I have knowledge, they are going to be badly overworked in the future.

[Texte]

I have one practical suggestion, sir. A large proportion of enquiries in the past from the Customs and Excise Division have been carried on by correspondence. With respect, I suggest they have not been vigorous enough in insisting on getting prompt replies.

We have personal knowledge of many cases where it seemed to us correspondence has been almost indefinitely protracted without the Customs and Excise Division saying as we think they properly should: "If we do not get a reply in ten days we will take action based on such knowledge and representations as have been laid before us."

To put it very bluntly, Mr. Harkness—I am making this statement, I think, with some knowledge—it has been all too easy to delay a Customs and Excise Division investigation by sending back a polite letter saying: "Mr. Smith to whom you wrote has just left on a business trip. I will draw the letter to his attention when he returns in six weeks." The matter has then been put in the Customs and Excise Division's file for a follow-up in six weeks. This is standard practice. In fact, it is almost a joke. I think the Customs and Excise Division has been too nice and too co-operative and have acted too much like nice guys.

Mr. Harkness: Then, your two definite suggestions in this regard are more customs officers abroad for investigatory purposes and some definite rule with regard to the time which should be allowed before a reply to correspondence would be acted upon?

Mr. Hehner: Yes, in fairness to the Customs and Excise Division, Mr. Harkness, may I add one comment.

Under the law as it presently exists there have been no sharp restrictions on retroactivity. It can, therefore, be said if the Customs and Excise Division did extend courtesies in allowing exporters to take their time about replying and occasionally found those courtesies abused, they have the statutory power to take action retroactively if they did finally ascertain the facts.

This is a situation, of course, that is being very sharply changed under the non-retroactive provision of the new statute as imposed la division des Douanes et Accises à l'étranger va être débordé. A mon avis, ils ont trop de travail et d'après ce que j'en sais, je crois qu'à l'avenir, ils le seront encore davantage.

[Interprétation]

Je dirais donc que d'une façon pratique, une grande partie des enquêtes que la division des Douanes et Accises a faites dans le passé l'ont été par correspondance. Et en toute déférence, je pense qu'ils n'ont pas été assez vigoureux, ils n'ont pas insisté assez pour obtenir une réponse prompte.

Nous avons une connaissance personnelle de plusieurs cas où il nous a semblé que la correspondance traînait en longueur sans que la division des Douanes et Accises ne prenne les mesures nécessaires, comme il se devait et dise: «Si nous n'avons pas de réponse d'ici dix jours, nous prendrons les moyens à notre disposition, en nous basant sur la connaissance des faits que nous avons».

Pour parler franchement M. Harkness, je fais cette déclaration en toute connaissance de cause, il était trop facile de retarder l'enquête du ministère en répondant poliment: «M. Smith, à qui vous avez écrit, est en voyage d'affaires. Je lui ferai part de cette lettre à son retour dans six semaines». Et la lettre a été réléguée aux oubliettes dans un classeur pour six semaines. C'est une pratique courante, c'est presque devenu farce. Je crois que le ministère du Revenu national a été trop, beaucoup trop indulgent sous ce rapport.

M. Harkness: Et vos deux propositions définies sous ce rapport sont donc qu'il faut plus de personnel à l'étranger pour faire des enquêtes et disons aussi qu'il faudrait un règlement au sujet du délai permis pour répondre aux demandes du ministère.

M. Hehner: Et j'ajouterai ceci monsieur Harkness. D'après la loi qui existe en ce moment, il n'y a pas de restrictions définies sur la rétroactivité.

On peut, par conséquent, dire que si la division des Douanes et Accises permet aux gens de retarder leurs réponses et que si l'on abuse, le ministère a le pouvoir, d'après la loi, de prendre des mesures rétroactives.

C'est une situation qui est changée définitivement d'après les nouvelles dispositions non-rétroactives de la loi, mais nous espérons seulement que la division des Douanes va changer sa ligne de conduite et reconnaîtra les conditions statutaires changées. Elle imposera des conditions très strictes et cela, au sujet by the Code. We are merely hoping that the Customs and Excise Division will change its administrative policy to recognize the changed statutory conditions which will govern them, will it impose fairly strict requirements for prompt replies and be prepared to take prompt action without those replies if the information is not furnished promptly.

[Text]

The Chairman: Do you have a supplementary question, Mr. Hales?

• 1145

Mr. Hales: Yes, I do. I was surprised to learn when reading the bottom of page 3—this question is addressed to Mr. Hind—that in Tokyo we have two officers, neither of whom speak Japanese.

I would think that in a country that is causing so much trouble by imports to the textile industry we should have officers who can speak Japanese. I would ask Mr. Hind if they would endeavour to correct this situation and have an officer there who can speak Japanese.

The Chairman: Mr. Hind, do you care to answer that question?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I would first of all like to point out that rather than two officers in Tokyo as has been indicated on page 3, we have three investigating officers.

Secondly, I would like to say that we have interpreters for our officers. In other words, our officers on their investigational jaunts, are accompanied by locally-employed interpreters to assist them in securing the information which is required. However, I will accept the point Mr. Hales has made. We will make some effort to secure the services of competent people who have a knowledge of the language.

Mr. Hales: Thank you, Mr. Hind.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Mr. Harkness dealt largely with the item I wanted to raise, but I did want to question this matter of speed of application. I wonder what difficulties have been encountered in trying to get decisions at the Ministerial level here in Ottawa. Has this been a problem? What is the time factor in these decisions once you have the information you need? You suggested there have been difficulties in getting the basic information, but once that has been received, have you had any difficulty in getting a quick decision from Ottawa?

Mr. Hehner: Frequently we have.

[Interpretation]

des réponses, à défaut de quoi, il sera prêt à agir.

Le président: Est-ce une question supplémentaire, monsieur Hales?

M. Hales: Oui. Sous ce rapport, j'ai été très surpris de lire au bas de la page 3 et j'adresse ma question à monsieur Hind, qu'à Tokyo, nous avons deux agents dont ni l'un ni l'autre ne parle le japonais.

Je pense que dans un pays qui nous cause tellement de tracas par ses exportations de textiles, nous devrions avoir des agents qui peuvent parler le japonais. Je demanderais à M. Hind si on pourrait corriger cette situation en envoyant là des gens qui parlent le japonais.

Le président: Monsieur Hind, voulez-vous répondre à cette question?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, tout d'abord, j'aimerais faire remarquer qu'au lieu de deux agents à Tokyo, comme on l'a indiqué à la page 3, nous avons trois agents, trois inspecteurs et deuxièmement, que nous avons des interprètes pour nos agents.

Lorsque ceux-ci vont faire leurs enquêtes, les inspecteurs sont accompagnés d'interprètes qui les aident à obtenir les renseignements dont ils ont besoin. Cependant, j'accepte la remarque de M. Hales et nous allons faire des efforts pour engager des gens compétents qui ont une connaissance de la langue.

M. Hales: Merci, monsieur Hind.

M. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): M. Harkness a traité longuement de la question que je voulais poser, je n'ai pas voulu mettre en doute la rapidité des demandes. Je me demande quels problèmes se posent lorsqu'on veut obtenir des décisions au niveau du ministre à Ottawa? Est-ce un problème? Quelle est la limite de temps lorsqu'on a les renseignements qui sont requis? Vous avez dit qu'on avait des problèmes pour obtenir les renseignements, mais une fois ceux-ci obtenus, avez-vous eu des difficultés à obtenir une décision rapide d'Ottawa?

M. Hehner: Ceci arrive assez souvent.

[Texte]

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Could you suggest methods by which this could be improved?

Mr. Hehner: Yes. I could, sir.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Do you think this will be a major hazard in the application of the new legislation?

Mr. Hehner: Mr. Howard, I am not lacking capability to be exceedingly specific. I just wonder how discreet it would be if I were horribly specific in public.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Would you be specific, please?

Mr. Hehner: I will be specific to this extent, sir, that I can give you documented cases which deal with fact in contrast to opinion and where it took five years to get a decision. I am not exaggerating. I could give you such documented cases on a month by month basis and I have them here with me, but frankly, I would prefer not to do so. If I am forced to I will; I am prepared to do so and I am not making a general statement that I cannot back up.

The point that I would make, however, is this. I suspect the Customs and Excise Division has been under pressure frequently to show discretion regardless of what the law says because the law as now phrased has not provided much legal basis for showing discretion. There have been lengthy delays in making findings where, as I have indicated, sir, in our opinion, it was a simple case of determining a fact rather than forming a judgment.

Perhaps I had better give one example, sir. I have a case before me here. I am not going to start to read many pages, but I will tell you what it was about and if you want me to go any further I will. This was a very simple case involving the alleged dumping of rayon from Italy. The point at issue did not involve inquiring about home market selling prices in Italy and other things which might have taken a great deal of time.

• 1150

I should say those were also points at issue. However, there was one point at issue which I said I regard as a simple matter of fact. An allowance was being made by the Customs and Excise Division for a rebate of an Italian tax referred to as the IGE tax, Imposta Generale sull'Entrata. The question arose whether this tax was being collected in Italy on domestic production so that it might perfectly

[Interprétation]

M. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Pouvez-vous nous dire quelles méthodes pourraient améliorer la situation?

M. Hehner: Oui, je pourrais en proposer.

M. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Est-ce une difficulté majeure en ce qui concerne la mise en œuvre du nouveau programme?

M. Hehner: Monsieur Howard, je pourrais être excessivement spécifique, mais je me demande jusqu'à quel point je peux l'être en public.

M. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Vous-driez-vous l'être, s'il vous plaît?

M. Hehner: Je serai spécifique à ce point, monsieur, que je peux vous donner des exemples de cas où cela a pris cinq ans avant d'en arriver à une décision. Je n'exagère pas, je pourrais vous citer des cas avec preuve à l'appui mais je préférerais ne pas le faire. Si on m'y force, je le ferai, car je ne suis pas en train de faire une assertion de nature générale que je ne puis pas appuyer.

Il n'en reste pas moins que je soupçonne qu'il y a eu souvent des pressions auprès de la division des Douanes et Accises afin de faire preuve d'une certaine discrétion quelle que soit la loi. Car la loi telle qu'elle est formulée à l'heure actuelle n'offre aucune base légale pour faire preuve de discrétion.

Il y a eu de longs délais à faire les constatations, comme je l'ai indiqué, à notre avis, il s'agit certainement de déterminer les faits au lieu de formuler un jugement. Je vais vous donner un exemple, j'en ai un en main, je ne vous en lirai pas plusieurs pages. Je vais vous dire de quoi il s'agit et si voulez que j'élaboré davantage, je le ferai. Il s'agit d'un cas de dumping de rayonne provenant d'Italie, la question en litige n'entraîne pas une enquête sur les conditions du marché en Italie et autres qui auraient requis beaucoup de travail.

La division a permis une baisse de l'impôt italien alors que cet impôt était perçu sur la production domestique en Italie. Et, était-il raisonnable de prévoir une exception? Il est certain qu'on ne soustrait pas le montant d'une taxe qui n'a pas été imposée. C'est un facteur assez simple.

[Text]

[Interpretation]

and legitimately have been rebated on exports, in the same way our domestic federal sales tax is not charged when Canadians export goods. You do not subtract a rebate from a price that does not include tax in the first place. Was the tax called for under the Italian law? This should be a question of fact, sir. It was very simple.

I could begin with the first note I have of January 12, 1961. I may tell you, sir, that the last note I have, when it was finally dealt with, was dated December 1967. Copies of the Italian law in Italian were supplied to the Customs and Excise Division. English translation was supplied. The translation supplied, incidentally, was an official translation that had been made by the British government and published in a Board of Trade journal.

As you are aware the Board of Trade is comparable to our Department of Trade and Commerce.

Literally month after month after month went by while we were being told that the Division was endeavouring to find out what the facts were. I understand that the Italian Embassy was asked to ascertain the facts and they always said there was a man going back to Italy in about three weeks who would get the facts. I am not joking, I am being very serious. The man would come back from Italy, produce a lot of information, and say: Oh, I am so sorry, the one thing I forgot to get the information on was these rayon yarns, but I have it on several other materials.

As I say, I have a documented case here beginning on January 12, 1961 and ending in December 1967 with disallowance of the tax rebate that had been allowed.

Admittedly I think this is a real freak in extremes. However, if you want to talk about fairly lengthy delays, yes, there have been frequent ones although not to this extent.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): That fumbling, or whatever it was, administrative decision was made here in Ottawa, is that right?

Mr. Hehner: I would suggest so, sir.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): I wonder if we could hear some comments from the department officials in that regard?

Mr. A. R. Hind (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise)): Mr. Chairman, naturally I do not have the full particulars relating to this

Je puis d'abord vous dire que l'affaire a commencé le 12 janvier 1961. La question a été réglée au mois de décembre 1967. Des exemplaires de la Loi italienne ont été envoyés à la Division des douanes et accises.

On a fourni une traduction officielle du texte de loi qui a été publiée et dans le «British Board of Trade Journal», et les mois se sont écoulés.

On nous a dit: «Nous tentons de trouver ce qui en est» Et l'Ambassade italienne a dit qu'elle tentait de vérifier les faits. Elle nous disait que quelqu'un s'est rendu en Italie afin d'obtenir des renseignements.

Toutefois, lorsque cette personne est revenue, elle n'avait pas des renseignements pertinents.

L'affaire a commencé le 12 janvier 1961, pour se terminer en décembre 1967.

On a tout simplement annulé cette réduction qui avait été permise. Je crois que c'est un cas extrême. Mais, il y a eu certains autres cas assez longs sans être aussi longs que celui-là.

M. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): La raison pour laquelle ceci s'est produit, c'est que la décision a originé à Ottawa, n'est-ce-pas?

M. Hehner: Je crois que oui.

M. Howard: Je me demande si les fonctionnaires du ministère pourraient faire une observation à ce sujet.

M. A. R. Hind (sous-ministre, ministère du Revenu national): Monsieur le président, naturellement, je n'ai pas tous les renseignements se rapportant à cette question. Je crois case. I would like to think there are very, very very few cases of this kind. Mr. Hehner himself has said that this is an extreme case. I know that the general subject matter involved, the allowance or non-allowance of an internal tax in the country of export, is a very controversial one.

[Texte]

As Mr. Hehner said there has been intervention by representatives of the Italian government which has succeeded in slowing up this particular inquiry. I believe we sent one of our officers to Rome on one or more occasions. However, we were not able to get complete satisfaction. There may be some other reasons, which do not come to me readily, for this delay which I will admit is long.

Having said that, however, I would like to repeat that this is not typical of the delays in arriving at conclusions in the past.

• 1155

In the current law, and this is what Mr. Hehner is talking about now, there are no time limits. In other words once we are alerted to the possibility of dumping we immediately advise the importer that we are looking into the value for duty purposes of goods. At the same time we tell him that we may be back to collect dumping duty if we find there has been dumping.

Under the new law, however, there will be a time restriction. So under the current law there is the possibility of retroactivity and under the new law there are limited possibilities.

I would have to agree with Mr. Hehner that we must become more strict in our requirement. In other words we will not be able to tolerate unreasonable delays in the future. We are currently working on procedures whereby there will be no doubt in the minds of anyone, the exporter or the importer or representatives of foreign governments, that unless the required information is forthcoming within a reasonable time, which will be stipulated, then the Deputy Minister of National Revenue must move on the basis of the information before him.

Mr. Gray: You will have that authority under clause 11 of the Bill?

Mr. Hind: Yes sir.

The Chairman: Have you finished, Mr. Howard?

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Yes.

[Interprétation]

qu'il y a très peu de cas de ce genre. M. Hehner a dit lui-même qu'il s'agissait d'un cas extrême.

La question de permettre une réduction pour un impôt prélevé dans le pays exportateur est excessivement difficile à trancher. Des représentants du gouvernement italien ont directement ou indirectement provoqué des délais.

Nous avons envoyé des représentants à Rome. Nous n'avons pas pu régler le cas d'une façon tout à fait satisfaisante, et j'admetts qu'il y a peut-être d'autres raisons auxquelles je ne songe pas et qui ont amené ce long délai.

Ceci dit, toutefois, je veux répéter que ceci n'est pas caractéristique des délais nécessaires avant d'arriver à des conclusions.

En vertu de la loi actuelle, ce sur quoi M. Hehner est en train de discourir à l'heure actuelle, il n'y a pas de limite de temps.

Lorsqu'on nous parle de la possibilité de dumping, nous avertissons immédiatement l'importateur que nous sommes à évaluer la valeur des produits, et nous lui disons que nous percevrons des droits de dumping s'il y a eu dumping.

En vertu de la nouvelle loi, il y aura une limite de temps. En vertu de la loi actuelle, il y a une possibilité de rétroactivité.

En vertu de la nouvelle loi, les possibilités sont limitées et je suis d'accord avec M. Hehner pour admettre qu'il faut être plus sévère dans nos conditions.

Nous ne pourrions pas tolérer, à l'avenir, des délais irraisonnables. Nous établissons présentement une façon de procéder selon laquelle l'exportateur, l'importateur et les représentants des gouvernements étrangers sauront, de façon bien précise, que si les renseignements ne sont pas fournis dans un délai précis, le sous-ministre du Revenu national devra prendre des mesures en se fondant sur les renseignements dont il dispose.

M. Gray: Et vous avez à ce moment-là des pouvoirs discrétionnaires.

M. Hind: Oui, monsieur.

Le président: Oui, M. Gillespie. Avez-vous terminé, monsieur Howard?

M. Howard: Oui.

[Text]

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, would Mr. Hehner be prepared to suggest what he considers a reasonable time for the stages as far as determining dumping and determining injury is concerned?

Mr. Hehner: I hope I am not going to duck your question. If I do it will be inadvertent and would you please interrupt me. There are, of course, time limits set out in the draft Bill for carrying on investigatory procedures. These time limits set out in the statute do not cause us any concern whatever, as long as provisional duties have been applied so that when the appropriate time to complete the investigation has passed definitive dumping duties can then be collected, if it has been proven that there was injurious dumping.

I hope I am not going to start a scramble by using this phrase "first bite" or "one free dump", but the point that concerned us was whether the Customs and Excise Division will put on provisional duty in any doubtful case. If it does not, then they can carry through an investigation but be completely debarred from ever collecting dumping duties unless they are dealing with this area of what is called massive dumping.

I might add there is one other point that has caused us some concern in this regard. It is a purely procedural one. Perhaps I could express it this way. Unless the Customs and Excise Division—again I exclude the massive dumping where they can go retroactive for 90 days before the date of an entry—applies provisional duty in other cases at the time an entry is made, they can never catch that entry no matter what is subsequently determined in investigation.

One added point that concerns us, following from your question, is the procedural steps. Clause 15 of the draft Bill appears on page 66 of the White Paper, and deals with putting on a provisional duty. Clause 14 of the Bill appearing on page 64 sets out procedural steps that must be taken by the Deputy Minister.

● 1200

We hope that it is not necessary to take these procedural steps before provisional duties are applied. If it is, they will never be able to apply provisional duties to those entries; the time limit will have passed and the entry will have been made.

[Interpretation]

M. Gillespie: Monsieur le président, M. Hehner voudrait-il nous dire ce qui, d'après lui, constitue un délai raisonnable, lorsqu'il s'agit de déterminer le dumping, s'il y a eu dumping et s'il y a eu dégâts ou conséquences dommageables?

M. Hehner: Je ne veux pas tenter d'esquiver votre question. Le projet de loi prévoit des limites de temps pour la conduite de l'enquête. La limite de temps établie par la loi ne nous préoccupe guère aussi longtemps que des droits de douane provisoires ont été prélevés. Après enquête un droit de douane pourra être prélevé s'il y a vraiment eu dumping préjudiciable.

Ce qui nous préoccupe, c'est que la division des douanes imposera ces droits de douane dans tous les cas douteux. Si elle ne le fait pas, à ce moment-là, elle pourra faire enquête, mais la division ne pourra jamais percevoir de frais du dumping, à moins qu'il ne s'agisse de dumping sur une grande échelle.

Je puis ajouter qu'il y a d'autres questions qui nous ont posé des problèmes. Il s'agit strictement de questions de procédure. Je me permettrai de m'exprimer de cette façon à moins que la division des douanes, et j'exclus, bien entendu les cas de dumping massifs où on dispose d'une période rétroactive de 90 jours, à moins que la division des douanes, dis-je n'applique des droits de douanes temporaires au moment où la demande est adressée, elle ne pourra jamais prélever un impôt ou un droit sur ce produit.

Et, une autre question nous intrigue, c'est une question de procédure. L'article 15 du projet de loi et ceci figure à la page 66 du Livre blanc. Donc, sur les droits de douanes provisoires. L'article 14 qui figure à la page 64 délimite les mesures qui doivent être prises par les sous-ministres. Nous espérons ne pas devoir prendre ces mesures avant d'imposer les droits provisoires, car si c'est le cas les droits ne pourront jamais être imposés, la date limite étant passée.

Nous espérons que ce ne sera pas nécessaire d'avoir recours à ces méthodes avant de prélever un droit de douane provisoire. On ne pourra jamais imposer un droit de douane au sujet de ces produits, car la limite de temps sera écoulée et les produits auront déjà été acceptés.

[Texte]

I do not think it would be reasonable to expect the Customs and Excise Division to notify a variety of persons as mentioned in clause 14 and to publish notice in the Canada Gazette before the date of importation of the goods—before an entry has been presented to them. If they have to take these steps of publication after an entry has been presented for clearance and before they impose provisional duty—

Mr. Gray: Where does the Bill suggest that?

Mr. Hehner: This is the question I am raising. We actually dealt with it in our submission in paragraph 35, where we said:

The application of provisional measures under Section 15 should not be delayed by the notification procedures of Section 14 (2).

The only reason, sir, we put this cautionary note in our brief was because it had been suggested to us that exactly that procedural step will be required. We wanted it brought out, therefore, and put on the record.

Mr. Gray: Suggested by whom?

Mr. Hehner: It was suggested by government officials with whom the matter was discussed very informally who said they would not give any rulings on what would have to be done, but this may, indeed, be possible according to the way we read it. That is as far as the conversations went; they were very informal ones. This was why I thought we might get a comment on this point put on the record of this Committee's hearings.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Arthur would like to say something about this.

Mr. C. D. Arthur (International Economic Relations Division, Department of Finance): Mr. Chairman, I was going to deal with that later on when we were dealing with that particular clause, but certainly there was never any intention in the drafting of this proposed Bill that it was necessary for these procedures to have been completed before the application of provisional duty. These procedural steps can go on concurrently with the application of provisional duty under this clause, the clause to which Mr. Hehner referred, as well as in the other case he referred to in paragraph 35 of his brief.

Mr. Hehner: Thank you, Mr. Arthur, I am delighted to have that statement on the record.

[Interprétation]

Il ne faut pas s'attendre à ce que la division des douanes avertisse une foule de gens, tel que mentionné à l'article 14, et publie un avis dans la Gazette du Canada avant la date de l'importation des produits. S'il faut prendre ces mesures et assurer la publication, après que le produit est importé et avant même de prélever le droit de douane provisoire...

M. Gray: A quel endroit la Loi suggère-t-elle ceci?

M. Hehner: Nous en avons parlé au paragraphe 35 de notre soumission:

L'application des mesures provisoires prévues à l'article 15 ne devrait pas être retardée par les dispositions de communication des avis de l'article 14 (2).

La seule raison que nous avons d'ajouter cette note d'avertissement, c'est qu'on nous a proposé qu'il nous faudra prendre une mesure de la sorte. Nous voulions que ceci soit imprimé dans le compte rendu.

M. Gray: Cela vous a été proposé par qui?

M. Hehner: Ceci a été proposé par des fonctionnaires du gouvernement, d'une façon officielle. Ils ont dit qu'ils n'allaient pas établir de règlements, mais qu'ils croyaient que la chose serait possible. C'est tout ce qu'ils nous ont dit; c'était des entretiens assez officiels. C'est pour cela que nous voulions verser au dossier du Comité des commentaires sur ce point.

M. Gray: M. Arthur aimerait ajouter quelque chose.

M. Arthur (Service des relations économiques internationales, ministère des Finances): Monsieur le président, j'allais en parler plus tard, lorsque nous arriverons à cet article en particulier. Certes, il n'y a jamais eu d'intention, lorsque nous avons rédigé ce projet de loi, qu'il serait nécessaire de compléter ces procédures avant l'application des droits provisoires. Ces procédures peuvent aller conjointement avec l'application des droits provisoires selon l'article auquel réfère M. Hehner et qu'il mentionne au paragraphe 35 de son mémoire.

M. Hehner: Merci, monsieur Arthur. Je suis enchanté d'avoir entendu cette affirmation.

[Text]

The Chairman: Do you have a supplementary question, Mr. Hales?

Mr. Hales: Yes, I do on this very point.

Going back to the case that took five years, I would like to ask if shipments of that rayon were allowed to come into Canada during those five years?

Mr. Hehner: They were allowed in continuously, unfortunately.

Mr. Hales: Was a tariff or a duty applied to these goods as they came in involving this internal tax dispute business?

Mr. Hehner: Yes, the normal duties were collected.

Mr. Hales: Then it was a matter of the rebates?

Mr. Hehner: It was a matter, sir, of whether the goods were being sold to Canadian importers at dumped prices or whether they were not. If the rebate was a legitimate one to have made, then the price was not a dump price. If the rebate was illegitimate then it was a dump price under the law.

Mr. Hales: During those five years there had been considerable injury to your industry, I take it?

Mr. Hehner: This was the opinion of the industry, sir. Of course, may I say, the injury criterion as such was not and still is not in the law.

• 1205

Mr. Hales: To follow up on that, in the new legislation one dump can be made and can continue to be made without provisional tariffs or duties applied to them. Would it not be the wish of the industry the minute the Department is alerted or a legitimate complaint has been registered, that no further goods be allowed to come in until the case has been reviewed and settled?

Mr. Hehner: May I phrase my answer this way: Mr. Hales? We are not suggesting that there should be prohibition on the import of the goods. We are hopeful that the Customs and Excise Division when there has been a complaint that obviously has some substance—not a frivolous one—shall immediately apply provisional duty to that and all subsequent importations until the matter has been disposed of by complete investigation on both the dumping and the injury aspect.

[Interpretation]

Le président: Monsieur Hales, est-ce une question supplémentaire?

M. Hales: Oui, sur ce même sujet. Pour revenir au cas qui a pris cinq ans, j'aimerais savoir si les livraisons de cette rayonne ont été permises d'entrer au Canada pendant ces cinq années.

M. Hehner: Oui, elles l'ont été, malheureusement.

M. Hales: Est-ce qu'il y a eu des droits appliqués à ces marchandises quand elles sont entrées au pays?

M. Hehner: Oui, d'une façon normale.

M. Hales: Alors c'était la question d'escompte?

M. Hehner: Oui, c'était la question de savoir si oui ou non les marchandises étaient vendues à des importateurs canadiens à des prix de dumping. Si l'escompte était légitime, alors le prix n'était pas un prix de dumping. Mais si le rabais était illégal, alors c'était un prix de dumping, au terme de la loi.

M. Hales: Pendant ces cinq ans, vous avez dû subir alors un certain préjudice à votre industrie?

M. Hehner: Oui. Mais les normes de préjudice ne sont pas établis dans la loi.

M. Hales: Pour faire suite à cette question sur la nouvelle mesure législative, il peut y avoir un acte de dumping et d'autres peuvent être faits également sans qu'ils soient affectés des droits quelconque. C'est le désir de l'industrie que, du moment qu'une plainte est portée, il n'y ait plus de marchandises dont l'entrée sera permise au Canada, avant que la question soit réglée.

M. Hehner: Puis-je m'exprimer différemment, monsieur Hales? Nous ne suggérons pas qu'il y ait une prohibition de l'importation des marchandises. Nous espérons que la division des douanes, lorsqu'une plainte sérieuse est portée, appliquera immédiatement les droits provisoires à cette importation et à toutes celles qui suivront, jusqu'à ce que la question soit réglée, par suite d'une enquête complète, relativement au dumping et aux préjudices.

[Texte]

Mr. Hales: Why not prohibit any further goods coming in until the case has been settled? That would give the industry some protection.

Mr. Hehner: We have not proposed that, sir. I doubt that the Canadian industry would object if anybody else wished to do so, but we did feel that it would be a little extreme and we have not asked for it. If you prohibited the importation of the goods, it would, in effect, be convicting somebody of injurious dumping when it had not yet been proven.

Mr. Hales: In law you are guilty until you are proven otherwise.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I believe we should remind Mr. Hales that the basic principle of Canadian and British justice is just the reverse.

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the officials from the Department would care to comment on the danger this points out regarding the nature of Canadian industry. I refer to page 7 of the brief where they mentioned, "wholly-owned subsidiaries in Canada".

The Chairman: Mr. Saltsman, I suggested that our first round of questions should be directed to the first 11 paragraphs of the brief. Otherwise, if we ask questions at random on any and all paragraphs, I do not know if we would ever get finished. In my opening remarks I suggested that the questions should be directed, first of all, to paragraphs 1 to 11.

Mr. Saltsman: If you prefer that I hold off with my question until you have completed those paragraphs, I will do so.

The Chairman: I will accept this question, but in future I would suggest we follow the procedure I suggested earlier.

Mr. Saltsman: I have no questions on the first paragraphs. If someone else has a question I would be prepared to let him go ahead.

The Chairman: Are there any more questions on paragraphs 1 to 11 of the brief?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I believe Mr. Hind would like to make a comment arising from our discussion on paragraphs 1 to 11 of the brief. If you will allow him to comment now, his remarks would be more relevant while the presentation is fresh in our minds.

[Interprétation]

M. Hales: Alors, pourquoi ne pas interdire que toutes autres marchandises soient importées au Canada? Ceci protégerait l'industrie.

M. Hehner: Nous ne l'avons pas proposé et je doute que l'industrie canadienne s'y oppose. Mais nous avons cru que ce serait peut-être une mesure extrême de notre part.

Monsieur le président, ce serait trouver quelqu'un coupable de dumping préjudiciable avant que ce soit prouvé.

M. Hales: On est toujours coupable jusqu'à ce qu'on puisse apporter des preuves du contraire.

M. Gray: Je crois que les principes de la justice canadienne et britannique sont précisément le contraire.

M. Saltsman: Je me demandais si les fonctionnaires du ministère voudraient peut-être commenter le danger que souligne l'exposé au sujet de la présente nature de l'industrie canadienne. Je songe à la page 7, lorsqu'on parle des succursales.

Le président: Je crois qu'on devrait poser nos questions sur les premiers onze articles de l'exposé. Si on va plus avant, je ne sais pas où nous allons en finir. J'ai proposé, au début, que les questions devraient se rattacher aux onze premiers articles de l'exposé.

M. Saltsman: Si vous préférez que je réserve ma question, je le ferai.

Le président: Bien, j'accepte la question, mais on devra suivre ma proposition aux membres du comité de s'en tenir aux onze articles mentionnés.

M. Saltsman: Je n'ai pas de question à poser au sujet des premiers articles.

Le président: Avons-nous fini avec les articles un à onze du mémoire?

M. Gray: Je crois que M. Hind a quelques commentaires à faire au sujet de notre discussion. Il pourrait donner ses commentaires immédiatement.

[Text]

M. Émard: Monsieur Gray, voulez-vous parler dans le micro, s'il vous plaît. On ne vous comprend pas à l'interprétation.

M. Gray: Si vous voulez, je parlerai en français. Vous n'aurez pas besoin d'interprétation du tout.

Peut-être que je devrais suivre la proposition de M. Harkness et m'inscrire à des cours de japonais ou de chinois.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, one of the members of the Committee asked the witness what he thought might represent a reasonable time period in which Customs and Excise officers might take action. I was quite interested in this and I was hoping that I might get a little guidance.

Unfortunately, nothing of a very definitive character was said that would be helpful to us. We certainly intend to move as quickly as we possibly can and, as I said before, there are time limits that will very soon become statutory and it will be our job to move within these time limits.

• 1210

I am a little disturbed at the trend this discussion is taking. I really wonder whether the Institute is suggesting that departmental officers should in actual fact examine every importation. In other words assume that every importation, in this case textiles and textile products, is dumped. If this is what they are asking I am afraid this is impossible of doing when one remembers that in a year there are roughly six and a half million entries of goods into Canada, and if one were to assume that the textile industry should have no advantage over other industries. One must take it that other industries would have the same right to try to catch every importation.

One of the witnesses has talked about injury being caused. I would respectfully point out that the draft Bill does not speak of injury it speaks of material injury. I think there is a great difference between injury and material injury. I ask myself whether one importation or two importations or three importations will result in material injury. It is not just injury we are talking about but rather material injury.

I would point out also that a great responsibility is being placed on the shoulders of the Deputy Minister of the Department of National Revenue and his officers in accepting a complaint. We do not want to use our human resources improperly. They are highly paid people and to use them improperly would

[Interpretation]

M. Émard: The interpreter cannot understand you.

Mr. Gray: If you prefer I will speak French. Thus, you will not need any interpretation.

Perhaps I should follow Mr. Harkness' suggestion and register for Japanese or Chinese courses.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, un des membres du comité a demandé au témoin ce qu'il croyait être un délai raisonnable pour que les agents des douanes prennent des dispositions. Cela m'intéressait et j'espérais avoir quelques directives.

Malheureusement, rien de définitif n'a été dit qui puisse nous aider. Nous allons procéder aussi rapidement que possible. Il y a certains délais qui vont devenir statutaires et il nous appartiendra alors de travailler dans ces délais.

Je m'inquiète de la tendance que prend le débat. Je me demande si l'Institut propose réellement que les fonctionnaires ministériels doivent examiner chaque importation. En d'autres mots, doivent-ils supposer que toute importation dans le cas des textiles font l'objet du dumping? Si c'est cela qu'on nous propose, je crains fort que ce soit impossible.

Quand on songe que, dans une année, il y a 6.5 millions d'entrées de marchandises au Canada, et si on doit supposer que l'industrie du textile ne doit pas avoir d'avantages sur d'autres industries, il faut alors prendre pour acquis que d'autres industries auront les mêmes droits, de tenter d'arrêter toutes les importations.

Un des témoins a parlé de préjudices. J'aimerais signaler que le projet de loi ne parle pas de préjudices, mais il parle plutôt des dommages matériels. Je me demande si une, deux ou trois importations entraîneront des dommages matériels.

J'aimerais également signaler qu'une responsabilité énorme est imposée au sous-ministre du ministère du Revenu national et à ses fonctionnaires, lorsqu'ils reçoivent une revendication. Nous voulons tous utiliser nos ressources humaines d'une façon normale. Ce sont des gens qui reçoivent des traitements mean that they would not be available for use in proper cases.

[Texte]

Consequently I think the first responsibility that devolves upon the Deputy Minister and his subordinates is to ensure, before undertaking in investigation, and certainly before making a preliminary determination of dumping, that there is a good chance of this being proved out in actual practice. In other words that there is injurious dumping.

We made a survey of cases for a six-month period beginning June 1, 1967 and ending November 30, 1967, and during that period we received 148 complaints from Canadian industry. Within a three month period we completed 111 of those cases. Of those 111 cases we found only 44 were justified. In other words 61 per cent of the complaints made to us were not justified in the sense that no dumping was found.

I think this pinpoints the necessity of the Deputy Minister being absolutely careful before undertaking an investigation and establishing a preliminary determination because one must remember that whenever an investigation is initiated and a preliminary determination made this must be printed in the Canada Gazette, and it must form the content of letters to various people.

I, for one, would not want to be guilty of placing a named importer and a named exporter under a cloud unless I were reasonably satisfied that I would find not only dumping but material injury.

• 1215

Mr. Hehner: I think it is obviously impossible for the Customs and Excise Division to scrutinize in detail six and a half million entries a year or even a much smaller number than that. I do suggest—here I am not dealing with complaints, I am dealing with action on the initiative of the Deputy Minister—that there are sensitive areas, and there are areas where it is most unlikely that dumping will occur. There are other areas of Canadian industry which have a long history of dumping and which can be described as sensitive where there could be a fairly substantial spot check made. Here I am going beyond the matter of accepting complaints at all.

On the complaint area and the question of what material injury is we are somewhat concerned about to what extent the Customs and Excise Division should thoroughly satisfy itself that there is material injury. Indeed in our brief, which we submitted in advance, we très élevés et si on les affecte à des travaux inutiles, ils ne seront pas disponibles pour un travail important.

[Interprétation]

Alors il incombe au sous-ministre et à ses subordonnés, avant de commencer une enquête et de décider s'il y a dumping ou non, de s'assurer qu'il y a une possibilité de pouvoir prouver le cas, qu'il y a vraiment un dumping préjudiciable.

On a fait une enquête de cas pendant six mois, à compter du 1<sup>er</sup> juin 1967 jusqu'au 30 novembre 1967. Pendant cette période, nous avons reçu 148 revendications de l'industrie canadienne. Pendant trois mois, nous avons complété 111 de ces cas. De ces 111 cas, nous n'en avons trouvé que 44 qui étaient justifiés. En d'autres mots, 61 p. 100 des plaintes qui avaient été portées, n'étaient pas justifiées en ce sens qu'on n'a pas déterminé qu'il y avait du dumping.

Je crois que cela démontre la nécessité de la part du sous-ministre d'avoir beaucoup de précautions avant de commencer une enquête. Il faut se rappeler que lorsqu'une enquête est entreprise et qu'une détermination préliminaire est faite, cela doit être imprimé dans La Gazette du Canada et doit faire l'objet de lettres distribuées à diverses gens.

Je ne voudrais pas être coupable de mettre le nom d'un importateur ou d'un exportateur et de les accuser de dumping ou de dommages matériels, sans être certain de mon cas.

M. Hehner: Je crois qu'il est impossible pour la Division des droits de douane de pouvoir examiner un nombre considérable de plaintes. Je ne songe pas ici aux plaintes, mais aux initiatives de la part du sous-ministre. Il y a des domaines sensibles. Il y a certains domaines où il n'y aura probablement pas de dumping. Il y a d'autres secteurs de l'industrie canadienne où il y a eu beaucoup de dumping et qui peuvent être décrits comme étant sensibles. Il pourrait très bien y avoir une vérification. Ceci dépasse la simple acceptation des revendications.

Au sujet des revendications et des dommages matériels nous nous inquiétons de savoir jusqu'à quel point la Division des douanes doit aller pour se convaincre qu'il y a vraiment dommage matériel. Dans l'exposé que nous avons distribué à l'avance, nous avons quoted the General Counsel for the Office of the Special Representative for Trade negotiations of the United States. this quote can be found on page 10 of our brief. He said:

[Text]

Once the Treasury is satisfied that sales are being made at less than fair value then even a perfunctory show of injury would be sufficient to get a withholding of appraisement.

To express that in terms of the Canadian draft statute, it is saying once there is even a perfunctory show of injury so that the Customs and Excise Division knows that it is not entirely frivolous, that should be sufficient to get an investigation started. I would like, however, if I am not taking too long, Mr. Chairman, to pick up the lead Mr. Hind gave me, which points up the importance of developing some concept of material injury, when he said he was not satisfied that one or two or even three importations would constitute material injury.

I will perhaps go to the other extreme and suggest, gentlemen, that you can actually have material injury caused by a negligible physical importation. I would like to explain exactly how, and it is a very simple explanation.

Anyone who has had experience with commercial facts will realize that this is a standard affair, not a freak one. If one is selling a product he has to meet competition and the competition includes competition from imports. The question is: What is the lowest price at which competitors can offer goods on the Canadian market without having dumping duties applied to them? So if goods are allowed to come in at a low price and dumping duties are not applied to them your customers all come to you and say: A hundred pounds of this material came in to which no dumping duties have been applied; it has apparently been decided that this may be a dump price, but it is not considered one that should attract dumping duty; so lower your price to meet this price which has been offered to us by a supplier abroad.

Although we are speaking for the textile industry this statute applies to all goods and there are contracts where a supplier has signed up a customer on a year's contract on the basis that he will meet any legitimate price offered by any other supplier. So it only needs one shipment, and a comparatively small one at that, to come in and be accepted by the Customs and Excise Division as a legitimate price at which the goods can be imported for your customer to come to you cité le conseiller général au bureau du représentant spécial pour les négociations commerciales, de l'équipe des États-Unis.

[Interpretation]

A la page 10 de notre mémoire, il dit:

Dès que la trésorerie est convaincue que des ventes se font à un prix inférieur à la juste valeur marchande, une indication superficielle de préjudice suffit à déclencher la suspension de l'évaluation.

Pour se placer dans le contexte canadien, ceci veut dire que, au moindre indice de préjudice qui prouve que l'affaire est sérieuse, on peut alors commencer une enquête.

Si je n'abuse pas de votre temps, monsieur le président, je voudrais parler dans le sens de M. Hind.

Nous devrions déterminer le concept de dommage matériel. Il dit qu'il n'est pas satisfait de considérer que seulement deux ou trois importations peuvent constituer un dommage matériel.

J'irais à l'autre extrême pour dire que des dommages matériels peuvent être causés par une importation de quantités négligeables. Je vais vous expliquer comment cela se fait. Les gens qui ont l'expérience du commerce comprendront que c'est une chose qui arrive souvent.

Si vous vendez un produit et vous devez faire face à la concurrence et à la concurrence des importations, il s'agit de savoir quel est le prix le plus bas auquel on peut offrir les produits sur le marché canadien sans encourir les conditions de dumping.

Ainsi, si des produits entrent à un bas prix sans être affectés par les droits de dumping, les clients viendront vous dire: «Voici cent livres de ces produits qui viennent d'arriver et on n'a pas appliqué de droits de dumping. Il a été décidé que c'était un prix de dumping, mais on ne considère pas que c'est un produit qui attire des pressions des droits de dumping. Baissez vos prix, afin de rencontrer le prix de l'étranger.»

Je sais qu'il y a eu des contrats, et même si nous parlons de l'industrie du textile, cela s'applique à toutes les denrées. Il y a des contrats où le fournisseur a signé pour un an, avec l'entente qu'il fera face à la concurrence de n'importe quel prix. Si on peut faire admettre à la Division des douanes que c'est un prix raisonnable, cela aura beaucoup d'influence même dans le cas d'une importation d'une quantité négligeable. Votre client vous dira alors de baisser vos prix.

[Texte]

and say: Here is my contract, lower your price three cents. This can have a terrific impact with a comparatively small volume of importations.

These circumstances can and do exist. These are not the circumstances that exist always. But these are the points that make it so difficult to be pragmatic and say that one shipment of comparatively small volume obviously cannot have caused injury or material injury. It very well might have done so.

The Chairman: Gentlemen paragraphs 12 and 13 of the brief deal with "first bite" and "one free dump". Are there any comments on those paragraphs? They are on page 4 of the brief.

Paragraphs 15, 16, 17 and 18 of the brief deal with normal value.

• 1220

Mr. Arthur: No, I think Mr. Chairman we have dealt with "first bite" at quite some length on other occasions.

I would like to comment, however, Mr. Chairman, if I may, on paragraph 14 on page 5 of the brief which deals with clause 7.

The brief suggests that there should be provision for publication of exempting orders and at one of the earlier sessions I mentioned that there was such a provision for the publication of these orders under the Regulations Act. I think if it is agreeable, it might be useful if I were to read those sections of the Regulations Act at this time for the benefit of the Committee.

The Chairman: What is the page number?

Mr. Arthur: This is not in the White Paper. It is an extract from the Regulations Act. The relevant portion is section 2(a) of the Regulations Act which reads as follows:

In this Act,

(a) "regulation" means a rule, order, regulation, by-law or proclamation

(i) made, in the exercise of a legislative power conferred by or under an Act of Parliament, by the Governor in Council, the Treasury Board, Minister of the Crown, or a board, commission, corporation or other body or person that is an agent or servant of Her Majesty in right of Canada, or

(ii) for the contravention of which a penalty of fine or imprisonment is prescribed by or under an Act of Parliament.

An order made by the Governor in Council pursuant to the proposed clause 7 of the Anti-

[Interprétation]

Tout ce que je peux dire, c'est que ces circonstances existent. Ce ne sont pas des choses qui prévalent toujours. C'est pour cela qu'il est très difficile d'être dogmatique et de dire qu'une importation d'une quantité négligeable de produits ne peut pas causer des dommages. Il se peut très bien que cela se produise.

Le président: Les paragraphes 12 et 14 du mémoire traitent de «premier envoi de dumping».

M. Arthur: On a parlé du premier envoi de dumping, et si vous me le permettez, monsieur le président, je voudrais parler de l'alinéa 14 à la page 5 qui parle de l'article 7.

Le mémoire suggère qu'il doit y avoir une disposition au sujet de la publication des règles d'exemption et à une séance antérieure j'ai fait mention qu'il existait une telle disposition sous l'empire de la loi sur les règlements. J'aimerais vous lire ces articles de cette Loi, avec votre permission, afin d'en faire bénéficier le Comité.

Le président: A quelle page?

M. Arthur: Cela n'est pas dans le Livre blanc, monsieur le président, mais c'est un extrait de la Loi sur les règlements. Il s'agit de l'article 2(a) de la Loi sur les règlements qui se lit comme il suit:

Dans cette loi, règlement veut dire un règlement, un ordre ou une proclamation.

1:

(i) fait dans l'exercice des pouvoirs législatifs conférés par une loi du Parlement, par le gouverneur en conseil et le Conseil du trésor, un ministre de la Couronne ou une commission, un conseil, une corporation ou autre organisme ou personne qui est l'agent de Sa Majesté du chef du Canada, ou pour

(ii) pour lequel une amende ou un terme d'emprisonnement a été stipulé par une loi du Parlement.

Un ordre rendu par le gouverneur en conseil, conformément à l'article 7 de la Loi anti-

[Text]

Dumping Bill would be an order made in the exercise of a legislative power conferred by an Act of Parliament and accordingly would be a regulation within the meaning of that Act. Section 6(1) of the Regulations Act reads as follows:

6.(1) Every regulation shall be published in English and in French in the Canada Gazette within thirty days after it is made.

It is, therefore, clear that in accordance with the Regulations Act an order of the Governor in Council, pursuant to the proposed clause 7 of the Anti-Dumping Act, must be published in the Canada Gazette.

Mr. Gray: Before we leave that point, is it not correct, Mr. Arthur, that provisions similar to those in clause 7 of the draft Bill are found in Section 6(2) (b) of the existing law on dumping?

Mr. Arthur: That is correct.

Mr. Hehner: The only comment I could make is that if there is a requirement in another statute and Mr. Arthur has referred us to the Regulations Act, a copy of which I fortunately also have in front of me, it might be suggested that it is redundant to also make such a requirement appear in clause 7 of this proposed Bill.

● 1225

However, I do not know that redundancy is necessarily entirely harmful. Since this is supposed to be a completely self-contained Bill relating to dumping, if there is such a requirement in another statute it might not do any harm to repeat it here to make quite plain the intention.

All I can say is that there have been, and quite recently, orders passed by Order in Council exempting goods including, specifically, textiles from the application of dumping duty without that order ever having been published in the Canada Gazette and without its existence being known to affected parties at the time it was issued and not known to them for a long time afterwards until they stumbled upon it by accident in a channel that had nothing to do with publications.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, my only comment on that would be under the authority of the Regulations Act there also is provision for the exemption from publication.

Mr. Hehner: This I had also noticed, sir, and I might draw attention to the fact, if I dumping, est un ordre fait dans l'exercice d'un pouvoir législatif conféré par acte du Parlement, et par conséquent, c'est un règlement d'après les dispositions de cette loi.

[Interpretation]

L'article 6 (7) de la loi sur les règlements se lit comme suit:

Tout règlement est publié en anglais et en français dans la Gazette du Canada, dans les 30 jours qui suivent sa publication.

Il est par conséquent clair que d'après la Loi sur les règlements, un ordre du gouverneur en conseil, conforme à l'article 7 de la Loi antidumping, doit être publié dans la Gazette du Canada.

M. Gray: Avant de laisser ce point, n'est-il pas vrai, monsieur Arthur, que des dispositions semblables à celles de l'article 7 du projet de loi existent dans l'article 6(2)(b) de la loi actuelle sur l'antidumping?

M. Arthur: C'est exact.

M. Hehner: Le seul commentaire que j'aurai à faire, c'est que s'il y a une disposition dans un autre statut, et M. Arthur a parlé de la Loi sur les règlements dont j'ai un exemplaire devant moi, il y a chevauchement ou double emploi, il y aurait répétition si cette disposition existait dans le nouveau projet de loi.

Mais cela ne serait pas tout à fait nuisible par le fait que cette mesure est censée être une mesure nouvelle, indépendante, et on devrait le répéter ici et dire quelles sont les intentions.

Je comprends que si l'on dit qu'une chose n'a pas été faite, ce n'est pas une critique de la Loi, mais tout ce que je peux dire, c'est qu'il y a eu tout récemment des ordres en conseil qui exemptent certains produits, y compris spécifiquement les textiles exemptés de l'application des droits antidumping, sans que cet ordre en conseil n'ait encore été publié dans la Gazette du Canada, et les parties intéressées n'étaient pas au courant et c'est seulement par hasard qu'ils se sont aperçus que cet ordre existait.

M. Arthur: La seule chose que j'aurais à dire là-dessus, c'est que d'après la Loi sur les règlements, il y a aussi des exemptions de publications.

M. Hehner: J'ai remarqué cela aussi et si vous me le permettez, j'aimerais continuer à may continue to quote from the statute that has just been referred to by Mr. Arthur, that Section 9 of the Regulations Act says:

[Texte]

The Governor in Council may...exempt any regulation or class of regulations...

from the publication requirement. This, I think, only heightens the desirability of adding to the proposed clause 7 of the draft Bill the requirement that any such exemptions be published.

The Chairman: Mr. Saltsman, possibly you now could ask your question.

Mr. Saltsman: Yes, my question deals with page 7 of the brief where they were discussing the growth of international companies where the cost of one unit is less meaningful than over-all corporate interests. The Institute goes on to make a number of suggestions and on page 8, paragraph 21, recommends changing the words from "affecting the price" to "relating to the sale". On page 9 they suggested the addition of a paragraph which reads:

Or by reason of any other circumstance which, in the opinion of the Deputy Minister, provides an effective reduction in the sale price.

I think they have made a good point in this submission because the nature of our industry is somewhat different from the nature of industry in other countries. There are loopholes involved here in the "compensatory arrangements" that could have an affect on our industry. I would like to ask Mr. Hind if he could comment on the suggestion made by the Institute on whether these would be acceptable to the drafters of the legislation.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, could I intrude here for a moment? I think earlier we more or less agreed amongst ourselves that we would reserve our consideration of possible changes in the draft Bill until after we had heard all the briefs. At this time we are giving an opportunity to people from outside government to present their views to us and for us to discuss these views with them.

I am not sure if the officials are in a position at this point to state on behalf of the government which of the suggestions in this brief or any brief can be put forward in the form of changes to the draft Bill and I think it would be easier for the Committee as well as the officials who are attempting to provide information to us and who are following our hearings if they came back to us after they had heard all the briefs. There may be other briefs—I am not saying this will be the citer l'article 9 de la Loi sur les règlements, auquel M. Arthur a référé, et je cite:

[Interprétation]

Le gouverneur en conseil peut exempter tout règlement ou catégories de règlement...

Des conditions de publications, et je pense que cela fait simplement ressortir l'utilité d'établir cette condition dans l'article 7, c'est-à-dire de rendre cette publication nécessaire.

Le président: Monsieur Saltsman, avez-vous une question à poser?

M. Saltsman: Ceci se rapporte à la page 7, lorsqu'on parle de la croissance de compagnies internationales où le coût unitaire signifie moins que l'intérêt général de l'entreprise. L'Institut fait quelques suggestions et à la page 8, alinéa 21, recommande de changer les mots «affectant le prix» pour «lié à la vente.» et à la page 9:

ou en raison de toute autre circonstance qui, de l'avis du sous-ministre, entraîne une réduction effective des prix de vente.

Cela pourrait affecter notre industrie à cause de sa nature même, qui est quelque peu différente de celle des autres pays. Il y a des échappatoires dans ces «arrangements compensatoires» qui pourraient affecter notre industrie. Et je voudrais demander à M. Hind ce qu'il pense de la suggestion faite par l'Institut et s'il en accepte la terminologie.

M. Gray: Monsieur le président, je pense que nous nous étions entendus entre nous que nous allions réserver l'étude de changements possibles au projet de loi pour la période qui suivra les témoignages.

Je ne sais pas si les fonctionnaires, en ce moment, sont en mesure de nous dire si les suggestions contenues dans ce mémoire pourraient faire partie du projet de loi.

Je pense que ces suggestions sont faites pour le comité et pour les personnes qui viennent nous rendre témoignage. Mais après avoir entendu tous les témoignages, tous les mémoires, ils pourraient revenir nous donner leur opinion parce qu'il peut y en avoir d'autres qui présenteraient un point de vue contraire ou qui pourraient modifier les propositions et nous devrions, ainsi que les fonctionnaires, avoir l'occasion d'examiner tout cela ensemble avant de donner notre opinion.

[Text]

[Interpretation]

case—taking just the opposite point of view or modifying, to one extent or another, the proposals in this brief or others and we and the officials should be able to look at these suggestions in totality before reaching any decisions.

Mr. Saltsman: The importance of discussing it at this time is because we have the people from the Institute before us who are in a position to elaborate on their views or challenge some positions of the government.

● 1230

Mr. Gray: Perhaps I misunderstood what Mr. Saltsman was driving at. If he was suggesting that we have comments from officials of the Department of Finance and the Department of National Revenue on the views set forward by the Textile Institute I think that this is quite in order. However, I do not think it would be appropriate at this time to ask the officials whether they accept on behalf of the government these particular views.

Mr. Saltsman: I meant "accept" in the sense of "comment" to clarify the issue.

The Chairman: Mr. Hind, would you care to make any comment?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I am not certain if Mr. Saltsman's remarks relate to paragraph 21 of the brief. I would like to have that clarified first.

Mr. Saltsman: Yes, they referred to paragraphs 21 and 23.

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Chairman, it was suggested earlier that we should go through this brief more or less seriatim. I think there are a number of matters which members might want to deal with before we come to the part which deals with paragraphs 14, 15, 16 and so on. I would suggest that it would make for a more orderly discussion if we considered these in order.

The Chairman: Are there any comments, gentlemen, on paragraphs 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18 of the brief?

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Chairman, you said in your brief that you consider subclause (2) (b) to be dangerous. This clause deals with determining the value for duty purposes of sales by an exporter where he does not sell in his own country and if there are other people selling in that country the price at which they sell shall be accepted as the price for import into Canada. Would you give your views on

M. Saltsman: L'importance de la discussion à ce moment-ci réside dans le fait que nous avons ici les représentants de l'Institut, qui sont en mesure de nous donner des détails sur leurs opinions ou de mettre en doute l'opinion du gouvernement.

M. Gray: Monsieur Saltsman, si vous suggérez que nous ayons l'opinion des fonctionnaires du ministère des Finances et du Revenu National, je crois que cela est dans l'ordre. Cependant, je crois que nous ne pouvons pas leur demander en ce moment d'accepter, au nom du gouvernement, les opinions exprimées dans ce mémoire.

M. Saltsman: Je veux dire «accepter» dans le sens de «commenter» dans le but de faire la lumière sur cette question.

Le président: Est-ce que M. Hind veut faire quelques commentaires?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je ne sais pas si les remarques de M. Saltsman se rapportent au paragraphe 21 du mémoire. Je voudrais que l'on tire cela au clair d'abord.

M. Saltsman: Il est du paragraphe 23.

M. Harkness: Vous aviez proposé que nous étudions ce mémoire article par article. Il y a des questions qui intéressent les députés et les membres du Comité et je crois qu'il serait plus pratique de traiter de chaque question à tour de rôle.

Le président: Avez-vous quelque chose à dire sur les articles 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 du mémoire? Excusez-moi, monsieur Saltsman.

M. Harkness: Vous dites que vous considérez l'article (2)b) comme dangereux. Il s'agit du prix de vente d'un exportateur qui ne vend pas dans son pays. Ce paragraphe stipule que si un exportateur expédiant les marchandises, au Canada ne fait pas, sur son marché domestique un nombre suffisant de ventes de marchandises semblables à celles qu'il exporte au Canada. Voulez-vous nous dire what the price in a case like that should be which would be used for duty purposes in Canada rather than the one that is proposed?

[Texte]

Mr. Hehner: I think the principal point we had in mind, Mr. Harkness, was the point relating to goods not made in that country. This was the subject of some discussion before your Committee last Thursday morning when another trade association appeared. As I recall, Mr. Lambert used as an example to illustrate the situation, shirts made in Hong Kong and selling in the United Kingdom.

May I merely pick up Mr. Lambert's example. If you have a particular exporter to Canada located in the United Kingdom who is exporting, let me just say shirts because that was the example Mr. Lambert used, to Canada. It so happens that this particular exporter does not sell many shirts in the United Kingdom. It may be that practically all his sales are for export so you are debarred from looking at the prices at which this particular exporter to Canada is selling English shirts in England.

You are, therefore, compelled to look at the prices at which other vendors of shirts sell for consumption in the United Kingdom.

As we read this clause as it is now drafted, you would be required to take into consideration the prices at which persons sell Hong Kong shirts for consumption in the United Kingdom. You not only "may" do so, I suggest you have to do so. The wording of clause 9(2) (b) contains the word "shall" which we read as mandatory.

...there shall be substituted for the exporter...

There is no exclusion of the Hong Kong shirts. I do not want to be too verbose in my answer to your point, Mr. Harkness, but since this has been brought up on more than one day, it is quite apparent it is of interest. May I go on to say that it is quite possible for there to be more than one price level prevailing in a market at the same time. We will presume that we are talking about shirts of identical quality. You might say if Hong Kong shirts were being sold in England for $2, does that not have to be the price level at which shirts of English manufacture are selling in England?

No you cannot presume that this might be the case as there might be import restrictions quel doit être le prix utilisé pour calculer les droits de douane? Est-ce que c'est le prix proposé ou quel prix avez-vous en vue?

[Interprétation]

M. Hehner: Nous pensions surtout aux produits qui ne sont pas fabriqués dans ce pays. Et jeudi dernier, nous en avons parlé au Comité lorsque l'association commerciale a comparu. Et si je me souviens bien, M. Lambert a cité l'exemple pour illustrer la situation, l'exemple de chemises faites à Hong-Kong qui se vendent au Royaume-Uni. Et d'après l'exemple de M. Lambert, si un exportateur établi en Grande-Bretagne exporte des chemises au Canada—parce que c'est l'exemple que M. Lambert a cité—et s'il arrive que cet exportateur ne vend pas beaucoup de chemises en Grande-Bretagne, toute sa production est destinée à l'exportation.

Par conséquent, on ne peut pas savoir quel est le prix de ces chemises en Grande-Bretagne. Donc, nous devons examiner le prix auquel les autres vendeurs de chemises vendent ces chemises aux consommateurs de la Grande-Bretagne.

Et d'après l'article tel qu'il existe actuellement, il faudrait tenir compte des prix des chemises de Hong-Kong vendues au consommateur de Grande-Bretagne. Non seulement on peut mais on doit en tenir compte. C'est là la...terminologie de l'article 9. Le mot est «doit». Il faut, d'après la Loi, utiliser les prix des autres producteurs, et il n'y a pas d'exclusion pour les chemises de Hong-Kong.

Je ne voudrais pas trop allonger ma réponse mais puisque cette question a été soulevée plusieurs fois, j'ajouterai qu'il est tout à fait possible qu'il y ait plus d'un niveau de prix pour un marché donné à un moment donné.

Prenons comme exemple, les chemises de Hong-Kong se vendant en Grande-Bretagne à $2.00. Cela ne doit-il pas être le prix auquel se vendent les chemises fabriquées en Grande-Bretagne? Nous parlons, je présume, de chemises de qualité égale. On ne peut pas présumer que tel soit le cas.

Il y a peut-être des restrictions d'importations pour la vente de chemises de Hong-under which a certain number of Hong Kong shirts could be sold in England and they will sell at a certain price, but because an unlimited quantity cannot enter the country at that price, the normal domestic price would be used—the reference point, as we understand it, for determining dumping—for goods of domestic origin, namely made in the United Kingdom, which could be $3. We merely suggested this would be unreasonable.

[Text]

I might add one extra word, Mr. Harkness. I think this is possibly very pertinent and it may even give some emphasis to the fact that last week Mr. Lambert picked on shirts from England. I do not want to discuss in public the private business of individual companies, but this case was the subject of mention in the press. The United Kingdom government is, at the present time, investigating the alleged dumping of certain Canadian textiles in the United Kingdom. We do not admit that they have been dumped and we hope we have satisfied the United Kingdom authorities. However, my reason for mentioning it is that this is almost an identical situation in reverse.

It so happens that the Canadian manufacturers who have been exporting to the United Kingdom have comparatively small sales in Canada of the fabrics that are being exported to the United Kingdom. One substantial reason for this smallness of home-market sales is that in Canada there is a good volume of these sales made of goods that have been imported into Canada from China and from other areas.

The British Board of Trade in looking at the Canadian home market—we are now taking this case in reverse—said they could not establish normal value on the basis of the home-market sales of the Canadian manufacturer because these were of negligible volume. The Canadian producers admitted that this was the case. This was a fact. They then said that they would look at the price at which we export these fabrics for a third market and if we do not have very substantial exports to a third market, other than the United Kingdom, then they would go to our cost of production.

The subject was mentioned about the Canadian selling prices of like fabrics selling in Canada by importers—these are not products of Canadian manufacture—and the British who are operating under the same Code said that they did not read the Code that way and were certainly not going to look at the prices at which Chinese fabrics sell in Canada in order to establish a normal value for Canadian fabrics being sold in England.

I thought this was a rather pertinent point to mention.

[Interpretation]

Kong parce que le prix normal domestique pour des produits d'origine domestique est peut-être $3.00, disons, pour les chemises vendues en Grande-Bretagne.

Je ne crois pas que ce soit raisonnable, M. Harkness. La question peut être très intéressante, et faire ressortir le fait que M. Lambert ait parlé de chemises fabriquées en Grande-Bretagne. Mais je ne veux pas discuter des pratiques commerciales des autres producteurs.

En ce moment, la Grande-Bretagne fait enquête sur le dumping probable de certains produits canadiens vers le Royaume Uni. Nous ne pensons pas qu'il y ait eu dumping et nous espérons avoir convaincu les autorités de la Grande-Bretagne. Mais c'est une situation à peu près identique qui existe à rebours.

Des fabricants canadiens font comparative-ment des ventes domestiques très minimes de produits exportés à la Grande-Bretagne. Et une raison importante de cette situation, c'est qu'au Canada, une grande partie de ces produits sont importés de la Chine ou d'ailleurs.

Le Ministère du commerce de la Grande-Bretagne pour sa part, n'a pu établir la valeur normale de ces produits au Canada parce qu'il s'agit d'une quantité négligeable. Ensuite, ils disent: «Par conséquent, nous allons voir à quel prix vous vendez ces produits sur un troisième marché, et si c'est impossible, nous allons étudier votre coût de production.»

On a suggéré d'utiliser les prix de vente au Canada de produits semblables importés. La Grande-Bretagne se sert du même code; sa position: «Nous n'interprétons pas le code de cette façon. Nous n'allons pas essayer de déterminer à quel prix les chemises chinoises se vendent au Canada pour déterminer le prix de vente en Grande-Bretagne». Et c'est un point très intéressant.

[Texte]

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): My question has been fully covered.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I would like to comment on one or two of the statements that are made in paragraph 15 of the brief.

The Textile Institute has suggested that the method of establishing normal value under clause 9(2) (b) is not required by the international Code and should be optional rather than mandatory. I would like to suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, that under the Code and I refer you to Article 2 on page 12 of the White Paper, which says: "...the like product when destined for consumption in the exporting country". This is contained in paragraph (a). Paragraph (d) of Article 2 says:

When there are no sales of the like product in the ordinary course of trade in the domestic market of the exporting country...

• 1240

Under clause (9) (1) of this draft Bill, sir, the concept was carried forward of determining normal value on the basis of the exporter's experience in his domestic market and subclause (2) carries forward the obligation under the Code that it be sales in the country of export.

In this connection, Mr. Chairman, I would like to refer to Article 3 of the Act that the Finnish Government passed to implement their obligations under the Code which says—that normal value means the price of goods similar to the imported goods that is comparable to an export price and at which price goods are sold for domestic consumption in the exporting country.

The other comment I would like to make goes back to the discussion we had the other day. I tried at that time to point out to the Committee that in determining the sales of other vendors, the Deputy Minister of National Revenue would be required to take into account the various provisions of clause 9(1) because the wording of subclause (2) in considering sales by other vendors relates to the conditions of sale as set forth in subclause(1).

I would also like to suggest, Mr. Chairman, that it would be open to the Deputy Minister to consider the vendors' sales that he wished to use for purposes of determining normal value. Possibly this could be made clearer in the drafting, but I would suggest that the option is open to him. It also may well be that he would disregard the sales in the illustration that was used of Hong Kong shirts in the United Kingdom.

[Interprétation]

M. Lambert: La question a été vidée en ce qui me concerne.

M. Arthur: Je voudrais parler des déclarations qui apparaissent à l'alinéa 15. L'Institut du textile suggère que la méthode de fixer et de déterminer la valeur normale d'après l'article 9 (2) b), soit facultative. Au sujet d'un «produit similaire destiné à la consommation dans le pays exportateur» ou encore: «Lorsqu'aucune vente du produit similaire n'a lieu au cours d'opérations commerciales normales sur le marché intérieur du pays exportateur.»

La première citation se situe au niveau du pays exportateur dans son marché local, tandis que la deuxième sous-entend qu'il doit y avoir vente dans ce pays.

Il s'agit de déterminer la valeur normale, d'après l'expérience de l'exportateur sur son marché domestique. Le sous-alinéa 2 parle de l'obligation, d'après le Code, que ce soit des ventes dans les pays exportateurs. Je voudrais aussi vous reporter à l'article 3 de la Loi, adopté par la Finalnde, pour remplir leurs obligations d'après leur Code:

... par la valeur normale, on entend le prix de produits semblables aux produits importés, qui est comparable à un prix d'exportation et auquel prix les produits sont vendus pour la consommation domestique dans le pays exportateur.

Un autre commentaire se rapporte à la discussion que nous avons eue l'autre jour et, à ce moment-là, j'ai essayé de démontrer au Comité qu'en déterminant les ventes des autres vendeurs, le sous-ministre du Revenu national devrait tenir compte des diverses dispositions de l'article 9, alinéa 1. Car la terminologie de l'alinéa 2, en considérant les ventes par les autres vendeurs, se rapporte aux conditions de vente telles qu'établies dans l'alinéa 1.

Je voudrais aussi vous dire, monsieur le président, que le sous-ministre est libre de tenir compte des ventes du vendeur qu'il veut utiliser dans le but de déterminer la valeur normale. Il est possible que cela puisse être étudié plus clairement, mais je suggère que le sous-ministre est libre de le faire. Il est possible qu'il ne tienne pas compte des ventes, comme dans l'exemple donné des chemises de Hong Kong dans le Royaume-Uni.

[Text]

Mr. Hehner: There is only one other comment I would make, sir, on that point. If it were to be adopted as a rule of interpretation that two articles, almost identical, should be distinguished as to kind because one of them was made in the United Kingdom and the other was made in Hong Kong, this would obviously meet the situation. I am not certain that that is a distinction which would be made if the articles were almost physically identical.

The other point I would like to make, Mr. Chairman, and on which the Committee might wish to direct its attention in its subsequent sessions when you are not receiving representations, is the aspect of the time required. Again, sir, this is a mandatory section. It does not say there "may" be substituted for the exporter, it says there "shall" be. It seems to me that this imposes a requirement on the Customs and Excise Division to go hunting all over a country and a foreign country at that, to find vendors. Let us not think of the United Kingdom, let us consider an export to Canada from any country you might want to mention. This clause says that if that particular exporter does not have an adequate home market selling base to support establishing normal value it is incumbent upon the Deputy Minister to go hunting for every other vendor or a large selection of other vendors in that foreign country which could be Tanzania, which, incidentally, does export to Canada. It could be any place you might want to mention. This seems to me to be an unreasonable requirement and I suggest that there may, indeed, be good reason for looking to another vendor, but if this were put as an optional "he may" rather than "he shall" it would be an improvement.

● 1245

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, as I have endeavoured to point out, it was considered by the legal draftsmen that this clause was required to be in keeping with the obligations we have accepted under the Code to look at sales in the country of export.

The other point I would like to make is that I did not suggest a selection of goods, but rather I was referring to vendors and further, that I would suggest to the Committee that the practice of looking at the sales experience of other vendors in the country of export is in keeping with the practice that is now followed under the existing legislation.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, are there any other questions on paragraphs 14 to 18 of the brief? If not we will move on to paragraphs 19 to 24.

[Interpretation]

M. Hehner: J'ai seulement une remarque à faire à ce sujet. Si on adopte, comme règle d'interprétation, que deux articles presque identiques devraient être distingués quant à la sorte, parce que l'un serait fabriqué en Grande-Bretagne et l'autre à Hong Kong, cela réglerait le problème. Je ne suis pas certain que cette distinction serait faite, si les articles étaient physiquement presque identiques.

L'autre point que je voudrais faire ressortir, monsieur le président, et que le Comité voudrait peut-être considérer plus tard, dans d'autres réunions, c'est l'aspect du temps requis. Encore une fois, c'est un article obligatoire. On ne dit pas qu'on «peut» substituer, on dit qu'il «doit» être.

Il me semble que c'est imposer une condition à la Division des douanes, qui doit aller voir partout dans le pays, dans un pays étranger en plus. Ne pensons pas seulement au Royaume-Uni, considérons également une importation du Canada de n'importe quel pays. Cet article dit que si cet exportateur n'a pas une bonne base domestique pour supporter le prix normal, le sous-ministre doit aller voir chez tous les autres vendeurs dans les autres pays. Il peut s'agir de la Tanzanie, qui fait des exportations au Canada, ou de n'importe quel autre pays.

C'est une condition déraisonnable et je pense qu'il peut y avoir de bonnes raisons pour aller voir chez les autres vendeurs, mais que ce doit être une chose facultative; on devrait dire qu'il peut et non pas qu'il doit aller.

M. Arthur: Comme j'ai essayé de le démontrer, cet article doit être conforme aux obligations que nous avons acceptées d'après le Code. Nous devons examiner les ventes dans les pays d'exportation.

Un autre point que je voudrais faire ressortir, c'est que je n'ai pas suggéré un choix de produits, mais je parlais des vendeurs. En plus, je suggère au Comité que la pratique d'étudier l'expérience des ventes des autres vendeurs dans les pays d'exportation est conforme à la pratique suivie d'après la Loi telle qu'elle existe.

Le président: Est-ce qu'il y a d'autres questions sur les numéros 14 à 18 du mémoire? Sinon, nous allons passer aux numéros 19 à 24.

[Texte]

Mr. Harkness: No, Mr. Chairman, I have a question on paragraph 16. At the end of this paragraph it says:

...there should be a requirement that the costing methods used in determining home market "markups" and in costing the goods for export to Canada shall be fully uniform and comparable.

Previous to that it states:

...tax allowances may be made in respect of production for export, which will reduce overhead. Raw materials to produce goods for export may be made available at lower prices than materials to make goods for home consumption.

I wonder if Mr. Arthur or Mr. Hind would have anything to say in connection with this recommendation.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I think if I understood the question it deals with the last sentence—

Mr. Harkness: Yes, on how this could be done so that the costing methods will be uniform and comparable.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I would take it that in making these calculations the Department of National Revenue would ensure that that is the case. I think, sir, that any regulations that were established under this particular clause would ensure that the accounting methods that were acceptable followed good business practice. I think under those circumstances there would be a comparable basis used in determining the markup that would apply.

Mr. Harkness: I have been concerned for some time over the various means which can be used and are being used in some countries to, say, provide goods at what is really an artificial price for export by use of devices such as those mentioned here of special tax concessions or of special concessions as far as customs on imports are concerned if the imports are then used to manufacture something which is eventually re-exported, and so on. These are just two examples of various devices along this line which make the determination of the actual value difficult and which make it possible in many cases for goods produced in Canada to be badly undercut in price by imports that come into the country.

[Interprétation]

M. Harkness: On voit à la fin de l'article 16 du mémoire:

...il devrait y avoir une disposition exigeant que les méthodes d'établissement des prix servant à déterminer la marge de bénéfices pratiquée sur le marché domestique et à établir le prix des marchandises destinées à être exportées au Canada soient pleinement uniformes et comparables.

Un peu plus haut on voit:

...des réductions de taxe peuvent être accordées à l'égard de la production destinée à l'exportation, ce qui diminue les frais généraux. Les matières premières servant à la production de marchandises d'exportation peuvent être disponibles à des prix inférieurs à ceux des matières premières servant à la fabrication des articles de consommation domestique.

Je me demande si M. Arthur ou M. Hind ont quelque chose à dire à ce sujet.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, si j'ai bien compris la question, c'est au sujet de la dernière phrase.

M. Harkness: Oui, à savoir que les méthodes de détermination des prix doivent être uniformes et comparables.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, si j'ai bien compris, en faisant ses calculs, le ministre du Revenu national doit s'assurer que c'est le cas. Je crois que tout règlement établi aux termes de cet article, devra assurer que les méthodes de comptabilité acceptables suivent la bonne pratique des affaires. Il y aurait alors une base comparable, surtout en ce qui a trait à la détermination de la marge de profits.

M. Harkness: Depuis quelque temps, je m'inquiète de certaines mesures auxquelles on a recours dans certains pays, qui produisent des marchandises à un prix ridicule pour l'exportation. Y aura-t-il des concessions particulières, au sujet de la douane, sur les importations, qui seront utilisées dans la production de quelque chose qui va être ré-exporté. Voilà deux exemples seulement de dispositif qui rend la détermination de la valeur actuelle difficile. Il est possible bien souvent que les marchandises produites au Canada soient concurrencées d'une façon nuisible.

[Text]

Mr. Hehner: Mr. Harkness, the words "good business practice" that Mr. Arthur just used are exactly what scare us. May I, again, be very specific, sir. It is considered good business practice on the part of many people to cost the goods they are producing for export on an entirely different cost accounting basis than they would cost goods for home consumption.

• 1250

They consider this good business practice. It is quite common for companies to cost goods produced for export on an incremental cost basis. We cannot say that is not good business practice; we cannot say it is not a normal accounting procedure, but the thing we wish to avoid, sir, is this. Perhaps, if it will not be too confusing I will try to give a simple arithmetical example. If you have some goods produced for home consumption with a factory cost of $100 and they are sold in the home market for $120. The selling price is then factory cost plus 20 per cent. A normal basis which the Customs and Excise Division has used for years has been the following. Suppose for instance some goods are being exported to Canada with a factory cost of $95 or a factory cost of $105, but where there is no home market selling price for this exact article; the Division will value those goods at factory cost advanced by the same 20 per cent mark up which the exporter gets when selling closely similar goods in his home market. When I say 20 per cent I am just taking that figure from my hypothetical example. It could be 5 per cent or if it was perfume it would probably be 500 per cent or more. What we are afraid of is happening today as well as having happened yesterday and for years past. A manufacturer when he makes up his cost figures for his home market production has a factory cost of $100 and a selling price of $120. So you establish this 20 per cent mark up as reasonable. However when the manufacturer comes to cost the goods for export to Canada or some other country he shows a factory cost of $70, not because of physical differences in the goods but because he is following a different cost accounting procedure. This is standard. You cannot say it is not good business practice and that is why we are very much afraid of leaving it on a good business practice basis.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, my only comment is that clause 9 is based on home market experience of the exporter and while there may be cases that Mr. Hehner is aware of I would assume that the Department of

[Interpretation]

M. Hehner: C'est le libellé de bonnes pratiques commerciales. C'est précisément ce qui m'inquiète. J'aimerais être très précis. C'est considéré être une bonne pratique commerciale que d'établir des prix pour les marchandises qui devront être exportées, d'une façon tout à fait différente des marchandises qui seront vendues dans le pays.

On considère que c'est normal. On ne peut pas dire que c'est anormal, mais voici ce qu'on veut éviter. Peut-être que cela ne prêterait pas trop à confusion si je vous donne un exemple. Le principe est celui-ci: Vous avez des marchandises produites pour la consommation domestique au coût de $100 et qui sont vendues sur le marché intérieur à $120. Alors, le prix de vente est le prix coûtant, plus 20 p. 100. Alors, la base normale utilisée par les douanes pendant des années, c'est de dire: supposons que vous avez des marchandises qui sont exportées au Canada à un coût de production de $95 ou $105, mais où il n'y a pas de marché intérieur.

Nous allons les évaluer au prix coûtant à la manufacture, plus 20 p. 100 que l'exportateur recevra lorsqu'il vendra des marchandises semblables sur le marché domestique. Et quand je parle de 20 p. 100, c'est purement théorique. Ça pourrait très bien être une marge de 5 p. 100 ou, lorsqu'il s'agit de parfum, ce serait probablement 500 p. 100 ou plus. Ce que nous craignons, et nous savons que la chose se produit actuellement, et cela s'est produit dans le passé, que le fabricant, lorsqu'il établit ses prix coûtants, pour le marché domestique, met par exemple un prix de vente de $100 et un prix de vente à $120.

Alors, vous tenez compte de la marge de 20 p. 100, qui est raisonnable. Mais quand il fixera des prix en vue d'exportation au Canada ou autres pays, il l'établira à $70, non pas à cause d'une différence dans la marchandise, mais il suit une méthode comptable différente. C'est normal, paraît-il, chez eux. On ne peut pas dire que c'est une mauvaise coutume, une mauvaise pratique commerciale.

M. Arthur: Mon seul commentaire là-dessus au titre de l'article 9 se fonde sur les marchés internes de l'exportateur, et comme il doit y avoir des cas, dont M. Hehner est au courant, je croirais que le ministère du Revenu natio-

[Texte]

National Revenue in determining the cost of production plus the mark up that will apply will be governed by the experience regarding mark ups and costing associated with goods sold in the exporters home market.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman I believe Mr. Hind would like to supplement Mr. Arthur's explanation.

The Chairman: Is that agreeable to you, Mr. Lambert?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman I only wish to confirm the accuracy of what Mr. Arthur has said, mainly our practice in the past has been to require exactly the same manner of computing the cost of export goods as that used for domestically-produced goods.

In other words, using Mr. Hehner's example we would not accept as the cost of the export goods the $70 figure that he mentioned; rather we would require the cost of the goods sold for home consumption.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): My only comment is that if there is very little sold for home consumption then there is no real costing basis for it. Therefore I think you get an exception to what you say, Mr. Hind.

My point arises in the handling of the canned fruit. As we know, the canning industry in Canada has suggested, in so far as fruit is concerned, that Canadian fruit is at the absolute mercy or was at the absolute mercy, of Australian fruit. In Australia the government had a definite policy of allowing a double labour cost in so far as income tax for the volume of goods that went into export was concerned. In other words a producer could double up on his labour costs on any goods that went into export.

Second, such practices as display allowances, so much per case, say 75 cents per case or $1.50 a case depending on the size of the case, payable to the retailer if he handled the goods, were followed. No one is going to suggest these are not good business practice. One of them is a result of government policy and the other is done in the trade. Display allowances are general practice in many fields of retailing. How is that handled as an exception to ascertaining the true costs of the goods in the country of export?

• 1255

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman this is not related to this particular clause, but I believe—

[Interprétation]

nal en déterminant les coûts de production, plus la marge de profit s'inspirera de l'expérience acquise touchant les marges de profit et le coût, de même que des marchandises écoulées sur le marché intérieur de l'exportateur.

M. Gray: Monsieur le président, je crois que M. Hind voudrait compléter l'explication de M. Arthur.

Le président: Est-ce que cela vous va, monsieur Lambert?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, tout ce que je veux dire, c'est souligner la justesse des propos de M. Arthur, c'est-à-dire, la pratique dans le passé et à l'heure actuelle d'exiger précisément les mêmes normes d'évaluation du coût d'exportation qu'au marché intérieur.

En d'autres mots, en suivant l'exemple de M. Hehner, nous n'accepterions pas comme prix coûtant du matériel à exporter, le chiffre de $70 qu'il a mentionné, mais plutôt le coût des marchandises vendues sur le marché interne.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Mon seul commentaire, c'est que s'il y a très peu de choses vendues sur le marché interne, on ne peut pas très bien l'évaluer. Alors, il y a une exception là, monsieur Hind.

Moi, je songe, par exemple, à l'industrie des fruits en boîtes, dans l'industrie canadienne, par exemple; cette industrie est ou était à la merci des confitures ou des fruits en boîtes qui proviennent de l'Australie, parce qu'eux ont suivi une politique qui est le double du prix de la main-d'œuvre par rapport à l'impôt pour le volume de marchandises, de denrées qui sont exportées.

On peut donc doubler le coût de la main-d'œuvre pour tout produit exporté.

Par exemple, il y a les pratiques de présentation, tant pour la caisse, soit 75c, $1.50 la caisse, dépendant des dimensions de la caisse que l'on doit payer au détaillant s'il doit manutentionner le produit. Personne ne peut dire que ce ne sont pas des bonnes pratiques commerciales. Les pratiques de présentation sont générales dans plusieurs domaines du commerce au détail. Comment peut-on décider d'une exception qui établit le coût réel des marchandises du pays importateur?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, ceci ne se rapporte pas à cet article en particulier, mais je crois ...

[Text]

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): No, Mr. Arthur, I put it to you that way because there is a question of good business practice and naturally the double tax allowance is not on goods for domestic production and consumption, and the display allowance does not apply on domestically sold goods.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I believe the illustration Mr. Lambert used is one which at least in relation to the double taxation allowance for export has been dealt with. Consideration has been given to the fact that this double taxation is in fact a subsidy and it has been dealt with under the countervailing clause rather than under this particular clause.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): What do you do about display allowances?

Mr. Arthur: Again, Mr. Chairman, if the display allowance was allowed on home markets sales and there were similar conditions it would not constitute dumping. However, if it were provided only for export sales I am satisfied that the Department of National Revenue would not allow this in the determination of normal value, and if the selling price reflected such an allowance this in fact would be dumping. It would then follow the normal procedure of investigation.

The Chairman: Gentlemen it is five minutes to one o'clock and we have had a good morning session. The meeting is adjourned until 3.30 this afternoon in the same room with the same witnesses.

AFTERNOON SITTING

• 1538

The Chairman: Gentlemen, when we adjourned this morning we were dealing with paragraphs 14 to 18 of the brief before us.

Before we start the questioning again, I understand Mr. Hind has some comments to make.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, just by way of clarification I would like to take one moment to say a word or two. I was a little disturbed this morning when I understood that it was being said that the Department took seven years to arrive at a decision.

The Chairman: It was from 1961 to 1967.

Mr. Hind: I hope I misunderstood what was being said, but I gathered it was being said

[Interpretation]

M. Lambert: Il y a une question ici de pratiques commerciales souhaitables. L'impôt double ne s'applique pas aux marchandises pour la production domestique ou la consommation, et le coût de la présentation ne s'applique pas aux marchandises vendues sur le marché domestique.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je crois que l'exemple donné par M. Lambert, du moins en ce qui se rapporte à l'impôt double pour l'exportation, a été réglé. Il a été pris en considération que cet impôt double est en fait une subvention, qui a été traitée à l'article compensatoire plutôt qu'à cet article particulier.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Que faites-vous des pratiques de présentation?

M. Arthur: Si les pratiques de présentation étaient accordées pour les ventes sur le marché domestique et que ce fût dans des conditions semblables, ceci ne constituerait pas une forme de dumping. Toutefois, si ce n'était prévu que pour les exportations, je crois que le ministère du Revenu ne permettrait pas de se servir de cela pour déterminer la valeur normale et si le prix de vente est touché, on pourrait déclarer qu'à ce moment-là, il s'agit de dumping et ceci ferait l'objet d'une enquête.

Le président: Il est maintenant une heure moins cinq, nous avons eu une bonne séance. La séance est levée jusqu'à trois heures cet après-midi. Nous interrogerons les mêmes témoins.

Le président: Messieurs, lorsque nous avons levé la séance à 12h55, nous en étions aux articles 14 à 18 du mémoire dont vous êtes saisis.

Avant de revenir aux questions, je crois comprendre que M. Hind a certains commentaires à faire.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, j'aimerais avoir une petite explication et ajouter quelques mots ou plutôt quelques explications. J'ai été quelque peu inquiet ce matin quand j'ai entendu dire que le ministère a mis sept ans à prendre une décision. De 1961 à 1967—c'est ce qu'on a dit. J'espère que j'ai mal compris ce qu'on disait mais je crois comprendre qu'on a signalé que le ministère n'avait pas arrêté de décision avant sept ans.

[Texte]

that the Department did not make a decision for seven years. I would like to reserve our position here because our files are in dead storage, but on the basis of a sheet showing what steps had been taken, I understand that while a question was raised with us in 1961, a firm decision was made by the Deputy Minister of National Revenue in about one year's time, namely in 1962.

I just wanted to correct the impression that no decision was reached until seven years had passed. If the Committee would like to have a recapitulation sheet showing the various steps that took place, I would be glad to furnish that to them. I would not like the impression left that the Department takes this length of time in which to come to a conclusion.

The Chairman: I understand Mr. Malone has a telegram to read to the Committee.

Mr. Malone: This is a telegram addressed to Mr. Berry, President of the Canadian Textiles Institute.

• 1540

Nous sommes navrés de ne pas pouvoir assister à la présentation du mémoire conjoint de l'industrie du textile sur la loi anti-dumping. Prière de noter que nous endossons sans réserve le contenu du document.

Fédération canadienne des travailleurs du textile Inc. (CSN) et Confédération des syndicats nationaux.

Le président: Un instant. Oui, monsieur. Je crois que c'est M. Payette.

M. Payette: Monsieur le président, avec votre permission, j'aimerais saisir l'occasion de ce télégramme pour corriger peut-être une impression qu'il m'a semblé ce matin que quelques membres du comité avaient au sujet de notre présentation. Le mémoire qui est discuté cet après-midi et ce matin n'est pas une présentation des manufacturiers de l'industrie du textile, mais bien de l'industrie du textile comme telle avec toutes ses parties.

Les 200,000 travailleurs de l'industrie du textile primaire et du vêtement, ont la ferme conviction qu'ils sont partie intégrante de l'industrie et qu'ils sont sérieusement concernés par les problèmes qui sont à l'étude. Et, je voudrais qu'on se rende compte, que nous tous, et plus particulièrement les 6,000 travailleurs qui, dans les derniers quinze mois, ont vu disparaître leur emploi à cause des problèmes que rencontre l'industrie, sommes

[Interprétation]

J'aimerais réserver notre position car nos dossiers sont entreposés à Tunney's Pasture mais compte tenu d'une feuille qui indique les mesures qui ont été prises, je crois comprendre que, lorsqu'on a soulevé une question pour le ministère en 1961, une décision ferme a été prise par le sous-ministre du Revenu national dans l'espace d'une année, en 1962.

Ainsi je tiens à rectifier l'impression à savoir qu'aucune décision n'a été prise avant sept ans. Si le Comité veut que je présente une feuille de récapitulation résumant toutes les mesures qui ont été prises, il me fera plaisir de préparer une liste de ce genre. Je ne veux pas du tout laisser l'impression que le ministère prend autant de temps avant de prendre des décisions.

Le président: Je crois comprendre que M. Malone veut donner lecture d'un télégramme au Comité.

M. Malone: Il s'agit d'un télégramme adressé à M. Perry, Président de l'Institut canadien des textiles.

"We regret very much not to be able to assist in the presentation of the joint brief of the Canadian Textiles Industry on the Anti-Dumping Bill. We approve wholeheartedly the contents of the brief.

Fédération Canadienne Travailleurs du Textile (CNTU) and the Confederation of National Trade Unions."

The Chairman: One moment. Yes, sir. Mr. Payette, I believe.

Mr. Payette: Mr. Chairman, I would like to take this opportunity to correct an impression which, I think, a few members of the Committee this morning had about our presentation. The presentation of the brief as such which is being considered this morning and this afternoon is not a brief presented by the textile industry manufacturers, but by the textile industry as such including all the parties concerned.

The 200,000 workers of the primary textile industry and the clothing industry are convinced that they are an integral part of the industry and that they are seriously affected by the problems which are being considered. I would like members to take into account the fact that all of us, and especially the 6,000 workers who, in the past fifteen months lost their employment on account of the problems which the industry is facing, are acutely des plus intéressés au problème qui nous occupe.

[Text]

Le président: Monsieur Demers, lorsque j'ai mentionné par qui était présenté le mémoire, j'ai bien mentionné les syndicats aussi.

M. Payette: C'est tout simplement que quelques membres du Comité m'ont donné l'impression de croire, ce matin, que c'était la présentation des manufacturiers de l'industrie du textile.

Le président: Merci beaucoup de votre mise au point.

Un instant, monsieur Hales, je crois que monsieur Demers a quelque chose à dire, aussi.

Mr. Demers: Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen, I am not so concerned about procedure or provisional and definitive tariffs or duties, nor do I want to speak on the value of goods. I am vitally concerned in something that transcends the problem which has been exposed for consideration here this morning.

Perhaps it would be well to make known to you the reason why we find ourselves here today joining the industry representatives in attempting to combat the problem that has caused us much pain.

For some years now, our own union, the Textile Workers' Union of America with 8,000 members in the Province of Quebec, has found it necessary to draft resolutions to be presented to its conventions and to talk with representatives from the various textile areas with regard to this problem that was constantly re-occurring and showing the worst of its ugly head.

We realized from the very beginning that we alone could not attempt to emphasize, as we had hoped to, the seriousness and the magnitude of this problem.

Therefore, approximately two years ago we received an invitation to join forces with industry to attempt to study in depth the problem before us and to attempt in every way possible to find solutions to it so that we might live with a progressive and healthy industry in the years ahead.

[Interpretation]

interested in the problem which we are considering.

The Chairman: Mr. Demers, when I mentioned who was presenting the brief, I also mentioned the unions.

Mr. Payette: It is simply that a few members of the Committee gave me the impression, this morning, that it was the presentation of the textile industry manufacturers.

The Chairman: Thank you very much for your explanation.

One moment please, Mr. Hales, I believe that Mr. Demers also has something to say.

M. Demers: Monsieur le président, messieurs, peu m'importe quelles procédures ou quels tarifs et droits provisoires ou définitifs seront adoptés, je ne veux pas non plus faire d'observations sur la valeur des articles ou des biens. Ce qui m'intéresse au plus haut point, c'est quelque chose qui transcende les problèmes qui vous ont été exposés ce matin.

Peut-être serions-nous bien avisés de vous faire connaître les raisons pour lesquelles nous sommes devant vous aujourd'hui, nous associant aux représentants de l'industrie pour tenter de régler le problème, problème qui nous a causé beaucoup de difficultés.

Depuis un certain nombre d'années maintenant, notre propre syndicat, l'Union des ouvriers du textile d'Amérique, qui compte 8,000 membres dans la province de Québec, a jugé à propos d'élaborer des résolutions présentées au congrès et de s'entretenir avec des représentants des diverses régions où l'on produit des textiles, où il y a des fabriques de textiles, au sujet de ce qui se répétait sans cesse, de ce problème, de cette menace qui planait sans cesse.

Nous avons vu, dès le début, que nous ne pourrions pas, à nous seuls, essayer de faire ressortir aussi bien que nous aurions aimé le faire, le sérieux et l'ampleur du problème.

Et ainsi, il y a environ deux ans, nous avons reçu une invitation. On nous a invité à nous allier à l'industrie pour essayer d'étudier en profondeur les problèmes dont nous étions saisis, et d'essayer par tous les moyens possibles d'y trouver des solutions, afin que nous puissions avoir une industrie prospère et saine au cours des années à venir.

● 1545

I have lived through some pretty nasty liquidations and the after-effects are far from

J'ai vu des liquidations désastreuses et je vous assure que les conséquences sont très being funny and might I add that the problem is that much more complicated when liquidations occur in an area where there is predominantly textile employment.

[Texte]

Perhaps two-thirds of the contracts we hold with employers in the Province of Quebec are located in areas where predominantly the textile industry offers the greater number of jobs.

We feel—yes, we are having some very bad dreams about this whole problem—that unless we awaken to the real bugaboo, unless we alert ourselves to the need of progressive action to check anti-dumping and everything else that can be related to it, that we face a very dismal future in so far as the industry is concerned and more importantly, the thousands of workers who earn their livelihood in that industry.

We have given hours of our time meeting periodically with the industry heads and I believe that those representing the unions have learned their lesson well. At least I can admit that there were many features and aspects of this problem that were unknown to us—it was like calling out into the dark for some form of relief that never came.

For this reason we dug in. We made it a purpose, our duty, to make sure that we understood it clearly and well and that we could expound upon this subject, not only to our members, but to those who could really do something about it. This is why we appeal to you and we appeal to you in the loudest voice we can use because time is short.

Unless there are measures taken to fortify the situations that are somewhat hopeless I feel that perhaps we will have taken a giant step backwards. If it is true that to stand still is to go backward, then gentlemen this is what we face. I shall not sit by idly allowing thousands of our members to have faith today when they are told that because of dumping and because of increasing imports, jobs in the textile industry in Canada are no longer available to Canadians.

[Interprétation]

malheureuses et je puis ajouter aussi que le problème est plus complexe lorsque des liquidations surviennent dans une région où l'emploi est surtout dans l'industrie des textiles.

Peut-être les deux tiers des contrats que nous avons passés avec des employeurs dans la province de Québec portent-ils précisément sur des régions où l'emploi prédominant est celui des industries textiles, des fabriques de textiles?

Évidemment, tout ce problème nous crée des cauchemars, à moins que nous puissions nous réveiller à la réalité, à moins que nous puissions bien comprendre la nécessité qu'il y a d'adopter des mesures progressistes pour contrecarrer le dumping et tout ce qui s'y rattache, j'estime que nous faisons face à un avenir très peu prometteur, tant en ce qui concerne l'industrie et ce qui compte encore plus, qu'en ce qui concerne les milliers de travailleurs qui gagnent leur pain grâce à cette industrie.

Nous avons consacré des heures et des heures à avoir des réunions périodiques avec les dirigeants de l'industrie. Et, je crois que ceux qui représentaient les syndicats ont bien appris leur leçon. Au moins, je puis reconnaître, pour ma part, qu'il y avait bien des aspects et bien des caractéristiques de ce problème que nous ne connaissions pas. C'est un peu comme crier dans le désert pour obtenir une aide qui n'est jamais venue.

Et, pour cette raison, nous avons approfondi, nous nous sommes enfoncés, nous nous sommes lancés et nous nous sommes efforcés de voir à ce que nous puissions comprendre clairement et nettement, pour que nous saisissions toutes les données du problème et les expliquer, non seulement à nos membres, mais aussi à ceux qui pouvaient faire quelque chose pour y remédier. Et, nous vous lançons cet appel et nous le lançons de toute la force de nos poumons car nous savons que le temps passe vite.

Et, à moins que des mesures ne soient adoptées pour contrecarrer la situation, pour circonscrire une situation qui devient désespérée, j'estime que nous aurons rétrogradé considérablement. Si c'est vrai que l'immobilisme est un recul, et bien, c'est exactement ce qui se passe en ce moment, messieurs. Et, je ne veux pas rester les bras croisés et laisser des milliers et des milliers de nos membres à voir le jour où on leur dira, qu'à cause du dumping, qu'en raison des augmentations des importations, les emplois dans l'industrie textile du Canada n'existent plus pour les Canadiens.

[Text]

I hope you will bear this in mind because we cannot stress it too strongly. No matter how we might try, the problem is one that cannot be ignored.

I would like to make one last comment. A few years back the machinery replacement program frightened us beyond words. We felt that it meant technology was taking over to the extent that jobs would diminish and that the opportunities for employment would be side-tracked, but we have learned through living with these problems that technology has a role in this industry; that machinery replacement programs have their place.

• 1550

Only through this can we manage to maintain employment, good jobs at good salaries in the years ahead. I hope that you will consider in your deliberations the magnitude of this problem and the type of legislation which we feel is necessary to protect the industry and the thousands of workers in it, will be considered. Thank you.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, my question has been answered by the two members of the Textile Workers' Union who have just spoken so well. I was going to ask, Mr. Chairman, if we could hear from the union representatives because, I believe, at least to my knowledge, this is the first time a joint brief between management and labour has ever been presented to a Committee and I commend management and labour on getting together and presenting such a brief as this.

In conclusion I would think that the success of the textile industry in Canada will depend on how well this new anti-dumping legislation is administered and applied.

If we do not apply this legislation as it is intended to be applied, I would suspect that those who have been in the habit of investing money in the textile industry will no longer see fit to invest money in this industry and this would be very regrettable. It is most important that we make sure this new legislation works to the advantage of the textile industry in Canada.

The Chairman: Thank you, Mr. Hales. Gentlemen, are there any question or comments on paragraphs 14 to 18 of the brief?

[Interpretation]

J'espère que vous ne l'oublierez pas, car nous ne saurions trop insister là-dessus. Quels que soient les efforts que nous déployons, ce problème ne peut être laissé de côté.

Et, une dernière observation.

Il y a quelques années seulement, un programme de remplacement du matériel nous effrayait, nous terrorisait. Nous croyions que cela voulait dire que la technologie allait remplacer les travailleurs, que le nombre d'emplois allait diminuer, que les occasions d'emplois seraient de beaucoup plus réduites.

Mais, nous avons appris, en ayant ces problèmes au jour le jour, que la technologie et que la technique moderne ont un rôle et que le programme de remplacement des machines a sa place.

Ce n'est que de cette façon que nous pourrions réussir à maintenir de l'emploi, de bons emplois commandant de bonnes rémunérations au cours des années à venir. J'espère qu'au cours de vos délibérations, vous allez vraiment envisager l'ampleur du problème et que le genre de mesures législatives nécessaires, à notre sens, pour protéger l'industrie et les milliers de travailleurs qu'elle emploie, seront envisagées. Merci.

M. Hales: Monsieur le président, les deux membres de «Textile Workers' Union of America» ont répondu à ma question dans leurs excellentes déclarations.

J'allais simplement vous demander si les représentants des syndicats ne pourraient pas nous faire des commentaires, car c'est la première fois, je crois, qu'un mémoire conjoint a été présenté, conjointement sous les auspices du patronat et du salariat à un Comité. Je félicite et les représentants du patronat et du salariat de s'être réunis et d'avoir présenté conjointement un rapport. En conclusion, il me semble que tout dépendra de l'application de cette nouvelle loi «antidumping», pour déterminer le succès de l'industrie du textile au Canada.

Si nous n'appliquons pas la loi comme nous serions censés le faire, je suis d'avis que ceux qui ont l'habitude d'investir de l'argent dans l'industrie du textile, ne jugeront plus à propos de faire des placements dans cette industrie et cela serait fort déplorable. Il importe de voir que cette nouvelle mesure législative ait précisément ces résultats pour l'industrie du textile. Telle était la question que j'allais poser. Pouvons-nous les entendre?

Le président: Merci M. Hales. Y a-t-il d'autres questions ou d'autres commentaires sur les rubriques 14 à 18?

[Texte]

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question of the witnesses who last spoke. The witness said something to the effect that the unions were concerned about the implementation of this anti-dumping legislation. Then he said something to the effect that the unions were concerned about dumping and imports of textiles.

I want to get clear what we are discussing here, because it was my impression that we are discussing only the specific matter of trade which is anti-dumping. We are not here to set ourselves up as a—

The Chairman: No, but sometimes, Mr. Howard, some comments are made that are not relevant to anti-dumping. Last week we had comments on the Automotive Agreement.

I let them pass but your Committee is studying the White Paper on Anti-dumping. It is very hard for the Chairman to stop somebody if he brings up something that is not 100 per cent related. However, I will continue to be lenient.

M. Émard: Monsieur le président, le dumping est-il la seule chose qui nuise à l'industrie du textile au Canada? Est-ce qu'il y a d'autres raisons pourquoi l'industrie du textile au Canada n'est pas plus florissante, et est même à la baisse, comme on vient de l'expliquer.

Le président: Votre question se rattache à celle de M. Howard.

M. Demers avait aussi mentionné dans ses commentaires la question d'importation. Mais votre Comité fait présentement l'étude du Livre Blanc sur l'«anti-dumping».

M. Émard: Je comprends. Mais si je peux me permettre une réflexion.

Le président: Oui.

M. Émard: Ce qui arrive, c'est que, c'est bien beau...

Le président: Voulez-vous vous rapprocher du microphone s'il vous plaît?

M. Émard: C'est bien beau de discuter clause par clause, mais quand même, il faut comprendre le problème. On n'est pas tous des avocats. Il y en a qui le sont. Pour eux autres, c'est peut-être plus facile de comprendre la portée des clauses proposées. Mais avant de pouvoir comprendre la portée des clauses, il faut comprendre, je crois, la portée

[Interprétation]

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Le témoin a dit que les syndicats se préoccupent de la mise en vigueur de cette loi anti-dumping. Puis il a ajouté que les syndicats s'inquiètent aussi du dumping, et de l'importation des produits textiles.

J'aimerais savoir ce que nous discutons exactement. J'avais l'impression que nous ne parlions que d'un détail particulier, l'«anti-dumping».

Le président: Oui, mais parfois, monsieur Howard, il se peut que des commentaires ne se rattachent pas précisément à la lettre du sujet à l'étude, mais il y a d'autres commentaires que nous pouvons faire qui se rattachent au sujet à l'étude.

Votre Comité étudie évidemment le Livre blanc sur l'«antidumping». Mais il est très difficile de couper l'élan de quelqu'un qui fait des observations, même si elles ne se rattachent pas uniquement et complètement au sujet à l'étude. Monsieur Émard, vous aviez des questions à poser?

Mr. Émard: Mr. Chairman, I would like to know whether dumping is the only thing that is harming the textile industry in Canada. Are there any other reasons why the textile industry in Canada is not more prosperous than it is; why it is even regressing, as we were told a moment ago?

The Chairman: Your question, Mr. Émard, is connected with Mr. Howard's.

Mr. Demers in his comments also referred to imports. But right now your Committee is considering the White Paper on Anti-Dumping.

Mr. Émard: I understand. But if you'll allow me to make another comment.

The Chairman: Yes.

Mr. Émard: What happens is that, it's all very well to...

The Chairman: Will you please speak closer to the microphone?

Mr. Émard: It is all very well to discuss this clause by clause, but we must understand the problem. We are not all lawyers here. For those among us who are lawyers, of course, it may be much easier to understand the full significance of the clauses which are put forward. But before being able to grasp the full significance of the clauses, I think we du problème. C'est pour ça que je pensais que vous auriez...

[Text]

[Interpretation]

have to understand the significance of the problem. That is why I thought that you would have...

Le président: Je n'ai pas rejeté la question que vous avez posée, monsieur Émard. J'ai dit à M. Howard et je le répète: j'ai été assez large à venir jusqu'à maintenant sur les questions posées par les membres de ce Comité et je n'ai pas d'objections, s'il y a quelqu'un qui veut répondre à votre question. Mais il me semble que M. Hehner...

The Chairman: I did not object to the question which you put forward, Mr. Émard. I told Mr. Howard, and I repeat it, that I have been quite lenient up to now regarding the questions by the members of the Committee. I certainly do not object if anyone would like to reply to your question. It seems that Mr. Hehner...

Mr. Hehner: Yes, Mr. Emard; there are many other problems which the textile industry has to face which do not involve dumping. There is the problem, for example, of imports from what frequently have been referred to as the low-cost countries—some of the developing countries—which have wage rates running into a few cents an hour. These are problems.

M. Hehner: Si vous me le permettez, monsieur Émard, il y a bien d'autres problèmes évidemment, auxquels l'industrie du textile doit faire face. Outre les pratiques de dumping, il y a par exemple le problème des importations de ce qu'on appelle les pays à prix de revient très bas. Là où les salaires versés correspondent à quelques cents l'heure. Cela constitue des problèmes.

However, we have restricted our submission here to those problems caused by imports which are dumped into Canada. My understanding of the comments made by Mr. Demers when he referred to imports, was that he was thinking in terms of imports which are dumped. These other problems are, indeed, very real ones we cannot ignore them.

Cependant, dans la présentation de ce mémoire, nous nous en sommes tenus aux problèmes occasionnés par les importations qu'on jette sur le marché du Canada à l'état de dumping. Et lorsque M. Demers a parlé des importations, je crois qu'il l'a fait pour le véritable dumping. Mais ces autres problèmes sont réels. Nous ne pouvons pas évidemment les laisser de côté. Je dis simplement à cet égard, que parce qu'il y a d'autres problèmes que celui des importations où il y a dumping.

In this connection I would like to say that because there are other problems as well as the problem of dumped imports, it makes it all the more important in trying to compete in the world of international trade where there has been such a great extension of world-wide production with these low-cost countries that we should not, in addition, have to find ourselves competing against dumped imports.

Au moment où on essaie de soutenir la concurrence internationale, alors qu'il y a eu tant d'amplification de la production mondiale, notamment dans les pays où les coûts de production sont peu élevés, il importe d'autant plus de ne pas avoir à surveiller la concurrence de certains produits importés.

Perhaps I could add one more word, sir. We certainly do not regard our submission or our discussion today as part of the recurrent free trade versus protection argument. We are not discussing the duty rates which are provided for protection of Canadian industry which have been substantially lowered all around the world and in Canada, as the result of the international trade agreements, most recently, the Kennedy Round.

Nous ne considérons sûrement pas notre discussion d'aujourd'hui comme une lutte entre le libre-échange et le protectionnisme. Nous ne parlerons pas tellement des taux de douane, ou des tarifs qui protègent l'industrie canadienne et qui ont été réduits dans tous les pays et au Canada à la suite des accords internationaux de commerce, et notamment de la négociation du «Kennedy Round.»

We have restricted our comments here to something that we consider to be of an entirely different nature and which, I believe, the academic economists and others who have propounded fur trade ideas, have themselves generally admitted to be a problem of an entirely different nature.

C'est là quelque chose de tout à fait différent, et même les théoriciens économistes et d'autres, qui ont lancé l'idée du libéralisme, ont déclaré qu'il s'agissait d'un problème d'un tout autre ordre.

[Texte]

In other words, we are talking about the problem of discriminatory pricing, the type of problem where we have domestic legislation that prohibits discriminatory pricing practices and we regard anti-dumping duties—I think they are internationally so regarded and this was set out in the wording of the GATT—as a way of preventing international trade with a discriminatory pricing policy of the type which, if carried on domestically, would be prevented by domestic legislation.

Therefore, Mr. Émard's question is, of course a perfectly valid one. We do have other problems as well. We have restricted ourselves to one, only because of the restricted terms of reference of this Committee, as we have understood it.

M. Émard: Si je comprends bien, la meilleure législation au monde sur le dumping ne pourrait protéger l'industrie du textile, en particulier, contre la concurrence qui n'est pas du dumping, mais qui vient du fait que le coût de production dans certains pays peut être tellement plus économique que les coûts de production au Canada.

• 1600

Est-ce qu'il va y avoir quelque chose dans la législation à l'étude sur le dumping, pour protéger contre cette concurrence-là.

Le président: Monsieur Émard, vous avez devant le comité ici, le Livre blanc sur l'anti-dumping pour permettre au Canada de remplir ses obligations qui ont été signées en juin 1967. Le Canada comme, je crois, plus de cinquante pays devaient, à partir du 1<sup>er</sup> juillet 1968, aller de l'avant avec le nouveau code sur l'antidumping.

Mais, à cause de circonstances, comme vous le savez comme moi, qui sont arrivées, le Canada a demandé un prolongement et nous devons appliquer le nouveau code le 1<sup>er</sup> janvier 1969. Mais dans la législation que nous avons devant nous, il n'y a rien, je crois, sujet à correction, qu'on va discuter, concernant les importations venant de pays où la main-d'œuvre est beaucoup meilleur marché ou meilleur marché qu'au Canada.

M. Émard: Cela ne règle pas le problème du textile dans ce cas-là?

Le président: Bien voici, je crois devoir vous répéter, monsieur Émard, que le Livre blanc a été déféré à votre comité pour étude et des suggestions à apporter, si on le désire. Mais, nous avons présentement à étudier le Livre blanc sur l'antidumping.

Mr. Saltzman: If I might be permitted to say a word on this. There is a great impor-

[Interprétation]

Ce qui nous préoccupe ici, c'est le problème d'un genre de discrimination dans les prix. Nous avons pris des mesures nationales qui empêchent les pratiques discriminatoires des prix et s'intéressent aussi aux pratiques de dumping. Tout cela est conforme d'ailleurs au libellé des règlements de Gatt. Il s'agit d'un problème de prévention. Il s'agit de prévenir les pratiques discriminatoires de prix à l'échelle internationale, alors que les mesures nationales empêchent ces pratiques sur le plan local.

Donc la question de M. Émard est parfaitement valable. Nous nous limitons à un seul problème, car c'est le mandat limité donné au Comité.

Mr. Émard: If I understand correctly, the soundest legislation in the world against dumping could not protect the textile industry, in particular against competition which is not dumping, but which arises from the fact that the cost of production in some countries may be a good bit lower than production costs in Canada.

Will there be anything in the anti-dumping legislation under consideration to provide protection against competition of that nature?

The Chairman: Mr. Émard, you have here before the Committee the White Paper on Anti-dumping to enable Canada to fill its obligations signed in June, 1967. Canada, along with over 50 countries, I believe, was to go ahead, starting July 1, 1968, with the new anti-dumping code.

Due to unforeseen circumstances though, Canada asked for an extension and we must apply the new Code starting January 1, 1969. But in the legislation we are now studying there is nothing we shall have to discuss, so far as I can see, and I stand to be corrected, concerning imports from countries where labour is much cheaper or cheaper than in Canada.

Mr. Émard: Then this does not settle the textile problem?

The Chairman: Mr. Émard, I repeat that the White Paper was submitted to your Committee for study and suggestions. But now we have to study the White Paper on Anti-dumping.

M. Saltzman: Monsieur le président, Si vous me permettez d'intervenir, il est très tance to the establishment of effective anti-dumping legislation aside from the question of free versus protected trade because regardless of the level of protection or the absence of protection. In fact an industry can learn to live with things. They can predict what the level of trade is going to be, what the price conditions are in various parts of the world, they can make their investments and, at least, accustom themselves to certain levels.

[Text]

But where dumping takes place, this upsets the entire planning process of the industry. It is an unpredictable thing: it is an irrational thing and, therefore, seriously interferes with the industry's ability to adapt itself to freer trade.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, at various times during our meetings, there has been mention of the fact that there were a number of legal ways that anti-dumping could be circumvented.

I wonder if Mr. Hehner would be able to enlighten us on some of these legal ways and means and whether or not they have been covered by the proposed Bill?

Mr. Hehner: I sat not in the witness chair, but in the audience at some of your earlier hearings and heard references to an unnamed consultant who I suspect may have even been myself. I believe, I also heard Mr. Labarge and Mr. Hind when asked if there were these ways, reply that they did not think they should be the ones to publicize them if they did exist.

I can appreciate Mr. Hind's attitude. I do not know how much publicity should be given to them now, but again, since I am afraid I am lacking in discretion and you have asked a very fair question which should be answered, I will say, yes, there are many ways at the present time where it is easy to dump into Canada perfectly legally merely by arranging your business through appropriate channels that, quite bluntly sir, I think the only people who need to pay dumping duties under our present legislation are those who are too lazy to arrange their transactions to avoid our present law.

It is full of loopholes and this, indeed, was the reason why the industry in its brief said that we felt that the present law, if it were vigorously administered, actually did have a potential for giving a fairer and maybe more important d'établir une mesure législative antidumping efficace. Il s'agit d'une question différente de celle du libre-échange et du protectionnisme car le dumping constitue un grand danger pour l'industrie, quel que soit le niveau de protection ou l'absence de protection.

[Interpretation]

En effet, l'industrie peut apprendre à faire face à certaines situations: elle peut prévoir le niveau du commerce et des prix mondiaux et investir et produire en conséquence ou, du moins, elle peut s'habituer à certains niveaux.

Mais lorsqu'il y a du dumping, cela perturbe complètement le processus de planification de l'industrie. Le dumping est quelque chose d'imprévisible et d'irrationnel, ce qui empêche l'adoption de l'industrie à un commerce plus libre.

M. Gillespie: Monsieur le président, assez fréquemment au cours de nos réunions, il a été question du fait qu'il y a un certain nombre de méthodes juridiques pour tourner l'antidumping.

Je me demande si M. Hehner pourrait nous en dire davantage sur les mesures juridiques qui pourraient être prises et s'il en est question dans la nouvelle loi?

M. Hehner: J'ai assisté, non en qualité de témoin à quelques-unes de vos séances antérieures et on a parlé d'un expert anonyme; je crois même que c'est à moi qu'on faisait allusion. Je crois que j'ai aussi entendu M. Labarge et M. Hind, lorsqu'on leur a demandé s'il y avait des moyens et qu'ils ont répondu que leurs fonctions ne leur permettaient pas d'en parler publiquement.

Je comprends très bien l'attitude de M. Hind. Je ne sais pas jusqu'à quel point nous devrions faire de la publicité à ces moyens, à ce moment-ci. Mais, vous avez posé une question très juste, et il faut y répondre. Je dirai: oui. À l'heure actuelle, il y a de nombreuses façons très faciles de mettre sur pied une affaire qui permette de faire du dumping au Canada. Cela se fait de façon parfaitement légale, en passant par les voies appropriées pour votre commerce. Franchement, les seules personnes qui doivent payer les taxes contre le dumping sont celles qui sont trop paresseuses pour ne pas organiser leurs transactions pour tourner nos lois.

Cette loi est pleine de lacunes et d'ailleurs c'est la raison pour laquelle l'industrie, dans son mémoire, a déclaré que nous pensions que la loi, si elle était administrée vigoureusement, pourrait nous permettre de donner effective protection against dumping than our existing law does. This, again, depends entirely on administration.

[Texte]

After this preamble, if you want a dozen ways of legally dumping I can give them to you. Suppose I just give you one—

• 1605

Mr. Gillespie: I think probably you have answered my question by saying that the draft Bill, given your conditions of speedy and effective administration, will be a very much better law than the existing one from the point of view of the imaginative people circumventing anti-dumping regulations.

Mr. Hehner: May I say, sir, in conclusion on this point that as one who knows a large number of ways of legally beating the present legislation, I believe that the proposed draft Bill has given sufficient powers to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue to look through the form of a transaction and to find its reality and that these provisions will enable the administration to deal with all of the situations that until now, they have been unable to deal with.

Mr. Gillespie: Thank you.

Le président: Est-ce que M. Émard avait terminé ses questions?

M. Émard: J'avais terminé mais j'ai une autre question. J'aimerais que M. Hehner nous donne un exemple de la manière de circonvenir la loi.

Mr. Hehner: All right, sir, I will give you one example. I think this is a rather good one because not only is it a bit startling, but I have higher authority than myself for saying that it can be done.

Perhaps, Mr. Émard, you and I might go into business and even make a fair bit of money in this next month until the new legislation comes into effect.

I am afraid I must get technical for a moment to explain this wide-open way of beating the law. This is just one of many.

At the present time the section imposing dumping duties is section 6, of the Customs Tariff Act and it sets up two conditions before dumping duties can be imposed. The words are:

In the case of goods exported to Canada of a class or kind made or produced in Canada, if the export or actual selling une protection plus juste, plus efficace et plus valable contre le dumping. Je répète que cela dépend de l'administration.

[Interprétation]

Après ce préambule, si vous le voulez je puis vous donner douze méthodes de faire du dumping de façon légale. Disons que je vous en donne une...

M. Gillespie: Je crois que vous avez répondu à ma question en disant que le projet de bill, en tenant compte de l'objectif, c'est-à-dire une application antidumping efficace, nous donnerait une meilleure protection que l'ancienne loi contre les personnes qui peuvent tourner les lois antidumping.

M. Hehner: Pour terminer ce point donc, je dirai que je suis de ceux qui connaissent de nombreuses méthodes pour tourner la loi actuelle et je crois personnellement que le libellé actuel du projet du bill donne suffisamment de pouvoirs au sous-ministre du Revenu national et lui permettra de bien examiner la forme d'une transaction et de voir ce qu'elle signifie exactement. Ainsi, ces dispositions permettront à l'administration de régler l'ensemble de la situation, ce qu'elle n'a pu faire jusqu'ici.

M. Gillespie: Merci.

The Chairman: Was Mr. Émard through with his questions?

Mr. Émard: Yes, I was, but I have another question. I would like Mr. Hehner to give us an example of how to circumvent the law.

M. Hehner: Très bien monsieur, je vais vous donner un exemple. Je crois que c'est un bon exemple, non seulement parce qu'il est surprenant, mais il existe des autorités plus compétentes que moi qui déclarent qu'on peut le faire.

Monsieur Émard, nous pourrions entrer en affaires et nous faire pas mal d'argent avant que la loi n'entre en vigueur. Il va falloir que je sois assez technique pour vous expliquer cette façon parfaitement ouverte de tourner la loi. Ce n'est là qu'un exemple parmi plusieurs.

À l'heure actuelle, l'article imposant des droits de dumping est l'article 6 du tarif douanier et il fixe deux conditions avant d'imposer des droits de dumping. Le libellé est le suivant:

«Dans le cas de biens exportés au Canada d'une catégorie et d'une classe, produits ou fabriqués Canada, si l'exporprice to an importer in Canada is less than the fair market value...

[Text]

[Interpretation]

tation ou le prix de vente à un importateur au Canada est inférieur à la valeur moyenne du marché...

Then it goes on to say that there shall be dumping duties imposed. One of these two conditions is that goods are of a class or kind made in Canada. The other condition is that the export or actual selling price to an importer in Canada is less than the fair market value. There happens to be a definition in subsection (4) of section 6 and it defines the words "export price" or "selling price" as follows:

...means the exporter's price for the goods...

If you take the words of this definition and put them back into the first section, one of the conditions before you can have dumping duties would be that there must be an exporter's price to an importer in Canada which is less than fair market value. Let me now just take those words and tell you what can happen.

Mr. Émard, suppose you and I go into partnership sometime within the next month and we go to some firm, let us say, in Japan that wants to dump goods into Canada to some large retail store. Let us suppose that the fair market value of these goods has been ascertained to be $100 there is no argument about that. Everybody admits that this amount has been agreed upon.

The Japanese want to sell these goods to a Canadian store for a price of $70 which is obviously a dumping price as it is much below the price at which they sell them in Japan.

Et la loi continue en disant: Il y aura des droits de dumping qui seront imposés

Il faut d'abord que le produit soit fabriqué au Canada. Autre condition: l'exportation ou le prix de vente à un importateur au Canada doit être inférieur à la valeur normale du marché. Il se trouve qu'il y a une définition à l'alinéa 4, de l'article 6, il y définit le mot:

prix d'exportation ou prix de vente. Cela signifie le prix de l'exportateur pour la marchandise japonaise, par exemple, qui veut faire du dumping au Canada à un détaillant important. Supposons que la valeur moyenne du marché de cette marchandise soit de $100. Disons que tout le monde soit d'accord si le prix est de $100.

Donc ces Japonais veulent vendre cette marchandise à $70 au Canada. Manifestement, c'est un prix de dumping car il est très inférieur au prix de vente du Japon.

Si vous prenez les termes de cette définition et si nous les remettons dans le texte du premier article, une des conditions avant de pouvoir imposer des droits de dumping est qu'il doit y avoir un prix de l'exportateur à un importateur au Canada qui soit inférieur au prix normal du marché. Maintenant, en revenant sur cette définition, je vais vous dire ce qui peut se produire.

M. Émard, supposons que nous nous associons au cours du mois, adressons-nous à une société.

Nous dirons à la firme japonaise qui n'a aucun rapport avec nous—c'est une firme indépendante—vous nous vendez les marchandises, à M. Émard et à M. Hehner à $68. Nous vendrons les marchandises à l'organisation détaillante au Canada à $70 et nous ne toucherons jamais ces marchandises. Nous dirons à la société japonaise d'envoyer directement les marchandises au détaillant canadien. La note sera envoyée à nous pour $68 et nous ferons payer $70 au magasin de

We would tell the Japanese firm—it is not related to us it is an independent firm—you sell the goods to us—to Mr. Émard and Mr. Hehner—for $68. We would sell the goods to this Canadian retail organization for $70 and we would never handle the goods, sir. We would then tell this firm in Japan to ship the goods direct from Japan to the retail store in Canada and to bill us for the goods for $68 while we would charge the store in Canada

[Texte]

$70. We would make $2.00 on the transaction and we would have done no work. All we would have done was to write two letters.

• 1610

I am telling you, sir, that under those circumstances and under our present law you cannot charge dumping duties. The Canadian retail store would get the goods at a dumped price and dumping duties could not be charged because the exporter would be the firm in Japan and the importer would be the retail store in Canada. The goods would be shipped direct. The retail store would import them. You and I would not.

There would be no exporter's price to the Canadian importer. The exporter's price would be to you and me. Since the law says that there must be an exporter's price to the Canadian importer which is less than fair market value before dumping duties can be imposed we would have just arranged a transaction where there would have been no such thing.

This sounds a bit extreme and I must admit that it sounds a bit like Santa Claus, it is so absurd, but this is just one of a dozen different ways—actually more than a dozen, that is a nice round number—of getting around the law.

I have in front of me a decision by Mr. Justice Jaccett, the President of the Exchequer Court of Canada, delivered from the bench on June 2, 1967.

If you wish I could open up the appropriate part of the judgment and quote you Mr. Jaccett's words to show that what I have just told you is exactly correct and that under such circumstances you can never charge dumping duties. This is an example that you asked for, sir.

Mr. Emard: Thank you very much.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Roberts, I hope we are not going to ask for any more examples because Mr. Hehner said that under the new law this will be harder to do. Remember it takes more than a month to organize a company and so...

Mr. Roberts: I just wanted to ask whether he can see any obvious loopholes in the draft Bill. Will all of his more than a dozen techniques be ruled out by the effective administration of the proposed Bill?

Mr. Hehner: Practically all of the ways of which I have knowledge for arranging a transaction and to dump legally—I am saying legally—there is a corresponding loophole in the law.

[Interprétation]

détail, nous gagnerons $2.00 sur la transaction car nous n'avons rien à faire, nous avons à écrire deux lettres, un point c'est tout.

Monsieur, dans ces conditions, avec les lois actuelles, il n'est pas possible d'imposer des droits de dumping. La boutique de détail canadienne reçoit cela à un prix de dumping, on ne peut pas lui imposer les prix de dumping. L'exportateur est japonais. L'importateur est la boutique canadienne, c'est la boutique qui importe, nous n'importons pas.

Il n'y a pas de prix d'exportation à l'importateur canadien, le prix de l'exportateur est le prix qu'on nous fait payer à vous et moi. Comme la loi déclare qu'il doit y avoir un prix d'exportateur à l'importateur canadien, qui doit être inférieur à la valeur moyenne du marché avant d'imposer des droits de dumping, nous avons préparé une transaction où il n'y a rien de tel.

C'est un cas extrême, ça semble être un petit peu comme le Père Noël, ça semble absurde, c'est une des douzaines de façons, il y en a plus d'une douzaine, c'est un chiffre rond.

J'ai ici une décision du juge Jaccett, président de la Cour de l'Échiquier du Canada, jugement rendu sur le banc le 2 juin 1967.

Je pourrais vous citer les passages du jugement du juge Jaccett où il est fait mention que ce que j'ai dit est exactement vrai et qu'il n'est pas possible d'imposer des droits de dumping. Voilà un exemple, vous en voulez un, vous en avez un monsieur.

M. Émard: Merci beaucoup.

Le président: Oui, monsieur Roberts, j'espère qu'on ne va pas nous demander d'autres exemples, car M. Hehner nous dit qu'avec la nouvelle loi, il sera plus difficile de faire cela et il faut plus d'un mois pour organiser une société.

M. Roberts: Je voudrais savoir si vous pensez que la nouvelle loi comporte des lacunes évidentes, il y a plus d'une douzaine de méthodes, est-ce qu'elles seront toutes éliminées par cette nouvelle loi?

M. Hehner: Aucune des méthodes, pardon monsieur, je vais modifier ma déclaration. En pratique, la plupart des méthodes que je connais maintenant pour organiser des transactions et pour faire du dumping légal, je dis légalement car il y a une lacune, sont éliminées,

[Text]

However, I think practically all of those ways have been closed up. There are a couple of ways still left that have not been closed up but we have drawn attention to those in our brief and I think we will be coming to them as we move along.

Mr. Roberts: Thank you very much.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, are there any more questions?

Le président: Oui, monsieur Trudel.

M. Trudel: Ma question s'adresse à M. Demers, monsieur le président. L'impression qui se dégage de ce qu'a dit M. Demers est qu'il semble croire, et je veux qu'il me corrige si je fais erreur, que dans la loi, telle que présentée par nous, il y a quelque chose qui irait à l'encontre de l'intérêt du travailleur de l'industrie du textile. Est-ce exact?

Si tel est le cas, j'aimerais bien qu'il nous fasse savoir où, dans cette loi que nous étudions présentement, il est fait mention de quoi que ce soit qui pourrait être au détriment et du travailleur et de l'industrie du textile?

Mr. Demers: No, it was not, and perhaps it was best answered by Mr. Hehner when he said the new legislation will close up a lot of the loopholes. But I am as concerned as you are about the one or two that remain that could be damaging and I would hope that they would be exposed before the meeting comes to an end this afternoon.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, are we through?

Mr. Trudel: I have another question, Mr. Chairman, and this one I would like to direct to Mr. Hehner. He made reference this morning to the industry in general and to the difference between a healthy and unhealthy one and that the Tribunal would be ruling or taking into consideration the state of the industry or a particular manufacturer. Did I get that inference correctly, Mr. Hehner?

Mr. Hehner: I think, sir, I drew attention to the function of the tribunal in determining what is injury and I really asked, as a question, whether the Tribunal was to take into account the general healthiness of the industry or not. This was put as a question.

• 1615

I may say, sir, the reason I put the question was that at one time a statement was made—I can actually tell you the date, it was made on July 18, 1967—at a public meeting.

[Interpretation]

Il reste encore quelques possibilités qui n'ont pas été éliminées, nous avons attiré l'attention là-dessus dans notre mémoire et nous étudierons ces possibilités plus tard.

M. Robert: Merci beaucoup.

Le président: D'autres questions, messieurs?

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Trudel.

Mr. Trudel: My question is addressed to Mr. Demers, Mr. Chairman. The impression left by what Mr. Demers has said is that he seems to believe, and I stand to be corrected, that there is something in the Bill, as submitted by us, which is contrary to the interest of the textile industry worker. Is this so?

If this is the case, I should like to have him point out to us where, in this Bill we shall now be studying, anything is mentioned which might be detrimental to both the worker and the textile industry?

M. Demers: Non, tel n'est pas le cas. La meilleure réponse a été faite par M. Hehner, qui a dit que la nouvelle mesure législative éliminera beaucoup de lacune. Je m'inquiète autant que vous qu'un ou deux éléments qui demeurent pourraient être dommageables et j'espère qu'on les découvrira avant la fin de la réunion de cet après-midi.

Le président: Messieurs, avons-nous terminé. Monsieur Trudel?

M. Trudel: J'ai une autre question que je voudrais poser à M. Hehner. Il a mentionné ce matin l'industrie en général et il a fait une distinction entre une industrie saine et une autre qui ne l'est pas et que le Tribunal statuerait ou prendrait en considération la condition dans laquelle se trouve l'industrie ou un fabricant en particulier. Ai-je bien compris, monsieur Hehner?

M. Hehner: Je crois, monsieur, que j'ai attiré votre attention sur les fonctions du tribunal qui détermine ce qui est mauvais et ce qui est bon. J'ai posé la question de savoir si le tribunal devait tenir compte de la santé général de l'industrie ou non, voilà la question que je posais.

Je dois dire, monsieur, que la raison pour laquelle j'ai posé la question est la suivante: à un certain moment, une déclaration a été faite, je pourrais vous donner la date, la déclaration a été faite le 18 juillet 1967, à une réunion publique.

[Texte]

The significance of this date is that it was on June 30 or July 1, 1967 that the text of the international Code was made public. Shortly thereafter a meeting was arranged by the government departments concerned to explain to a Canadian industry the implications of the new Code.

May I be permitted to interrupt my comments at this time to say we have found that the steps taken by the government departments, in particular the Department of Finance, to make sure that Canadian industry has been kept well informed at every stage and to give an opportunity for making representations, have been exceedingly helpful and we have nothing but praise for the way in which the Department of Finance has approached this problem.

However, at this public meeting on July 18—I say public as anybody who was interested was invited to attend.

When we were discussing this question of determination of injury, the statement was made—I will read from notes that I took on that day at the time of the question: "It was a case of has an injury been caused. This cannot be equated with the health of an industry. That is irrelevant. The question is solely, is dumping causing injury and this should be decided on its merits whether the industry is healthy or otherwise."

In other words, the fact that an industry is healthy does not mean that it should be subjected to the discriminatory price practices of dumping. We noted that point very carefully at the time and I might say took considerable relief from it. However, at subsequent dates suggestions have been made quite to the contrary, again in discussion. It was for that reason that we made the comment in our statement. We were asking if this was correct.

We thought the point should be brought out so that the members of the Committee would have an understanding of whether this injury Tribunal is going to look solely at the question of whether dumping is causing injury or whether it is expected to go further and say: "Well, he can afford to be injured; he is a nice strong man."

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Mr. Chairman, may I ask if there is any particular country that is causing more trouble with dumping than any other country?

[Interprétation]

Ce qui est important, c'est que c'était le 1<sup>er</sup> juillet 1967 que le texte du code international a été rendu public, le 30 juin ou le 1<sup>er</sup> juillet. Très peu de temps après, une réunion a été organisée par les services du gouvernement, qui étaient intéressés, pour expliquer à l'industrie canadienne les implications du nouveau code.

Que l'on me permette d'arrêter ici pour dire que nous avons constaté que les mesures prises par les services du gouvernement, en particulier le ministère des Finances, pour s'assurer que l'industrie canadienne était bien informée à toutes les étapes et pour lui donner la possibilité de faire des représentations, ont été excellentes et nous ne pouvons que nous féliciter de la façon dont le ministère des Finances a réglé ce problème.

Mais lors de cette réunion du 18 juillet, qui a été une réunion publique, n'importe qui pouvait y assister, toutes les parties intéressées pouvaient y venir.

Lorsque nous avons discuté la question de la détermination des faits dommageables pour l'industrie, il a été dit et je lis les notes que j'ai prises, dans une déclaration qui a été faite que lorsque des dommages ont été occasionnés, cela n'a aucun rapport avec l'état de toute l'industrie, cela n'est pas pertinent. Il ne s'agit de juger du dumping que sur les faits, que l'industrie soit saine ou non. En d'autres mots, le fait que l'industrie est saine ne signifie pas qu'elle doit être soumise au prix discriminatoire et au dumping. Nous avons évalué cela très longtemps et cela nous a beaucoup soulagés.

Cependant, ultérieurement, on a dit, on a fait des déclarations assez contraires, c'est pourquoi nous avons déclaré nous-mêmes, nous avons demandé si cela était correct.

Nous avons voulu présenter cela aux membres du Comité et nous voulons qu'ils comprennent que ce tribunal qui examinera les dommages, ne le fera que dans les cas de dumping ou, si de temps à autre, il dira: eh bien, un tel peut très bien subir des dommages puisqu'il est solide, sain.

M. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Je voudrais savoir s'il y a des pays particuliers qui font plus de dumping que d'autres?

[Text]

M. Hehner: I do not think so, sir. The United States is, of course, still our greatest trading partner and, for that reason, there is a great deal of dumping from the United States because of the fact of geography and the facts of the comparatively common tastes of our two peoples. Canadians see the same advertising in our newspapers, our publications, over the TV, of the same types of goods that are used in the United States, and you can get over-night delivery, let us say, from New York to Montreal.

When a firm is running off a million yards of a product it is so easy, to run off another 50,000 yards for the Canadian market and to say: "Here it is; anything we can get over the bare cost of production is sheer gravy for us."

The United States has been a major source of dumping merely because of the accidents of geography and common tastes. Dumping however, occurs regularly from practically all of the countries.

It is a general fact of life in the textile industry all over the world that you try to get extra volume and then sell the goods in a market other than your home market so you will not break your own home market price and sell it off for anything that will contribute partially towards your overhead.

• 1620

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): One of the characteristics of the textile industry is that you are grappling with the problem of style at all times. It is customary to unload goods that are out of style or that are moving slowly on the market within your own market or perhaps on somebody else's market, if you can.

This is a legitimate method of doing business in the textile and clothing industry, is it not?

How do you differentiate between the legitimate selling of out-of-style merchandise and dumping of new merchandise or a new line? How is the Tribunal going to differentiate between these?

Mr. Hehner: I am delighted that you brought that point up, sir. I am really delighted because I can not only answer it, but it leads me into one other point as well.

In the first place, of course, it will not be the Tribunal that will be deciding whether that is dumping or whether it is just legitimate cutting of prices as you come to the end of the season. The customs and Excise Division will deal with that.

[Interpretation]

M. Hehner: Je ne crois pas monsieur. Les États-Unis sont toujours notre plus grand partenaire commercial. C'est pour cette raison, plus que n'importe quelle autre, qu'il y a beaucoup de dumping des États-Unis en raison des réalités géographiques et, les goûts communs de nos peuples font que les Canadiens voient la même publicité dans les journaux ou même à la télévision des produits utilisés aux États-Unis.

De plus, on peut avoir des livraisons dans la nuit de New York à Montréal et il est très facile, lorsqu'une société fabrique des millions de verges d'un produit d'en fabriquer 50,000 pour les Canadiens et tout ce qu'on peut obtenir en dehors du prix de production est vraiment bon à prendre.

Donc les États Unis ont fait du dumping au maximum en raison des goûts communs et des réalités géographiques, mais tous les pays au monde pratiquement font du dumping.

C'est une réalité dans l'industrie textile du monde entier. On essaye de fabriquer un certain produit. Vous vendez le produit à n'importe quel prix qui vous permettra d'assurer vos frais généraux une fois que vous aurez fourni le marché intérieur.

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Il y a une question de style n'est-ce pas? Il est très facile de se débarrasser des produits démodés ou des produits qui se vendent mal et il est possible de le faire sur son propre marché ou sur le marché de quelqu'un d'autre s'il y a un moyen de le faire.

C'est une méthode légitime de commerce dans l'industrie du textile.

Comment pouvons-nous établir une différence entre un solde légitime de marchandises démodées et le dumping de marchandises nouvelles ou de nouvelle série? Comment le tribunal pourrait-il établir la différence entre les deux?

M. Hehner: Je suis vraiment ravi que vous ayez posé cette question, car je peux y répondre facilement et cela me permettra d'aborder un autre point.

En premier lieu, le tribunal n'aura pas à se prononcer sur la question de savoir s'il s'agit de dumping ou d'une réduction légitime du prix à l'approche de la fin de sa saison—ce sera le travail de la direction des accises.

[Texte]

I think the criterion as to whether or not it is dumping is very simple. Are you doing this in your home market? The question of dumping, of course, is relating the export price to Canada to your home market prices. The type of dumping I have been talking about has been where goods have been sold in Canada at lower prices than they are being sold in the home market.

The problem created by end-of-the-season runs is another problem which is not, strictly speaking, dumping at all; it is another real problem. However, this point that you have drawn to our attention of seasonal goods, perhaps heightens the subject.

We were discussing this morning of the need for an active participation by the Customs and Excise Division in administration, of their own volition, and not merely on complaint.

You could have goods coming into Canada for a long time without the Canadian industry knowing that they are being imported.

The Canadian industry does not have access to documents of imports made by others. Suppose you do have seasonal merchandise, let us say, blankets which are sold in the autumn and early winter season. Blankets could be imported for a period of several months with the Canadian blanket manufacturers having no way of knowing that they are being imported other than rumour.

These blankets are kept in warehouses by wholesale distributors or by retail organizations for a period of two or three months. They build up their inventory so they will have their stock when it comes time to advertise it for the winter season.

By the time the Canadian manufacturers go to the stores and say: "Where are your orders for the blankets?" and they say: "Well, we are putting them off a little; we think that the season is going to be delayed this year—it is a warm autumn" or any other excuse you want.

When you realize you are not getting your orders and when they come on the market and you find they are there, you can complain all you want but your whole season's business is gone. Those goods were probably imported for enough back so that by the time you do complain the Customs and Excise Division

[Interprétation]

Je pense que le critère pour établir s'il y a du dumping ou non est très simple. Est-ce que vous faites ça sur votre marché intérieur? Pour savoir s'il y a du dumping il faut établir une relation entre le prix d'exportation au Canada et le prix sur le marché domestique. Le genre de dumping auquel je faisais allusion est celui qui fait que des produits sont vendus au Canada à un prix inférieur au prix du marché intérieur.

Le problème occasionné par les prix de fin de saison est un autre problème qui n'est pas du tout du dumping. C'est un autre problème important. Cependant, le point sur lequel vous voulez attirer notre attention touche le sujet que nous avons discuté ce matin à savoir le besoin d'avoir une participation active de la part de la Division des douanes, à l'administration du programme.

Cette division pourrait agir d'elle-même, et non à la suite de plaintes. Le problème est le suivant: il peut y avoir des entrées de marchandise au Canada pendant fort longtemps sans que l'industrie canadienne n'ait connaissance de ces importations.

Les producteurs canadiens ne peuvent pas consulter les documents qui indiquent quels sont les produits importés par les autres. Donc, en supposant que des marchandises saisonnières—par exemple des couvertures—soient mises en vente l'automne ou au début de l'hiver, il est possible que des couvertures soient importées pendant plusieurs mois pendant que les fabricants canadiens de couvertures ne peuvent connaître l'existence de ces importations si ce n'est pas les rumeurs qui circulent.

Ces couvertures sont conservées dans des entrepôts soit par des entreprises de détail, soit par des grossistes pendant deux ou trois mois. Ils s'établissent un stock qui sera disponible lorsque le temps de la publicité pour la saison d'hiver sera venu.

Lorsque les producteurs Canadiens se présentent dans les magasins pour offrir leurs produits, on leur répond: «Nous pensons que la saison sera retardée, ou bien nous ne sommes pas pressés, le temps est beau...». On trouve une excuse, n'importe laquelle et cela ne vous procure pas de commandes. Et puis, ce n'est qu'au moment où les couvertures sont vendues sur le marché, que vous êtes en mesure de juger la situation.

Mais alors, vous pouvez vous plaindre tant que vous voulez, il n'en demeure pas moins que toute votre saison est gâchée. De plus, ces marchandises ont pu être importées suffisamment longtemps à l'avance pour qu'au moment de la plainte la Division des douanes ne puisse que vous dire: «désolés, il would have to merely look at it and say: "Sorry, this is time outlawed, we cannot be retroactive."

[Text]

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): All of the commodities you are dealing with are not as staple as blankets, though. Many of them are ones that are involved in a style cycle and these cycles can be quite different in different countries or different parts of a country. How can this be handled under this kind of Tribunal arrangement?

Mr. Hehner: I do not think it can be, sir. I do not want to jump ahead out of sequence, but may I say that this has been dealt with in the past under the existing dumping duty provisions. I would say that the existing dumping duty provisions have been somewhat misused in the sense that they were used to deal with a situation that, strictly speaking, was not dumping. You will find some consequential amendments to the Customs Act, of course, are proposed and are tabled in the White Paper on the last pages.

• 1625

These, among other things, provide a mechanism for dealing with goods that are being imported into Canada. I am quoting from page 96:

...under such conditions as to cause or threaten serious injury to Canadian producers...

—When they are not dumped goods.

If, for example, you have a problem of the end of the season, or a problem of advance of the season—textiles and fruits and vegetables, I suppose, could be put in the same category as the growing season starts a little earlier in the United States. Just as the growing season is starting in Canada, they come into over-production, let us say, of tomatoes, or you name it. They sell them off in Canada at low prices but not lower than the prices in their home market. Now, this is not dumping. That has been dealt with in the past by fixed values.

The same thing can exist in the textile industry because of problems of climate—the season is further advanced further south. This same problem would have to be dealt with by these other provisions and not dealt with as dumping.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, I have a short question. Mr. Hehner, it would appear that we have come back to the administration of this proposed legislation again. Mr. Hind, I am sure, could tell us how they operate now, but I am sure they do not just wait for comest trop tard, il y a prescription et nous ne pouvons pas agir de façon rétroactive.

[Interpretation]

M. Howard: Toutes les denrées dont vous vous occupez ne sont pas aussi stables que les couvertures. Il y a aussi la mode dont le style peut changer selon le pays et selon les régions du pays. Comment peut-on régler cela au tribunal?

M. Hehner: Monsieur, je ne crois pas qu'on puisse faire grand chose. Je ne veux pas aller trop vite mais je veux dire que la question a été réglée par le passé grâce aux dispositions de droits de dumping. Je dis que ces dispositions ont été mal utilisées car elles ont été utilisées pour régler une situation qui en fait n'était pas une situation de dumping. Nous proposons des modifications importantes à la loi sur les douanes aux dernières pages du Livre blanc.

Entre autre chose, nous prévoyons un mécanisme pour les marchandises importées au Canada—je cite la page 96—dans des conditions où elles causent ou menacent de causer un préjudice grave à des producteurs canadiens lorsqu'il ne s'agit pas de marchandises importées en dumping.

Alors, lorsqu'il y a des problèmes de fin de saison, ou encore des problèmes relatifs à une saison qui commence avant son temps normal—et ici le textile et les fruits et légumes peuvent être mis dans le même panier en fait, car la saison commence un peu plus tôt aux États-Unis et lorsque la saison démarre au Canada, ils en sont arrivés à la sur-production pour les tomates et les autres produits. Ces produits sont alors vendus au Canada à bon marché mais pas meilleur marché qu'aux États-Unis: Cela ne constitue pas du dumping.

La même situation peut exister dans l'industrie du textile, où, en raison du climat—la saison est plus avancée dans le Sud des États-Unis—et ce problème doit être réglé à l'aide de ces dispositions et non par la loi antidumping.

M. Hales: Une question rapide. Je voudrais demander à M. Hehner—il semblerait que nous en sommes revenus à l'administration de ce projet de loi et M. Hind nous dira certainement comment la loi est présentement appliquée. Je pense qu'on n'attend pas plaints to be made. Does the Department not do a lot of investigating on their own rather than wait for complaints? What will be their reaction in the future in this regard?

[Texte]

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Hales is quite right. We do initiate a great many investigations on our own, that is, without formal complaints from Canadian producers. We intend to continue to follow this practice.

Indeed, we have standing instructions before all our customs ports in Canada—that means over 400 points of entry in Canada—instructing the customs officers to submit immediately to us in Ottawa copies of invoices and entries covering all importations of named sensitive goods. Included in this list are many articles in the textile field.

So, if our officers are doing a good job in the field, they are, each day, sending to us copies of all invoices and entries covering importations of these named goods. On the strength of that, we analyse these documents. If we feel that a dumping investigation is called for, we go ahead at the present time and we will continue to go ahead in the future.

Mr. Trudel: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct this question to Mr. Hehner. It is an expression of an opinion that I would like. Mr. Hehner. Is it possible that dumping could happen in the textile industry without being injurious to the manufacturing trades?

Mr. Hehner: Yes, I can think of many circumstances under which that could happen.

Mr. Trudel: You have stated that at least the Department would have to prove or police the industry regarding dumping. We have noticed so far, that all the other industries have mentioned they do a lot of policing themselves within their own industries and have found this is still the best way of detecting any dumping that has taken place in the past. Regardless of how many civilian employees we could have on this, we could not be as fast as the industry itself.

Mr. Hehner: That is quite true, sir. The textile industry has also done that regularly. We are continually drawing to the attention of the Customs and Excise Division, cases of suspected dumping, as other industries have done. For all I know, we may even have been more active than some of the others and we will continue to do so. The only point I would make—I am back to this again—is that there has been a very heavy burden placed upon que des plaintes soient déposées. Est-ce que vous ne vous renseignez pas vous-mêmes? Ne menez-vous pas des enquêtes sans attendre que des plaintes soient déposées? À l'avenir quelle sera votre attitude à cet égard?

[Interprétation]

M. Hind: M. Hales a tout à fait raison. Nous entreprenons un grand nombre d'enquêtes sans attendre qu'il y ait de plainte officielle des producteurs canadiens. Nous avons l'intention de continuer cette pratique.

Au fait nous avons des instructions permanentes devant tous les tribunaux des douanes au Canada—ce qui veut dire plus de 400 ports d'entrée au Canada—ordonnant aux officiers de douane de nous soumettre immédiatement, à Ottawa, des exemplaires des bordereaux et des documents d'entrée d'importation, de toute une catégorie de marchandises particulières que nous énumérons et en particulier plusieurs articles de produits textiles.

Nos fonctionnaires font du bon travail sur place, chaque jour ils nous font parvenir copie de tous les bordereaux d'expédition et d'entrée de ces articles. Nous analysons cette documentation et si nous estimons qu'une enquête doit avoir lieu sur des pratiques de dumping nous amorçons cette enquête et nous comptons continuer à le faire à l'avenir.

M. Trudel: Monsieur le président, j'aimerais poser cette question à M. Hehner. Est-ce qu'il peut y avoir du dumping dans l'industrie du textile sans que cela nuise au commerce ou aux fabricants.

M. Hehner: Oui, dans bien des circonstances cela pourrait se produire.

M. Trudel: Deuxième partie de ma question. Vous avez dit que les ministères devraient policer ou surveiller l'industrie au sujet du dumping. Nous avons constaté jusqu'ici que toutes les autres industries ont mentionné qu'elles surveillent étroitement leur propre industrie et estiment que c'est encore la meilleure façon de repérer les pratiques du dumping. Peu importe le nombre de fonctionnaires que nous pourrions affecter à ce projet, nous ne saurions aller aussi vite que l'industrie elle-même.

M. Hehner: C'est tout à fait vrai, monsieur. L'industrie textile a également fait cela régulièrement. Nous continuons à signaler à la Division des douanes les cas présumés de dumping. De fait, nous avons peut-être été plus actifs que certaines autres industries. Mais je reviens à un point antérieur. Un fardeau très considérable reposera sur les épaules de la Division des douanes par suite de l'adoption de cette mesure législative.

[Text]

the Customs and Excise Division by this new legislation. I do not back away from a word I said earlier this morning.

I do think there may have been too much emphasis placed upon delays in customs administration for the reason that in the past, with no restrictions on retroactivity, the Customs and Excise Division could afford to take time when it had ascertained all of the facts to go back and, as Mr. Hind has pointed out, they have regularly advised importers that cases were under investigation and they might be called upon to pay additional duties if it were found that the goods were undervalued. That was in the past, sir.

• 1630

The burden that is being placed on the Customs division by this new legislation is a burden of an entirely different type because their powers of retroactivity have largely been taken away from them. I do not think it should necessarily be taken as criticism of the customs administration in the past if it is mentioned that their systems have been geared to operating more slowly because in the past there was an ability to go back.

What we have been emphasizing, and I am sure Mr. Hind recognizes it perfectly, in fact, I think he has said many times he does recognize it, is that in the future the Customs and Excise Division is going to have to gear its operations to a new type of law and the way they have operated in the past will not be adequate in the future because the law will have been changed.

Mr. Hales: It is right that an assessor cannot even go back to the first dump?

Mr. Hehner: Unless you are in the area of massive dumping where they are given the power to go back 90 days, they have no powers of retroactivity under the proposed legislation. In fact, unless they apply provisional duties at the time of importation they cannot go back.

Suppose that of his own volition or on a complaint, the Deputy Minister were to find a case of alleged injurious dumping that looked adequately enough documented to justify an investigation. If those goods have already entered Canada and provisional duties were not applied to them at the time of import he can conduct all the investigations he wants; he can conclude them within 90 days; he can find that the goods were dumped and the Tribunal can find that injury was caused, but they can only in the future deal without delay with any further dumped imports of the same

[Interpretation]

Je pense qu'on a peut-être trop mis d'accent sur certains délais au sein de la Division des douanes. Dans le passé sans aucune restriction sur la rétroactivité, la Division des douanes pouvait prendre tout son temps, vérifier tous les faits, et revenir en arrière. Régulièrement, on a fait savoir aux importateurs que certaines causes étaient à l'étude et qu'ils devraient peut-être verser des droits additionnels, si les plaintes étaient justifiées.

Maintenant, en raison de la nouvelle loi, c'est une figure tout à fait différente car le pouvoir de rétroactivité n'existe plus en grande partie. Le système a été changé. Dans le passé, la Division des douanes, naturellement, fonctionnait plus lentement; on pouvait revenir en arrière.

Ce que nous signalons, et je suis sûr que M. Hind reconnaît le bien-fondé de cette assertion, c'est qu'à l'avenir, la Division des douanes devra adapter ses services à un nouveau genre de loi. Ce qu'elle faisait dans le passé ne suffira plus pour l'avenir, car la loi a été changée.

M. Hales: Est-ce qu'on pourrait revenir même jusqu'à la première pratique de dumping?

M. Hehner: A moins qu'il s'agisse de dumping massif, alors qu'on permet à la Division de revenir en arrière 90 jours, la Division n'aura plus de pouvoir de rétroactivité en vertu du projet de loi. De fait, à moins qu'on applique des douanes provisoires au moment de l'importation, on ne peut pas revenir en arrière.

Supposons que le sous-ministre, de son propre chef, ou par suite d'un grief, trouve qu'il y a eu du dumping injurieux et qu'il y a suffisamment de documentation pour une enquête. Si ces biens sont déjà entrés au Canada, et si des douanes provisoires n'ont pas été appliquées au moment de l'entrée, il peut faire toutes les enquêtes qu'il veut. Il peut les terminer en l'espace de 90 jours; il peut constater qu'il y a eu dumping et le tribunal peut trouver qu'il y a eu des torts. A l'avenir, on peut par conséquent empêcher tout autre dumping de ce même genre de kind of goods. But unless they put provisional duties on those goods at the time they were entered, they cannot go back and deal with the case that provoked the enquiry. This, at any rate, is how we understand the legislation.

[Texte]

The Chairman: Are there any questions, gentlemen, on paragraphs 14 to 18? I do not want to seem to press the matter, but we have other witnesses to hear today. I would appreciate shorter questions and, I do not want to appear rude, also shorter replies.

Mr. Hehner: I am sorry.

The Chairman: I do not want to be rude.

Paragraphs 19 to 24 of the brief deal with clause 10 of the White Paper. I now will give the floor to Mr. Saltsman.

Mr. Saltsman: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

We have had some statements about the loopholes in the existing legislation and I would like to ask Mr. Hehner whether he made these suggested changes in paragraphs 21 and 23 as a way of perhaps closing what he sees might be some loopholes in the proposed legislation?

Mr. Hehner: Yes, sir.

Mr. Saltsman: Well, that is short enough. It should please the Chairman.

The Chairman: Mr. Saltsman, I do not want to give you a false impression. If you can stand more hours, I will, too.

Mr. Saltsman: This then is going to become an endurance test, Mr. Chairman, is it?

I wonder if I could I refer the suggestions made in this brief to the Departmental officials for their comments.

The Chairman: Mr. Arthur or Mr. Hind?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, on paragraph 21 of the brief, page 8, the point raised, as I understand it, is to change the words "affecting the price" to "relating to the sale" of the goods. My only comment, Mr. Chairman, is that our legal adviser has suggested that in either case it would have to relate back to the transaction in one form or another and that in their view there would be little difference by this suggested amendment.

[Interprétation]

biens. A moins d'imposer des droits provisoires au moment du dumping, on ne peut pas revenir en arrière et s'occuper de la cause qui a provoqué l'enquête. C'est ainsi que nous comprenons le projet de loi.

Le président: Y a-t-il des questions sur les rubriques 14 à 18? Je ne veux pas donner l'impression de vous faire avancer trop rapidement, mais nous avons d'autres témoins à entendre aujourd'hui. Nous aimerions qu'on pose des questions plus courtes, et qu'on donne des réponses plus courtes également.

M. Hehner: Je regrette.

Le président: Je ne veux pas du tout donner l'impression de manquer de courtoisie.

Les articles 19 à 24 du mémoire traitent de l'article 10 du Livre blanc. Je donne la parole à M. Saltsman.

M. Saltsman: Merci, monsieur le président. On a parlé des échappatoires qui existent dans la loi. J'aimerais poser une question à M. Hehner et lui demander s'il apporte ces changements aux articles 21 et 23, dans le but de combler les brèches qui pourraient exister dans la loi.

M. Hehner: Oui, c'est exact.

M. Saltsman: C'est une réponse très courte qui devrait faire plaisir au président.

Le président: Monsieur Saltsman, je ne veux pas du tout donner l'impression qu'il faut y aller trop vite. Si vous voulez que nous siégeons pendant un plus grand nombre d'heures, je suis prêt à le faire.

M. Saltsman: Je me demandais si je pouvais déférer la proposition présentée dans le mémoire, aux fonctionnaires du ministère?

Le président: M. Arthur ou M. Hind?

M. Arthur: Au sujet du paragraphe 21 du mémoire, à la page 10 de la version française, ce qu'on veut faire, si j'ai bien compris, c'est de modifier l'expression «affectant le prix» des marchandises pour l'expression «lié à la vente» des marchandises. Le seul commentaire que je puis faire, c'est que notre conseiller juridique a dit que cela devait naturellement se rattacher à la transaction d'une façon ou d'une autre, et, à son avis, il y aurait très peu de différence. Cette modification proposée n'apporterait pas grand chose de nouveau.

[Text]

[Interpretation]

• 1635

Mr. Hehner: I am not in a position, Mr. Arthur, to express a legal opinion since I am not a lawyer and I have not had an opportunity to debate this subject with the legal advisers to the Crown. However, if what you say is correct, this is, indeed, a very serious situation and one that should be dealt with by an amendment such more sweeping than the one we have proposed.

Let me be very specific and at the risk of being too verbose, sir, about this comment on a compensatory arrangement affecting the price of the goods. Under our existing law exporters and importers are required to sign certificates that say, and I will just quote from one of them:

That no arrangement or understanding affecting the purchase price of the said goods has been or will be made or entered into between the exporter and purchaser or by any one on behalf of either of them—

There is an almost identical statement signed by the exporter on his export declaration.

I have had legal advice from people whom I consider to be among the most competent lawyers in Canada in this field who have told me that any exporter who makes a compensatory arrangement with an importer can sign this statement with the most utterly complete satisfaction in his honesty. He may be morally dishonest, but legally, no.

If an invoice comes in that says the price of these goods is $100, that is the price of these goods. If at the same time he makes a compensatory arrangement that will transfer $30 back in another form, it is a compensatory arrangement, but legally, according to the advice we have been given, it has not changed the price of the goods.

The facts are there, the net cost to the importer is $70 instead of $100, but the price of the goods was $100. This, of course, makes a mockery of the entire law. As I said I have had sound advice from lawyers whose names would be known to everyone in this room that that is the legal effect. That is what we are trying to deal with. We had it in mind that if you said there was a compensatory arrangement relating to the sale of the goods it would get away from that difficulty. If you tell me it will not, then we need an even more sweeping amendment than we have proposed.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to comment on the legal advisers on either side,

M. Hehner: Je ne suis pas en mesure, monsieur Arthur, d'exposer un avis motivé, puisque, je ne suis pas avocat, et je n'ai pas eu l'occasion de débattre cette question avec les conseillers juridiques de la Couronne. Cependant, si vous avez raison, il s'agit d'une situation très sérieuse et il faudra voir une modification beaucoup plus vaste que celle que je propose.

Laissez-moi être très précis au sujet de ce commentaire sur un arrangement compensatoire affectant le prix des marchandises. En vertu des lois existantes, les exportateurs et les importateurs doivent signer des certificats qui stipulent:

prévoyant qu'aucune disposition intéressant le prix d'achat de ces produits ne sera intervenue entre l'exportateur, l'acheteur ou des mandataires.

Il y a un énoncé presque identique, signé par l'exportateur, sur sa déclaration d'exportation.

J'ai demandé des conseils aux avocats qui me semblaient être les plus compétents au Canada dans ce domaine. On m'a dit que n'importe quel exportateur qui conclut une entente compensatoire avec un importateur, peut signer cette déclaration de façon très honnête et très satisfaisante. Il peut être moralement malhonnête, mais légalement honnête.

Si un bordereau arrive et indique que le prix de ces articles est de $100, c'est le prix de ces articles. Si, en même temps, il fait un arrangement compensatoire, à savoir qu'il doit renvoyer $30 sous une autre forme, c'est un arrangement compensatoire, mais, d'après les conseils qu'on a reçus, cela n'a pas du tout changé le prix des produits.

Les faits n'en demeurent pas moins que le coût net à l'importateur est donc de $70 au lieu de $100, mais le prix des produits est de $100. C'est donc ridiculiser toute la loi. Comme je vous l'ai dit, des avocats, que vous connaissez tous, m'ont affirmé que ceci était le résultat légal. S'il y avait un arrangement compensatoire sur la vente des biens, on pourrait éliminer cette difficulté. Mais si vous dites que ce n'est pas le cas, nous avons besoin de modifications beaucoup plus précises que celles que nous proposons.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je ne désire pas faire de commentaires sur les con-but what I did say was that you had to go back to the basis of the transaction. I also would suggest, Mr. Chairman, that what we are talking about here is one side of the equation. We are talking about the export price or the importer's purchase price, whichever is the lesser, and I think under those circumstances, Mr. Chairman, that the law as it is written would take care of the situation to which Mr. Hehner relates.

[Texte]

Mr. Hehner: I will say no more, sir, except that I—

The Chairman: No, no, I did not want to give the impression that I wanted to cut off the discussion.

Mr. Hehner: Oh, no, I understand that. Again, I am not competent to enter into a legal discussion. May I say that I accept, of course, the view that Mr. Arthur has expressed as his expression of a view, but I very much doubt that that will be its legal effect.

The Chairman: My comments, Mr. Hehner, were only suggestions. I am at the disposal of the members of the Committee and the witnesses, sir. They may ask questions or make comments at any length they wish.

• 1640

Mr. Saltsman: I was just wondering whether we could have a further comment on paragraph 23 which relates directly to the problem outlined in paragraph 21 where it is suggested that an additional paragraph be added saying:

...or by reason of any other circumstance which, in the opinion of the Deputy Minister, provides an effective reduction in the sales price.

Mr. Hehner: The reason for that, Mr. Saltsman, again was a fear that after this legislation has been passed by Parliament and comes under the scrutiny of the courts in any particular case we might find a court saying that the wording of Section 10 (2) (b) (ii) says there has to be a "compensatory arrangement" before you can move further. At that stage we were doubtful about how the words "compensatory arrangement" would be construed legally.

We suggested as a catch-all, if you will, that there be an additional provision which would give the Deputy Minister power to look through the form of a transaction to find its real nature, and prevent him from being seils que donnent les avocats des côtés. Mais ce que j'ai dit, c'est qu'il faut revenir à la base même de la transaction, et je suis d'avis aussi, monsieur le président, que nous ne parlons ici que d'une partie de l'équation. Nous parlons du prix de l'exportation ou du prix d'achat de l'importateur. Je crois que dans ces circonstances, monsieur le président, la loi, dans son libellé actuel, prendrait soin de la situation qu'a soulevée M. Hehner.

[Interprétation]

M. Hehner: Je n'en dirai pas plus, sinon que...

Le président: Je ne veux pas du tout donner l'impression que je veux restreindre la discussion. Tel n'est pas le cas.

M. Hehner: Non, mais je ne suis pas compétent pour entamer une discussion sur l'aspect légal. J'accepte les vues exprimées par M. Arthur, mais je doute fort que ce soit là les effets juridiques de ces dispositions.

Le président: Mes commentaires étaient seulement des suggestions. Je suis tout à fait à la disposition des membres du comité et des témoins. Vous pouvez poser toutes les questions que vous voulez, faire toutes les observations que vous voulez faire et aussi longues que vous le voulez.

M. Saltsman.

M. Saltsman: Pourrions-nous avoir plus de précisions au sujet de la clause 23, rattachée au problème soulevé à la clause 21. Il y est suggéré d'ajouter:

«ou en raison de toute autre circonstance qui, de l'avis du sous-ministre, entraîne une réduction effective du prix de vente».

M. Hehner: La raison de cet été de choses, monsieur Saltsman, c'est qu'une fois cette mesure législative adoptée par le Parlement et en vigueur dans les tribunaux, il se peut qu'un tribunal déclare: le libellé de l'article 10, 2B (2)(b)(ii), déclare qu'il doit y avoir «arrangement compensatoire» avant que d'aller plus loin. A ces étapes-là, nous nous demandions comment l'expression «arrangement compensatoire» pourrait être interprétée légalement.

Nous avons suggéré, qu'il devrait y avoir une autre clause donnant au sous-ministre l'autorisation d'examiner à fond toute la transaction afin de la bien connaître. Cette clause empêcherait le sous-ministre d'être blocked off by some legalistic argument that it was a mere understanding, not an arrangement.

[Text]

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I imagine that Mr. Saltsman would like to know what our views are on this. I think Mr. Hehner has alluded to the fact that it may well be considered a compensatory arrangement. The other point he made was that he would like to know how the courts might interpret this. Again, this is something that all of us will have to await. As to his suggestion, it is one that we will look at and ask legal opinion on. However, I do believe that it may well fall within the meaning of "compensatory arrangement". Of course, there is provision in the Bill to obtain information which may well prove that this would fall within what might be considered a "compensatory arrangement".

Mr. Saltsman: I believe the witnesses have brought to our attention a very important and long range question affecting industry in Canada where there is United States ownership and branch plant subsidiaries. Now, this is not the first time this question has been raised. It has been raised in other contexts regarding research in other areas and now it is being raised on the question of dumping. It seems to me that the legislation will have to contain very definite measures to make sure that the intent of the anti-dumping legislation is not frustrated through these intercorporate arrangements.

I do not know at this time what suggestions I could make. It is a very difficult problem. I raise it because I feel this is a serious problem and I would like to put a question to Mr. Hind. I am just wondering whether it might be less than ridiculous to start thinking in terms of a manifest or a declaration on all sensitive imports into this country to overcome this difficulty.

It is a very real difficulty in a country like Canada and we more so than any other nation in the world suffer from this problem. Although Mr. Hind pointed out there are millions of items crossing the border every year it may become necessary to put the onus on the exporter into Canada to prove that he is not dumping, and that these goods are entering this country under the same conditions that they are being sold on the home market.

• 1645

The Chairman: Will Mr. Hind make some comment?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, we do in actual fact, at the present time, require the exporter arrêté par des sophismes juridiques, comme s'il s'agissait d'une simple entente et non pas d'un accord formel.

[Interpretation]

M. C. D. Aurihur: Je suppose que monsieur Saltsman aimerait connaître notre opinion à ce sujet. Je crois que M. Hehner a parlé de fait qu'on peut considérer cela comme un arrangement compensatoire. Il aimerait aussi savoir quelle interprétation légale les cours pourront donner de ces dispositions. Encore une fois, il va nous falloir attendre, avant de le savoir. Nous allons sûrement étudier cette proposition et demander à ce sujet des avis juridiques, mais il se peut fort bien qu'elle entre dans la catégorie des «arrangements compensatoires».

Et, bien entendu, il y a une disposition dans la Loi, nous permettant d'obtenir des renseignements qui pourront montrer que la dite proposition peut être considérée comme un «arrangement compensatoire».

M. Saltsman: Je crois, monsieur le président, que le témoin a soulevé une question très importante et à long terme intéressant l'industrie au Canada dans le cas par exemple de filiales canadiennes, de sociétés américaines. Cette question a été soulevée dans bien d'autres contextes et elle est maintenant étudiée par rapport au dumping. La Loi devra contenir des mesures précises pour s'assurer que les dispositions antidumping ne soient pas entravées par ces ententes entre compagnies.

J'ignore, pour le moment, quelle proposition faire. Je soulève ce problème car j'estime qu'il est sérieux et je me demande—et j'aimerais poser cette question à M. Hind—je me demande tout simplement s'il serait ridicule de commencer à penser à une formule de déclaration pour tous les points d'entrée au pays, afin que ces problèmes ne se présentent pas.

Nous avons beaucoup plus de difficultés que quiconque dans ce domaine au Canada, et nous en souffrons beaucoup. Et, bien que M. Hind ait signalé qu'il y a des milliers d'articles qui passent par les points d'entrée aux frontières chaque année, il faudra peut-être exiger de l'exportateur qu'il prouve qu'il ne fait pas de dumping et que ces articles entrent au Canada aux mêmes conditions que sur le marché local.

Le président: Monsieur Hind, voulez-vous faire des commentaires?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, à l'heure actuelle nous exigeons que les exportateurs to certify to the correctness of the information shown on the customs invoice. This requires him to show the proper fair market value of the goods in the country of export and the proper selling price.

[Texte]

As Mr. Hehner has just pointed out, one of the points to which the exporter certifies is that there is no arrangement or understanding affecting the purchase price of the said goods, and there will not be any arrangement or understanding affecting the purchase price unless it is brought to the attention of the customs officers.

Now, I do not exactly know what more the Department of National Revenue could ask of an exporter.

Mr. Saltsman: May I put this question to you, Mr. Hehner? Do you have any suggestions about what more they might ask?

Mr. Hehner: Yes sir, I do. May I start by coming back to this certificate on which I have made an earlier comment, and which Mr. Hind has now brought up.

I mentioned having consulted experts, and having obtained legal opinion on the phrase, "arrangement or understanding affecting the purchase price". I should have added that in addition to legal opinion there have been some court cases on that. I regret that I do not have this one with me in my bag but I think it was an Ontario Supreme Court case involving Smith Brothers Cough Drops where the Customs and Excise Division had taken action because of allowances that were made. The Court decided that these allowances did not affect the purchase price of the goods. They were a separate matter. The point that I make then, Mr. Saltsman, is simply this.

I think we are trying to achieve an objective. The objective is to prevent injurious dumping. I think the law has got to be broadly enough phrased so that you cannot escape the law merely by giving an allowance and saying, that it is a different kind of an allowance and it does not affect the purchase price of the goods.

I believe that the Customs and Excise Division has got to ask more questions than it has.

Mr. Hind has pointed out that they require at the present time a certification of fair market value. Now, I do not know what plans the Customs and Excise Division may have made for dealing with the new statute, which we presume will be in effect January 1.

But of course, we are no longer going to be dealing with fair market value. We will be dealing with fair market value for purposes of calculating the ordinary duty rates of 10 per cent or 20 per cent or whatever the statute says.

[Interprétation]

attestent l'exactitude des renseignements contenus dans le bordereau. Ils doivent indiquer la juste valeur marchande et le prix de vente.

Comme M. Hehner vient de le signaler, l'un des points que doit certifier l'exportateur, c'est qu'il n'y a pas d'entente intéressant le prix d'achat, à moins qu'on ne le signale aux préposés aux douanes.

J'ignore exactement ce que le ministère du Revenu national pourrait demander de plus à un exportateur.

M. Saltsman: Monsieur Hehner, avez-vous des suggestions à faire quant à ce qu'on pourrait demander?

M. Hehner: Sûrement. Puis-je revenir d'abord sur cette question de certificat, que j'ai mentionnée plus tôt, et que M. Hind maintenant soulève.

J'ai consulté des experts juridiques au sujet de l'expression «arrangement» affectant le prix d'achat. Il y a eu des causes présentées devant les tribunaux à ce sujet. Je regrette de ne pas avoir les dossiers, mais c'était devant la Cour Suprême de l'Ontario, une cause intéressant «Smith Brothers» fabricants de pastilles contre la toux. La Division des douanes et accises avait présenté une enquête en raison de certaines allocations qui auraient été versées. Le tribunal a déclaré que ces allocations n'avaient pas affecté le prix de vente des marchandises.

Notre objectif, c'est d'empêcher le dumping nuisible. Je crois que la Loi doit être suffisamment générale et suffisamment vaste pour qu'on ne puisse y déroger simplement en justifiant une allocation et en disant: C'est là une allocation différente qui ne modifie pas le prix de vente.

Je crois que la Division des douanes et accises doit poser plus de questions. A l'heure actuelle, il faut avoir un certificat de juste valeur marchande. J'ignore quels sont les projets de la Division des douanes et accises pour l'application de la nouvelle Loi, qui devrait devenir exécutoire le premier janvier.

Nous n'allons plus nous occuper de juste valeur marchande, ou peut-être pour calculer les taux de douanes ordinaires, de 10 et de 20 p. 100, ou quelques droits qu'impose la Loi:

[Text]

This will all still remain in effect. When you say 20 per cent of what? What is the fair market value; it was the selling price.

However, now we are introducing through this new statute entirely different concepts. Normal value and fair market value may well not be the same thing. In fact I doubt that they would be the same thing too often. Normal value is defined differently to fair market value.

Until I know what the Customs and Excise Division is planning to ask in the way of new forms and new requirements I do not know whether it will be adequate or not, but so far we have not been told that they are planning to introduce new forms. Maybe they are and we certainly welcome the information. Unless they introduce new requirements effective on January 1, they just will not be asking any questions relating to normal value.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if it would help Mr. Saltsman if I pointed out that in the proposed act the Deputy Minister is empowered to require the exporter to submit certain information to him attested under oath and in prescribed form?

Mr. Saltsman: I think that is very helpful. The question is, if the information... I think that part of it is helpful. However, we have to determine whether he is asking for sufficient information or information that will give us the knowledge we want to have about it.

• 1650

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, we are currently addressing ourselves to this very important problem, in the course of which we will design a list of points on which we require information, and we hope this list will be all-inclusive.

Mr. Saltsman: May I ask when that list will be ready for the Committee's examination?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, we will get on with this as quickly as we can, and I will undertake to table it with the Committee as soon as possible.

Mr. Saltsman: I imagine that the industry will then be able to take a look at the list and provide any comments to this Committee after seeing the list?

Mr. Hehner: Yes, I avoided your question, or at any rate did not deal specifically with it, because I was aware of clause 34, appearing

[Interpretation]

«Nous l'utiliserons encore: quand on disait: «20 p. 100 de quoi?», la juste valeur marchande, c'était le prix de vente.

Mais, maintenant, nous sommes en train de présenter un tout autre concept. Il se peut que «juste valeur marchande» ne signifie pas la même chose que «valeur normale». La «valeur normale», a, je crois, une signification tout à fait différente.

Jusqu'à ce que je connaisse les projets de la Division des douanes et accise, au point de vue nouvelles exigences, j'ignore si cela sera suffisant ou non, mais jusqu'ici, on ne nous a pas dit qu'on préparait de nouvelles formules. C'est peut-être le cas et je me réjouirais, mais, à moins qu'on impose des nouvelles exigences, il n'y aura pas de questions concernant la valeur normale.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, je me demande si cela aiderait M. Saltsman, si je signalais que, dans le projet de loi, il est stipulé que:

Le sous-ministre est autorisé à obliger l'exportateur à présenter, à lui présenter certains renseignements sous forme de déclaration assermentée.

M. Saltsman: Je crois que cette disposition est très utile, mais nous devons aussi savoir si on va demander suffisamment de renseignements ou non, renseignements qui nous permettront de savoir ce que nous voulons savoir.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, nous examinons sans cesse ce problème très important et nous allons préparer une liste de points pour lesquels nous avons besoin de renseignements. Nous espérons que cette liste sera exhaustive.

M. Saltsman: Quand cette liste sera-t-elle prête? Est-ce que le Comité pourra l'étudier?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, nous allons nous y mettre le plus rapidement possible et je vais la déposer auprès du Comité le plus tôt possible.

M. Saltsman: Je suppose que l'industrie pourra alors jeter un coup d'œil sur la liste et faire les commentaires qui s'imposent.

M. Hehner: Oui, monsieur. La raison pour laquelle j'ai contourné votre question ou pour laquelle je n'y ai pas répondu précisément, on Page 92 of the White Paper, which expresses requirements of information in a form to be prescribed by regulations, and the regulations have not been tabled yet. Therefore I did not feel that I could make any specific comments.

[Texte]

Mr. Saltsman: I have just one final question of Mr. Hehner, on paragraphs 21 and 23 of your brief. I am not sure whether you gave this information or not but I had better check on it. Have you sought legal advice on the wording, and if so, are you satisfied that the phrasing as you put it in your brief would answer the problem you are directing yourselves to?

Mr. Hehner: I regret to say, sir, we did not seek legal advice on the proposed phrase "relating to the sale" of the goods. As I have mentioned to you, we have in the past obtained legal advice on the phrase "affecting the price" of the goods, that being a phrase which now appears in the existing certification.

I think you have drawn attention to a point where we are perhaps at fault in proposing further words without having sought legal advice on them.

Mr. Saltsman: Then you know that the existing words are not quite satisfactory to you, but you are not sure whether the proposed ones will serve?

Mr. Hehner: I think that is a very fair statement.

Mr. Danson: Are we referring to the words at the bottom of paragraph 23 in this case?

Mr. Hehner: Paragraph 21, sir, of our brief, where we had suggested deleting the words "affecting the price" as they appear in clause 10 (2)(b)(ii) of the draft Bill and had suggested substituting the words "a compensatory arrangement relating to the sale of the goods".

The Chairman: Are you finished, Mr. Saltsman?

Mr. Saltsman: Yes I am finished except for a question of privilege. I would like to congratulate Mr. Danson for his devotion to the Committee. Having just come off the floor after making a speech he is back on to the Committee.

The Chairman: Mr. Danson.

• 1655

Mr. Danson: Thank you, Mr. Saltsman. We do not get many compliments from the other c'est que l'article 34 à la page 92 du Livre blanc dit qu'on demandera des renseignements sous une forme prescrite par des règlements. Ces règlements n'ont pas encore été déposés et, par conséquent, il me semble que je ne peux pas faire de commentaires.

[Interprétation]

M. Saltsman: Une dernière question, monsieur Hehner, au sujet de l'article 21 et 23. J'ignore si vous nous avez donné ce renseignement. Avez-vous essayé d'avoir des avis légaux sur le libellé de ces dispositions? Pensez-vous que les expressions que vous insérez dans votre mémoire suffiront?

M. Hehner: Je regrette de dire que nous n'avons pas demandé des avis d'avocats sur l'expression établissant la vente des marchandises. Comme je vous l'ai mentionné, dans le passé, nous avons obtenu des avis légaux sur l'expression affectant le prix des marchandises, puisque c'était une expression qui, maintenant, paraît dans la formulation actuelle.

Je crois que vous avez soulevé un point que nous avons peut-être négligé, notamment quand nous proposons quelque chose sans avoir demandé des conseils juridiques.

M. Saltsman: En d'autres mots, vous savez que l'expression actuelle n'est pas satisfaisante, mais vous n'êtes pas certain si l'autre fera l'affaire.

M. Hehner: Je crois que votre affirmation est juste.

M. Danson: Est-ce qu'on parle de l'expression à la fin de l'article 23 dans ce cas?

M. Hehner: Nous parlons du paragraphe 21 de notre mémoire où nous suggérons de remplacer l'expression: «affectant le prix», telle qu'elle apparaît dans l'article 10 (2)(b)(ii) du projet de loi par l'expression: «arrangement compensatoire lié à la vente des marchandises».

Le président: Avez-vous terminé M. Saltsman?

M. Saltsman: Oui, j'ai terminé, cependant j'aimerais féliciter M. Danson pour son dévouement envers le comité, étant donné qu'il vient tout juste de prononcer un discours à la Chambre

Le président: M. Danson.

M. Danson: Je n'obtiens pas tellement de compliments de l'autre côté. Je vous remerside and I appreciate it. I was rather interested in the phrase at the bottom of paragraph 23, Mr. Hehner.

[Text]

Incidentally, Mr. Hehner, if I may make a compliment, I do not think that we have seen a more comprehensive presentation to this Committee or one with a more articulate spokesman with which we are all so very impressed.

I fear I may be repeating, not only what I have said in this Committee but what I have just said in the House, however, I feel the danger is in making this legislation so tight that it almost becomes unworkable. I think you alluded to that yourself and it is the spirit of the implementation. I particularly noticed things I have underlined at the beginning of your brief, words like "quickly and effectively" and "quickly and efficiently" and "a businesslike approach". These appear all through your brief and they are in other briefs as well. No matter how tightly this legislation is drawn, if it is not done in the spirit of the legislation, it really matters little what the words are, at least to the laymen I should say.

I know in the Kennedy Round tariff reduction negotiations we were on the other side of the fence in the machinery tariffs. We had many apprehensions. We were concerned about the detail of wording but it so happened the result was good. There was a period of changeover we all had to live with, which was inconvenient but not disastrous in any of its effects.

I was surprised to hear the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance in the House last Thursday say that there had not been a single complaint. That is because the spirit of the legislation has been well implemented.

I think the Department of National Revenue deserves particular credit for this. They seem to be the whipping boys all through this because everybody has been through experiences with old legislation that had barnacles on it that was being interpreted in modern times.

I like this reference:

...or by reason of any other circumstance which, in the opinion of the Deputy Minister, provides an effective reduction in the sale price.

This is, as you say, a "catch-all" phrase and if it is being implemented with the proper spirit and the energy and the effectiveness in a businesslike manner, of which the Department I have found is quite capable, then this type of catch-all phrase is a good one. I think

[Interpretation]

cie. L'expression qu'on trouve au bas du paragraphe 23 a piqué mon intérêt.

Monsieur Hehner. Soit dit en passant, je ne crois pas que nous ayons eu un exposé qui ait été aussi impressionnant.

Même si je me répète, à mon sens, le danger est d'avoir une loi tellement rigide qu'elle ne puisse plus être appliquée. C'est ce à quoi vous faites allusion. Vous signalez au début de votre mémoire des expressions comme «avec rapidité et efficacité», «rapidement et efficacement» et «un point de vue pratique». On en trouve partout dans votre mémoire ainsi que dans d'autres mémoires. Quelle que soit la rigidité du projet de loi, si sa formulation n'est pas conforme à l'esprit de la loi, les mots importeront peu à des avocats.

Je sais qu'au cours des négociations Kennedy visant les réductions tarifaires, nous étions de l'autre côté de la clôture. Nous avions beaucoup d'appréhensions au sujet du détail du libellé. Les résultats ont néanmoins été bons, après une période d'ajustement, dont il a fallu nous accommoder. Mais il n'y a rien eu de désastreux.

J'ai été surpris d'entendre le secrétaire parlementaire du ministre des Finances déclarer l'autre soir à la Chambre, qu'il n'y avait pas eu une seule plainte, parce que l'esprit de la Loi a été respecté dans la pratique.

Je crois que le ministère du Revenu national doit être félicité pour cela. Tout le monde a eu l'expérience des vieilles mesures législatives qui devaient être ré-interprétées. On dit ici:

...ou en raison de toute autre circonstance qui, de l'avis du Sous-Ministre, entraîne une réduction effective du prix de vente.

Si cela est appliqué convenablement comme seuls des hommes d'affaires peuvent le faire, ce genre d'échappatoire, je crois, est excellent et pourrait fort bien surmonter tous les obstacles. Si nous avons cette interprétation générale et si elle était bien administrée, it would overcome many minor points where we seem to be getting down to many little details, whereas if we had this broad interpretation with effective administration of the interpretation, it should be good. Has legal opinion been sought on that phrase?

[Texte]

Mr. Hehner: No, sir, we did not seek legal opinion on this either. I did not think it was needed on that point. I really have no particular comment to make on your statement. I merely agree with it wholeheartedly.

We are moving completely away from a statute which gave a minimum of responsibility to the administrative department, the Customs and Excise Division, for making judgment. I has been required to ascertain facts in the past and then the law has been applied. As is always the case in such a situation, sometimes the law has not caught the guilty, sometimes it has caught the innocent.

Now we are swinging from that to a situation where there is a plethora of judgments. This statute is full of references to the making of regulations and the opinion of the Deputy Minister.

Since this is the trend of the legislation, we are merely saying that we think the Deputy Minister should be given the power to exercise his judgment in this situation as well as in many others. He should not find himself suddenly inhibited by a legalistic argument that these words are limited in meaning and that he cannot go past them.

If we are going to be put in the position of dealing with a discretionary judgment type of statute, let us at least put the Deputy Minister in a position where he can exercise his judgment fully.

Mr. Danson: Right, thank you very much.

The Chairman: Have you any other questions on paragraphs 19 to 24? If not, we will move on to paragraphs 25 to 32 which make reference to Clause 13 of the White Paper. Mr. Arthur?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I think in paragraph 25 of the brief, if I understand correctly, the suggestion is to put another "forthwith" in this particular clause. I would, as I did at an earlier sitting of this Committee, suggest that the opening subclause (1) of that clause read: "the Deputy Minister shall forthwith",—according to our legal adviser. It does govern all the requirements in subclause 1. I think it is taken, if not stated, that he should express his opinions, forthwith.

• 1700

Mr. Hehner: Actually, Mr. Arthur, we have not suggested putting another "forthwith" in.

[Interprétation]

cette proposition serait excellente. A-t-on demandé une opinion juridique sur cette expression?

M. Hehner: Nous n'avons pas demandé d'avis juridique là-dessus. Je ne pensais pas que cela était nécessaire. Je n'ai pas d'observation particulière à faire sur votre déclaration; je suis plutôt d'accord avec vous.

Nous passons d'une loi qui a laissé un minimum de responsabilités à la Division des douanes, pour porter des jugements. Il s'agissait plutôt de contrôler des faits dans le passé, puis la loi a été appliquée. Et, comme c'est toujours le cas dans une situation de ce genre, parfois la loi n'a pas pu attraper le coupable, parfois elle a attrapé un innocent.

Maintenant, nous passons de cette loi à une autre où il y a toute une surabondance de jugements. La loi est bourrée de dispositions intéressant l'élaboration d'un règlement et les opinions du sous-ministre.

Comme c'est là la tendance de la mesure législative, nous disons simplement que le sous-ministre devrait pouvoir exercer son jugement dans cette situation comme dans bien d'autres situations et son action ne devrait pas être entravée par des dispositions trop rigides. On ne devrait pas lui dire: «On ne peut pas aller plus loin que le libellé de cette disposition».

Si nous devons faire face à une loi qui permet un jugement discrétionnaire, le sous-ministre devrait pouvoir exercer son jugement intégralement.

M. Danson: Merci beaucoup.

Le président: Y a-t-il d'autres questions sur les articles 19 à 24? Sinon, nous allons passer aux paragraphes 25 à 32 qui ont trait à l'article 13 du Livre blanc. M. Arthur.

M. Arthur: En ce qui concerne le paragraphe 25 du projet, si j'ai bien compris ce qui est proposé, il s'agit d'ajouter un autre «immédiatement» dans cet article. Comme je l'ai déjà dit à une séance du Comité, je pense que le paragraphe (1) de cet article: «Le sous-ministre fait ouvrir immédiatement...», devrait être retenu. Selon nos conseillers légaux, il régit l'alinéa (1).

Je pense qu'il est sous-entendu, sinon exprimé, qu'il doit agir immédiatement.

M. Hehner: Nous n'avons pas suggéré d'ajouter cet «immédiatement». Nous avons

[Text]

I think we have been rather careful in our submission that where we wanted to make a positive suggestion we should do so. We have drawn attention to the fact that the "forthwith" now appearing in clause 13 on page 58 of the White Paper applies to action only after the Deputy Minister has formed his opinion. We have drawn attention to the fact that there is no requirement that the Deputy Minister should form his opinions promptly.

Frankly, if we had thought it was a proper thing to do and would produce any desirable effect we would have suggested that the Deputy Minister should be required to form his opinions promptly. However, I think I would have to agree with statements that you and others from the Department of Finance made at earlier hearings that there is no practical purpose in putting in such a requirement.

If I were the Deputy Minister and if somebody required me to express my opinion within 24 hours or 96 hours or any other given time I would form my opinion because the law required me to do so. If I had any doubt at all I would say no. I do not think it is desirable to put in that requirement. I think it is an obligation that is not proper to put in the statute. Therefore, we have not suggested it.

We have, however, drawn attention to the fact that all of the "forthwiths" that do appear only apply after the Deputy Minister has formed his opinion that he should now take further action. It is important that the Deputy Minister should form his opinions as quickly as possible, whether there is a legal requirement to do so or not because until he does come to an opinion nothing will be done.

Mr. Arthur: Well Mr. Hehner, I do not wish to keep dealing with these "forthwiths", but in paragraph 29 the suggestion I think, if I read this one correctly Mr. Hehner, if not stated specifically at least infers that forthwith should be placed here. I may again be wrong, but I would suggest to you again that this is the converse of subclause (1) and therefore the assumption would be that he would act expeditiously or forthwith.

Mr. Hehner: Yes, this is the converse of the point you mentioned a moment ago. For the same reason we are merely drawing attention to the fact that until the Deputy Minister makes his decision nothing else will follow. However, we have not suggested any statutory requirement that he form his opinion within a given number of days or hours.

Mr. Arthur: That is right.

Mr. Hehner: By the way if I may draw attention to paragraph 31 of our brief for veillé dans notre requête à permettre des suggestions positives. Nous avons attiré l'attention sur le fait que l'immédiatement qui figure à l'article 13, à la page 58 du Livre blanc, s'applique aux mesures prises une fois que le sous-ministre a pris une décision. Nous attirons l'attention sur le fait qu'on n'exige pas que le sous-ministre prenne rapidement sa décision.

[Interpretation]

Franchement, si nous avions pensé que ce serait approprié et que cela aurait entraîné un effet souhaitable, on aurait obligé le sous-ministre à agir rapidement. Il me faut toutefois me rallier à vos propos et à ceux des représentants du ministre des Finances voulant qu'il n'y ait aucune raison pratique d'imposer cela.

Si j'étais le sous-ministre et qu'on me demandait d'exprimer mon opinion en 24 heures ou 96 heures, je déciderais très vite sous la contrainte de la loi, ou alors je dirais non. Je ne pense pas qu'il serait nécessaire d'insérer une telle exigence dans la loi. Cela ne se fait pas et c'est pourquoi nous ne l'avons pas suggéré.

Cependant, nous avons attiré l'attention sur le fait que l'immédiatement ne s'applique qu'une fois que le sous-ministre a décidé d'agir. Et, il est important que le sous-ministre prenne une décision aussi rapidement que possible, qu'il y ait une exigence juridique ou non, car, tant qu'il n'aura pas pris de décision, rien ne se fera.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je ne tiens pas à continuer à vous tatillonner avec ces immédiatement, mais le par. 29, si je le lis bien, suggère qu'il faut conserver le mot «maintenant»; il se peut que je me trompe mais, j'ai l'impression une fois de plus qu'en application de l'alinéa 1, il agira rapidement ou immédiatement.

M. Hehner: C'est vraiment la réciproque de ce que vous avez dit il y a quelques instants. C'est pour cette raison que nous avons attiré l'attention sur ceci: tant que le sous-ministre n'a pas pris de décision, rien ne peut se faire. Mais nous n'avons pas proposé qu'il y ait une exigence statutaire l'obligeant à prendre sa décision dans un certain délai, précisé en jours.

M. Arthur: C'est exact.

M. Hehner: En passant, si je peux attirer l'attention là-dessus, le par. 31 de notre example, here is a case where we do think there should be such a requirement and we stated so.

[Texte]

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, my only comment on paragraph 31 of the brief, is here. I think, specifically, Mr. Hehner has agreed that they have suggested that "forthwith" be added.

The draftsmen believe that "on receipt of the notice" is possibly adequate direction, and the presumption would be that they would act forthwith.

Mr. Hehner: It may well be so.

The Chairman: Mr. Émard.

• 1704

M. Émard: Monsieur Hehner, est-ce que vous ne croyez pas que s'il n'y a pas de limite de temps d'imposée au sous-ministre pour rendre sa décision, vous aurez peut-être une répétition des délais dont vous vous êtes plaint avant? Parce que, si je vous ai bien compris, vous avez dit que vous n'insistiez pas sur aucune limite de temps pour le sous-ministre, pour rendre sa décision?

Le président: D'autres questions, M. Émard?

Mr. Hehner: If the Deputy Minister delays in reaching an opinion or is too cautious, or whatever the reason, if he does not reach his opinion promptly there will be a delay which will be very harmful. This we feel quite strongly, Mr. Émard.

• 1705

The only thing is that we were not quite certain what effect would be produced by trying to introduce statutory requirements saying that the Deputy Minister had to form an opinion in a hurry.

Once he has formed an opinion that an investigation should be instituted, we are then into a series of what one could almost call mechanical operations, where it is possible to say, "Once you have done this you must do the other thing within 30 days or 90 days".

We would prefer there to be some requirement that when a complaint was made to the Deputy Minister he had to form his opinion as quickly as possible on whether there was enough merit to justify going ahead. However, perhaps wrongly, we felt that this is not exactly the sort of a requirement that could be introduced into a statute in that particular circumstance.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Gillespie?

[Interprétation]

mémoire. C'est un cas où nous pensons qu'il doit y avoir telle obligation et nous le déclarons ouvertement.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, j'ai un seul commentaire à faire au sujet du par. 31 du mémoire. Je pense que M. Hehner admet qu'on a proposé d'ajouter le mot «immédiatement».

Les rédacteurs ont supposé que, dès réception de l'avis, il agira immédiatement.

M. Hehner: Peut-être bien.

Le président: M. Émard.

Mr. Émard: Mr. Hehner, do you not believe, sir, that if there is no time limit imposed on the Deputy Minister to make a decision, you might have a repetition of the delays you complained about previously? Because, if I understood you correctly, you said that you did not insist on any time limit for the Deputy Minister to make a decision?

Mr. Chairman: Any other questions. M. Émard.

M. Hehner: Si le sous-ministre retarde sa décision ou s'il fait preuve de trop de prudence, quelles qu'en soient les raisons, il y aura un retard qui sera très préjudiciable. Nous le pensons, nous sommes tout à fait nets à ce sujet, monsieur Émard.

Nous n'étions pas tout à fait certains, cependant, de l'effet que nous obtiendrions en essayant d'introduire une exigence statutaire, même si le sous-ministre devait se décider très rapidement.

Cependant, une fois qu'il a pris une décision, et qu'il pense qu'on doit ouvrir une enquête, tout s'enchaîne alors mécaniquement, si vous voulez: une fois cela fait, il faut agir dans les trente jours ou dans les quarante-vingt-dix jours.

Nous aimerions qu'il y ait une exigence d'après laquelle une fois qu'une plainte a été déposée, le sous-ministre doit prendre sa décision très rapidement au sujet de l'enquête. A tort peut-être nous avons pensé pouvoir insérer cette obligation dans la loi dans le cas actuel.

Le président: Oui, monsieur Gillespie.

[Text]

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, there is reference in paragraph 26 to a change in procedure within the Customs and Excise Division. Decentralization is referred to and compared with previous procedures whereby copies of invoices or customs entries were sent to Ottawa. I would like to address my question to Mr. Hind. Do I gather from the remarks made by him earlier this afternoon that copies are also going to Ottawa as heretofore?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, under the current law, as I mentioned earlier, the Department is asking its customs officers to submit to Ottawa promptly copies of all documents covering importations of sensitive goods. This practice will be continued under the new Act. We have provided the ports with a list of the sensitive goods, and as I indicated, this list includes a rather extensive enumeration of textile articles.

Mr. Gillespie: Thank you Mr. Hind. I have another question Mr. Chairman and it relates to paragraph 32, and the suggestion that the name of the complainant should not be disclosed except with his agreement. Could Mr. Hehner give us his reasons for this suggestion?

Mr. Hehner: Yes, the reason is very simple. If you have a large substantial customer, whom you suspect is bringing in dumped goods in competition with those you would like to supply, and you file a complaint with the Customs and Excise Division which promptly announces, Eric Hehner has complained against the dumping of imports by Simpson-Sears, Eatons, or Woodward's or anybody you want, I, safely, suspect that Eric Hehner would not sell very many goods to that company from then on.

Mr. Gillespie: How does the existing Act work in this regard?

Mr. Hehner: Mr. Hind could perhaps best answer that question, but it has always been my understanding that if a complaint is filed that the Customs and Excise Division does not reveal the name of the complainant.

Certainly acting on behalf of other clients in the textile industry I have occasionally attempted to find out who had instituted an inquiry that some client has asked me to counteract on his behalf. I can say that the Customs and Excise Division have been meticulous in refusing to tell me anything.

The Chairman: Is that correct Mr. Hind?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman that is correct.

[Interpretation]

M. Gillespie: Monsieur le président, au paragraphe 26, il est question d'une modification de la procédure de la division des douanes. Il est question de décentralisation, cela a été comparé à la procédure ancienne d'après laquelle les bordereaux et les entrées de douanes devaient être envoyés à Ottawa. Je voudrais adresser ma question à M. Hind. Dois-je déduire des remarques qu'il a faites plus tôt, cet après-midi, que les documents sont toujours envoyés à Ottawa comme avant?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, d'après la loi actuellement en vigueur, comme je l'ai dit plus tôt, le ministère demande à ses officiers de douane de soumettre à Ottawa, rapidement, des exemplaires de tous les documents d'importation de marchandises particulières. Cela sera maintenu en vertu de la nouvelle loi. Nous avons envoyé une liste de ces marchandises particulières aux ports d'entrée et, comme je l'ai dit, cette liste comprend une énumération assez grande d'articles textiles.

M. Gillespie: Merci, monsieur Hind. Une autre question, monsieur le président, au sujet du paragraphe 32, portant que le nom de celui qui dépose la plainte ne doit pas être révélé sauf s'il est d'accord. Est-ce que M. Hehner peut nous donner la raison pour laquelle il veut cela?

M. Hehner: Oui. La raison est très simple. Si vous avez un client important que vous soupçonnez d'introduire des biens en dumping, en concurrence avec ce que vous lui envoyez, et que vous déposez une plainte à la division des douanes qui annonce rapidement que M. Hehner s'est plaint d'importations-dumping de la part de Simpson's Sears, d'Eaton's ou de Woolworth ou de qui vous voulez. Je pense qu'ensuite M. Hehner ne vendra pas beaucoup de produits à cette compagnie.

M. Gillespie: Qu'est-ce qui se passe en vertu de la loi actuelle?

M. Hehner: M. Hind répondra mieux que moi sans doute. Mais d'après ce que j'ai toujours compris, si une plainte est déposée, la division des douanes ne révèle pas le nom du plaignant. Lorsque j'ai agi de la part d'autres clients de l'industrie textile, j'ai essayé de savoir qui avait institué des enquêtes. Certains m'ont demandé cela. La Division des douanes a été méticuleuse et elle a toujours refusé de me dire quoi que ce soit.

Le président: C'est exact, monsieur Hind?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, c'est exact.

[Texte]

Mr. Gillespie: Could I then address a question to Mr. Hind and ask if in his view the need to disclose the name of the complainant is an important provision. I say important, is it related to the administration of the Act?

• 1710

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I think perhaps the answer to that is, it does not really affect our administration of the Act at all. We have been trying to protect the identity of the organization or the person who made the complaint in the first place, for the reasons which Mr. Hehner has mentioned. We have endeavoured to protect the identity of these people, feeling that it is not necessarily anybody else's business.

Mr. Gillespie: Do you feel that the wording of the proposed draft provides this kind of security?

Mr. Hind: I am not sure, Mr. Chairman, that the draft spells out whether or not the name of the complainant should be publicized. I think this will be something covered by the regulations when they are finalized.

The Chairman: Mr. Arthur?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, if you recall when this matter was up for discussion earlier we undertook to look at the matter of the confidentiality of the complainant in the light of our obligations under the Code and also the practice of other countries. We would hope to be able to make a statement to the Committee at a later date, but we certainly have in mind the point that Mr. Gillespie has made.

Mr. Gillespie: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Hales: Regarding paragraph 30 on page 11 I would like to ask Mr. Hind or Mr. Arthur if there is any particular reason this suggestion should not be incorporated in the legislation? It seems like a reasonable request or suggestion.

Mr. Arthur: Well, Mr. Chairman, paragraph 30 on page 11 of the brief, states:

There is no requirement that anyone be advised either that the opinion of the Anti-Dumping Tribunal has been sought, or the nature of the opinion that it expresses.

Our view is, Mr. Chairman, that the rules governing the Tribunal will be made by the Tribunal under the authority of clause 25 of

[Interprétation]

M. Gillespie: Puis-je poser une autre question à M. Hind? Je voudrais lui demander si à son avis c'est une disposition importante, est-ce qu'il est important de révéler les noms des plaignants? En fait, il s'agit de l'application de la loi.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, je crois que la réponse est sans doute la suivante. Cela n'affecte pas vraiment la façon d'appliquer la loi. En fait, nous avons essayé de protéger l'identité de l'organisme ou de la personne qui a déposé la plainte au départ pour les raisons mentionnées par M. Hehner. Nous nous sommes efforcés de protéger l'identité de ces gens. Nous pensons que ce n'est pas nécessairement l'affaire de qui que ce soit d'autre.

M. Gillespie: Pensez-vous que le libellé du projet de bill assure cette protection?

M. Hind: Je ne suis pas certain que le libellé actuel prévoit que le nom du plaignant doit être révélé. Les règlements y pourvoiront quand ils seront établis.

Le président: Monsieur Arthur?

M. Arthur: La question a été discutée plus tôt et nous nous sommes engagés à étudier le caractère confidentiel du nom du plaignant à la lumière des exigences stipulées par le code et en tenant compte de ce qui se fait dans d'autres pays. J'espère pouvoir faire une déclaration au Comité ultérieurement, mais nous tiendrons certainement compte du point soulevé par M. Gillespie.

M. Gillespie: Merci, monsieur le président.

M. Hales: En ce qui concerne l'article 30, à la page 11, je voudrais savoir de M. Hind ou M. Arthur s'il y a des raisons pour lesquelles la suggestion qui est faite ici ne devrait pas être incorporée dans la loi. Cela semble une demande ou une suggestion raisonnable?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, si je comprends bien le paragraphe 30, qui figure à la page 13 du texte français du mémoire, celui-ci mentionne:

on n'y trouve pas d'exigence que qui que ce soit soit informé, ni qu'on a demandé l'avis du tribunal antidumping ni de la nature de l'opinion qu'il a exprimée.

Notre opinion est la suivante, monsieur le président. Les règles liant le tribunal seront déterminées par le tribunal en application de the draft Bill. The Tribunal will in those regulations set forth those persons who will be advised of its opinion.

[Text]

Mr. Hales: Well, then, it seems to be a matter of whether the Committee wishes to leave these fine points to be spelled out in the Regulations rather than in the act?

Mr. Arthur: Well, Mr. Chairman, I think in the earlier discussions we have had on the particular clauses that are referred to in paragraph 30, we stated that it would be difficult in advance to establish the rules governing what is in fact a quasi judicial court, and that it really rests with the Tribunal as a court to establish its own method of operation. The authority for it so doing has been given in clause 25 of this proposed Bill.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Mr. Chairman, under the previous anti-dumping provisions it was customary—

The Chairman: You mean the present one? It is not changed yet.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): It has been customary in the past to notify a firm that there was a complaint against them. Is this correct?

Mr. Hind: The present practice, Mr. Chairman, is to advise importers of foreign-made goods that the Department is looking into the value of the goods they are importing. At the same time the importer is warned that should undervaluation be found he will be called upon to pay dumping duty at some subsequent time. Really the complaint is against a foreign exporter that he is dumping, rather than some producer in Canada.

• 1715

Mr. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): But its effect is an automatic warning or notice that the goods being shipped are under some question? The recommendation in paragraph 30 suggests that the whole thing be conducted in secret, and that there be no opportunity for the person whose shippings are being questioned to defend himself in any way?

The Chairman: Would you care to express your view?

Mr. Hehner: I am afraid I do not understand, sir. I do not think we have ever made such a suggestion. You refer to paragraph 30 of our brief?

Mr. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Yes, you are suggesting that if the opinion of the l'article 25 du projet de bill et le tribunal, dans ses règlements, désignera des personnes qui seront informées de sa décision.

[Interpretation]

M. Hales: Est-ce que le Comité souhaite que ces questions de détail soient spécifiées dans les règlements plutôt que dans la loi?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, il me semble que les discussions que nous avons eues au sujet des articles dont il a été question au paragraphe 30, nous avons dit qu'il serait difficile d'établir à l'avance les règles définissant exactement ce qu'est une cour quasi judiciaire. En fait c'est au tribunal lui-même d'établir sa propre procédure et l'autorité de le faire lui a été donnée par l'article 25 du projet de bill.

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Monsieur le président, d'après les dispositions antidumping, il était d'usage...

Le président: Vous voulez dire les dispositions actuelles? Elles ne sont pas encore changées.

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): ...par le passé d'informer une société qu'une plainte était déposée contre elle. C'est bien cela. n'est-ce pas?

M. Hind: A l'heure actuelle, on informe les importateurs d'objets fabriqués à l'étranger du fait que le ministère examine la valeur des marchandises qui sont importées. En même temps, l'importateur est avisé que s'il y a une sous-évaluation, il devra payer des droits de dumping ultérieurement. La plainte est contre un exportateur étranger pour lequel il fait du dumping plutôt que contre un producteur au Canada.

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Mais le fait est le suivant: il y a un avertissement ou un avis automatique spécifiant que les marchandises expédiées sont soumises à une enquête. La recommandation de l'article 30 suggère que tout cela se fasse secrètement et qu'il n'existe aucune possibilité pour la personne dont les marchandises sont sujettes à enquête, de se défendre de quelque façon que ce soit, semble-t-il?

Le président: Désirez-vous...

M. Hehner: J'ai peur de n'avoir pas compris monsieur. Je ne crois pas que nous ayons jamais fait une telle suggestion. Il s'agit de l'article 30, n'est-ce pas, de notre mémoire?

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Oui, nous suggérons que l'opinion exprimée par le anti-dumping Tribunal has been sought, or the nature of the opinion that it expresses, that it be regarded as an internal administrative matter. You are suggesting that there be nothing taken outside of the Tribunal?

[Texte]

Mr. Hehner: No, sir, I think perhaps we have not made ourselves adequately clear on that point. Clause 13(3) says that if the Deputy Minister, having received a complaint respecting the dumping of goods, comes to the opinion that there really is not any evidence of material injury, and therefore, he should not proceed, that he may refer the matter to the Tribunal and ask them for an advisory opinion on whether there is enough evidence of injury to proceed. It also provides that if the Deputy Minister does not want to ask the Tribunal for advisory opinion, the complainant can go to the anti-dumping Tribunal for an advisory opinion.

Now, we have said that if a complainant goes to the Tribunal and says, "Please give an advisory opinion to the Deputy Minister", then he should be entitled to know what advice the Tribunal gives the Deputy Minister. That is the only proposal we have made.

We have said that if the Deputy Minister of his own volition chooses to ask the Tribunal for an advisory opinion, that might be regarded as an internal matter which nobody else is entitled to know about. We have not suggested they should not be entitled to know. We are merely not requesting that other persons be advised of a matter involving only the Deputy Minister and the Tribunal, but we are not trying to keep anything secret.

Mr. Hales: Would you and the industry be agreeable to leaving these finer technicalities to regulations and to leaving it to the Tribunal to set up the rules of the game, as it were. Would this not be satisfactory rather than spelling out all these details in the act?

Mr. Hehner: Yes, sir. I do not think we have suggested that this had to be done in the act. It is merely a point to which we have drawn attention and which we hope, therefore, will be dealt with in whatever way is most appropriate, whether in the Act, or, as in some of these cases, in regulations to be made by the Tribunal for the conduct of its own affairs.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, we will move now to paragraphs 33 to 36 inclusive which refer to clauses 13 and 14 of the White Paper. Yes, Mr. Arthur?

• 1720

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman paragraph 33 of the brief relates to the wording of clause 13 tribunal antidumping soit de nature administrative interne. Vous êtes d'avis que rien ne doit sortir du tribunal?

[Interprétation]

M. Hehner: Je pense que nous n'avons peut-être pas été suffisamment clairs. L'alinéa 3 de l'article 13 se lit ainsi qu'il suit: Si le sous-ministre a reçu une plainte au sujet du dumping de marchandises, s'il décide qu'il n'y a pas de préjudice, il peut renvoyer la question au tribunal et lui demander une opinion consultative aux fins de savoir s'il y a des dommages. Et si le sous-ministre ne veut pas demander son avis au tribunal, le plaignant peut s'adresser au tribunal antidumping qui rend une décision consultative.

Nous avons dit ceci: si un plaignant s'adresse au tribunal, en lui disant de donner un avis au sous-ministre, le plaignant doit être informé de l'avis transmis au sous-ministre. C'est la seule proposition que nous ayons faite.

Nous avons dit que si le sous-ministre, de son propre chef, décide de demander l'avis du tribunal, et ceci peut être considéré comme une affaire interne, pour laquelle personne n'a à être mis au courant. Nous n'avons pas dit que les autres personnes n'avaient pas le droit de savoir, nous ne demandons tout simplement qu'elles ne soient pas mises au courant de sujets n'impliquant que le sous-ministre et le tribunal. Mais nous ne demandons pas que l'on cache quoi que ce soit.

M. Hales: Est-ce que l'industrie serait prête à laisser les détails mineurs aux règlements et laisser le tribunal prendre les décisions qui s'imposent? Ne serait-ce pas plus avantageux d'agir ainsi plutôt que de préciser tous ces détails dans la Loi?

M. Hehner: Oui, je ne pense pas que nous ayons suggéré que cela se fasse dans la loi. Nous attirons l'attention seulement sur ce point, mais nous espérons que cela sera réglé de façon aussi appropriée que possible, soit dans la loi soit dans des règlements que le tribunal instituera pour la conduite de ses affaires.

Le président: Nous passerons de l'article 33 à l'article 36. Nous allons étudier les articles 13 et 14 du Livre blanc. Oui, monsieur Arthur?

M. Arthur: Une question, monsieur le président, en ce qui concerne le paragraphe 33,

[Text]

(6)(a)(ii) and to clause 14(1)(b). This point was raised the other day, Mr. Chairman, and at that time I made a statement which I am not certain was clear. I have sought a view from our legal advisers and if it is the wish of the Committee I will read it at this time. It states:

Clause 13(6) of the proposed anti-dumping act provides that where an investigation has been initiated in respect of the dumping of any goods, the Deputy Minister must terminate that investigation where he is satisfied as to certain particulars. Under this provision, it is mandatory for the Deputy Minister to terminate an investigation where he is satisfied as to any one of the following:

1. there is insufficient evidence of dumping to justify proceeding with the investigation;
2. the margin of dumping of the goods is negligible; or
3. The actual or potential volume of dumped goods is negligible.

This particular subclause carries out Canada's undertaking respecting the termination of an investigation set forth in Article 5(c) of the Agreement or the Code.

The corollary of the proposition contained in the proposed clause 13(6) is that the Deputy Minister may only make a preliminary determination as a result of an investigation if he is satisfied that three facts exist:

1. the goods have been dumped;
2. the margin of dumping of the dumped goods is not negligible; and
3. the actual or potential volume of the dumped goods is not negligible.

Therefore in the opinion of our legal advisers:

... clause 14(1) must be written conjunctively and clause 13(6) disjunctively.

They go on to cite an example:

If, for example, the Minister was satisfied that the goods have been dumped and that the margin of dumping is not negligible, nevertheless he could not make a preliminary determination and he would have to terminate the investigation if he were satisfied that the actual or potential volume of dumped goods is negligible. To reiterate, the logical converse of drafting clause 13(6) as alternatives is to draft clause 14(1) as conjunctive.

[Interpretation]

se rapportant au libellé du sous-alinéa (6)(a)(ii) de l'article 13, et article 14, alinéa 1, paragraphe B. Au moment où nous en avons discuté, monsieur le président, j'ai fait une déclaration qui n'était pas aussi claire que je l'aurais voulue. Je me suis adressé à nos conseillers juridiques, et si le Comité le souhaite, je pourrais lui faire part de leur avis.

L'alinéa 13-6 du projet de loi antidumping prévoit que lorsqu'une enquête a été entreprise au sujet de quelque marchandise que ce soit, le sous-ministre doit fermer cette enquête lorsqu'il s'est assuré de certains détails.

En raison de cette disposition, le sous-ministre doit terminer l'enquête une fois qu'il s'est assuré de l'une des conditions suivantes:

- (i) que la preuve de dumping est insuffisante pour justifier la poursuite de l'enquête, ou
- (ii) que la marge de dumping des marchandises ou le volume réel ou éventuel des marchandises sous-évaluées sont négligeables.

Cet alinéa en particulier nous permet de respecter notre engagement en ce qui concerne la fin de l'enquête tel que défini à l'article 5, paragraphe (c) des Accords internationaux.

Le corollaire de la proposition contenue à l'alinéa 13(6) prévoit que le sous-ministre ne doit faire de détermination préliminaire, à la suite d'une enquête, que s'il s'est assuré que trois faits existent.

(a) que les marchandises ont été ou sont sous-évaluées, et

(b) que la marge de dumping des marchandises sous-évaluées et que le volume réel ou éventuel ne sont pas négligeables.

C'est pourquoi, de l'avis de notre conseil juridique:

L'article 14(1) doit être écrit en conjonction, et l'autre, en disjonction.

Et un exemple est donné.

D'après lequel si le ministre s'est assuré que les biens ont fait l'objet de dumping et que la marge de dumping n'est pas négligeable, il peut faire une détermination préliminaire. Par contre, il devra clore l'enquête s'il est assuré que le volume réel ou potentiel de vente est négligeable. Pour répéter la déduction logique de l'alinéa 13-6, on peut rédiger l'article 14 (1) sous forme conjonctive.

[Texte]

I am not certain Mr. Chairman whether this will help. I really think the main point here is that the drafting of subclause (6) of clause 13 is in keeping with our obligations under the Code.

Mr. Hehner: I have heard what Mr. Arthur said. I heard it when he said it on November 14, and I think it will completely emasculate the investigation and I do not think it is required by the Code.

If I may in particular refer to paragraph (c) of Article 5 of the Code which appears on page 17 of the White Paper may I request that Mr. Arthur seek further advice on the meaning of the words.

This paragraph has two sentences in it, one of them is a mandatory provision; the other is a rather pejorative statement which I think does not have any mandatory effect.

It is from the latter statement that Mr. Arthur quoted. The actual provision of Article 5, paragraph (c) of the Code is that:

(c) An application shall be rejected and an investigation shall be terminated promptly as soon as the authorities concerned are satisfied that there is not sufficient evidence of either dumping or of injury to justify proceeding with the case.

The word in this sense is "shall". There is then an added sentence which is not mandatory in any way. It says:

There should be...

And I emphasize this word "should" in contrast to the previous word "shall".

● 1725

There should be immediate termination in cases where the margin of dumping or the volume of dumped imports, actual or potential, or the injury is negligible.

Now this added sentence, which I suggest to you is not mandatory in any way, and does not require the words of clauses 13(6) and 14(1) of our draft legislation, completely ignores the facts of life. If you must terminate an investigation, as soon as you find that the margin of dumping or the actual or potential volume of dumped goods is negligible this ignores the point which we discussed again this morning.

Someone will make a shipment, they will make a small quantity shipment at a price to see whether it is accepted. If it is accepted the entire price level in the Canadian industry is immediately affected. It can be, or may be, immediately affected, shall we put it that way? There are cases where it has been. There have been—and again this was men-

[Interprétation]

Je pense que l'important est que la rédaction de l'alinéa 6 de l'article 13 soit conforme à nos obligations.

M. Hehner: J'ai entendu la suggestion de M. Arthur, je l'avais entendu le quatorze, mais je crois que cela émasculera complètement l'enquête, et que les Accords internationaux ne l'exigent pas.

Au paragraphe C de l'alinéa 5 des Accords internationaux, à la page 17 du Livre blanc, puis-je demander que l'on détermine mieux la signification de deux mots-clés.

Une partie de l'alinéa consiste en une disposition obligatoire, et l'autre est une déclaration péjorative sans aucun effet obligatoire.

L'intervention de monsieur Arthur est en rapport avec cette dernière.

Une requête sera rejetée et une enquête sera clôturée sans retard dès que les autorités concernées seront convaincues que les éléments de preuve relatifs soit au dumping soit au préjudice ne sont pas suffisants pour justifier la continuation de la procédure.

Le mot-clé, c'est: sera. La deuxième partie de l'alinéa se lit comme il suit:

La clôture de l'enquête devrait être;

J'insiste ici sur le mot «devrait», par opposition à «sera».

La clôture de l'enquête devrait être immédiate lorsque la marge de dumping, le volume des importations en dumping, réelles ou potentielles, ou le préjudice, sont négligeables.

Cette phrase supplémentaire que je suggère, n'entraîne aucune obligation et n'entraîne pas la répétition des alinéas 13 (6) et 14 (1), elle ignore totalement la réalité. Si la loi stipule qu'on doit terminer l'enquête dès que l'on constate que la marge de dumping ou le volume potentiel ou réel de produits importés en dumping est négligeable, elle ne tient pas compte du point dont nous avons déjà parlé ce matin.

Quelqu'un expédiera une petite quantité de marchandises à un certain prix, pour voir si le prix sera accepté. Si ce prix est accepté, tout le niveau des prix au Canada sera immédiatement affecté. Disons qu'il pourra être affecté ou il pourrait être affecté; dans certains cas il l'a été. Il y a eu, et j'en ai parlé ce matin, il y a eu des contrats d'approvisionnement.

[Text]

tioned this morning—forward contracts for supplies where a customer has guaranteed to buy his entire requirement from a certain supplier on the grounds that the supplier will meet any legitimate price that is offered. As soon as the small quantity comes in and is found to be legally in Canada and no dumping action is taken, it affects the price.

Now, I suggest that if you put these on an either/or basis it is, as I say, greatly weakening the administration. I have already made my point; I do not think it is required by the wording of the Code.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I have no comment.

The Chairman: Do you have any questions gentlemen? If not we will move on to paragraph 35 which makes reference to clause 15 of the White Paper.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I believe we dealt with these this morning when I suggested these functions or steps could be taken concurrently.

The Chairman: We will then move on to paragraphs 37 and 38 which make reference to clause 15 of the White Paper.

Mr. Gillespie: What was the reference, Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: Paragraphs 37 and 38 which make reference to clause 15 on page 66 of the White Paper.

Mr. Arthur: Well Mr. Chairman if I may comment on this. As I understand the paragraph in the brief the suggestion is that the provisional duties should be continued until the Deputy Minister is in receipt of the order or finding of the Tribunal.

The wording of clause 15(1) as quoted here says that the provisional duties shall end "on the day that an order or finding is made by the Tribunal".

I would refer the Committee's attention to clause 3 which would come into full force on the day that the order or finding of the Tribunal is made. In other words, the provisional duties would cease to be applied as of the day of the order or finding. On the next importation, for instance, if an importation were made the next day, as this is drafted, clause 3 would come into play and definitive duties would then be applied against such importations if, in fact, the selling price was less than the normal value.

Mr. Hehner: This is merely a technical comment, sir, to which Mr. Arthur has made an adequate reply.

[Interpretation]

ments où l'acheteur devait acheter tout son matériel à un prix respectant le règlement. Dès qu'une petite quantité arrive et qu'aucune mesure antidumping n'est prise, cela affecte le prix dans le pays. Si on met ou bien «ou», ou bien «ou bien», cela affaiblit beaucoup l'administration. J'ai déjà dit cela. Je ne pense pas que les accords internationaux prévoient que l'on doit le faire.

M. Arthur: Je n'ai aucun commentaire à faire, monsieur le président.

Le président: Avez-vous des questions, messieurs? Nous passons à la ligne 35 de l'article 15 du Livre blanc.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, nous avons réglé la question ce matin. J'ai suggéré que ces fonctions, ces mesures soient étudiées en même temps.

Le président: Nous passons donc aux lignes 37, 38, de l'article 15 du Livre blanc.

M. Gillespie: Monsieur le président, de quoi s'agit-il?

Le président: Les lignes 37 et 38 de l'article 15 du Livre blanc à la page 66 du Livre blanc.

M. Arthur: L'alinéa en cause signale que l'application des droits provisoires devrait se prolonger jusqu'à ce que le sous-ministre ait en mains les constatations du tribunal.

Le libellé de l'article 15(1) prévoit que les droits provisoires ne seront plus appliqués dès que le tribunal rendra une ordonnance ou prendra des conclusions.

J'aimerais signaler au Comité l'article 3 qui devient exécutoire le jour même où le tribunal se prononce. Autrement dit, les droits provisoires ne seraient plus appliqués à partir de la déclaration du tribunal. Et pour toutes les importations subséquentes les dispositions de l'article 3 entreraient en jeu, et les droits définitifs seraient alors appliqués.

M. Hehner: Il s'agissait simplement de commentaires purement techniques auxquels M. Arthur a très bien répondu.

[Texte]

• 1730

The Chairman: Paragraph 39 makes reference to clause 18 of the White Paper, page 72.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, we are on Paragraph 39 now, I understand. The statement made here is that clause 18(4) (e) deals with re-appraised goods if there has been any misrepresentation or fraud at the time of entry, but there are no related penalties.

As I understand this clause, it deals with the redetermination by the Deputy Minister, so there would in fact be assessed here the difference between the original appraisal and the re-appraisal in the form of dumping duties.

Mr. Hehner: My point is, Mr. Arthur, although I hear your words I am not at all sure that the words on the white pages say so. Subclause (5) of clause 18 which appears on page 76 says that if there has been a redetermination upward:

18.(5) (a) the importer shall pay any additional duty payable...

However, no where can I find any clause in the entire proposed statute that says what this additional duty would be nor can find anything which would create an additional duty. In fact, if there has been a misrepresentation or fraud presumably the original documents had not revealed that there was any dumping, and presumably provisional duties were not collected, so at some time within the next two years you may find that the facts had been misrepresented.

Where in this proposed statute does it say that there is any penalty for having made a misrepresentation or fraud. Where in this proposed statute does it say that you can go back retroactively and collect dumping duties when you had not put on provisional duties? In fact, there are clauses of the proposed statute that say flatly that unless you have collected provisional duties at the time of importation you shall never be able to put on dumping duties. We feel that this is a technical error somewhere.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, my only comment here is that I think the case cited by Mr. Hehner is not that related to this particular clause. This clause does talk about a re-appraisal or a redetermination.

In subclause (5), the amount of the so-called penalty, if you will, is the difference

[Interprétation]

Le président: L'alinéa 39, qui a trait à l'article 18 du Livre blanc, à la page 72.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, en sommes-nous maintenant à l'article 39? On y dit que l'article 18 (4) (e) a trait à la réévaluation de marchandises s'il y a eu fausse représentation ou fraude au moment de l'entrée, mais ne comporte pas de sanctions.

Si je comprends bien les dispositions de cet article, il s'agit d'une réévaluation de la part du sous-ministre, de façon à déterminer la différence entre l'évaluation initiale et la réévaluation sous forme de droits contre le dumping.

M. Hehner: Je comprends bien ce que vous dites, monsieur Arthur, mais je ne suis pas sûr que cela corresponde exactement à ce que dit le Livre blanc. Le paragraphe (5) de l'article 18 signale que s'il y a réévaluation vers la hausse:

18.(5)(a) L'importateur doit payer tout droit supplémentaire payable relativement aux marchandises

...mais on ne dit pas en quoi consisterait ce droit supplémentaire s'il y a une nouvelle détermination.

De fait, si l'on constate qu'il y a eu fausse représentation ou fraude, dans les circonstances présumément, le document initial ne révélerait pas qu'il y a eu dumping et sans doute alors, les droits provisoires n'ont pas été perçus, alors parfois, on constate qu'au cours des deux ou trois dernières années, il y a eu fraude.

On ne voit pas de dispositions dans la Loi qui prévoient des sanctions pour avoir fait une fausse déclaration. Où voit-on dans les lois que l'on peut revenir rétroactivement et percevoir les droits s'il n'y a pas eu de droits provisoires, de droits de douanes provisoires? Au fait, certains articles du statut stipulent clairement qu'à moins d'avoir perçu des droits provisoires au moment de l'importation, on ne pourra plus percevoir d'autres droits. Il s'agit d'une erreur technique que l'on a commise quelque part.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, le seul commentaire que je puisse faire aussi, ici, c'est que le cas cité par M. Hehner ne se rattache pas à cet article. Cette disposition parle de redétermination et de réévaluation

Le paragraphe (5) signale que le montant ou la somme correspondant à la sanction, ce between the margin of dumping, as measured at the time of the original appraisal, as against the re-appraised normal value.

[Text]

Mr. Hehner: The hour is getting late, Mr. Arthur, and I do not want to just continue to repeat the same statements but subclause (4) states:

(4) The Deputy Minister may re-determine...

(b) at any time, if the importer or exporter has made any mis-representation...

Subclause (5) says that in such event:

(5) (a) the importer shall pay any additional duty payable...

I still cannot find any clause in the proposed statute that says there is any additional duty payable that the importer should be required to pay. Indeed, I do find in the proposed statute flat provisions that say that unless you collected provisional duties at the time of entry, six months, or a year, or a year and a half earlier, that you never can collect dumping duties. There is no use wasting the time of the Committee arguing the point.

• 1735

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I do not quite accept the position taken by the witness and I think that we should make this clear for the Committee. The case here is where there has been an order or finding and the case to which Mr. Hehner refers is quite different. The case to which Mr. Hehner refers is one on which there has not been any finding on the part of the Tribunal.

We are saying in this clause that where these procedures have been completed, and at some subsequent time, and with a subsequent entry, it is determined that the information supplied to the Department of National Revenue was fraudulent, or there was misrepresentation, it is open to the Department to make a re-appraisal. The amount of penalty, if you will, that will exist on the basis of the redetermination or the re-appraisal will be the amount of difference between the margin as determined at the time of the entry, and the margin of dumping determined after the re-appraisal.

Mr. Hehner: May I make one final comment Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: Mr. Hehner, I hope that my previous remarks are not cutting your answers?

[Interpretation]

sera la différence entre la marge du dumping au moment de l'évaluation initiale et la valeur normale à réévaluer.

M. Hehner: Monsieur Arthur, il se fait tard, je ne veux pas continuer à répéter la même déclaration, mais l'alinéa 4 dit que:

le sous-ministre peut redéterminer...

(b) à tout moment, si l'importateur ou l'exportateur a fait quelque fausse représentation...

Le paragraphe (5) dit que dans un tel cas:

(5)(a) l'importateur doit payer tout droit supplémentaire...

Mais je ne vois aucune disposition de cet article qui prévoit en quoi consistent ces droits supplémentaires? Je crois qu'il y a une disposition, au contraire, dans la loi qui dit qu'à moins qu'on ait perçu les droits provisoires au moment de l'entrée, six mois, un an ou un an et demi plus tôt, on ne peut plus percevoir de droits supplémentaires. Maintenant, il ne serait pas à propos de discuter de cela au Comité.

M. Arthur: Eh bien, monsieur le président, je n'accepte pas l'interprétation du témoin et je crois que nous devrions éclairer le Comité à ce sujet. Il s'agit d'un cas où il y a eu une ordonnance ou une conclusion rendue par le tribunal, qui est très différent de celui auquel réfère M. Hehner.

Dans ce dernier cas, il n'y aurait pas eu de déclaration ou de conclusion de la part du tribunal. Ce que nous disons dans cet article, c'est que lorsque ces dispositions ont été terminées, lorsque plus tard on détermine que les renseignements fournis au ministère du Revenu national étaient frauduleux, qu'il y a eu fausse représentation, le ministère est alors libre de réévaluer et le montant de la sanction—compte tenu de la redétermination—correspondra à la différence entre la marge au moment de l'entrée et la marge de dumping déterminée après la réévaluation.

M. Hehner: Puis-je faire un dernier commentaire, monsieur le président?

Le président: Je ne veux pas du tout vous imposer une règle trop rigide.

[Texte]

Mr. Hehner: They are not cutting me in the slightest, sir, as I think I have shown by being a little verbose on occasion. If Mr. Arthur says that the situation I am talking about is not dealt with in clause 18, may I ask him where it is dealt with in the proposed statute and leave it at that?

Mr. Arthur: It is not, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Hehner: I think it should be.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I would prefer not to carry on this conversation here. We can deal with this in the Committee matter at a later stage. There is an answer.

The Chairman: I think both sides have offered their comments. Are there any questions from members? Yes, Mr. Danson?

Mr. Danson: Mr. Chairman, I do not know if I have missed part due to my absence, but the question of provisional duties is mentioned here, and I have not heard any reply to that. It might have happened while I was out and if so I will pick it up in the Proceedings tomorrow, or when they are published, I should say. There has been reference to provisional duties.

Mr. Hehner: I believe, Mr. Danson, that point was dealt with while you were engaged elsewhere and that you will find it in the Proceedings.

Mr. Danson: Good, thank you.

The Chairman: Now, gentlemen, can we move on to paragraphs 40 and 41 that deal with clause 34 on page 92 of the White Paper.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, on paragraph 40 I merely want to say that we have noted this point. We are looking at it and we will report to you later.

The Chairman: Are there any questions, gentlemen? If not we will move to paragraphs 42 to 46 that deal with the anti-dumping Tribunal and make reference to clause 16, page 66; clause 32, page 90; clause 14, page 64; clause 13(5), pages 58 to 64 and clause 30, page 86. Yes, Mr. Roberts?

Mr. Roberts: I would just like to ask the witness in relation to paragraph 46, dealing with clause 30, whether this is a marginal matter or whether it is really a matter of some importance?

I find myself very greatly in sympathy with the point of view expressed in your brief on

[Interprétation]

M. Hehner: Je regrette d'être un peu trop verbeux. Puis-je alors demander si M. Arthur pense que la situation que j'ai décrite ne tombe pas sous le coup de l'article 18? Sinon, quelles dispositions de la loi y pourvoient?

M. Arthur: Tel n'est pas le cas, monsieur le président.

M. Hehner: Je crois qu'il devrait y avoir une disposition.

M. Arthur: Je n'aimerais pas continuer cet entretien plus avant, nous pouvons le faire à une autre étape des délibérations du Comité.

Le président: Nous avons entendu vos commentaires des deux côtés, fort bien. Y a-t-il des questions de la part des députés? Oui, monsieur Danson.

M. Danson: En raison de mon absence, j'ai peut-être manqué une partie de la discussion. La question des droits provisoires est mentionnée ici, et il me semble que l'on n'a pas fourni des explications, que l'on n'a pas donné de réponse. Il se peut que je retrouve cela dans le compte rendu lorsqu'il sera publié. A-t-on parlé des droits provisoires?

M. Hehner: Je crois que ce point a été bien étudié alors que vous étiez absent. Vous trouverez cela, je crois, dans le compte rendu des délibérations.

M. Danson: Merci.

Le président: Pouvons-nous passer, messieurs, aux articles 40, 41 qui ont trait au paragraphe 34 du Livre blanc à la page 92?

M. Arthur: Au sujet du paragraphe 40, nous avons pris note de ce point. Nous nous en occupons et nous présenterons un rapport ici plus tard.

Le président: Aimeriez-vous poser des questions? Si non, nous passons aux paragraphes 42 à 46 qui ont trait au tribunal anti-dumping et qui se rattachent à l'article 16, page 66, l'article 32, page 90, l'article 14, page 64, l'article 13(5), pages 58 à 64 et l'article 30, page 86. Oui, monsieur Roberts?

M. Roberts: Je voudrais poser une question au témoin au sujet du paragraphe 46, qui a trait à l'article 30. Puis-je demander au témoin s'il s'agit là d'une question d'ordre secondaire ou si c'est une question qui semble revêtir beaucoup d'importance?

Je vois d'un œil très favorable le point de vue exposé dans votre mémoire, mais je vous this particular point. I wonder how important you think it is? Is this a key matter as far as you are concerned or is it really a marginal one?

[Text]

Mr. Hehner: I do not think I can add very much, sir, to the words we put in our brief. We have the feeling that it detracts from the status of what is supposed to be an independent Tribunal with the status of a court. As we have pointed out, the Tribunal is given power to seek the advice of any agency or Department of the Government of Canada.

I might also add that since anything which is being considered by the Tribunal has previously been the subject of publication of formal notices at earlier stages, if there is any Department of Government of Canada which feels that the Tribunal is dealing with a matter on which it has expert knowledge and it can be of assistance to the Tribunal, then there is a way in which it can note through this publication that the case is up.

Apart from these comments I do not think I can add much to what we now have in the written brief.

Mr. Roberts: Thank you.

• 1740

The Chairman: Have you any more questions, gentlemen, or are there any comments from the government officials?

Mr. Aithur: Mr. Chairman, I think just one comment on paragraph 45. I do not think that the brief suggests that there should be retroactive effect. Where the Tribunal reviews or changes its orders or findings. There is no intention...

Mr. Hehner: We had presumed there was no such intent.

Mr. Arthur: I just wanted to make that clear.

The Chairman: Are there any comments or questions from the members? If not...

Mr. Hehner: Mr. Chairman, I think you are now passing to the conclusion paragraph...

Mr. Chairman: Yes.

Mr. Hehner: Paragraph 47, which is a sort of summing up, a repetition of our statements on the heavy burden which is going to be placed on the administrative department. I have been doing most of the talking today, because we have been discussing technical points, relating to the wording.

[Interpretation]

demande l'importance que vous attachez à ces dispositions? S'agit-il d'un point marginal?

M. Hehner: Je ne pense pas que je puisse ajouter grand-chose à ce que nous avons inscrit dans notre mémoire. Nous avons l'impression que cela devrait être un tribunal indépendant ayant le statut d'une cour. Nous avons signalé que le tribunal a les pouvoirs de demander des avis de n'importe quel organisme ou ministère de l'État.

Je puis aussi ajouter que si ce qu'étudie le tribunal a déjà fait l'objet de publications ou d'avis antérieurs, s'il y a un ministère de l'État qui estime que le tribunal s'occupe d'une question sur laquelle il possède des connaissances étendues et qu'il peut aider le tribunal, on peut le savoir par l'entremise de cette publication.

Outre ces commentaires, je ne pense pas que je puisse ajouter quoi que ce soit, en plus de ce que vous avez dans le texte du mémoire.

M. Roberts: Merci.

Le président: Y a-t-il des questions, messieurs? Y a-t-il des commentaires des fonctionnaires du gouvernement?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je crois que je puis faire un commentaire sur le paragraphe 45. A mon avis, le mémoire ne dit pas que les effets ne devraient pas être rétroactifs si le tribunal modifie ses conclusions ou ses constatations.

M. Hehner: Nous avons conclu que tel n'était pas votre intention.

M. Arthur: Je tenais à bien le préciser.

Le président: Y a-t-il des commentaires de la part des députés? Des questions? Sinon...

M. Hehner: Monsieur le président, je crois que vous en venez maintenant à la conclusion, paragraphe 47...

Le président: C'est cela.

M. Hehner: ...qui est une espèce de résumé, une répétition de nos déclarations sur les lourds fardeaux qui seront imposés à l'administration. Nous avons discuté aujourd'hui des points techniques intéressant le libellé de la Loi et c'est la raison pour laquelle j'ai beaucoup parlé aujourd'hui.

[Texte]

I think perhaps we have come to a place where, if it is acceptable to you, you might hear from some of the principals, and Mr. Malone might make a comment.

The Chairman: I agree, Mr. Hehner.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Chairman, as Mr. Hehner said, we have dealt extensively with the technical aspects of the proposed legislation. We have also dealt extensively with the necessity for effective administration if the legislation is to fulfil its proper role in protecting against dumping.

Not only the manufacturers but the workers we represent, are engaged in an industry which is susceptible to dumping, which has been hurt by dumping. It has also been hurt by other aspects of international trade, especially trade from low wage countries.

This subject, which Mr. Émard raised earlier today, has been the subject of extensive discussions with the government. A joint brief was filed by management and labour unions on this particular subject and is not properly the subject today.

However, it is our feeling that if the legislation is to be effective, it is up to the government to set the tone or the manner in which it feels the legislation should be administered. The Department of National Revenue has been the subject of discussion today. There is mentioned in our brief that we feel there are problems, or there will be problems, in the Department of National Revenue if the legislation is to be administered properly.

So, therefore, we feel it is up to the government to set the tone of how it feels that the legislation is to be administered. If there is a feeling that there has to be some beefing up of the Department of National Revenue or the Customs and Excise Division to enable it to do its job properly, it is fundamental that the government see that this is done. We cannot have various whipping boys.

In the long run it is up to the government. This is the government's legislation, it is the legislation of Parliament. We do not feel that this point can be over-emphasized. There may be others of our group here today who have comments also.

Mr. King: Mr. Chairman, and members of the Committee, I have a very brief comment. I would like to reduce this to a very simple

[Interpétation]

Je crois que M. Malone pourrait maintenant faire un commentaire, si cela vous convient.

Le président: Je suis d'accord.

M. Malone: Monsieur le président, comme M. Hehner l'a dit, nous avons fait des observations, en long et en large, sur les aspects techniques de la mesure législative. Nous avons aussi étudié en profondeur la nécessité d'assurer une administration efficace, pour que la loi atteigne les objectifs envisagés contre le dumping.

L'industrie, que nous représentons, non seulement les fabricants mais aussi les travailleurs, c'est une industrie qui est sensible au dumping, qui en a déjà souffert et qui a aussi subi le contre-coup d'autres aspects du commerce international, notamment, des importations des pays où les traitements sont peu élevés.

Comme M. Émard l'a signalé plus tôt aujourd'hui, cette question a fait l'objet de longues discussions avec le gouvernement. Un mémoire conjoint a été présenté par le patronat et le syndicat là-dessus.

Nous estimons que, pour que la mesure soit vraiment exécutoire, il appartient au gouvernement. Un mémoire conjoint a été présenté par le patronat et le syndicat là-dessus.

Nous estimons que, pour que la mesure soit vraiment exécutoire, il appartient au gouvernement de créer le climat, dans lequel devra baigner l'administration de la Loi. Le ministère du Revenu national a été mentionné au cours de la discussion aujourd'hui. Dans notre mémoire nous signalons le fait qu'il y a des problèmes ou qu'il y aura des problèmes au sein du ministère du Revenu national, si la Loi doit être bien appliquée.

Il importe donc que le gouvernement prenne l'initiative de dire comment la mesure doit être appliquée et, si l'on estime qu'il importe de donner plus d'autorité au ministère du Revenu national ou à la Division des douanes, il faudra que le gouvernement agisse en conséquence.

A la longue, cela incombe au gouvernement. C'est une mesure proposée par le gouvernement et adoptée par le Parlement. Nous n'insisterons jamais trop sur ce point. Peut-être y a-t-il d'autres membres de notre groupe qui aimeraient aussi faire des commentaires. M. King.

M. King: Monsieur le président, membres du Comité, je ferai un très bref commentaire. J'aimerais à résumer tout ceci à un point très point. We are in a big league now. Our manufacturing industry, not only the textile industry, but all manufacturing industry in Canada is in the big league. If one is going to play in the big league and maintain his franchise he has to know the rules and he has to play by the rules.

[Text]

We have to play to win, not necessarily the winner, but in the top bracket if he is going to hold his franchise.

I say that the most important thing, reducing it to very simple words is, if one is going to play in the league, he must play according to the rules of the tough teams in the league. It is a very tough league. This country is not going to get ahead if we are patsies and we let everybody board us and we do not board anybody else, to put it in hockey parlance.

• 1745

Play it as the game is played.

We need capital investment in this country. We need employment. There is a whole range of things involved with capital investment and employment, things that are very, very essential.

I say that the conduct of this anti-dumping legislation can have one of the greatest effects on both capital investment and employment in this country in the years to come. If we do not take very, very active steps to be sure that we are playing the game the way it is played by those in other countries, we may all be very unhappy. Thank you.

The Chairman: Thank you, Mr. King.

Le président: Est-ce que M. Goulet aurait des commentaires à faire à la fin de cette réunion? Monsieur Goulet ou monsieur Demers?

M. Demers: Non, pas moi. Merci bien.

The Chairman: Are there any comments from the members? Yes, Mr. Gillespie.

Mr. Gillespie: I would just like to say, as others have said earlier in the day Mr. Chairman, that I have been most impressed with the presentation of all members of the industry. I think it most significant that we have heard from both labour and management and in a comprehensive and eloquent way.

Mr. Hehner: Thank you very much. May I also—in this mutual admiration society—express my thanks to the members of the Committee for the courteous way in which they have addressed questions, and to the simple: l'industrie de la fabrication, non seulement l'industrie du textile mais toutes les industries de fabrication au Canada se retrouvent parmi les grands, ou dans les majeures pour emprunter au jargon sportif. Et, pour faire partie des ligues majeures et y garder une franchise, il faut connaître, évidemment, les règlements et il faut s'en tenir aux règlements.

[Interpretation]

Il faut jouer de façon à sortir victorieux. Il ne faut pas nécessairement être le seul vainqueur mais il faut se retrouver parmi les meilleurs joueurs, si l'on veut tenir son bout du marché. Et, pour résumer tout cela en quelques mots, je dirais que pour faire partie de la ligue, il faut le faire d'après des règlements des équipes les plus dures de la ligue. Et, cette ligue, je vous assure, est très dure.

Et, notre pays ne prendra pas l'avance sur les autres, si nous laissons tout le monde nous ennuyer sans répliquer.

Nous jouerons selon les règles du jeu.

Nous avons besoin d'investissements dans notre pays, nous avons besoin d'emplois, et il y a beaucoup de facteurs en cause, qui sont essentiels et qui touchent à ces domaines.

Et, cette Loi contre le dumping peut avoir des répercussions très profondes et sur l'investissement et sur l'emploi au Canada au cours des années à venir. Et, si nous ne prenons pas des mesures très efficaces dans le but de nous assurer que nous allons jouer le jeu à la façon des autres pays, nous nous en porterons que plus mal. Je vous remercie.

Le président: Merci, monsieur King.

The Chairman: Mr. Goulet, do you have any comments to make at the end of this meeting? Mr. Goulet or Mr. Demers?

Mr. Demers: No, thank you.

Le président: Est-ce que les députés veulent faire des commentaires? Oui, monsieur Gillespie.

M. Gillespie: Comme d'autres l'ont dit plus tôt au cours de la journée, monsieur le président, j'ai été très très impressionné par l'exposé de tous les membres de l'industrie. C'est un fait très significatif que nous ayons entendu le point de vue patronal et syndical, d'une façon très complète et très étoffée.

M. Hehner: Merci beaucoup. Puis-je exprimer mes remerciements aux membres du Comité pour la courtoisie dont ils ont fait preuve, lorsqu'ils ont posé les questions, ainsi qu'au président du Comité, qui a fait preuve

[Texte]

Chairman for his courtesies and assistances as we made our presentation. If it is not out of order to mention someone who is not a member of the Committee, sir, but a servant of the Committee, I would also like to express our thanks to Miss Ballantine for the help she gave us in arranging for this presentation.

The Chairman: My thanks to the Canadian Textiles Institute, the Confederation of National Trade Unions, the Textile Workers' Union of America, and United Textile Workers of America for the presentation of their brief and the comments they have made before this Committee. Thank you very much.

Yes, Mr. Roberts.

Mr. Roberts: Who are we going to have testify this evening?

The Chairman: This evening it is the Canada Japan Trade Council at 8.00 o'clock in the same room.

EVENING SITTING

The Chairman: Gentlemen, you have before your Committee a brief from the Canada-Japan Trade Council, and I will ask Colonel R. L. Houston and Mr. G. Wasteney to comment before the Committee.

Colonel Houston is Executive Director of the Canada-Japan Trade Council, and Mr. Wasteney is President of Wasteney & Evans Consultants Limited of Ottawa.

Colonel Houston, do you have any comments before we go through your brief?

Mr. Robert L. Houston (Executive Director, Canada-Japan Trade Council): Mr. Chairman, gentlemen, it is a pleasure to be here. I believe everyone has a copy of our short brief, but I would just like to reiterate what I said in the covering letter to our brief—that the main object in submitting the brief on anti-dumping legislation is to ensure to the best of our ability that no avoidable impediment occurs to the present large and growing two-way trade between Canada and Japan.

Our secondary object is to emphasize that the proposed new act and regulations, while a great improvement on the present legislation, still fail to overcome certain inequities which create hardship for the export industries of a number of Canada's trading partners, including Japan.

With your permission I would like to say a word on the composition of this tribunal. We de beaucoup de courtoisie à notre égard. S'il n'est pas irrecevable de mentionner quelqu'un qui n'est pas membre du Comité, je tiens à remercier M<sup>lle</sup> Ballantine pour toute l'aide qu'elle nous a apportée dans la préparation de cet exposé.

[Interprétation]

Le président: Je tiens à remercier l'Institut Canadien des textiles, la Confédération des syndicats nationaux, l'Union des ouvriers du textile d'Amérique, les Ouvriers unis du textile d'Amérique, pour la présentation de leur mémoire et pour les excellents commentaires qu'ils nous ont présentés. Merci beaucoup.

Oui, monsieur Roberts?

M. Roberts: Qui viendra témoigner ce soir.

Le président: Ce soir à 8 h., dans la même pièce, nous entendrons le Conseil commercial Canada-Japon. Merci beaucoup.

SÉANCE DU SOIR

Le président: Messieurs, vous êtes saisis d'un mémoire du Conseil commercial Canada-Japon, et j'invite maintenant les représentants du Conseil à se présenter devant le comité.

Le colonel Houston est le directeur exécutif du Conseil commercial Canada-Japon et M. Wasteney est le président de Wasteney & Evans Consultants Limited d'Ottawa.

M. Houston, avez-vous quelques commentaires à faire au sujet de votre mémoire?

M. Robert L. Houston (Directeur exécutif, Conseil commercial Canada-Japon): Monsieur le président, messieurs, c'est un plaisir d'être parmi vous ce soir. Je crois que vous avez tous un exemplaire de notre bref mémoire, mais j'aimerais simplement répéter ce que j'ai dit dans la lettre qui accompagnait notre mémoire. C'est d'ailleurs le principal objet pour lequel nous présentons notre mémoire sur la Loi antidumping. Il s'agit d'assurer, au meilleur de nos connaissances, qu'on n'entravera pas le commerce entre le Canada et le Japon, qui croît à l'heure actuelle.

Notre deuxième objet, c'est de bien souligner que la nouvelle proposition de Loi et les règlements qui en découleront, tout en constituant une amélioration marquée par rapport à la Loi actuelle, n'effacent pas néanmoins certaines injustices qui créent des difficultés pour des industries d'exportation d'un grand nombre de partenaires commerciaux du Canada, y compris le Japon.

Avec votre permission, j'aimerais dire un mot au sujet de la composition du tribunal. A are looking ahead 25, 50 perhaps 75 years, and I suggest that the composition of the tribunal or the body which is going to be set up can be one of the most important bits of legislation which have occurred in our country for a long number of years. I suggest that in this day and age,—and this is nothing new to you gentlemen assembled—you cannot dissociate trade and politics.

[Text]

We do not have lobbying as it is commonly known in the United States, but I suggest that we have a very strong lobbying in a different form here in Canada. I cannot emphasize too strongly that untold harm can be done between countries, not only in the economic field, to repeat once again, but in the political field, if bad judgments are given by bodies such as the tribunal in question.

[Interpretation]

mon avis, nous sommes en avance de 25, de 50 ou même de 75 années. Je suis d'avis que la composition du tribunal ou de l'organisme qui sera institué pourrait correspondre à l'une des mesures législatives les plus importantes qui aient été présentées à notre Parlement depuis bon nombre d'années. Je ne vous apprendis rien en disant qu'on ne peut pas dissocier, à notre époque, le commerce et la politique.

Nous n'avons pas de système de pression politique comme aux États-Unis, mais, à mon avis, nous avons tout un service de pression politique de forme différente au Canada. Je ne saurais trop insister sur le fait qu'on peut causer beaucoup de tort, non seulement dans le domaine économique, mais aussi dans le domaine politique, entre les pays, si des organismes comme le tribunal envisagé rend des jugements mal fondés.

• 2020

In thinking it over in my mind, I wonder if there should not be a body somewhat in the form of the Supreme Court of Canada, and perhaps some might say that I am taking too drastic a view of this body, but I suggest, if you think it over very carefully, that a good deal may be said for having a body of men—perhaps one should not exclude ladies as well—of the highest integrity and the broadest judgment because they are going to be dealing with extremely important matters.

This body could deal with matters involving large amounts of money, the Tribunal of civil servants could deal with lesser amounts and the remainder could be handled by the Department of National Revenue. As I read the proposal, a tremendous onus is being placed upon the Deputy Minister of National Revenue, and I think it is a most unfair onus. As we said in our brief, he as well as his senior advisers and the Minister could be placed in a most invidious position.

The Chairman: Thank you, sir. Has Mr. Westeneys any comments he would like to make?

Mr. Geoffrey Wasteneys (President, Wasteneys & Evans Consultants Limited): I will not make any general comments, sir. If someone wishes to ask questions on our brief, that is my subject.

The Chairman: Thank you. Mr. Arthur, do you or Mr. Hind have any comments you wish to make on the brief?

Mr. Hind: No, sir.

En y réfléchissant, je me demande s'il ne devrait pas y avoir un organisme semblable à la Cour suprême du Canada. Certains diront peut-être qu'on adopte une vue trop rigoureuse de cet organisme. Il y aurait sans doute avantage à avoir un groupe d'hommes, et peut-être même de femmes, de grande intégrité et ayant un jugement sûr, car cet organisme va étudier des questions d'extrême importance.

Cet organisme pourrait étudier des questions qui ont trait à de vastes sommes d'argent. Le tribunal de fonctionnaires pourrait s'occuper de plus petites sommes et ce qui reste, pourrait relever du ministère du Revenu national. Si je lis bien la proposition qui est faite, on impose une charge considérable au sous-ministre du Revenu national et je crois que cela est tout à fait injuste. Ainsi que nous le signalions dans notre mémoire, il pourrait être placé dans une très mauvaise situation, de même d'ailleurs que le ministre lui-même.

Le président: Merci beaucoup. M. Wasteneys aurait-il des commentaires à faire?

M. Geoffrey Wasteneys (président, Wasteneys and Evans Consultants Ltd): Je ne ferai pas de commentaires en général. Je suis venu ici spécialement pour répondre aux questions qu'on aimerait poser sur notre mémoire.

Le président: Merci. Monsieur Arthur avez-vous des commentaires à formuler sur le mémoire avant que nous commençons à poser des questions ou vous, monsieur Hind?

M. Hind: Non.

[Texte]

The Chairman: Gentlemen, you have received the brief and I am at your disposal regarding questions or comments.

Mr. Harkness: At the top of page 2 of your brief you state:

We understand that the proposed new Regulations are intended to provide for the deduction from the normal value of certain allowances covering such matters as cash discounts, transportation costs and similar items and that this allowance would include costs incurred by the exporter in his domestic marketing of similar goods relating directly to functions which, in Canada, would be provided by the importer.

That is not my understanding of the evidence we have heard to date. I wonder if either Mr. Arthur or Mr. Hind would like to comment on that?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, as I understand this paragraph there is a suggestion that certain costs incurred by the exporter in his domestic market are not taken into account in establishing normal value.

Mr. Chairman, I think we have had a good deal of discussion on the basis on which normal value will be established. First of all, clause 9 of the bill sets out the conditions for determining normal value and the Regulations under clause 9 spell out in greater detail the discounts that may be allowed.

I would be most interested, Mr. Chairman, in knowing specifically what the witness has in mind when he suggests, as I understand it, there are certain costs which are not allowed in determining normal value.

Mr. Wasteneys: Mr. Chairman, it was not really our intention in the brief to suggest that these were not allowed. In fact, this is a transposition of meaning. We were simply referring to the various allowances that would be used in determining the normal value. We were not suggesting that you were not going to allow them.

• 2025

Mr. Arthur: Then, Mr. Chairman, are there certain allowances that are not included in the Regulations, as they have been put before this Committee that would apply in the home market, and where there is no provision for these being taken into account in determining normal value?

Mr. Wasteneys: Excuse me, Mr. Chairman. I am not sure whether Mr. Arthur is directing that question to me or to...

[Interprétation]

Le président: Messieurs, nous avons entendu la lecture du mémoire et je suis à votre disposition, si vous avez des commentaires à faire ou des questions à poser.

M. Harkness: Au haut de la page 2, de votre mémoire, vous dites ce qui suit:

Nous comprenons que le projet de règlement a pour objet de prévoir la déduction, de la valeur normale, de certains dégrèvements touchant, par exemple, les rabais en espèces, le coût du transport et d'autres articles semblables, et que ces dégrèvements comprendraient les frais de l'exportateur pour la commercialisation domestique de produits semblables directement connexe aux fonctions qu'au Canada l'importateur devrait assumer.

Ce n'est pas ainsi que j'ai interprété les témoignages que nous avons eus jusqu'ici. Je me demande si M. Arthur ou M. Hehner peut faire des commentaires là-dessus?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, si je comprends bien ce paragraphe on dit que l'exportateur doit assumer certains frais sur le marché interne et qu'on n'en tiendra pas compte pour déterminer la valeur normale.

J'estime, monsieur le président, que nous avons eu beaucoup de discussions sur la détermination de la valeur normale. Tout d'abord l'article 9 du Bill établit les conditions pour déterminer la valeur normale et les règlements découlant de l'article 9 explicitent le rabais qui peut être accordé.

J'aimerais bien savoir ce à quoi songe notamment le témoin quand il dit qu'il y a certains frais dont il n'est pas tenu compte dans la détermination de la valeur normale.

M. Wasteneys: Monsieur le président, je ne disais pas qu'il n'y avait pas de dégrèvement, il s'agit là de la transposition de comptes rendus de nos réunions. Nous voulons parler de divers dégrèvements qui seront utilisés pour déterminer la valeur normale, nous ne disons pas que vous ne les accorderez pas.

M. Arthur: Dans ce cas, monsieur le président, y a-t-il des dégrèvements qui ne sont pas inclus dans les règlements présentés au Comité et qui pourraient s'appliquer sur le marché national n'entreraient pas en ligne de compte pour la détermination de la valeur normale?

M. Wasteneys: Pardon, monsieur le président, j'ignore si on pose cette question au président ou directement à moi?

[Text]

The Chairman: The questions are always asked through the Chairman, but either you or Mr. Houston may reply.

Mr. Wasteneys: Frankly, I think there is sort of a misunderstanding here. This paragraph is purely intended to be descriptive and not argumentative. It has been turned around in some way. The object of it is simply to show that we are concerned about the fact that, in contrast to the present provisions of section 6 of the Customs Tariff Act, allowances are provided for certain costs. I suppose I should direct this remark to the proposed draft Regulations, which state in paragraph 5:

The normal value of any goods as otherwise determined may be justified with the deduction of an allowance on account of deferred discounts granted by the exporter in connection with the goods purchased by the importer, if the discounts are shown on the invoice at the time of the importation...

These various things are further spelled out in the Regulations. This is really all we are directing your attention to.

Mr. Houston: If I might just add to that, Mr. Chairman, the reason the paragraph is phrased this way is because we want to make sure that the proposed new Regulations cover this. So, it is really a question we could direct to you as an expert on this.

Mr. Harkness: This comes back to my original question. This has certainly not been my understanding as we have gone through the evidence to date in this Committee in consideration of this White Paper on Anti-Dumping.

Mr. Houston: This is why we wanted to bring out the point, Mr. Harkness. That is why I wish to direct my question, if I may, to Mr. Arthur.

The Chairman: I understand that Mr. Hind wishes to comment on your remarks.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, perhaps I could give Mr. Arthur a breather while he is rearranging his papers. As I understand the paper, the Council expresses satisfaction in the fact that under the new Regulations the Department, in determining the normal value, will be permitted to make appropriate allowances for such things as cash discounts.

I suggest that that is indeed covered by Regulation 6. The next item for which it is suggested there is provision for allowance is

[Interpretation]

Le président: Il faut toujours s'adresser au président, mais c'est vous qui êtes le témoin.

M. Wasteneys: Je crois franchement qu'il y a ici un malentendu. Ce paragraphe devrait être descriptif et non pas litigieux, argumentatif. Voici de quoi il s'agit. Nous craignons que, contrairement aux dispositions relevant de l'article 6 de la Loi sur le tarif des douanes, on tient compte des circonstances de certains frais, de certains coûts. Ceci a trait au projet de loi qui stipule à l'article (5):

la valeur normale de toute autre marchandise, compte tenu d'une déduction ou des dégrèvements accordés par les exportateurs. Si les rabais ou les dégrèvements étaient indiqués sur le bordereau au moment de l'importation, etc...

Je crois que toutes ces dispositions sont explicitées dans les règlements. Voilà ce que nous voulons signaler.

M. Houston: Puis-je ajouter, monsieur le président, en lisant le paragraphe, nous comprenons qu'elle est nouvelle proposition de Loi et nous voulons nous assurer qu'elle s'applique à ces cas. C'est une question que nous pourrions vous poser, puisque vous êtes spécialiste en la matière.

M. Harkness: Ceci revient à ma première question, car ce n'est sûrement pas ce que j'avais compris, mais en jetant un coup d'œil sur le Livre blanc sur l'antidumping et d'après tous les témoignages qui ont été donnés au Comité jusqu'à présent.

M. Houston: C'est la raison pour laquelle nous avons soulevé cette question, monsieur Harkness. Et j'aimerais poser la question à M. Arthur. Est-ce que—ne sachant pas ce qu'on a dit auparavant—est-ce que nous avons raison?

Le président: Voulez-vous faire des commentaires là-dessus?

M. Hind: M. Arthur range ses papiers. Je peux peut-être expliquer la situation. Si je le comprends bien le Conseil exprime sa satisfaction, car en application du nouveau règlement, un ministère lorsqu'il déterminera la valeur, permettra des dégrèvements pour certaines remises. Le règlement numéro 6 prévoit ce cas. Le point suivant pour lequel nous pensons qu'on y tient compte de dégrèvement tient aux frais de transport, le tout régi par le règlement n° 7. Le point suivant auquel nous transportation costs. This is also true. This is covered by Regulation 7.

[Texte]

The next item we come to is similar items. I suggest to you that if you look at Regulation 5 you will find there is provision under the draft act for the allowance of deferred discounts in the home market. When we come to other allowances I would suggest that if you look at Regulation 3 you will find that the Department of National Revenue, in establishing the normal value, may for the first time be able to make an allowance for larger quantities coming into Canada than are sold in the home market.

• 2030

If you look at another regulation—which I have not been able to pinpoint yet by number, although I believe it is Regulation 8—you will find that the Department of National Revenue can make an allowance for trade level. In other words, if the sale is to an importer who is at a superior level of trade, the best level of trade buying in the home market, the Department of National Revenue under Regulation 8 can make a suitable allowance for the costs which the exporter would save if he were to sell in his home market to that level of trade.

So, I think in a general way, Mr. Chairman, I would say that the new Regulations really coincide with the interpretation placed on them by the Council.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I really made my remarks because I was looking at the word “concerned” in the next paragraph:

We are particularly concerned with Section 9(1) (d) of the proposed Anti-Dumping Act...

The Regulations, as Mr. Hind has just given to the Committee, spell out these various allowances. My remarks were based on this word “concerned”.

The Chairman: Did you want to make a comment, Mr. Houston?

Mr. Houston: I think it is a concern. I believe Mr. Hind has explained it. I think the matter mainly is that it is explained before this body so there is no misunderstanding either in our minds or—I do not know whether Mr. Harkness is satisfied.

The Chairman: Have you any other questions, Mr. Harkness?

Mr. Harkness: Not at this point, no.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Mr. Chairman, I was interested in the comments venons est: articles semblables. Je pense que si on examine le règlement n° 5, on prévoit, d'après le projet de loi, des dégrèvements postérieurs.

[Interprétation]

Lorsqu'on en arrive à d'autres dégrèvements, si vous examinez le règlement n° 3, vous constaterez que le ministère du Revenu national, lorsqu'il établit la valeur normale peut, pour la première fois, prévoir un dégrèvement pour des quantités plus importantes importées au Canada que celles vendues sur le marché intérieur.

Et, si l'on examine un autre règlement, dont je n'ai pas le numéro dans le moment, je pense que c'est le règlement n° 8 et vous verrez que le ministère du Revenu national peut permettre un dégrèvement au niveau commercial. Donc, si la vente se fait à un importateur qui a un niveau supérieur commercial par rapport au meilleur niveau commercial sur le marché intérieur, d'après le règlement numéro 8, le ministère du Revenu national peut prévoir un dégrèvement approprié pour tenir compte des coûts auxquels l'exportateur n'aurait pas à faire face s'il vendait sur le marché intérieur à ce niveau. Monsieur le président, je pense que les nouveaux règlements coïncident avec l'interprétation que le Conseil a adoptée.

M. Arthur: Je suis intervenu parce que j'ai examiné les termes du paragraphe suivant qui dit que nous sommes particulièrement préoccupés par l'article 9 1) b) de la loi proposée. Et ces règlements, comme l'a fait remarquer M. Hind au comité, fixent ces différents dégrèvements. Je voulais parler de nos préoccupations.

Le président: Vous avez des commentaires, M. Houston?

M. Houston: Oui, cela nous préoccupe! M. Hind l'a expliqué; c'est une question qu'on nous a de façon qu'il n'y ait pas de malentendu dans notre esprit.

Le président: Avez-vous d'autres questions, monsieur Harkness?

M. Harkness: Non, pour l'instant, pas.

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Monsieur le président, j'ai été intéressé par les made by Mr. Houston when he said too much onus is put on the Deputy Minister. Again, on page 2 of the brief it is suggested:

[Text]

We are concerned that the determination of the final amount will rest entirely upon the opinion of the Deputy Minister rather than upon factual evidence which could, presumably, be presented.

We have also noted a very considerable discretion which is provided to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue...

In the light of these comments, what is your opinion of Section 37 on page 96 which gives the Minister very wide latitude. I would be interested in what you have to say about that section.

Mr. Houston: Mr. Chairman and Mr. Howard, in my opening remarks which I made very broad—I will go back again. I would hate to be the Minister or the Deputy Minister, to be placed in a position in which this Act is going to place or could place these two gentlemen. Everyone is human.

If you have a large body of people very carefully selected—as I said they could not deal with every little item which comes up which normally would fall within the purview of the Department.

But if you have a matter which is going to run into perhaps millions of dollars or hundreds of thousands of dollars, between two countries where the greatest amount of anger can be generated—businessmen in all countries, at least in our Western countries, have a tremendous effect on the governments—I am merely saying, or we are merely saying, that to put this onus on the Minister and on the Deputy Minister of a Department, I feel is much too great.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): You would prefer to see it done by the larger skill handled by a court, really?

Mr. Houston: Exactly.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): What is your opinion of Section 37? Would Mr. Wasteneys like to deal with that?

Mr. Wasteneys: Mr. Chairman, I shall answer that. I think that Mr. Hind and the other representatives from the Department of National Revenue would agree that Section 37 is something extra, specific to the anti-dumping, and it is a position that is found, or is adding to a position that can be found, under Section 6 of the Customs Tariff providing for a surtax which is additional to anti-dumping duty. It is a wide power.

[Interpretation]

commentaires de M. Houston qui a dit: le sous-ministre a trop de responsabilités. Puis à la page 2 du mémoire, il est suggéré:

que la somme définitive dépendra essentiellement de l'avis du sous-ministre plutôt que des preuves qui pourraient être présentées. Et nous remarquons que l'on laisse une grande discrétion au sous-ministre du Revenu national.

A la lumière de ces remarques, quel est votre avis, que pensez-vous de l'article 37, à la page 96; qui donne de très grandes possibilités au ministre, qui lui laisse toute latitude, que pensez-vous de cet article?

M. Houston: Monsieur le président et monsieur Howard, dans ma déclaration d'introduction qui était très générale, j'y reviens, je n'aimerais être ni le ministre ni le sous-ministre et me trouver dans la situation dans laquelle la loi va, ou pourrait placer ces deux messieurs. Nous sommes tous humains.

Prenons un vaste ensemble constitué par des gens qui sont très soigneusement choisis, comme je l'ai dit, ils ne peuvent pas étudier chacun des articles qui entrent et qui relèvent de la compétence du ministère.

Mais s'il y a une question, un point qui met en jeu des millions de dollars ou des centaines de milliers de dollars entre deux pays et est susceptible de créer des tensions, les hommes d'affaires de tous les pays, de nos pays occidentaux du moins peuvent exercer des pressions très importantes sur le gouvernement. Et nous disons simplement, je dis simplement que si cette responsabilité est confiée au ministre ou au sous-ministre d'un ministère, cela est trop.

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Vous préféreriez que ce soit fait sur une plus grande échelle et que ce soit un tribunal qui tranche?

M. Houston: Exactement.

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Que pensez-vous de l'article 37? M. Wasteneys?

M. Wasteneys: Monsieur le président, je répondrai, à mon avis, M. Hind et les autres représentants du ministère du Revenu national doivent admettre que l'article 37 est quelque chose de très précis. Cela s'ajoute aux dispositions d'antidumping, à l'article 6 du tarif des douanes qui impose une surtaxe en plus des droits d'antidumping. C'est là un grand pouvoir.

[Texte]

Although a change has been made in Section 6 of the Customs Tariff, it is of much the same nature as is currently provided. It is a special duty or a special tax over and beyond dumping duty. There probably have been instances of this tax having been applied, but not to my knowledge.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): You are not alarmed by the provision that makes for the Minister having such wide discretionary powers, then?

Mr. Houston: I am alarmed, and again I say I am alarmed for the Minister as much as anyone else. In a country as broad as ours, of ten provinces with so many diverse industrial factors going to make it up—and I again will go back to the lobbying question—a tremendous amount of influence can be put on any Minister.

With all due respect, and I have the greatest respect for our Ministers both past and present, but again I say everyone is human, and for one man to be put under a tremendous amount of attack, I think is most unfair.

That is why I say that, whether you call it a Tribunal or whatever it may be, matters involving tremendous amounts of money—and this has to be gone into very carefully to find out the ramifications of something which perhaps on the surface appears relatively minor—may project themselves from hundreds of dollars into hundreds of thousands. And this is my great concern about this Article 37.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Could we have the comments of Mr. Hind or Mr. Arthur on this subject?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, the clause in question, namely—

The Chairman: Mr. Hind, before you go on, I am sure you will be able to reply for yourself, but Mr. Howard is asking a question perhaps that should be directed to a Minister of the Crown. But I will leave it to Mr. Hind.

Mr. Danson: We do not have a Minister of the Crown here.

Mr. Harkness: If I may say a word on this, Mr. Chairman, I do not think that situation—Section 37—is designed to cover cases which are not dumping, but rather where unfair competition for Canadian products comes into existence. It is particularly applicable, as I mentioned several times before in this Committee, in the fruit and vegetable industry

[Interprétation]

Bien qu'une modification ait été faite à l'article 6 du tarif des douanes c'est tout à fait la même chose que ce qui est prévu ici. Et c'est un droit spécial ou une taxe spéciale qui s'ajoute au droit de dumping. Je ne connais pas de cas dans lequel ce texte ait été appliqué.

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Vous n'êtes pas inquiet en raison de la grande latitude dont dispose le ministre?

M. Houston: Moi, oui je le suis. Je suis aussi inquiet pour le ministre que le sont les autres. Monsieur le président, dans un pays aussi vaste que le nôtre, il y a dix provinces avec tant de facteurs industriels divers qui composent ce pays. Et j'en reviendrai à la question des pressions qui s'exercent sur le gouvernement, qu'on peut faire grandement pression sur n'importe quel ministre.

Et en toute déférence, j'ai le plus grand respect pour nos ministres, aussi bien nos anciens ministres que les ministres du gouvernement actuel. Mais je répète que le monde est humain et qu'un homme soit soumis à tant d'attaques me semble très injuste.

C'est pourquoi je dis: qu'on appelle cela un tribunal ou qu'on l'appelle ce qu'on voudra, les questions mettant en jeu de grosses sommes d'argent doivent être attaquées très prudemment pour savoir quelles sont les ramifications de quelque chose qui, superficiellement, peut sembler tout à fait secondaire, mais qui peut atteindre non des centaines de dollars, mais des centaines de milliers de dollars. Voilà quelle est ma plus grave inquiétude en ce qui a trait à l'article 37.

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Est-ce que nous pourrions avoir l'opinion de M. Hind ou de M. Arthur au sujet de ce qui vient d'être dit?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, l'article en question ...

Le président: Avant que vous ne continuiez, monsieur Hind, vous posez une question qui devrait être adressée à un ministre de la Couronne.

M. Danson: Il n'y a hélas pas de ministre de la Couronne présent.

M. Harkness: L'article 37 se rapporte non au dumping mais à la concurrence déloyale et il s'applique particulièrement, comme je l'ai dit plusieurs fois auparavant au comité, à l'industrie des fruits et des légumes en raison de la nature saisonnière de cette industrie et c'est le genre de dispositions qu'il faut absolument avoir au tarif douanier afin de donner because of its seasonal nature. And it is the type of provision which I think it is essential to have, as far as your Customs regulations are concerned, in order to give protection which otherwise just would not exist, and which is necessary in order to keep many industries in existence at all, and which is for the ultimate protection really of the consumer.

[Text]

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): I am prepared to accept the necessity of having it there, but it would seem to me that it is important that we have a clear understanding that that is the kind of use that it is to have, and for that reason I would be interested in hearing from either Mr. Hind or Mr. Arthur?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, Clause 37 on page 96 is not new. In substance it is present in the Customs Act as Section 40A (7) (c). The new clause will work in almost exactly the same fashion as the existing clause.

This is not a responsibility that rests only on the shoulders of a Minister. If you will read Clause 37 you will note that the Minister recommends to the Governor in Council that certain action be taken. Therefore, it is a decision that is taken by government.

The counterpart of this Clause, namely, 40A (7) (c) of the Customs Act, has been used in a number of instances over the past few years. This has been said at previous meetings. It has been used most recently in connection with the valuation of corn. It has also been used in the valuation of potatoes, of frozen peas, fresh and frozen strawberries, garments from a cow, and so on.

We have been operating under a piece of legislation of this kind in the past, and I would think that we will not be faced with any more difficulties in the future than we have been faced with in the past. There is one difference, and this is why a change is being made. Under the existing legislation the penalty is in the form of anti-dumping duty. Under the proposed legislation it will take the form of a tax rather than an anti-dumping duty.

Mr. Danson: What are garments from a cow?

The Chairman: I understand Mr. Houston would like to make comments on Mr. Hind's remarks.

Mr. Houston: Thank you, Mr. Hind. Mr. Chairman, again I will go back. I realize that this is covered in the present legislation but une protection qui n'existerait pas autrement et qui est nécessaire pour que de nombreuses industries continuent à exister et pour la protection du consommateur.

[Interpretation]

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Cela me semble utile, mais il faut que nous comprenions bien quelle doit être son utilisation. C'est pourquoi je voudrais que M. Hind ou M. Arthur nous donne son avis.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, l'article 37 de la page 96 n'est pas nouveau. En fait, il figure à l'article 40(a)(7)(c) de la loi sur les douanes. La nouvelle disposition fonctionnera exactement de la même façon que l'article actuel.

Ce n'est pas une responsabilité uniquement du ministre. Si vous lisez l'article 37, vous remarquerez que le ministre recommande au gouverneur en conseil que certaines mesures soient prises. En conséquence, c'est une décision qui est prise par le gouvernement.

La contrepartie de cette disposition 40(a)(7)(c) de la loi sur les douanes a été utilisée à plusieurs reprises au cours des dernières années. Cela a été déjà dit à des réunions antérieures. Il a été utilisé très récemment en rapport avec l'évaluation du maïs. Il a été utilisé pour l'évaluation des pommes de terre, des pois congelés, des framboises congelées et fraîches, des vêtements en peaux de vaches, etc.

Par le passé nous avons administré une mesure législative de ce genre et je pense que nous n'aurons pas davantage de difficultés à l'avenir que nous n'en avons eu par le passé. Il y a une différence et c'est pourquoi un changement est proposé. En vertu de la Loi actuelle, la pénalité est imposée sous forme de droits antidumping, en vertu de la mesure proposée, elle prendra la forme d'une taxe et non d'un droit antidumping.

M. Danson: Que voulez-vous dire lorsque vous parlez d'articles provenant de la vache? Il s'agit de pièces d'automobiles, semble-t-il.

Le président: Je crois que M. Houston veut faire des commentaires sur ce que M. Hind a dit.

M. Houston: Merci M. Hind. Monsieur le président, encore une fois, je voudrais revenir sur la question. Je me rends compte que as you have explained, it could go from the Minister to the government.

[Texte]

The next place would be the Cabinet, and I suggest that these are men who are vastly overworked now and who have to be experts in many, many, different fields. This is why I wonder whether or not the most careful consideration should not be given to some federal body that deals with matters of this nature every day, such as your Fair Practices, Tariff Board and so on, where matters of this nature, if necessary, could be sent from the Minister before they go to the Cabinet.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, the decisions that are taken under Section 37 bear the judgment of a number of departments and this does require action by the Governor in Council which is, in fact, ministers or the Cabinet, and these are the people responsible for fiscal matters. I am not quite certain here what you are suggesting. Is it that there be another body as well to consider this?

Mr. Houston: If a matter comes up which has to go to the Tariff Board, let us say, it could go from the Minister to the Tariff Board. Am I correct?

Mr. Arthur: I think, Mr. Chairman, that the decisions under Section 37, or under the section that is now in the Customs Act for purposes of placing values of the kind that we are discussing here on imported goods, are not matters which can be referred to the Tariff Board.

Mr. Houston: I am saying that this is one board such as I suggest could be set up, where large, contentious items could be forwarded rather than going directly to the Cabinet.

This is getting rather complicated, but the main object in bringing this up was to ensure that not too much power is left in the hands of one deputy minister or one minister, because again I say that it could place both gentlemen in a very invidious position.

• 2045

The Chairman: Mr. Howard.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): I have heard it suggested that sometimes in our trade practices and in the practices of other cela était prévu dans l'ancienne mesure législative qui est toujours en vigueur d'ailleurs. Mais, comme vous l'avez dit, cela peut aller du ministre au gouvernement.

[Interprétation]

Maintenant, l'étape suivante serait le Cabinet. Il s'agit d'hommes qui sont déjà surmenés, qui doivent être des experts dans de très nombreuses disciplines. C'est pourquoi je me demande si on ne devrait pas étudier très sérieusement la possibilité de créer un organisme fédéral qui réglerait ces questions quotidiennement comme, par exemple, la Commission des tarifs, la Commission des pratiques commerciales équitables et ainsi de suite. Alors ce genre de questions pourraient être référées à cet organisme par le ministre avant d'être étudiées par le Cabinet.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, les décisions qui sont prises dans l'application de l'article 37 sont le résultat de décisions d'un certain nombre de ministères et exigent que le gouverneur en conseil se prononce. En fait, ce sont les ministres ou le Cabinet qui décident puisqu'ils sont responsables des questions financières. Je ne comprends pas très bien votre suggestion. Est-ce que vous envisagez la création d'un nouvel organisme?

M. Houston: Si une question doit être soumise à la Commission des tarifs, par exemple, elle pourrait être renvoyée par le ministre à la Commission des tarifs. Est-ce exact?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je crois que les décisions prises sous l'empire de l'article 37 ou en vertu de l'article qui fait maintenant partie de la loi des douanes et qui permet d'évaluer les produits importés du genre dont il est question ici, ne sont pas des questions qui peuvent être renvoyées à la Commission des tarifs.

M. Houston: Je dis que le genre de commission dont je propose la création pourrait être semblable à la Commission des tarifs. Elle pourrait étudier des questions litigieuses ou importantes sans qu'il soit nécessaire de les envoyer directement au Cabinet.

Mais l'objectif principal visé,—nous arrivons à une situation très complexe,—en fait, la raison principale pour laquelle nous proposons cela c'est pour s'assurer que l'on ne donne pas trop de pouvoir à un sous-ministre ou à un ministre car je le répète, cela pourrait mettre ces deux messieurs dans une situation extrêmement délicate.

Le président: Monsieur Howard.

M. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): La deuxième question que je voudrais poser est celle-ci. Parfois dans nos pratiques commerciales countries we use quite legal methods of slowing up or impeding trade, excessive red tape, perhaps, sometimes in relation to our Japanese trade quotas. I would like your comments on this. I would like to know what you think about the quota situation and also if you have experienced any of these problems of barriers put up which are not necessarily illegal but which might be an excessive application of red tape.

[Text]

Mr. Houston: Perhaps this is a bit outside anti-dumping. However, I am very glad the question has arisen. My feeling on quotas, and I am speaking of Japan only, is that much too often Japan is grouped with small countries such as Taiwan, Hong Kong, the Philippines, etc. I suggest they have a nation of a hundred million people.

So often the phrase "cheap labour" has been raised in connection with Japan.

These figures do not come from me at all. The Honourable J. V. Clyne spoke to a meeting in Toronto not very long ago. I happen to have seen him in Vancouver on my way through to Japan a couple of months ago, and he and his staff had gone to a great deal of trouble to compare the wages of shipyard workers in the United Kingdom and Japan.

Taking everything into consideration—and this is a statement which could be checked in his speech given in Toronto—they are practically identical.

In the motor industry, the wages of the Australian motor industry and the wages at the Toyota factory in Japan, when I was there, were almost identical.

In 1967 we shipped $574 million worth of goods to Japan and received about $306 million in return, which is close to a billion dollars. You have heard over and over again that Japan is our third largest trading partner; yet time and again, unfortunately, this country has been used as a whipping boy.

The Japanese have a tremendous amount of pride and I will only say this, as I said when I returned from this last trip, which was reported by the Canadian Press: that the most serious consideration should be given at this stage by the government as to whether or not any useful purpose is being served by having quotas, so-called voluntary quotas, with a nation of 100 million people.

[Interpretation]

ou dans celles d'autres pays, nous employons des méthodes parfaitement légales pour ralentir ou bloquer le commerce. Il y aurait trop de formalités administratives, par exemple relativement aux contingentements dans notre commerce avec le Japon. Je voudrais savoir ce que vous pensez de la situation en général et du système de contingentement? Et je voudrais vous demander si vous avez eu ce genre de difficultés et s'il y a des barrières qui ne sont pas nécessairement juridiques, mais qui pourraient être en fait trop de tracasseries administratives.

M. Houston: Cela dépasse peut-être un petit peu le cadre de l'antidumping. Mais je suis très content malgré tout qu'on m'ait posé cette question. En ce qui concerne les contingentements,—et je ne parle ici que du Japon—je crois que beaucoup trop souvent, le Japon est considéré comme d'autres petits pays, comme Tai-Wan, Hong-Kong, les Philippines, etc... Mais, il faut réaliser qu'il s'agit d'une nation de 100 millions d'habitants.

On parle très souvent d'une main-d'œuvre très bon marché en ce qui concerne le Japon.

Ces chiffres ne viennent pas de moi. L'honorable J. V. Clyne a fait une conférence à Toronto assez récemment et je l'ai rencontré à Vancouver au moment où nous partions pour le Japon, il y a quelques mois. Son personnel et lui ont accompli un travail considérable pour comparer les salaires des ouvriers des chantiers navals en Grande-Bretagne et au Japon.

En tenant compte de tous les facteurs, les salaires sont comparables comme vous pourrez le vérifier en consultant le texte du discours qu'il a prononcé à Toronto.

En ce qui concerne les travailleurs de l'automobile, lors de mon passage à l'usine de Toyota, au Japon, j'ai constaté que les salaires des ouvriers japonais sont à peu près identiques.

Maintenant, du moins tel fut le cas en 1967, nous exportons $514 millions de marchandises au Japon et nous en importons pour une valeur de $306 millions. C'est un de nos plus grands partenaires commerciaux comme on nous le répète. Et pourtant, on le considère très souvent comme une tête de turc. Les japonais sont très fiers et je n'ai qu'une chose à dire: Comme je l'ai dit à la Presse canadienne au retour de mon dernier voyage je crois que le gouvernement étudie très sérieusement le bien-fondé de cette politique de soi-disant contingentements volontaires dans nos rapports avec une nation de 100 millions d'habitants.

[Texte]

As German economists and commercial people have suggested that by the year 2000 Japan could have a standard of living second to that of the United States. I just wonder whether our thinking is forward enough.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Have we had any special problems with Japan in relation to dumping in comparison with other countries such as the United States or Germany or any of the other countries of the world?

• 2050

Mr. Wasteney: Mr. Chairman, I believe that it is a well-known circumstance that our principal trading partner is the United States, and for this reason on a statistical basis the principal case of the institution of dumping duty I would imagine has been to imports from the United States.

Nobody knows, because these things are apparently handled in confidence between the Department and the people concerned, but I would imagine that the instances of dumping with respect to imports from Japan are considerably less than from imports from the United States.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Thank you, very much.

Mr. Danson: Mr. Chairman?

The Chairman: Are you asking a supplementary, Mr. Danson, or are you actually asking a question?

Mr. Danson: Actually I am making a comment. The brief states they do not believe that dumping is applied to any greater extent to Japan than to any other countries.

I sense a concern here which perhaps is not evident—and perhaps this is the oriental mind, Colonel Houston—at these Committee meetings over the past while that the concern is really not with anti-dumping, but with low-cost imports and reading the brief frankly, other than your concern about the discretionary powers of the Deputy Minister particularly, I do not sense any real concern about the legislation except that it may be confused with normal trade practices where we are frankly dealing, I think, with high-quality imports in many cases which just come in at a much lower rate.

You say it is just not necessarily due to lower wage rates but to a very high degree of efficiency, and I think it is necessary for us

[Interprétation]

Des économistes allemands ou des commerçants ont dit que d'ici l'an 2000, le Japon aurait un niveau de vie qui viendrait au deuxième rang, après celui des États-Unis. Et, je me demande si nous ne devrions pas nous soucier davantage de l'avenir.

M. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Est-ce que nous avons eu des difficultés particulières avec le Japon en ce qui concerne le dumping par rapport à d'autres pays, les États-Unis par exemple, l'Allemagne ou d'autres pays?

M. Geoffroy Wasteney (Président, Wasteney & Evans Consultants Limited): Monsieur le président, je crois que les États-Unis sont notre principal partenaire commercial. C'est pourquoi nos statistiques démontrent que les droits de dumping ont été essentiellement appliqués aux États-Unis.

Personne ne le sait, car ces choses sont réglées secrètement entre le ministère et les intéressés. Cependant, je pense que les cas de dumping, en ce qui concerne les importations du Japon, sont inférieurs à ceux appliqués aux marchandises en provenance des États-Unis.

M. Howard (Okanagan-Boundary): Merci beaucoup.

M. Danson: M. le Président?

Le président: Posez-vous une question supplémentaire, monsieur Danson?

M. Danson: Je fais un commentaire. D'après le mémoire, le dumping n'est pas particulier au Japon. Cette préoccupation n'est pas évidente: c'est peut-être l'esprit oriental.

J'ai eu l'impression, après les réunions du Comité, ces derniers temps, que cette inquiétude ne vient pas de l'antidumping, mais plutôt des importations à très bas prix.

Très franchement, à la lecture de ce que vous avez dit, en dehors de votre inquiétude en ce qui concerne les pouvoirs discrétionnaires du sous-ministre, je ne sens pas une inquiétude grave en rapport avec cette mesure législative, si ce n'est le fait qu'on peut la confondre avec les pratiques commerciales normales, lorsqu'il s'agit de marchandises de grande qualité qui sont vendues à un prix inférieur.

Vous dites que ce n'est pas nécessairement dû au dumping, mais plutôt à un grand rendement. Il s'agit ici d'antidumping et non pas here to remind ourselves from time to time that we are dealing with anti-dumping rather than low-cost imports that are not being dumped. Is it a concern of yours that these are likely to be confused?

[Text]

Mr. Houston: Mr. Denison...

The Chairman: Mr. Danson.

Mr. Danson: The Prime Minister gets it wrong too.

Mr. Houston: I am sorry. If we had been concerned in detail with this document which we consider is a great step forward and, in the main, a good document, we would have outlined all the various things which you are intimating.

The concern which we have is anti-dumping primarily because this is what this Committee is for. But anti-dumping can lead you into several avenues, I suggest. We have gone through a good deal of unsettled times in Canada, I suggest, because of our anti-dumping legislation which this is endeavouring to correct.

Basically our brief, as was pointed out in the covering letter, was to try to ensure that nothing happened to interfere with the trade between Japan and Canada. Perhaps I could go into a couple of specifics, but I suggest this is not the time nor the place. We take them up with the Department of National Revenue through the respective channel when necessary.

Mr. Danson: Thank you, very much.

The Chairman: Mr. Trudel?

Mr. Trudel: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct this question to Colonel Houston. I can appreciate your concern, sir, like to hear about certain inequities that you refer in your introductory letter of November 6 accompanying the brief. The third paragraph reads:

...still fails to overcome certain inequities which create hardship for the export industries of a number of Canada's trading partners, including Japan.

Would you care to be more specific on this point or do you feel that this is getting away from your brief?

• 2055

Mr. Wasteneys: I forget that this place is acoustically dead; normally I do not seem to find a need for reinforcement. The concern of importers with anti-dumping duty at the present time is the fact that if they are selling d'importations à bas prix. Est-ce que c'est une de vos préoccupations? Craignez-vous qu'on se confonde?

[Interpretation]

M. Houston: M. Denison...

Le président: M. Danson.

M. Danson: Le premier ministre ne connaît pas mon nom non plus.

M. Houston: Je m'excuse. Si nous nous étions préoccupés en détail de ce document, que nous considérons comme un grand pas en avant et, dans l'ensemble, comme un excellent document, nous aurions souligné les divers points dont vous parlé ou que vous sons-entendez.

Notre inquiétude est d'abord celle de l'anti-dumping, car c'est la question dont s'occupe le Comité. Mais l'antidumping peut vous amener dans diverses voies à mon avis. Nous avons eu de grosses difficultés au Canada en raison de nos mesures législatives sur l'anti-dumping, que la présente tente de rectifier.

Notre mémoire, comme je le dis dans la lettre jointe, avait pour but de s'assurer que rien ne se produirait pour perturber le commerce entre le Canada et le Japon. Je pourrais vous donner certains cas particuliers, mais je pense que ce n'est ni le temps, ni le lieu. Nous le faisons avec le ministère du Revenu national par les voies normales, lorsque c'est nécessaire.

M. Danson: Merci beaucoup.

Le président: M. Trudel.

M. Trudel: Monsieur le président, je voudrais poser la question à monsieur Houston. Je peux comprendre votre inquiétude, monsieur. Si vous le voulez, je voudrais connaître certaines injustices dont vous parlez dans votre lettre du 6 novembre, qui accompagnait le mémoire. Je lis le troisième paragraphe:

...n'effacent pas néanmoins certaines injustices qui créent des difficultés pour des industries d'exportation d'un grand nombre de partenaires commerciaux du Canada, y compris le Japon.

Pourriez-vous nous donner plus de détails? Pensez-vous que cela ne concerne pas directement votre mémoire?

M. Wasteneys: J'oublie que cet endroit est insonorisé. En fait, ce qui inquiète les importateurs c'est qu'à l'heure actuelle, leur niveau commercial est différent. S'ils vendent à un grossiste au Canada et si les ventes dans leur to a wholesaler, shall we say in Canada, whereas their only sales in their own country are at a retail level, a less advanced level, they are penalized in this sense because the fair market value on which the duty and the difference between fair market value and sale price would determine dumping duty, these are based upon the actual sale at arms-length to the first customer who is distinctly different from themselves.

[Texte]

We are naturally glad to see that consideration has been given in the new legislation to provide that in establishing normal value, deductions may be made to take into account more of these allowances that might be made and coming closer to the actual allowance, shall we say, taking everything into account.

If you sell in Canada the distribution costs are very high. Your customer has to look after much greater costs than he would in his own country.

We are not certain that the new legislation will provide a complete equality in this respect, but we are grateful to see that it is moving in that direction.

Mr. Trudel: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert?

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, I was rather interested in Colonel Houston's remarks with regard to the responsibility placed upon the Deputy Minister and the Minister. I would point out that most of the witnesses that have appeared before us to date have been primarily concerned with what they would call the elaborate machinery and the time taken, and to that extent that there would be a fairly high incidence of what they called "one free dump".

I think perhaps in arriving at your consideration that perhaps the full import of clause 13 may have escaped you in that not only is there the question of the value of the goods but there must be injury, and the industry is not the responsibility of the Deputy Minister or the Minister but that of the Appeal Tribunal. The two factors must exist.

Concerning the Appeal Tribunal, I think some of us may have some qualms about the time it may take to arrive at a decision and, therefore, that the industry in Canada might be unduly penalized.

I think perhaps it is quite natural to find this different point of view. The people we have been talking to up to the present time have been primarily Canadian producers, pays ne sont qu'au détail, ils sont pénalisés, parce que la valeur du marché auquel s'applique le droit et la différence entre la valeur du marché et le prix de vente, déterminent les droits de dumping. Tout cela est basé sur la vente au client étranger qui est différent d'eux-mêmes.

[Interprétation]

Nous sommes donc heureux de constater que l'on a tenu compte, dans la nouvelle mesure législative, du fait que lorsqu'on établit la valeur normale, des déductions peuvent être prévues pour tenir compte d'avantage de ces dégrèvements.

Au Canada, le coût de distribution est très élevé. Votre client aura des frais beaucoup plus élevés que dans son propre pays.

Nous ne sommes pas certains que la nouvelle législation assurera une égalité complète à cet égard. Mais nous sommes heureux de constater que l'on va dans ce sens.

M. Trudel: Merci, monsieur le président.

Le président: Monsieur Lambert.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Monsieur le président, M. Houston a parlé de la responsabilité du ministre et du sous-ministre. Je ferai remarquer que la plupart des témoins qui ont comparu, s'inquiétaient surtout du lourd dispositif, du temps et des conséquences de ce qu'ils ont appelé «premier envoi de dumping».

Mais je pense que l'importance de l'article 13 vous a échappé.

Il ne s'agit pas seulement de la valeur des marchandises, mais il doit y avoir des préjudices. Ces préjudices ne sont pas la responsabilité du ministre ou du sous-ministre, mais bien celle du tribunal d'appel. Les deux facteurs doivent être présents. Certains craignent qu'on prenne beaucoup de temps avant d'arriver à une décision. C'est pourquoi l'industrie canadienne pourrait être pénalisée de façon injuste.

Il est assez naturel d'avoir des différents points de vue. Nous n'avons parlé essentiellement qu'à des producteurs canadiens, alors que vous représentez en fait les importateurs.

[Text]

whereas you really represent importers, I would just make that comment.

I am concerned about, shall we say, over-extensive machinery. I will admit that one does not like to see any particular type of consideration come in where, shall we say, undue pressure from one sort or another, some of the qualms that I expressed at the time last year when we were setting up the Machinery Board and the references higher up that there was a possibility of particular circumstances, particular pressures that might be applied for a decision.

The Chairman: Would you care to comment, Colonel Houston?

Mr. Houston: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Before I answer your question, Mr. Lambert I would like to correct one impression. In the last six months perhaps I have spent 70 per cent of my time on exports to Japan. I spent a full day with our Wheat Board in Winnipeg with Mr. McNamara on the full Board, then with the Grain Commissioners the next day just finding out what our wheat sales are. Our barley sales have been falling off, as you no doubt know coming from this part of Canada. In the first 15-year coal deal which was signed I was called in by the Coleman collieries.

I visited and discussed with five of our Cabinet Ministers, including Mr. Winters and Mr. Pickersgill who was then Minister of Transport. On the export of honey to Japan I spent one day when I was in before people from down near Toronto so before I took this job there was no doubt in anyone's mind that it had to be a two-way street, otherwise it would never work.

I believe in our council. We now have 320 Canadian members which represent all the principal banks, corporations, mining and what have you and about 40 Japanese members, so that is the composition of the council. This includes Stelco and many of the people who perhaps will appear before the board.

To look at your comment, and your question, before you came in my concern was, and I likened perhaps the main body, I said you could not distinguish in this day and age between economics and politics. I say this with the utmost sincerity.

I have learned in the five years that I have been in this job that a good deal of the economic mistakes overflow into the political side and cause a tremendous amount of trouble. My only concern is that if you have some legislation which is going to run into millions of dollars in trade between countries and the legislation is not good, if you do not have some body, very high-up men—and I likened

[Interpretation]

Je m'inquiète également de ce lourd dispositif. Évidemment, on n'aime pas voir des considérations particulières ou des pressions faites d'un côté ou d'un autre. L'an dernier, lorsqu'on établissait le «Machinery Board», on a dit qu'il y avait des possibilités de pressions particulières qui pouvaient être appliquées.

Le président: Voulez-vous faire des commentaires, M. Houston?

M. Houston: Merci beaucoup, monsieur le président. Avant que je ne réponde à votre question, j'aimerais rectifier une impression que vous avez laissée. Au cours des six derniers mois, j'ai passé peut-être 70 p. 100 de mon temps aux exportations au Japon. J'ai passé une journée avec la Commission canadienne du blé à Winnipeg avec M. McNamara, puis, le lendemain, avec la Commission des grains, pour savoir quel était le résultat de nos ventes de blé et d'orge notamment, lors du premier accord qui a été signé.

J'ai visité cinq ministres du Cabinet, y compris M. Winters, M. Pickersgill, lorsqu'il était ministre des Transports. Pour l'exportation du miel vers le Japon, j'ai passé une journée à Toronto, à discuter de cela. Avant d'assumer ce travail, personne ne doutait qu'il s'agissait d'un commerce à deux sens, autrement, cela ne donnerait aucun résultat.

Dans notre conseil, nous avons maintenant 320 membres canadiens qui représentent les principales banques, sociétés, mines, sociétés d'exploitations minières, etc., et environ 40 Japonais; telle est la composition du conseil. Cela comprend Stelco et bien d'autres compagnies qui paraîtront devant la commission.

Pour revenir à votre question ou à votre commentaire, avant votre arrivée, j'ai dit qu'on ne pouvait distinguer à notre époque entre l'économie et la politique. Je le dis en toute sincérité.

J'ai appris, depuis cinq ans que je m'occupe de ce travail, beaucoup de choses au sujet des rouages économiques, à savoir que ces rouages économiques débordent souvent sur la scène politique. Tout ce qui me préoccupe, c'est que, si vous avez des mesures législatives légiférant sur des transactions de l'ordre de millions de dollars entre les pays, et qu'elles ne sont pas bonnes, à moins d'ait to the Supreme Court of Canada—then you can get into a tremendous amount of trouble.

[Texte]

I do not think there is anything worse than red tape. Having spent 30 years in the regular army, believe you me, as you well know I have had plenty of it.

However, again I said that the onus which is being placed on this Committee to come up with the best recommendations—and I merely put the idea forward and Mr. Hind and Mr. Arthur can correct me in this, but perhaps as much as 80 or 90 per cent of the matters which flow through National Revenue could be dealt with by the Deputy Minister and the Minister and the people in National Revenue.

That may be a bit high; I do not know. It may be 70 per cent but something of that nature.

Then if you had your Tribunal of tip-flight civil servants which is suggested for perhaps the next 10 per cent, but the big 10 per cent, or 5 per cent, or whatever it might be at the top, this is where your difficulties really come in between countries.

I am only making a plea that when the decision is made that it is done with the utmost consideration. That is all, Mr. Chairman. Thank you.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to say that I was impressed by the figures Colonel Houston mentioned and the faith that he expressed in the two-way trade between the two countries instant to his own association with the council. I would just like him to confirm for me that I have interpreted him correctly when I believe it is his point of view that this new act is an improvement over the existing legislation and that he would hope it would help to facilitate even greater trade between our two countries.

Mr. Houston: Thank you, Mr. Gillespie. That is exactly what I tried to say.

The Chairman: Mr. Arthur?

• 2105

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I am not certain that Colonel Houston is clear on the process or procedure that is in this bill. First of all the Deputy Minister must make a determination that there has been dumping and, in fact, that that dumping may cause injury. It then goes to the Tribunal and the Tribunal is charged with the responsibility of determining injury. After the Tribunal has made its order or finding the Deputy Minister of National Revenue then determines the margin voir un organisme, et j'ai à l'esprit la Cour Suprême du Canada, vous pouvez alors avoir beaucoup de difficultés. Il n'y a rien de plus mauvais que la bureaucratie. Ayant passé 20 ans dans l'Armée régulière, je sais qu'il n'y a rien de pire que les tracasseries administratives, et Dieu sait si j'en ai souffert.

[Interprétation]

Encore une fois, j'ai dit que la charge qu'on impose à ce Comité, notamment celle de présenter les meilleures recommandations possibles est trop lourde. M. Hind et M. Arthur pourront me corriger si je me trompe, mais peut-être que 80 ou 90 p. 100 des questions qui sont étudiées par le ministère du Revenu national pourraient l'être par le sous-ministre, le ministre et les fonctionnaires au sein du ministère, ce pourrait être 70 p. 100.

Puis, si vous aviez votre tribunal de hauts fonctionnaires qui prendrait les décisions dans 10 p. 100 des autres cas, car vos difficultés proviennent de la couche supérieure du 10 p. 100 ou du 5 p. 100.

Lorsque les décisions seront arrêtées, je souhaite qu'elles le soient en leur accordant la plus grande attention. C'est tout, monsieur le président, je vous remercie.

M. Gillespie: Monsieur le président, je voudrais simplement dire que j'ai été impressionné par les chiffres que vient de mentionner le colonel Houston et par la confiance qu'il a exprimée envers le commerce à deux sens, entre les deux pays, à titre de représentant du conseil.

J'aimerais simplement qu'il confirme que je l'ai bien interprété, que j'ai bien compris son point de vue, savoir que cette loi est une amélioration sur la loi existante et qu'elle aidera éventuellement à favoriser le commerce entre nos deux pays.

M. Houston: Je vous remercie, monsieur Gillespie. C'est précisément ce que je voulais dire.

Le président: Oui, monsieur Arthur?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, j'ignore si le colonel Houston comprend bien le processus ou le procédé que ce bill établit. Tout d'abord, le sous-ministre doit déterminer qu'il y a eu dumping et, si tel est le cas, l'affaire est renvoyée au tribunal; celui-ci doit déterminer le sérieux des torts. Quand le tribunal a édicté son ordonnance ou ses conclusions, le sous-ministre du Revenu national détermine ensuite la marge des droits imposables.

[Text]

of dumping. Now, in your brief on page 2 you say:

...will rest entirely upon the opinion of the Deputy Minister rather than upon factual evidence...

I think here that the assessment of the margin of dumping is based on factual evidence and if the importer feels aggrieved under clause 19 and onward from there in the proposed draft bill on matters of fact the dumping assessed can be appealed to the Tariff Board and on matters of law to the Exchequer Court. So an appeal procedure is provided for if that is the concern that is being expressed here, that it may be based on an opinion rather than factual evidence.

If there is any question that the importer does not feel the Deputy Minister has indeed assessed the appropriate amount of duty based on all of the facts, then there is an avenue of appeal and on the matter of law to the Exchequer Court.

Mr. Housion: Mr. Arthur, I wanted to avoid specifics, but now I will give you a specific, the television which has been in the papers, in lots of the papers. On June 28, if my figures serve me correctly, a letter went out from National Revenue signed by a person—I suppose he was an assistant director or something, I do not know what his exact status was. If you remember, originally the Kennedy Round suggested that July 1, or this was the agreement when the legislation would be put into effect.

Now, you suggested that I have not looked at it very carefully. I am being touched on the arm by my consultant here.

But I would hate to tell you the hours which I spend in looking and studying the whole process. I would also suggest to you that some of the people, some of the high-ups on this side of the water and on the other side of the water, said that they found it the most complicated situation that they had ever come across, because things and terms in Japan are not the same as Canadian terms.

Now, this is one of the inequities that we are trying to avoid. For the record, I have written a letter to the Minister of Finance some time ago with copies to other ministers. This caused a tremendous amount of trouble and it is still going on as to what is the equitable thing to be settled between the Japanese exporters and the Canadian importers.

[Interpretation]

Dans votre mémoire, à la page 2, vous dites:

... repose entièrement sur l'avis du sous-ministre plutôt que sur les preuves de fait...

Je crois ici que l'évaluation de la marge est fondée sur des données de faits et, si l'importateur sent qu'on l'a visé aux termes de l'article 19 dans le projet de Loi, pour des questions de fait, l'évaluation du dumping peut faire l'objet d'un appel et, question de droit, on peut s'adresser à la Cour de l'Échiquier. De sorte qu'il y a une procédure d'appel qui est prévue et si quelque inquiétude subsiste, ceci, peut être fondé sur des opinions plutôt que sur des faits.

Si l'on craint que l'importateur n'estime pas que le sous-ministre a bien évalué le degré pertinent des droits, il y a une possibilité d'appel et, à la longue, on peut s'en référer à la Cour de l'Échiquier.

M. Housion: Monsieur Arthur, je voulais éviter les détails des cas particuliers, mais je veux vous en donner un. Le 28 juin, et la télévision et les journaux en ont fait état, le ministère du Revenu national a envoyé une lettre qui portait la signature d'un directeur adjoint de quelque service, j'ignore quel est son titre exact. Le 28 juin, dis-je, si j'ai bonne mémoire, on avait suggéré aux négociations Kennedy que le 1<sup>er</sup> juillet soit la date de l'entrée en vigueur de la Loi.

Vous dites que je n'ai pas étudié cela très soigneusement. Mon conseiller me touche le bras en ce moment, mais je ne voudrais pas vous dire le nombre d'heures que j'ai passées à étudier tout le processus.

Mais j'aimerais aussi vous signaler que certains des représentants les plus autorisés, de ce côté-ci de l'Océan comme de l'autre, estimaient que c'était la situation la plus compliquée qu'ils aient jamais vue, car la situation au Japon n'est pas la même qu'au Canada. Voilà une des injustices que nous essayons de réparer.

J'ai envoyé une lettre à ce sujet au ministre des Finances, il y a quelque temps, et j'en ai fait parvenir des copies à d'autres ministres. Cela a causé beaucoup de difficultés et on se demande encore quelle serait la formule juste envers les exportateurs japonais, d'une part, les importateurs canadiens, d'une part.

[Texte]

Sometimes it is the Canadian importers who raise the greatest cry. I have also been to the Minister of Consumer Affairs because sometimes the Canadian consumer is affected as well.

All I am suggesting, once again, is that any inequity which can be overcome between two large countries, two good trading partners, everything should be done in a legislative manner to do it. If there are inequities between oriental countries especially and our own there are perhaps different ways of doing business. This is what I was suggesting and this is why I said I did not want to get into specifics.

• 2110

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I am aware of the case to which Colonel Houston refers and I think he would agree that the basis on which the evaluation was determined was in accordance with the law. It is the law of Canada and that is the law until it is replaced by this piece of legislation that applies to import from all countries.

Mr. Chairman, I am still endeavouring to come to grips with those inequities to which Colonel Houston referred. I have endeavoured to look through the Regulations. I think that we have said to this Committee on more than one occasion that with regard to the price comparability required under the Code we believe we have met all the requirements either under Section 9 or in the Regulations relating to that particular Section.

Mr. Houston: I think I have gone as far as I wish to go, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Have you any comments, Mr. Wasteneys?

Mr. Wasteneys: Mr. Chairman, I think I can say what was in our minds. Maybe we are too concerned.

In Regulation 8(b) for example it states:

8(b) where the information referred to in paragraph (a) is not available, ...

That is, information on the discount that is freely available on sales by other vendors in the country of export of like goods.

... not exceeding such amount as in the opinion of the Deputy Minister represents the cost incurred by the exporter in respect of sales for home consumption for carrying out the functions normally per-

[Interprétation]

Parfois, ce sont les importateurs canadiens qui jettent les hauts cris. Je me suis aussi adressé au ministre de la Consommation et des Corporations, car il arrive que le consommateur canadien soit aussi en cause.

Tout ce que je dis, encore une fois, c'est que tout devrait être mis en œuvre afin que toute injustice qui peut être éliminée entre deux grands pays, deux bons partenaires commerciaux, le soit et ce, au moyen de mesures législatives.

S'il y en a entre les pays orientaux, particulièrement, et le nôtre, c'est qu'il y a plusieurs façons de faire affaires. C'est ce que je voulais dire et c'est pourquoi, comme je l'ai mentionné, je ne voulais pas entrer dans les détails.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je suis au courant du cas dont parle M. Houston. Je crois qu'il reconnaîtra avec moi que la formule d'évaluation était déterminée en conformité avec la Loi du Canada. Cette loi restera en vigueur jusqu'à ce qu'elle soit remplacée par cette mesure-ci, qui s'appliquera aux importations de tous les pays.

Monsieur le président, j'essaie encore de comprendre quelles sont les iniquités dont on a parlé M. Houston. J'ai essayé de jeter un coup d'œil au règlement. Nous avons dit au Comité, à plus d'une occasion, que le projet de loi respecte les exigences des Accords internationaux en ce qui a trait à la comparabilité des prix, soit en vertu de l'article 9, soit en vertu des règlements qui ont trait à cet article.

M. Houston: C'est tout, monsieur le président. Merci.

Le président: Y a-t-il d'autres commentaires?

M. Wasteneys: Monsieur le président, voici quelques observations au sujet de nos intentions.

Dans le règlement 8B, par exemple, il est écrit:

... lorsque les renseignements mentionnés dans l'alinéa (a) ne sont pas disponibles, ...

à savoir:

... renseignements au sujet des rabais consentis dans le pays d'exportation, sur des ventes de marchandises similaires, rabais n'excédant pas le montant permis par la loi future, et présentant, de l'avis formed at the trade level of the importer... with some further provisos.

[Text]

I believe we were thinking of circumstances such as where it is stated "in the opinion of the Deputy Minister". The Deputy Minister of course is dependent upon the information that will be brought to him from representatives of his Department in Japan, if it were a case of Japan.

I think we were concerned where it says "in the opinion of the Deputy Minister" rather than as might be provided by no factual evidence.

Possibly our concern was too much.

I think this is the basic inequity, if you like, that has existed in Canadian customs procedure—that of not recognizing the difference in trade levels. We do appreciate that this problem is approached in this new legislation, and we hope it will be satisfactory.

But it is still because of these differences that misunderstandings and completely different patterns of trade develop. It is because of the extraordinarily different arrangements that take place in a country such as Japan that a whole gamut of discounts and allowances comes into play and the price that appears to be the price is not a factual price at all.

It does cause us concern that the Deputy Minister might make up his own opinion rather than basing it on factual information.

● 2115

There is one thing I want to say which refers to something Mr. Lambert said about injury.

Of course we are well aware that the new decision as to whether a penalty is to be applied relates to whether injury has occurred to Canadian industry. We appreciate very much that this is a very important consideration. Statements have been made by other people before this Committee on the view Canadian industry would hold on what constituted injury.

In this case we are talking not on behalf of the importers but on behalf of people trading back and forth between Canada and Japan and exporting more than they import.

We think that the injury should be determined by the Tribunal on some basis that shows that it is a real injury, a real harm to the Canadian industry and not simply because du sous-ministre, le coût de déplacement du marché ailleurs que dans la consommation nationale.

[Interpretation]

Nous songions aussi à des dispositions impliquant «l'opinion du sous-ministre». Bien entendu, le sous-ministre se fonde sur les renseignements que lui présentent ses attachés commerciaux.

Nous sommes inquiets qu'on dise: «l'opinion du sous-ministre» plutôt que, comme on devrait le voir, «d'après les faits» ou «d'après les données».

Peut-être cette inquiétude n'est-elle pas fondée? Je crois que c'était l'une des injustices fondamentales de nos procédures habituelles, que de ne pas reconnaître les différences de niveau. Nous sommes heureux que le problème soit abordé au moins dans les nouvelles mesures législatives et nous espérons que la solution sera satisfaisante.

Mais c'est encore en raison des différences, des malentendus et des modes de commerce et de transactions d'un genre tout à fait différent et de toute une gamme de rabais et d'octrois que le prix déclaré n'est pas du tout le prix réel.

Nous croyons que le sous-ministre sera tenté de se faire une opinion lui-même plutôt que de fonder son opinion sur des renseignements de faits.

A propos des observations de M. Lambert, au sujet des torts susceptibles d'être causés, nous savons fort bien que la nouvelle loi prévoit une sanction si des torts ont été commis à l'industrie canadienne.

Nous savons qu'il s'agit là d'une considération très importante. D'autres ont fait des déclarations, voulant que l'industrie canadienne définisse ce qui lui nuit.

Dans ce cas-ci nous ne parlons pas tellement des importateurs, mais des gens qui font du commerce dans les deux sens, et qui exportent plus qu'ils n'importent.

A ce moment, un tribunal devrait statuer au sujet des torts, pour qu'ils correspondent aux torts réels causés à l'industrie canadienne et non pas, simplement, à la perte d'un peu some business has been secured by imported goods which could have been secured by Canadian goods. It would seem to us that that was not a definition of injury. There has to be some give and take.

[Texte]

Let us look at the textile industry for example.

From our rough calculations we have concluded that in 1967 imports of clothing goods from Japan amounted to 18 per cent of all Canadian imports of clothing, and of the combined textiles and clothing goods from all over the world roughly 14 per cent of them were from Japan. Japan is not by any means the major source of these goods.

In the same way in 1964, the last year in which there is an accurate record of the production of the Canadian clothing industry, domestic production enjoyed 95.8 per cent of the total Canadian market. We would think that the ability to absorb this degree of imports was not a source of injury to the Canadian industry.

Mr. Houston: Mr. Chairman, may I remark to Mr. Arthur that I agree completely with what he said.

This was the letter of the law when it was laid down by National Revenue in connection with television sets, and they were perfectly within the letter of the law.

I believe the new legislation mentions "in the opinion" or "in the opinion of the Deputy Minister" which is something different from what you have just said. Normally you have a rule as a guide but under the circumstances in which, as you point out, National Revenue acts, they act as a rule, period.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I think this particular case to which Colonel Houston refers is one which is being dealt with under the existing law and when it became evident that it was not possible for Canada to meet its obligation to introduce this legislation by July 1 its representative went to Geneva, to the GATT, explained the circumstances and undertook to introduce this legislation not later than January 1, 1969.

On that occasion the representative of Canada made it very clear to our trading partners and the other signatories to the GATT, including Japan, that it would not be able to introduce this legislation under the original timetable and at that time made it very clear that the law as it is now written would have to be applied on all imports until such time as the new legislation was put in place. That was clearly understood and accepted by the various trading partners, and de sa clientèle, par suite de certaines importations qui auraient pu être remplacées éventuellement par des articles ou des marchandises canadiennes. Il nous semble que ce n'est pas là la définition d'un tort; la formule doit être donnant donnant.

[Interprétation]

Si nous jetons un coup d'œil à l'industrie textile, par exemple, nous voyons qu'en 1967 les importations de vêtement du Japon représentaient 18 p. 100 de toutes les importations canadiennes de vêtements; et 14 p. 100 des produits textiles des pays étrangers provenaient du Japon. Le Japon n'est pas notre principal fournisseur, loin de là.

De la même façon, en 1964, la dernière année pour laquelle il y ait dossier de la production de l'industrie canadienne du vêtement, la production intérieure a représenté 95.8 p. 100 du marché national. La capacité d'absorber ces importations n'a sûrement pas nui à l'industrie canadienne. Voilà.

M. Houston: Une dernière observation que j'adresse à M. Arthur. Je suis tout à fait d'accord avec ce que vous venez de dire.

Il s'agissait là d'un article de la Loi sur les appareils de télévision qui intéressait le ministère du Revenu national et qui fut respecté.

La nouvelle mesure législative emploie l'expression de «l'opinion du sous-ministre» ce qui est différent de ce que vous venez de dire. Normalement, un règlement est un guide, mais, dans ces circonstances que vous avez signalées pour la Loi du revenu national, il ne s'agit que d'un règlement.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, on a conclu ce marché en suivant les lois existantes, mais lorsqu'il est devenu manifeste qu'il n'était pas possible pour le Canada de faire face à ses obligations et de présenter cette mesure législative en date du 1<sup>er</sup> juillet, on a présenté cette question à Genève dans les négociations de GATT et on a entrepris de présenter cette mesure législative au plus tard le 1<sup>er</sup> janvier 1969.

A cette occasion, le représentant du Canada a bien précisé à nos partenaires commerciaux et aux autres signataires de GATT, y compris le Japon, qu'on ne pourrait pas présenter cette mesure législative selon l'horaire prévu et on a dit que la loi, dans son libellé actuel, devrait s'appliquer à toutes les importations jusqu'à ce que la nouvelle loi soit adoptée. Cela a été clairement compris et accepté par les différents partenaires commerciaux. Je ne pense pas, monsieur le président, que j'aie à ajouter quoi que ce soit là-dessus.

[Text]

I do not really think, Mr. Chairman, that I need to say any more on that.

● 2120

Mr. Houston: I hope, Mr. Chairman, that I have not in any way intimated in any of my statements that this was not the case. I merely said that the legislation was not put into effect on July 1. It was through no fault of Canada; it was because of the change in government, Parliament proroguing and so on. I also am very happy to repeat again that the new legislation is going to take care of a lot of the problems with which we were confronted in the past.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, are there any other questions to be directed to Colonel Houston or government officials?

Mr. Trudel: Mr. Chairman, I have just one more question, which I would like to direct to Colonel Houston.

Sir, do you have any reservations in respect of the paragraph to which I previously referred. Could you tell me whether any of this could be corrected by including certain clauses or sections of the Anti-Dumping Regulations of the United States that may have been omitted in the present suggested draft that we have before us?

Mr. Houston: Mr. Chairman, for the second time I will have to bow to my tariff consultant.

Mr. Wasteneys: Mr. Chairman, the position with regard to the United States at the present moment, as no doubt Mr. Trudel is aware, is that they did not change their Act but, rather, propose to make the whole change by regulation.

At the moment I believe there is some stay in this matter because the Senate considers that the executive should not have the power to make such a sweeping change by regulatory apparatus.

I have studied the regulations that have been produced I must be frank and say at the moment that I could not make an accurate comparison and say whether in this regard they would be any better. I think we should say, in fairness to the persons who have drafted this legislation, that it is going a long way.

Mr. Trudel: Thank you.

The Chairman: Are there any other questions, gentlemen?

[Interpretation]

M. Houston: J'espère, monsieur le président, que je n'ai pas, en quelque circonstance que ce soit, laissé entendre cela; ce n'était pas le cas. Je ne pense pas qu'une de mes déclarations ait pu être interprétée de cette façon. J'ai tout simplement dit que la mesure n'a pas été appliquée le 1<sup>er</sup> juillet et que ce n'était pas par la faute du Canada. C'est en raison du changement de gouvernement, de la prorogation du Parlement, etc. En outre, et je tiens à le répéter encore une fois, je suis très heureux que la nouvelle mesure législative va justement s'occuper de ces situations.

Le président: Y a-t-il d'autres questions qu'on aimerait poser à M. Houston ou aux fonctionnaires du gouvernement avant que nous ne levions la séance. Oui, monsieur Trudel?

M. Trudel: Une autre question, monsieur le président, que j'adresse au colonel Houston.

Pouvez-vous nous dire si, compte tenu des réserves et des inégalités que vous avez mentionnées précédemment, cela serait corrigé par des articles ou des paragraphes compris dans la loi relevant des règlements antidumping des États-Unis et qui auraient été omis dans la proposition de loi dont nous sommes saisis présentement.

M. Houston: Je vais demander à mon conseiller M. Trudel de m'éclairer pour la deuxième fois.

M. Wasteneys: La situation, en ce qui a trait aux États-Unis à l'heure actuelle, et sans doute M. Trudel est-il au courant de cela, on n'a pas modifié la loi, mais on a proposé d'apporter tous les changements par voie de règlement.

En ce moment, je crois que le Sénat considère que l'exécutif ne devrait pas avoir le droit d'apporter des changements aussi considérables, par voie de règlement.

J'ai examiné les règlements qui ont été édictés, mais je dois dire, pour le moment, que je ne puis pas faire de comparaison précise, c'est-à-dire si, à cet égard, ces règlements sont supérieurs aux nôtres. En toute justice, pour les personnes qui ont rédigé cette loi, je dois dire qu'on va très loin.

M. Trudel: Merci.

Le président: Merci. Y a-t-il d'autres questions, messieurs?

[Texte]

Colonel Houston and Mr. Wasteneys, thank you very much for your briefs and the comments you have given to us.

Gentlemen, our next sitting is Thursday at 9.30 a.m. in this same room. Our witnesses will be representatives of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

M. Émard: Est-ce qu'il va y en avoir d'autres à 9 h 30?

Le président: Je ne sais pas monsieur Émard. C'est le Comité de coordination qui décide. Je ne peux pas vous répondre présentement.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, what about the afternoon?

The Chairman: I do not know whether we will complete the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in the morning. Besides the Canadian Manufacturers Association we have for the same day the Canadian General Electric Company Limited, and Canadian Westinghouse Company Limited.

Mr. Hales: It is not likely we will get to them on Thursday.

The Chairman: I hope that you will agree to sit from 9.30 a.m. to one o'clock because we have the room for that time.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, I think we also have to be practical because there are other demands on our time.

• 2125

The Chairman: Some other committees have sat from 9.30 a.m. until one o'clock; I am a member of one such committee.

Mr. Burton: Mr. Chairman, for my part, I have obligations to another committee at eleven o'clock.

The Chairman: I know that, Mr. Burton; I am a member of the Committee on Agriculture too.

[Interprétation]

Je tiens à vous remercier, colonel Houston et monsieur Wasteneys du mémoire que vous nous avez présenté et des commentaires que vous avez faits. Merci encore une fois.

Messieurs, la prochaine séance aura lieu jeudi, à 9 h 30 du matin, dans cette même pièce. Les témoins seront alors les représentants de l'Association des fabricants du Canada, même pièce, à 9 h. 30 du matin.

Mr. Émard: Will there be others at 9:30?

Chairman: I do not know, Mr. Émard. It is the Coordinating Committee which decides. Right now, I cannot answer you.

M. Hales: Monsieur le président, qu'est-ce que vous diriez de l'après-midi?

Le président: Je ne sais pas si nous en aurons terminé avec The Canadian Manufacturers' Association au cours de la matinée, monsieur Hales. Mais pour cette même journée, en plus de The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, nous avons the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association, Canadian General Electric Company Limited et Canadian Westinghouse Company Limited.

M. Hales: Je ne crois pas que nous pourrions les entendre jeudi.

Le président: Je compte sur votre coopération pour que nous puissions siéger à partir de 9h 30 du matin à 1 heure de l'après-midi, car nous aurons l'usage de la pièce pour toute cette période.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Monsieur le président, je crois que nous devons considérer que nous avons d'autres demandes.

Le président: Je sais, mais d'autres Comités ont siégé de 9h 30 du matin jusqu'à 1 heure de l'après-midi; je suis membre d'un tel Comité.

M. Burton: Monsieur le président, pour ma part, je dois être à un autre Comité à 1 heure.

Le président: Je sais cela, monsieur Burton, je suis aussi un membre du Comité de l'Agriculture.

[Text]

[Interprétation]

APPENDIX R

APPENDICE R

STATEMENT

SOUMISSION

BY

PAR

Textile Workers' Union
of America,
15, Gervais Drive,
Room No. 204,
Don Mills. Ontario.

Unions des Ouvriers du Textile d'Amérique,
15, Gervais Drive,
Room # 204,
Don Mills, Ontario.

Canadian Textiles Institute,
1080 Beaver Hall Hill,
Montreal. Quebec.

Institut canadien des Textiles,
1080 Beaver Hall Hill,
Montréal, Québec.

United Textile Workers
of America,
1031 Barton Street, East,
Hamilton. Ontario.

Ouvriers unis des Textiles d'Amérique,
1031 Barton Street, East,
Hamilton, Ontario.

NOVEMBER 12, 1968

Le 12 novembre 1968

1. We welcome this opportunity to present to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, views on the proposed Anti-Dumping Act. This is, in our opinion, the single most important measure affecting Canadian trade, arising from the Kennedy Round. While we have a number of comments to make, we should first state that those who have drafted the new Canadian legislation should be complimented on their efforts, having regard to the intricate nature of this subject and the quite difficult conditions laid upon them by the wording of the International Code.

1. Nous sommes heureux d'avoir l'occasion de soumettre au Comité permanent des Finances, Commerce et Affaires économiques des vues sur le projet de loi antidumping. Ce projet de loi est, à notre avis, la mesure la plus importante de protection du commerce canadien à découler des négociations Kennedy. Si nous avons certains commentaires à formuler, nous tenons à déclarer d'abord que les auteurs de ce projet de nouvelle loi canadienne méritent d'être félicités de leur travail, compte tenu de la complexité du sujet et des conditions fort difficiles qui leur étaient imposées par la teneur du Code international.

GENERAL COMMENTS

2. At the outset we wish to emphasize that anti-dumping measures are not in any sense an additional or exceptional form of protection for a domestic industry. They are rather a means to correct a situation which (it is internationally accepted) "is to be con-

COMMENTAIRES GÉNÉRAUX

2. Il y a lieu de souligner dès le début que les mesures antidumping ne constituent en aucune façon une forme de protection supplémentaire ou nouvelle pour l'industrie domestique. Il s'agit plutôt d'un moyen de corriger une situation qui ne peut (selon l'opinion demned". The phrase just quoted is drawn directly from the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. If injurious dumping is practised and detected and a duty collected equal to the margin of dumping, this is nothing more than a corrective to discriminatory pricing practices in international trade.

[Texte]

3. Such practices are already prohibited by Canadian law, when carried on within Canada. Other countries have similar national legislation. Anti-dumping legislation is therefore properly to be regarded as an extension into the international field of principles expressed nationally by statutes restricting discriminatory or predatory trade practices.

4. Discussing the results of the Kennedy Round, the then Minister of Finance, The Honourable Mitchell Sharp, said on July 10th, 1967—

"Another element of the Kennedy Round package for Canada was the code to govern the application of anti-dumping duties. This code is very important to Canada because our great industrial neighbours, to the South, to the East and to the West, sometimes try to dump their goods in Canada. For that reason, we have had anti-dumping laws longer than any other country. ... I should like to reiterate that where dumping threatens injury to Canadian producers, your government intends to see to it that in Canada anti-dumping duties are quickly and effectively applied".

Similar references to the application of anti-dumping duties "quickly and effectively" were also made by other Cabinet Ministers, such as the then Minister of Trade and Commerce, The Honourable Robert H. Winters.

[Interprétation]

internationale) «qu'être condamnée». L'opinion que nous venons de citer est tirée directement de l'Accord général sur le Tarif et le Commerce. Dans le cas où on constate un dumping préjudiciable, si on perçoit un droit correspondant à la marge de dumping, il ne s'agit de rien de plus qu'un correctif à des pratiques discriminatoires de détermination des prix au plan du commerce international.

3. De telles pratiques sont déjà interdites par la loi canadienne lorsqu'elles ont cours à l'intérieur du Canada. L'essence du dumping, dans le commerce international, c'est qu'il est discriminatoire et tout aussi condamnable lorsqu'il est pratiqué au détriment de concurrents par un producteur étranger que par un producteur domestique. On doit donc considérer la législation antidumping comme un prolongement au plan international des principes exprimés au palier national par les lois contre les pratiques commerciales discriminatoires ou malhonnêtes.

4. Commentant les résultats des négociations Kennedy, le 10 juillet 1967, l'honorable Mitchell Sharp, alors ministre des Finances, déclarait:

«Un autre élément des conséquences des négociations Kennedy pour le Canada a été le code régissant l'application des droits antidumping. Ce code est très important pour le Canada, parce que nos grands voisins industriels du Sud, de l'Est et de l'Ouest essaient parfois de pratiquer le dumping de leurs marchandises au Canada. C'est pourquoi nous avons maintenu des lois antidumping plus longtemps que tout autre pays. Je tiens à réitérer que, lorsque le dumping semble devoir nuire aux producteurs canadiens, votre gouvernement a l'intention de veiller à ce que les droits antidumping soient appliqués avec promptitude et efficacité au Canada.»

Des allusions semblables à l'application des droits antidumping «avec rapidité et efficacité» ont également été exprimées par d'autres membres du gouvernement, notamment l'honorable Robert H. Winters, alors ministre du Commerce.

[Text]

5. We consider it of the utmost importance that this expression of principle be translated not only into law, but into action at all stages of the administration of the new Anti-Dumping Act, including the primary stage of deciding that an investigation of alleged or apparent injurious dumping should be initiated, and provisional measures taken. A public statement of policy should be made at an appropriate time and place, to give direction as to the principles which the administrative authorities are expected to follow.

6. The existing anti-dumping legislation was designed to minimize the need for exercise of judgement or discretion by administrative officials. In contrast the draft bill greatly extends the area where judgements must be formed by administrative officials and tribunals, and makes the element of administration of even greater importance than it has been. Therefore, coincident with implementation of our proposed new statute, there must be a major improvement in the total administration and organization of the Customs Division if Canadian industry and producers are not to be subjected to serious and prolonged dumping and material injury. Because of the new restrictions and retroactivity, errors are no longer retrievable.

7. If anti-dumping duties are to be applied "quickly and effectively", more information should be required on customs entries and reported to the central administrative authorities promptly. More detailed information on imports should be published. The introduction of the concept of injury as an element of anti-dumping administration adds to the need for commercial judgement. If the authorities are hampered by a lack of knowledge of how business is done, and an unduly legalistic or theoretical approach to the evidence of injury, then industry will suffer serious consequences. A business-like approach is essential if the new system is to be effective.

[Interpretation]

5. Nous considérons de la plus grande importance que cette expression de principe se traduise non seulement en loi mais également en action à toutes les étapes de l'administration de la nouvelle loi antidumping, y compris à l'étape initiale, où il faut décider s'il y a lieu de faire enquête sur un dumping qu'on prétend ou qui semble préjudiciable et d'adopter des mesures provisoires. Un énoncé officiel de politique devrait être fait en temps et lieu afin d'indiquer à quels principes les préposés à l'administration devront se conformer.

6. La loi actuelle antidumping a été conçue pour limiter autant que possible la nécessité, pour les agents de l'administration d'exercer leur jugement ou leur discrétion. Par contre, la nouvelle loi élargit considérablement le champ dans lequel les agents de l'administration et les tribunaux devront exercer leur jugement et elle confère au facteur administration une importance plus grande qu'auparavant. C'est pourquoi, parallèlement à l'application de notre projet de nouvelle loi, il faudrait une amélioration considérable dans l'ensemble de l'administration et de l'organisation de la division des Douanes si l'on ne veut pas que l'industrie et les producteurs canadiens aient à souffrir sérieusement et de façon prolongée de dumping et de préjudice. En raison des nouvelles restrictions sur la rétroactivité, les erreurs ne sont plus réparables.

7. Si l'on veut que les droits antidumping soient appliqués «rapidement et efficacement», il faudrait exiger que des renseignements plus complets soient fournis sur les entrées douanières et qu'on en fasse rapport promptement aux autorités administratives centrales. Il y aurait lieu de publier des renseignements plus détaillés sur les importations. L'introduction du concept de préjudice comme élément de l'administration de la loi antidumping accroît la nécessité des jugements en matière commerciale. Si l'action des administrateurs est entravée par un manque de connaissance de la pratique des affaires et un point de vue trop légaliste ou théorique sur les preuves à fournir du préjudice, l'industrie en subira alors des conséquences sérieuses. Il faut adop-

[Texte]

8. Even when there are acceptable home market sales in an exporting country for like products to those exported to Canada, our facilities for establishing the facts promptly have been inadequate. Beyond this, however, a concept of value based on such sales is losing its validity in relationship to Canada. Home market sales under fully competitive conditions do not exist in countries operating controlled economies. In countries such as Japan, where there is a closely-linked cartel structure which incorporates companies producing goods at many different levels, trading companies, shipping companies, banks, etc., it can be very difficult to find arms-length transactions.

9. The branch plant aspect of parts of the Canadian economy has led to a large proportion of imports of semi-manufactured goods which are not sold at all in the home markets of the country of export, in arms-length transactions or otherwise. It is regularly necessary to create a value by a "cost plus" formula, which requires detailed information from the exporter abroad.

10. One essential to investigations is an improved mechanism for the determination of values abroad. Geography and the similarity of the commercial structure have, to some extent, eased the problem of obtaining information from the United States. There is a customs office in Brussels, with two officers who must cover the Benelux countries, France, Western Germany and the Iron Curtain countries. There are three officers posted in London who are responsible for all valuation investigations elsewhere in Europe as well as in the United Kingdom. In Tokyo we have two officers, neither of whom speak Japanese. That is the total overseas establishment. Primarily valuation enquiries have been made by correspondence, which has been both slow and inadequate even where there have been factual home market prices to look for. Improved facilities, and insistence on prompt replies to enquiries, are essential.

11. Much of the proposed legislation cannot be evaluated except in terms of the regulations. There are twenty-five separate points in ter un point de vue pratique si l'on veut que le nouveau système soit efficace.

[Interprétation]

8. Même si, dans un pays exportateur, les ventes domestiques de produits semblables à ceux qu'on exporte au Canada atteignent un niveau acceptable, nos moyens d'établir les faits avec promptitude ont été insuffisants. Indépendamment de cela, cependant, un concept de valeur basé sur de telles ventes perd sa signification en ce qui concerne le Canada. Les ventes sur le marché domestique dans des conditions pleinement concurrentielles n'existent pas dans un pays où l'économie est dirigée. Dans les pays comme le Japon, où il existe une structure de cartel fortement coordonnée, qui englobe des sociétés qui produisent des marchandises à de nombreux niveaux différents, on ne peut guère observer de transactions aux conditions normales du marché.

9. Le caractère de filiales de certains secteurs de l'économie canadienne a eu pour conséquence qu'une importante proportion des importations d'articles semi-ouvrés ne se vendent pas du tout sur les marchés domestiques du pays d'exportation, ni en des transactions libres, ni autrement. Il est régulièrement nécessaire d'en établir la valeur au moyen d'une formule basée sur le prix coûtant aux fins de laquelle il faut obtenir des renseignements détaillés de l'exportateur étranger.

10. Une condition essentielle des enquêtes, ce serait l'amélioration du mécanisme de détermination de la valeur à l'étranger. Un bureau des douanes à Bruxelles, sous la direction de deux administrateurs, doit s'occuper des pays du Benelux, de la France, de l'Allemagne de l'Ouest et des pays derrière le rideau de fer. Les trois dirigeants du bureau de Londres ont la responsabilité de toutes les enquêtes d'évaluation dans les autres pays d'Europe de même qu'au Royaume-Uni. A Tokyo, nous avons deux fonctionnaires dont aucun ne parle japonais. Voilà toute notre organisation à l'étranger. Les demandes de renseignements pour fins d'évaluation ont surtout été faites par correspondance, méthode lente et insuffisante même là où on pouvait se procurer des données exactes sur les prix au marché domestique. Il est essentiel d'améliorer les conditions matérielles et d'exiger la rapidité des réponses aux demandes de renseignements.

11. Beaucoup de la législation proposée ne peut être évaluée qu'en fonction des règlements. Il n'y a pas moins de 25 passages dans the draft bill at which there is reference to the making of regulations or rules. At the time this submission was prepared only a small proportion of these rules and regulations had been made public, and even these provide for re-delegation of discretion.

[Text]

PROPOSED STATUTE

12. References to what has been described as the "first bite" were made during the hearings of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs earlier this year. This received some attention at the hearings of February 7, 1968, at which time The Honourable C. M. Drury, the then Minister of Industry, said—

"This is not my legislation, so I am not giving any hostages. But as I did mention earlier, I think this so-called "one free dump" is an administrative practice rather than a statutory right, and I would be very surprised indeed if in the new legislation there were any provision made for one free dump by anybody".

In spite of this, in the textile industry, at least "one free dump", or "first bite" will almost certainly occur. There is provision for a limited degree of retroactivity under Section 5 of the Statute, in the case of a massive importation or a series of importations that in the aggregate are massive and that have occurred within a relatively short time. In other cases there is no such provision.

13. Our concern is, however, not restricted to "one free dump". A series of free dumps would be even more injurious. Section 4(a) does require the Customs Division to locate all entries, from the date of a preliminary finding, of dumped "goods of the same description" as those found to have been injuriously dumped, and to apply provisional duties to them. It is, however, difficult to understand how this obligation can be discharged since there is not even a central and detailed registry of all entries.

14. Section 7 authorizes the Governor-in-Council to exempt any goods or classes of goods from the application of the Anti-Dumping Act. We are not certain why such a provision should be made, since, under the new system, dumping duties cannot be applied le projet de loi où il est question de la préparation de tels règlements ou règles. Au moment de la préparation du présent mémoire, seule une petite partie de ces règlements avait été rendue publique et là déjà on pourvoit à une nouvelle délégation de pouvoirs de discrétion.

[Interpretation]

LE PROJET DE LOI

12. On a fait mention de ce qu'on a appelé «premier envoi de dumping» au cours des auditions du Comité permanent de finances, commerce et affaires économiques qui ont eu lieu plus tôt cette année. La question a fait l'objet de quelque attention aux séances du 7 février 1968, auxquelles l'honorable C. M. Drury, alors ministre de l'Industrie, a déclaré:

«Cette loi, ce n'est pas moi qui la présente et je n'entends pas m'engager formellement. Cependant, comme je l'ai dit plus tôt, je pense que ce prétendu «premier envoi de dumping» relève d'une pratique administrative plutôt que d'un droit statutaire et je serais vraiment très surpris si, dans la nouvelle loi, une disposition permettait à qui que ce soit de faire impunément un premier envoi de dumping.»

En dépit de ce qui précède, dans l'industrie textile au moins, un «premier envoi de dumping» ne peut guère manquer de se produire. L'article 5 prévoit un degré limité de rétroactivité dans le cas d'une importation massive ou d'une série d'importations qui, dans leur ensemble, sont massives et ont eu lieu au cours d'une période relativement courte. Dans les autres cas, il n'existe pas de telle disposition.

13. Notre préoccupation ne se limite toutefois pas à un unique envoi de dumping. Une série d'envois de dumping effectués sans contrainte serait encore plus dommageable. L'article 4(a) exige que la division des Douanes relève tous les rapports d'entrées, à compter de la date de la constatation préliminaire, de marchandises faisant l'objet de dumping et dont la description correspond à celles dont le dumping a été préjudiciable et qu'elle applique les droits temporaires. Il est toutefois difficile de comprendre comment cette exigence peut être satisfaite puisqu'il n'existe même pas de registre central et détaillé de toutes les entrées.

14. L'article 7 autorise le Gouverneur en conseil à exempter toutes marchandises ou catégories de marchandises de l'application de la loi antidumping. Nous ne voyons pas la raison d'une telle disposition, car en vertu du nouveau système, les droits de dumping ne until it has been established both that there is dumping and that there is injury. However, should some "escape clause" of this nature be needed, there should be provision for publication of exempting orders.

[Texte]

15. Section 9 of the proposed bill sets out the method of determining "normal value". We consider Sub-section (2)(b) to be dangerous. This states that where a particular exporter to Canada does not make a sufficient number of sales in his home market of like goods to those exported to Canada, because his production is solely or primarily for export, but where there are sales of like goods for home consumption in the country of export by other vendors, the sales by these other vendors "shall" be adopted. Different price levels may exist at the same time for similar goods, particularly where supplies are limited by such factors as quotas. We believe this provision, as now worded, could lead to confusion and the time delays, and also to the acceptance of values which are unduly low. This method of establishing normal value is not required by the International Code and should be optional rather than mandatory. Further, the wording of Section 9(2)(b) does not even require that the prices of the "other vendors" be for goods made in the country of export. The prices of the "other vendors" used to establish normal value should be limited to the prices of domestic goods in the country of export.

16. Sub-section (3)(b) of Section 9 provides for prescribing by regulations the manner of calculating the "amount for administrative, selling and all other costs and for profits" referred to in (b) (ii). No draft regulation on this point has yet been made public. There should be provision also for prescribing by regulation the manner of calculating "the cost of production", as referred to in (b) (i); the draft bill does not now provide for this. The apparent cost of production of goods for export can be reduced by a variety of means. For example, tax allowances may be made in respect of production for export, which will reduce overhead. Raw materials to produce goods for export may be made available at lower prices than materials to make goods for home consumption. In applying the addition of peuvent pas s'appliquer aussi longtemps qu'il n'a pas été prouvé qu'il y a eu effectivement dumping et que ce dumping a été préjudiciable. Cependant, si une clause quelconque «de dégagement» de cette nature était nécessaire, nous pensons qu'il y aurait lieu de prévoir la publication des ordres d'exemptions.

[Interprétation]

15. L'article 9 du projet de loi définit la méthode qui servira à déterminer la «valeur normale». Nous estimons que le paragraphe (2)(b) comporte un danger. Ce paragraphe stipule que si un exportateur expédiant des marchandises au Canada ne fait pas, sur son marché domestique, un nombre suffisant de ventes de marchandises semblables à celles qu'il exporte au Canada parce que sa production est destinée seulement ou essentiellement à l'exportation, mais qu'il y ait eu des ventes de marchandises semblables destinées à la consommation intérieure dans le pays d'exportation par d'autres vendeurs, les ventes effectuées par ces autres vendeurs «devront» être adoptées. Des niveaux différents de prix peuvent exister en même temps pour des marchandises semblables, en particulier là où les approvisionnements de marchandises moins chères sont limités par des facteurs comme les contingentements. Nous estimons que cette disposition, dans sa forme actuelle, pourrait entraîner de la confusion et des pertes de temps, ainsi que l'acceptation de valeurs normales qui serait indûment basse. Cette méthode d'établissement de la valeur normale n'est pas requise par le Code international et qu'elle devrait être facultative plutôt qu'obligatoire. De plus, le texte de l'article 9(2)(b) ne spécifie même pas que les prix des «autres vendeurs» doivent être ceux des marchandises fabriquées dans le pays d'exportation. Les prix des «autres vendeurs» servant à établir la valeur normale devraient être restreints aux prix des marchandises domestiques dans le pays d'exportation.

16. Le paragraphe (3) (b) de l'article 9 stipule que les règlements définiront la méthode de calcul du «montant des frais administratifs, des frais de vente et de tous autres frais ainsi que des bénéfices» mentionnés dans le sous-alinéa (b) (ii). Aucun projet de règlement sur ce point n'a encore été publié. Il faudrait également une disposition prescrivant au moyen d'un règlement la méthode de calcul du «coût de production» mentionné au sous-alinéa (b) (i); le coût apparent de production de marchandises destinées à l'exportation peut être réduit par divers moyens. Par exemple, des réductions de taxe peuvent être accordées à l'égard de la production destinée à l'exportation, ce qui diminue les frais généraux. Les matières premières servant à la production de marchandises d'exportation

[Text]

"an amount for administrative, selling and all other costs and for profits" to cost of production, in the circumstances contemplated by Section (9)(3)(b)(ii), there should be a requirement that the costing methods used in determining home market "markups" and in costing the goods for export to Canada shall be fully uniform and comparable.

17. Before leaving Section 9 we wish to draw attention to two points in the proposed draft regulation 6 relating to Section 9, as tabled with the Committee on October 31. We believe that the phrasing of paragraph (b) of regulation 6 should parallel the phrasing in paragraph (b) of regulation 5, and commence with the words "the discount is not greater in percentage and not more favourable in terms than that granted generally..." Similarly the wording of paragraph (c) of draft regulation 6 should parallel that of paragraph (c) of draft regulation 5, by requiring an "undertaking" by the importer, rather than merely requiring that the Deputy Minister be "satisfied". Lacking such an undertaking there is no recourse against an importer who does not fulfill the conditions for taking the discount.

18. At the present time Section 6 of the Customs Tariff provides for the collection of dumping duties only when "the export or actual selling price to an importer in Canada" is less than the fair market value. In the case of goods shipped "no charge", no export or actual selling price exists, and dumping duties are consequently not collectible. The same is true when goods are on consignment. "No charge" or "consignment" invoicing occurs automatically where the exporter abroad is the same legal person as the importer in Canada; selling goods to one's self being a legal impossibility, there can be no selling price. It appears that certain companies have so arranged their business as to take advantage of this present weakness. Section (2)(a) of Section 10 appears designed to deal with this situation, and is desirable.

19. Sub-section (2)(b)(i) of Section 10 relates to a sale between associated persons. The freedom of foreign exporters to operate wholly-owned subsidiaries in Canada has led to an increasing proportion of imports being made peuvent être disponibles à des prix inférieurs à ceux des matières premières servant à la fabrication des articles de consommation domestique. En ajoutant le «montant des frais administratifs, des frais de vente et de tous autres frais ainsi que des bénéfices» au coût de production, dans les conditions envisagées par l'article (9) (3) (b) (ii), il devrait y avoir une disposition exigeant que les méthodes d'établissement des prix servant à déterminer la marge de bénéfices pratiquée sur le marché domestique et à établir le prix des marchandises destinées à être exportées au Canada soient pleinement uniformes et comparables.

[Interpretation]

17. Avant de délaissier l'article 9, nous attirons votre attention sur deux points du règlement 6 relatifs à l'article 9, déposé auprès du comité le 31 octobre. Nous pensons que le texte de l'alinéa (b) du règlement 6 devrait être conforme à celui de l'alinéa (b) du règlement 5 et commencer par les mots «l'escompte n'est pas plus élevé en pourcentage ni plus favorable dans ses termes que celui qui est accordé généralement...» De la même façon, le texte de l'alinéa (c) du projet de règlement 6 devrait être conforme à celui de l'alinéa (c) du projet de règlement 5 et exiger un «engagement» de l'importateur, au lieu de se contenter d'exiger que le Sous-Ministre soit «convaincu». A défaut d'un tel engagement, aucun recours ne peut être exercé à l'endroit d'un importateur qui ne respecte pas les conditions d'octroi de l'escompte.

18. A l'heure actuelle, l'article 6 du Tarif des Douanes ne prévoit la perception de droits de dumping que si «le prix d'exportation ou le prix réel de vente à un importateur au Canada» est inférieur à la juste valeur marchande. Dans le cas de marchandises expédiées «sans frais», il n'existe pas de prix d'exportation ou de prix réel de vente proprement dit et, en conséquence, des droits de dumping ne peuvent être perçus. Il en va de même des marchandises en consignation. La facturation «sans frais» ou «en consignation» a lieu automatiquement lorsque l'exportateur à l'étranger est la même personne légale que l'importateur au Canada; la vente de marchandises à soi-même étant une impossibilité juridique, il ne peut exister de prix de vente. Il semble que certaines compagnies ont arrangé leurs affaires de façon à profiter de cette faiblesse actuelle. Le paragraphe 2 (a) de l'article 10 semble destiné à corriger cette situation, ce qui est souhaitable.

19. Le paragraphe (2) (b) (i) de l'article 10 a trait à la vente entre personnes associées. La liberté accordée aux exportateurs étrangers de diriger des filiales en propriété exclusive au Canada a entraîné l'accroissement des under conditions where the movement across the border is not in arms-length transactions, even when such exist within the country of export. The growth of international companies where costs of one unit are less meaningful than overall corporate interests tends to increase the area where an export price may be unreliable because of association (or a compensatory arrangement) between the exporter and the importer or a third party. The increasing scale of production units and increasing capital intensity with consequent lowering levels of marginal costs also tends to unreliability of export prices.

[Texte]

20. The provision in Sub-section (2)(b)(ii) of Section 10 that the Deputy Minister may disregard a stated export price if there is a compensatory arrangement is a desirable one, which should be phrased as broadly as possible. There has been a long history of "compensatory arrangements", in a variety of forms, which have been possible because of loopholes in the present law. Merely as one example; an exporter who wishes to dump may sell goods to a Canadian importer at ostensible prices not less than fair market value, at the same time depositing to a designated account outside Canada the difference between this selling price and a lower dump price. This is an undoubted breach of the purpose and intention of our dumping duty laws, but has been both almost impossible to trace and probably technically outside the scope of the law as now worded. Such a practice is of course particularly easy if a Canadian importer has a related company outside Canada, either as a parent or as a subsidiary, to serve as the "designated account" for receipt of the side payment, enabling effective dumping of goods into Canada in fact if not in form.

21. As a technical point, we question whether the reference in Section 10(2)(b)(ii) should be to a compensatory arrangement "affecting the price" of the goods. An argument might be made that compensatory arrangements may affect the ultimate net cost to an importer, but that they do not affect the "price". If there is any risk of such an interpretation it might be preferable to change this wording so that it refers more broadly to importations, dans des conditions où le mouvement de part et d'autre de la frontière ne se fait pas par transactions aux prix normaux, même si des transactions aux conditions normales s'effectuent à l'intérieur du pays d'exportation. L'expansion de sociétés internationales, pour lesquelles les coûts d'une unité ont moins d'importance que les intérêts d'ensemble de l'entreprise, ont tendu à augmenter l'étendue du secteur où on ne peut se fier à un prix d'exportation en raison d'une association (ou d'une entente de compensation) entre l'exportateur et l'importateur ou une tierce partie. L'importance croissante des unités de production, l'accroissement du poids des immobilisations et, en conséquence l'abaissement des niveaux des frais marginaux ont aussi tendu à l'inexactitude du prix d'exportation.

[Interprétation]

20. La disposition du paragraphe (2) (b) (ii) de l'article 10 selon laquelle le Sous-Ministre peut ne pas tenir compte d'un prix d'exportation déclaré s'il existe un arrangement compensatoire est désirable et elle devrait être formulée en termes aussi généraux que possible. Il existe une longue histoire d'«arrangements compensatoires» sous diverses formes, qui n'ont été possibles qu'en raison des lacunes de la loi actuelle. Pour n'en donner qu'un exemple, un exportateur qui désire faire du dumping peut vendre des marchandises à un importateur canadien à des prix déclarés qui ne sont pas inférieurs à la juste valeur marchande et en même temps déposer dans un compte désigné en dehors du Canada la différence entre ce prix de vente et le prix inférieur de dumping. Il s'agit là d'une violation de l'objet et de l'intention de nos lois relatives aux droits de dumping qu'il a été à peu près impossible de déceler et qui peut même excéder techniquement la portée de la loi dans son texte actuel. Une telle pratique est évidemment particulièrement facile lorsque l'importateur canadien dispose d'une société associée à l'extérieur du Canada, soit société-mère, soit filiale, pour faire office de «compte désigné» pour l'encaissement du paiement irrégulier, ce qui permet effectivement la pratique du dumping de marchandises au Canada en fait, sinon selon la forme.

21. A titre de point technique, nous nous demandons si l'article (10) (2) (b) (ii) devrait faire mention d'un arrangement compensatoire «affectant le prix» des marchandises. On pourrait soutenir que les arrangements compensatoires peuvent influer sur le prix net final à l'importateur, mais qu'il n'affecte pas le «prix». S'il existe quelque risque que ce soit d'une telle interprétation, il pourrait être souhaitable de changer le texte de manière

[Text]

"a compensatory arrangement relating to the sale of the goods".

22. Section 10 does not appear to deal with two circumstances which have been a cause of difficulty under existing legislation. These are the importation of goods with remittances made against an open account, and extended credit. When remittances are not made in the same amount as any one invoice, it becomes impossible to say how much is actually being paid per unit because it can always be alleged that it is intended to pay, at some time, any outstanding balance. Extended credit, which is the same as a reduction in selling price, is significant at to-day's interest rates.

23. If there were a formal arrangement extending longer credit terms to a Canadian importer than are allowed in the supposedly comparable home market transactions, the provision in Section 10(2)(b)(ii) relating to a "compensatory arrangement" might be applicable. It is unlikely, however, that there would be any "arrangement" put on record between an exporter and an importer, or other parties to a transaction, that the importer will be merely allowed to defer, or forget part of, the payments ostensibly owing. However, the commercial reality is what counts. There should be a provision in the statute, or authority in the statute to provide by regulation, for adjustment of ostensible selling prices downwards to reflect savings to an importer arising from delay in remission of payment. This might be achieved by adding to section 10(2)(b) an additional paragraph (iii) reading:—"or by reason of any other circumstance which, in the opinion of the Deputy Minister, provides an effective reduction in the sale price".

24. Full comments on Section 10 cannot be made in the absence of the regulations required under subsection (2) thereof.

INVESTIGATION PROCEDURE

25. Section 13 is the first section dealing with investigation procedures. It requires that the Deputy Minister shall "forthwith" cause an investigation to be initiated, either on his own initiative or on receipt of a complaint, if he "is of the opinion" that there is evidence of dumping and injury. It should be noted that the requirement to act "forthwith" applies only after the Deputy Minister has formed his opinions. There is no requirement qu'il fasse mention en termes plus généraux d'un «arrangement compensatoire lié à la vente des marchandises».

[Interpretation]

22. L'article 10 ne semble pas s'appliquer à deux circonstances qui ont constitué une cause de difficultés dans l'état actuel de la législation. Ce sont l'importation de marchandises avec remises versées à un compte ouvert et le crédit prolongé. Lorsque des remises ne sont pas faites au montant exact de toutes factures, il devient impossible d'établir à combien s'élève en réalité le prix unitaire, car on peut toujours prétendre que l'intention de l'importateur est de payer, plus tard, tout solde encore dû. Le crédit prolongé, qui correspond à une réduction du prix de vente, est un facteur significatif au niveau actuel des taux d'intérêt.

23. S'il existait une entente formelle accordant à un importateur canadien un crédit plus long qu'il n'est permis dans le cas des transactions prétendues comparables sur le marché domestique, la disposition de l'article 10 (2) (b) (ii) relative à une «entente de compensation» pourrait être applicable. Il est peu probable, cependant, qu'il existe une «entente formelle» entre un exportateur et un importateur ou d'autres parties à une transaction établissant que l'importateur est simplement autorisé à différer ou négliger le paiement d'une partie des paiements apparemment encore dus. Cependant, c'est la réalité commerciale qui compte. La loi devrait comporter une disposition ou un pouvoir permettant d'effectuer, au moyen d'un règlement, la rectification à un niveau inférieur des prix de vente prétendus, de manière à tenir compte de la réduction que représente, pour un importateur, un délai de paiement. On y parviendrait en ajoutant à l'article 10 (2) (b) un alinéa supplémentaire (iii) disant ce qui suit: «ou en raison de toute autre circonstance qui, de l'avis du Sous-Ministre, entraîne une réduction effective du prix de vente».

24. Nous ne pouvons soumettre de commentaires complets sur l'article 10 en l'absence des règlements requis aux termes du paragraphe 2 de l'article.

PROCÉDURE D'ENQUÊTE

25. L'article 13 est le premier à traiter des procédures d'enquête. Il stipule que le sous-ministre fait ouvrir «immédiatement» une enquête, soit de sa propre initiative, soit sur réception d'une plainte, s'il «est d'avis» qu'il y a des éléments de preuve indiquant que les marchandises ont été sous-évaluées ou qu'il a préjudice. Il convient de noter que l'exigence d'agir «immédiatement» ne s'applique qu'après que le sous-ministre s'est formé une that the Deputy Minister should form his opinions promptly.

[Texte]

26. Section 13(1) requires the Deputy Minister to take action "on his own initiative". The administrative authorities should not only be prepared to initiate an investigation without having received a request on behalf of the industry affected, but should consider it their responsibility to do so and to actively and continually review imports to detect cases which should be investigated. However, a recent administrative decentralization of the Customs Division, through establishment of regional offices across Canada, has changed the situation formerly existing that copies of all customs entries were sent to Ottawa for checking and review. We understand that copies of customs entries are no longer sent to Ottawa, unless specially requested. There is therefore now no effective mechanism for the values of imports to be actively and continually reviewed either in Ottawa or in the regions.

27. Whether a request for initiation of an investigation is put forward on behalf of an industry, or action is initiated by the authorities, the evidence both of dumping and of injury should at this stage not call for more than a prima facie case. The administrative authorities will want to satisfy themselves that allegations are not frivolous, but should require no more in order to initiate an investigation. Only in this way will cases proceed with the necessary speed.

28. Mr. John B. Rehm, General Counsel, Office of the Special Representative for Trade Negotiations, United States Kennedy Round Team, is quoted as follows on his view of the provision in the International Code relating to this point, insofar as "injury" is concerned.

"Once the Treasury is satisfied that sales are being made at less than fair value then even a perfunctory show of injury would be sufficient to get a withholding of appraisement."

There should not be harassment of importers by instituting investigations with no evidence of dumping and of injury. However, having regard to the lack of retroactivity imposed by the provisions of the Code, and carried into this draft bill, it would be equally wrong to delay proceedings by treating a preliminary investigation as if it were a final action. Find-opinion. Le texte ne spécifie pas que le Sous-Ministre doit se former promptement une opinion.

[Interprétation]

26. L'article 13(1) exige que le Sous-Ministre prenne des mesures «de sa propre initiative». Les autorités administratives ne devraient pas seulement être prêtes à déclancher une enquête sans avoir reçu de demande au nom de l'industrie en cause, mais elles devraient considérer que c'est leur responsabilité de le faire et d'examiner activement et continuellement les importations afin de déceler les cas qui justifieraient une enquête. Cependant, la décentralisation récente de la division des douanes, par l'établissement de bureaux régionaux d'un bout à l'autre du Canada a changé la situation d'autrefois, alors qu'il fallait transmettre à Ottawa des copies de toutes les inscriptions aux douanes pour vérification et compilation. Selon nos renseignements, les copies des inscriptions douanières n'ont plus besoin d'être adressées à Ottawa sauf demande expresse. Il n'existe donc plus de mécanisme efficace qui assure la vérification diligente et continue de la valeur des importations, ni à Ottawa ni au niveau des régions.

27. Que la demande d'ouverture d'une enquête soit formulée au nom d'une industrie ou que cette mesure soit due à l'initiative des autorités, la preuve et du dumping et du préjudice ne devrait exiger, à ce stade, que des éléments prima facie. Les autorités administratives voudront s'assurer qu'il s'agit d'allégations sérieuses mais n'auront besoin de rien de plus pour faire ouvrir une enquête. Ce n'est que de cette manière que les cas pourront être examinés avec la rapidité nécessaire.

28. M. John B. Rehm, conseiller général au bureau du représentant spécial pour les négociations commerciales, de l'équipe des États-Unis aux négociations Kennedy, a exprimé de la façon suivante ses vues sur la disposition du code international touchant cette question, relativement au «préjudice»:

«Dès que la trésorerie est convaincue que des ventes se font à un prix inférieur à la juste valeur marchande, une indication superficielle de préjudice suffit à déclencher la suspension de l'évaluation.»

Il ne faut pas harceler les importateurs en instituant des enquêtes sans preuves de dumping et de préjudice. Cependant, compte tenu du défaut de rétroactivité découlant des dispositions du Code, maintenu dans le présent projet de loi, il serait également mauvais de retarder la marche à suivre en considérant des recherches préliminaires comme s'il s'aings of injury are the ultimate responsibility of the Anti-Dumping Tribunal.

[Text]

29. Section 13(2) again raises the point of a time limit. There is no requirement that the Deputy Minister shall "forthwith" make his decision, and send notice of this decision, if he decides not to initiate an investigation.

30. Sub-section (3) of Section 13 deals with the obtaining of an advisory opinion from the Anti-Dumping Tribunal. There is no requirement that anyone be advised either that the opinion of the Anti-Dumping Tribunal has been sought, or the nature of the opinion that it expresses. It may be that, if this advisory opinion is sought by the Deputy Minister, it should be regarded as an internal administrative matter. However, where it is sought by a complainant, provision should be made for advising the complainant of the disposition of his case. This same comment applies in relation to Sub-section (7) of Section 13.

31. There is no requirement under Sub-Section (4) that the Deputy Minister shall proceed "forthwith" on receipt of the notice from the Anti-Dumping Tribunal referred to therein. There should be such a requirement.

32. Where an investigation is initiated under Section 13 by reason of a complaint, the name of the complainant should not be disclosed except with his agreement.

33. Sub-section (6)(a)(ii) of Section 13 refers to an investigation being terminated if the Deputy Minister is satisfied that the margin of dumping "or" the actual or potential volume of dumped goods is negligible. We believe that this word "or" should read "and". A large volume of dumping could cause substantial damage even though the margin of dumping is small. In Section 14(1)(b), this same point exists, stated in the converse, by the requirement that the Deputy Minister be satisfied that both the margin of dumping "and" the volume are not negligible. At this place the word "and" should read "or". If the Deputy Minister decides to terminate an investigation under the provisions of Sub-section (6) of Section 13 he is not required to state any reasons; he should be required to state reasons, in the same manner required under Sub-section (2) of Section 13.

34. Section 14 prescribes the course of action if the Deputy Minister, having initiated an investigation, is satisfied there is evidence of both dumping and injury sufficient to proceed with a full-scale enquiry. Until a pre-gissait d'une décision finale. La constatation de préjudice appartient en dernier ressort au tribunal antidumping.

[Interpretation]

29. L'article 13 (2) soulève à nouveau la question de la limite de temps. On n'y trouve pas d'exigence que le Sous-Ministre doive prendre «immédiatement» sa décision et donner avis de cette décision, s'il décide de ne pas faire ouvrir d'enquête.

30. Le paragraphe (3) de l'article 13 a trait à l'obtention d'un avis du tribunal antidumping. On n'y trouve pas d'exigence que qui que ce soit soit informé ni qu'on a demandé l'avis du tribunal antidumping, ni de la nature de l'opinion qu'il a exprimée. Il se peut, si cet avis est demandé par le Sous-Ministre, qu'il soit considéré comme une question d'administration interne. Cependant, lorsqu'il est demandé par un plaignant, on devrait prendre des dispositions pour informer le plaignant de la décision prise dans son cas. Le même commentaire s'applique à l'égard du paragraphe (7) de l'article 13.

31. On ne trouve pas, dans le paragraphe (4) d'exigence que le Sous-Ministre doive procéder «immédiatement» sur réception de l'avis du tribunal antidumping mentionné dans les présentes. Une telle exigence s'imposerait.

32. Lorsqu'une enquête est ouverte en vertu de l'article 13 à la suite d'une plainte, le nom du plaignant ne devrait pas être révélé sauf s'il y consent.

33. Le paragraphe 6 (a) (ii) de l'article 13 indique que le sous-ministre fait mettre fin à une enquête s'il est convaincu que la marge de dumping «ou» le volume réel ou éventuel des marchandises sous-évaluées sont négligeables. Nous pensons que le mot «ou» devrait être remplacé par «et». Un volume important de dumping pourrait causer des dommages substantiels, même si la marge de dumping était faible. Dans l'article 14 (1) (b), le même cas se présente, à l'inverse, lorsqu'on dit que le Sous-Ministre doit être convaincu que et la marge de dumping «et» le volume ne sont pas négligeables. Dans ce passage, le mot «et» devrait être remplacé par «ou». Si le Sous-Ministre décide de mettre fin à une enquête en vertu des dispositions du paragraphe (6) de l'article 13, il n'est pas tenu d'en donner les raisons. En fait, il devrait être tenu d'en donner raisons, de la même façon qu'il y est tenu en vertu du paragraphe (2) de l'article 13.

34. L'article 14 définit la marche à suivre si le Sous-Ministre, après avoir fait ouvrir une enquête, est convaincu qu'il y a preuve à la fois de sous-évaluation et de préjudice suffisants pour justifier une enquête complète.

[Texte]

liminary determination is made under Section 14(1), provisional duties as referred to in Section 15 cannot be applied. Under Section 4 of the draft bill, in cases where the Tribunal has made an order or finding after the entry of goods that they have been injuriously dumped, the Deputy Minister cannot apply dumping duties to the dumped goods under investigation in excess of "the provisional duty, if any, payable in respect of the goods". Procedural steps should not prevent the immediate levying of provisional duties, in cases where the Deputy Minister is satisfied that there is sufficient evidence of dumping and of injury to justify a full-scale investigation. Otherwise the quick and effective application of dumping duties stated to be a matter of government policy will not occur.

35. We are concerned that the procedural steps of notifying a variety of persons, and publication in the Canada Gazette, might be interpreted as suggesting that the Deputy Minister should not apply provisional duties under Section 15 immediately he comes to the conclusion that there is evidence of injurious dumping as provided for in Section 14(1), but should await publication in the Canada Gazette, and receipt of the notifications by the persons who are to be individually notified. The application of provisional measures under Section 15 should not be delayed by the notification procedures of Section 14(2).

36. Paragraph (d) of Sub-section (2) of Section 14 is a direction to carry through with the formal investigation in such manner as to enable a final determination of dumping within three months of the preliminary determination. We do not understand why this should be made subject to "directions given by the Minister". We feel this should be a mandatory provision, and that directions from the Minister should not be needed.

37. There is a further point arising from the wording of Section 15(1). This is the requirement that goods of the kind being investigated should enter Canada provisionally during the period of an investigation, but that this period shall end "on the day that an order or finding is made by the Tribunal". There would be a time gap between the date of a Tribunal order as referred to in Section 15(1), and definitive determination of the margin of dumping under Section 17(1), which cannot be made until receipt by the Deputy Minister of the order or finding of the Tribunal, dur-

[Interprétation]

Jusqu'à ce qu'une décision préliminaire soit prise en vertu de l'article 14(1), les droits temporaires mentionnés dans l'article 15 ne peuvent s'appliquer. En vertu de l'article 4 du projet de loi, dans les cas où le Tribunal a donné un ordre ou s'il découvre, après l'entrée de marchandises, qu'elles ont fait l'objet d'un dumping préjudiciable, le Sous-Ministre ne peut imposer de droits de dumping aux marchandises sous-évaluées qui font l'objet de l'enquête, au delà du «droit temporaire, s'il en est, exigible pour ces marchandises». Les étapes de procédures n'empêchent pas la perception immédiate des droits temporaires, dans les cas où le Sous-Ministre est convaincu qu'il existe des preuves suffisantes de sous-évaluation et de préjudice pour justifier une enquête complète. Sans cela, l'application rapide et efficace des droits de dumping qu'on déclare matière de politique du gouvernement ne se produira pas.

35. Nous nous inquiétons de ce que les étapes de procédures relatives à l'avertissement de diverses personnes et la publication dans la Gazette du Canada pourraient être interprétées comme donnant à comprendre que le Sous-Ministre ne devrait pas imposer de droits temporaires en vertu de l'article 15 dès qu'il en vient à la conclusion qu'il y a preuve de dumping préjudiciable aux termes du paragraphe 14(1), mais qu'il devrait attendre la publication dans la Gazette du Canada et la réception des avis par les personnes qu'il faut avertir individuellement. L'application des mesures provisoires prévues à l'article 15 ne devrait pas être retardée par les dispositions de communication des avis de l'article 14 (2).

36. L'alinéa (d) du paragraphe (2) de l'article 14 impose la poursuite de l'enquête officielle de telle sorte qu'elle permette la détermination définitive du dumping dans les trois mois de la détermination préliminaire. Nous ne comprenons pas pourquoi on assujettit ces dispositions aux «instructions du Ministre». Nous estimons que ces dispositions devraient être obligatoires, sans nécessité d'instructions du Ministre.

37. Un autre problème est lié au texte de l'article 15 (1). C'est l'exigence que les marchandises du genre de celles qui font l'objet de l'enquête doivent entrer au pays conditionnellement, pendant la période de durée de l'enquête, mais que cette période prenne fin «le jour même où une ordonnance ou une décision est rendue par le Tribunal». Il y aurait un écart de temps entre la date de l'ordonnance du Tribunal, mentionnée dans l'article 15 (1), et la détermination définitive de la marge de dumping aux termes de l'article 17 (1), laquelle ne peut être faite avant la ing this time, provisional duties should continue. Furthermore, provisional duties should be levied in the full amount warranted by the apparent margin of dumping. To act otherwise would result in provisional duties being less than required to remove the injury caused by the dumped imports, which would also prevent collection of definitive duties in the full amount that might be found necessary. Section 15(1)(a) should be amended accordingly.

[Text]

38. Sub-section (3) of Section 17 provides that the Deputy Minister shall give notice of his final determinations in a manner to be "prescribed by the regulations". We see no reason to leave this to regulations. This might better be phrased as requiring notice of final determinations to be given to the same persons and in the same manner as the first notification of the enquiry, as set out in Section 14, Sub-sections (2) (a) and (2) (b).

39. Section 18(4)(b) deals with reappraising goods if there has been any misrepresentation or fraud at the time of entry, but there are no related penalties. Sub-section (5) of Section 18 provides that in the case of a reappraisal "the importer shall pay any additional duty payable with respect to the goods". However, it is not clear what this additional duty would be.

40. The powers of the Deputy Minister to require submission of information under Section 34 are important. We believe this section should be extended to enable the Deputy Minister to request information not only when any goods "have been or are being dumped", but also whenever the Deputy Minister has reason to believe that they "are likely to be dumped". There is no stipulation that the information submitted to the Deputy Minister must be complete. The penalty provided under Sub-section (3) if statements submitted contain "false or incorrect" information, should extend to the omission or withholding of relevant information.

41. There are at the present time inadequate facilities and powers in the Customs Act for the collection of full information on all aspects of a transaction within Canada. Under the new Anti-Dumping Act there will be greater need for such information. However, the draft bill is not entirely self-contained. It relies on provisions of the Customs Act, réception par le Sous-Ministre de l'ordonnance ou de la décision du Tribunal. Les droits temporaires devraient continuer de s'appliquer pendant cette période. De plus, les droits temporaires devraient être prélevés au plein montant que justifie la marge apparente de dumping. En agissant autrement, les droits temporaires seraient inférieurs à ce qu'il faudrait pour compenser le préjudice causé par les marchandises sous-évaluées. Ce serait également empêcher la perception des droits définitifs au plein montant qui pourrait être jugé nécessaire. L'article 15 (1) (a) devrait être modifié en conséquence.

[Interpretation]

38. Le paragraphe (3) de l'article 17 stipule que le Sous-Ministre donne un avis de sa détermination définitive de la manière «prescrite par les règlements». Nous ne voyons pas de raisons de s'en remettre aux règlements. Peut-être vaudrait-il mieux de dire que l'avis de sa détermination définitive doit être donné aux mêmes personnes et de la même manière que dans le cas du premier avis d'enquête, ainsi qu'il est stipulé dans l'article 14, paragraphes (2) (a) et (2) (b).

39. L'article 18 (4) (b) a trait à la réévaluation de marchandises s'il y a eu fausse représentation ou fraude au moment de l'entrée, mais ne comporte pas de sanctions. Le paragraphe (5) de l'article 18 stipule que, dans le cas d'une réévaluation, «l'importateur doit payer tout droit supplémentaire payable relativement aux marchandises». Cependant, on ne dit pas clairement ce qui ce droit supplémentaire devra être.

40. Le pouvoir du Sous-Ministre de demander des renseignements aux termes de l'article 34 est important. Nous sommes d'avis que la portée de cet article pourrait être étendue de manière à permettre au Sous-Ministre de demander des renseignements non seulement lorsque des marchandises «ont été ou sont sous-évaluées», mais également chaque fois que le Sous-Ministre a des raisons de croire qu'elles «feront vraisemblablement l'objet de dumping». Aucune disposition ne stipule que les renseignements soumis au Sous-Ministre doivent être complets. La sanction prévue en vertu de l'article (3) si les états soumis contiennent «des renseignements faux ou inexacts», devrait s'appliquer à l'omission ou à la dissimulation de renseignements pertinents.

41. Il existe, à l'heure actuelle, une insuffisance de moyens et de pouvoirs dans la Loi sur les Douanes relativement à l'obtention de renseignements complets sur tous les aspects des transactions à l'intérieur du Canada. Aux termes de la nouvelle loi antidumping, la nécessité de tels renseignements sera plus grande encore. Cependant, le projet de loi which are specifically referred to in Section 2, Sub-section (3). A defect in the existing provisions of the Customs Act is therefore relevant to the proposed new Anti-Dumping Act. Under the provisions of the Customs Act importers are required to keep books and records for a period of six years. However, it is only when an information alleging conspiracy to defraud the revenue has been given under oath or when goods have been seized that the importer can be required to turn over his books or documents for inspection. It is sometimes impossible to determine whether goods have, in fact, been unlawfully imported unless the importer's records are examined and in many cases such examination is warranted to protect the revenue without an officer of the Department being in a position to formally allege a conspiracy to defraud. To overcome this situation it is recommended that provisions similar to Section 126 of the Income Tax Act be inserted in the Customs Act or, failing this, in this Anti-Dumping Act.

[Texte]

ANTI-DUMPING TRIBUNAL

42. Determinations of whether or not dumped imports are causing or threatening injury to an existing industry, or materially retarding the establishment of an industry, are essentially exercises of judgement based upon the available facts and an understanding of how business is carried on. A legalistic or theoretical approach is inadequate to meet the rapidly changing facts of competition. It is therefore important that members of the Tribunal should have a background in Canadian industry, and that procedures before the Board should be relatively informal.

43. Section 16 requires the Anti-Dumping Tribunal to proceed with an enquiry into injury, on receipt of advice from the Deputy Minister that he is proceeding with determining of dumping. There is no requirement that the Tribunal give any notice of a hearing to anyone, or for that matter that it hold a hearing at all. There is no requirement that the Tribunal shall notify any person of anything during the course of its proceedings. This does not meet the requirements of Article 6 of the International Code, and contrasts with the detailed prescription of notification requirements to be met by the Deputy Min-n'est pas complètement intégré. Il s'appuie sur des dispositions de la Loi sur les Douanes, dont il est spécifiquement fait mention dans l'article 2, paragraphe (3). Un défaut dans les dispositions actuelles de la Loi sur les Douanes influe donc sur le projet de nouvelles lois antidumping. Suivant les dispositions de la Loi sur les Douanes, les importateurs sont obligés de tenir des livres et des dossiers pendant une période de six ans. Cependant, ce n'est que lorsque des renseignements alléguant conspiration pour frauder le Ministère du Revenu ont été donnés sous serment ou lorsque des marchandises ont été saisies que l'importateur peut être de soumettre ses livres ou ses dossiers à l'inspection. Il est parfois impossible de déterminer si des marchandises ont, en fait, été importées illégalement à moins que les dossiers de l'importateur soient examinés et, dans beaucoup de cas, un tel examen est justifié pour protéger le Ministère du Revenu, sans qu'un représentant du Ministère soit en état d'alléguer formellement conspiration en vue d'une fraude. Pour obvier à cette situation, nous recommanderions que des dispositions semblables à l'article 126 de la Loi de l'Impôt sur le Revenu soient insérées dans la Loi sur les Douanes et, à défaut de celle-ci, dans cette Loi antidumping.

[Interprétation]

TRIBUNAL ANTIDUMPING

42. La question de savoir si, oui ou non, des marchandises sous-évaluées causent ou menacent de causer du préjudice à une industrie existante ou retardent matériellement l'établissement d'une industrie implique essentiellement l'exercice de jugements fondés sur les données disponibles et sur la compréhension de la façon dont les affaires se traitent. Un point de vue légaliste ou théorique ne saurait répondre à l'évolution rapide des réalités de la concurrence. Il est donc important que les membres du Tribunal possèdent l'expérience de l'industrie canadienne et que les procédures suivies devant ce Tribunal soient relativement flexibles.

43. L'article 16 stipule que le Tribunal antidumping doit procéder à une enquête sur le préjudice, dès réception d'un avis du Sous-Ministre disant qu'il procède à la détermination du dumping. Rien n'exige que le Tribunal donne avis à qui que ce soit d'une audience ni même qu'il tienne audience. Rien n'exige non plus, que le Tribunal avertisse quelque personne que ce soit de quoi que ce soit pendant le cours de ces audiences. Ceci ne répond pas aux exigences de l'article 6 du Code International et fait contraste avec les exigences détaillées d'avis auxquels le Sous-Ministre doit se soumettre aux termes des ister as set out in Sections 13(5) and 14(2). There is provision in Sub-section (5) of Section 16 that the Secretary of the Tribunal shall forward a copy of each order or finding to the Deputy Minister, the importer, the exporter and "such other persons as may be specified by the rules of the Tribunal". This, however, is not a requirement for publication. Also, if it is thought necessary to provide in the statute that the importer and the exporter be sent a copy of each order or finding, there should also be reference to a complainant being notified of the disposition of his complaint.

[Text]

44. Sub-section (2) of Section 16 is a desirable provision that if, in the course of an enquiry into injury by the Tribunal, it is discovered there is evidence of dumping and of injury in respect of goods of a type not covered by the original reference to the Tribunal under Section 14(2), the investigation should be extended to encompass these additional goods. However, we see no reason why this should be limited to goods "the characteristics of which closely resemble the goods to which the preliminary determination applies". Surely if a Government Tribunal comes to the conclusion that there is evidence of injurious dumping, there should be a requirement that action be taken in respect of such goods, regardless of their nature. There appears a considerable risk we would then start in again with time delays, while the Deputy Minister goes through the Section 13(5) procedures, and the Tribunal waits for a new notification under Section 14(2). Where the Tribunal has already come to the conclusion that there is evidence of injurious dumping, such dumping should not be allowed to continue under conditions where the restrictions on retroactivity prevent remedial action being taken promptly, because of procedural requirements.

45. Section 32 provides for the Tribunal reviewing and changing its orders of findings. It is presumed this is intended to provide for recognizing changed circumstances. Perhaps it should be specified that this power to "re-scind, change, alter or vary" an order or finding should not have retroactive effect prior to the change in circumstances.

46. We are concerned by the provisions of Section 30. The Tribunal is empowered to obtain the advice and assistance of any agenarticles 13(5) et 14(2). Le paragraphe (5) de l'article 16 stipule que le secrétaire du Tribunal devra transmettre une copie de chaque ordonnance ou conclusions au Sous-Ministre, à l'importateur, à l'exportateur et aux «autres personnes que peuvent spécifier les règles du Tribunal». Ceci n'est toutefois pas une exigence de publication. Également, si l'on croit nécessaire de stipuler dans la loi que l'importateur et l'exportateur doivent recevoir une copie de chaque ordonnance ou conclusion, il faudrait également faire mention que le plaignant devrait être avisé de la façon dont le Tribunal a décidé de sa plainte.

[Interpretation]

44. Le paragraphe (2) de l'article 16 est une disposition désirable qui stipule que si, dans le cours d'une enquête menée par le Tribunal sur un préjudice, on découvre qu'il y a preuve de dumping et de préjudice à l'égard de marchandises d'un genre non prévu dans l'exposé justificatif original soumis au Tribunal en vertu de l'article 14(2), l'enquête devrait être élargie de manière à englober ces autres marchandises. Cependant, nous ne voyons aucune raison pour laquelle cette pratique devrait se restreindre aux marchandises «dont les caractéristiques ressemblent étroitement à celles des marchandises auxquelles s'applique la détermination préliminaire». Si un Tribunal du gouvernement en vient à la conclusion qu'il y a preuve de dumping préjudiciable, sans doute le texte devrait-il spécifier que des mesures soient prises à l'égard de telles marchandises quelle qu'en soit la nature. Le risque semble considérable que nous ayons à nouveau à souffrir de retard pendant que le Sous-Ministre procède selon les dispositions de l'article 13(5), et que le Tribunal attend la communication des avis aux termes de l'article 14(2). Lorsque le Tribunal en est déjà venu à la conclusion qu'il y a preuve de dumping préjudiciable, on ne devrait pas permettre qu'un tel dumping se continue dans des conditions où les restrictions sur la rétroactivité empêchent que des mesures de compensation soient adoptées promptement, en raison d'exigences de procédure.

45. L'article 32 stipule que le Tribunal peut réviser et modifier ses ordonnances ou conclusions. On présume que cette disposition vise à permettre qu'on tienne compte des changements de conditions. Peut-être faudra-t-il préciser que ce pouvoir de «réviser, modifier ou annuler» une ordonnance ou des conclusions ne devrait pas avoir d'effets rétroactifs antérieurement au changement de conditions.

46. Nous nous inquiétons des dispositions proposées par l'article 30. Le Tribunal a le pouvoir d'obtenir l'avis et l'aide de toute cy or department of the Government of Canada and therefore can seek the advice of such persons as are named in Section 30. However, to create a separate Panel and to require that the Tribunal must seek the advice of the Panel appears an unnecessary diffusion of responsibility, and cause of delay. It detracts from the status of the Tribunal as a court.

[Texte]

CONCLUSION

47. While we have considered it desirable to outline views, in some detail, on the relevant sections of the draft statute, it is important above everything else to revert to the matter of speedy and effective administration. Whatever our experience with the present law, and the present administration of that law, it is eminently clear that the new law will require a fundamental re-organization of the Customs administration in order to conform to the new functions and the new powers which will be created. A heavy responsibility will now be placed on those charged with the administration to see to it that procedures are devised which will prevent injurious dumping to the fullest extent provided by the legislation; that the initiatives are taken to detect and counteract it promptly and completely; and that the officials involved are fully aware of the obligations placed on them, to this end, by the new statute. Otherwise, the intentions of Parliament will be frustrated.

[Interprétation]

agence ou de tout service du gouvernement du Canada et donc peut solliciter l'avis des personnes dont l'article 30 fait mention. Cependant, la création d'un comité consultatif distinct et l'exigence que le Tribunal demande l'avis de ce comité consultatif semble une disposition inutile de la responsabilité et une cause de retard. Ce n'est pas conforme à la dignité du Tribunal.

CONCLUSION

47. Si nous avons considéré souhaitable d'exprimer nos vues assez en détail, sur les questions pertinentes du projet de loi, il demeure de la plus haute importance de revenir à la question de la rapidité et de l'efficacité administrative. Indépendamment de notre expérience de la loi actuelle et de l'administration actuelle de cette loi, il est éminemment clair que la nouvelle loi exigera une réorganisation fondamentale de l'administration des douanes afin de la conformer aux nouvelles fonctions et aux nouveaux pouvoirs qui seront créés. Les personnes chargées de son administration auront la lourde responsabilité de veiller à ce que des procédures soient prévues pour empêcher le dumping préjudiciable dans toute la mesure où la législation le permettra; que des initiatives soient prises pour le découvrir et l'enrayer promptement et complètement; que les fonctionnaires affectés à cette tâche se rendent pleinement compte des obligations qui leur sont dévolues à cette fin par la nouvelle loi. Sans cela, l'intention du Parlement serait vaine.

[Text]

APPENDIX S

CANADA-JAPAN TRADE COUNCIL

BRIEF to Parliamentary Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs Concerning Draft Legislation and Regulations on Anti-Dumping Duties.

We believe that it may be of advantage to the Committee to consider the circumstances under which anti-dumping duty has been applied in the past. We do not, for example, believe that this has been applied to a higher extent to goods imported from Japan than to goods originating in other countries.

It is our understanding that the object of Anti-Dumping Legislation is to prevent unfair competition of imports with Canadian made goods. This would cover the circumstance in which goods exported to Canada were deliberately priced at less than the figure at which they would be sold in the country of origin under comparable conditions of trade. We have been advised that, under existing Legislation and Regulations, Anti-Dumping Duty has often been applied when the imported goods were not available from Canadian production (although ruled to be of a class or kind made in Canada) and when the importation of the goods did no harm whatsoever to Canadian industry. We, accordingly, welcome the requirement of the new Legislation that injury to Canadian industry must be proven before Anti-Dumping Duties are conclusively applied.

Although the new Legislation makes it necessary to establish that injury to domestic industry has taken place before Anti-Dumping Duty is applied, there has been no fundamental change in the basic definition of "Dumping". We understand this to be the circumstance that the goods imported into Canada had been sold to the importer at a price below the normal price in country of origin to the first unrelated customer. This follows the provisions of the Canadian Customs Act for the determination of fair market value which does not normally take into consideration the circumstance that the Canadian importer may be required to provide numerous services and to assume costs which would be provided and/or assumed in the country of origin by the manufacturer of the goods.

[Interpretation]

APPENDICE S

CONSEIL COMMERCIAL CANADA-JAPON

MÉMOIRE au Comité parlementaire des finances, du commerce et des questions économiques, concernant le projet de loi et de règlement sur les droits antidumping.

Nous sommes d'avis que le Comité aurait peut-être avantage à étudier les circonstances dans lesquelles les droits antidumping ont été imposés dans le passé. Par exemple, nous ne croyons pas que ces droits ont été imposés davantage aux produits importés du Japon qu'aux produits provenant d'autres pays.

Si nous avons bien compris, la Loi antidumping a pour objet d'empêcher que les produits importés fassent injustement concurrence aux produits fabriqués au Canada. Elle mettrait ainsi fin à la pratique d'offrir en vente des produits exportés au Canada à un prix délibérément moindre qu'ils ne se seraient vendus au pays d'origine, compte tenu d'une conjoncture économique comparable. Nous avons appris qu'en vertu de la Loi et du Règlement actuellement en vigueur, des droits antidumping sont souvent imposés quand l'industrie canadienne ne peut fabriquer les produits importés (même s'ils sont réputés être d'une classe ou d'une espèce fabriquée au Canada) et quand les produits ne causent absolument pas de préjudice à l'industrie canadienne. Par conséquent, nous sommes heureux que la nouvelle Loi stipule qu'il faut prouver qu'un préjudice a été causé à l'industrie canadienne avant que des droits antidumping puissent être définitivement imposés.

La nouvelle Loi prescrit qu'il faut établir qu'un préjudice a été causé à l'industrie canadienne avant que des droits antidumping puissent être imposés, mais l'essence même de la définition du « dumping » n'a subi aucune modification fondamentale. Nous comprenons qu'il s'agit là de la circonstance dans laquelle les produits importés au Canada sont vendus à l'importateur à un prix inférieur au prix normal que le premier client non associé aurait payé au pays d'origine. Cette prescription est conforme aux dispositions de la Loi canadienne sur les douanes, concernant l'établissement de la juste valeur marchande, lequel, en règle générale, ne tient pas compte du fait que l'importateur canadien doit peut-être dispenser nombre de services et absorber des frais que le fabricant doit dispenser et/ou absorber au pays d'origine.

[Texte]

We understand that the proposed new Regulations are intended to provide for the deduction from the normal value of certain allowances covering such matters as cash discounts, transportation costs and similar items and that this allowance would include costs incurred by the exporter in his domestic marketing of similar goods relating directly to functions which, in Canada, would be provided by the importer.

We are particularly concerned with Section 9(1) (d) of the proposed Anti-Dumping Act which refers to adjustment "by allowances calculated in the manner prescribed by the Regulations to reflect the differences in the terms and conditions of sale, in taxation and other differences relating to price comparability between the sale of the goods to the importer in Canada and the sales by the exporter of the like goods but with no other allowances affecting price comparability whatever". We have also considered the proposed Regulations which cover this point, specifically Section 8(a) and (b).

We have noted that the determination of such allowances is based upon the opinion of the Deputy Minister. We are concerned that the determination of the final amount will rest entirely upon the opinion of the Deputy Minister rather than upon factual evidence which could, presumably, be presented.

We have also noted a very considerable discretion which is provided to the Deputy Minister of National Revenue by various other references in the Act and Regulations. This could place officials of the Department of National Revenue in an invidious position.

Finally, we hope that the Committee in its review of the proposed Act and Regulations will take into consideration the circumstance that Anti-Dumping Legislation enacted by Canada should not do any more than provide the approved protection from injury to domestic industry and should not become, as is the case with existing Legislation, unjustified protectionism which impedes the free exchange of goods in International trade without conferring any advantage upon domestic industry.

November 6, 1968.

[Interprétation]

Nous comprenons que le projet de règlement a pour objet de prévoir la déduction, de la valeur normale, de certains dégrèvements touchant, par exemple, les rabais en espèces, le coût du transport et d'autres articles semblables, et que ces dégrèvements comprendraient les frais de l'exportateur pour la commercialisation domestique de produits semblables directement connexes aux fonctions qu'au Canada l'importateur devrait assumer.

Nous voulons parler en particulier de l'article 9(1)d) du projet de loi antidumping, qui stipule que «la valeur normale de toutes marchandises est le prix de marchandises semblables lorsqu'elles sont vendues par l'exportateur, ... corrigé par les dégrèvements calculés de la manière prescrite par les règlements pour refléter les différences dans les modalités de vente, dans l'imposition et les autres différences ayant trait à la comparabilité des prix entre la vente des marchandises à l'importateur au Canada et les ventes par l'exportateur de marchandises semblables, mais sans aucun autre dégrèvement affectant la comparabilité des prix.» Nous avons également examiné les dispositions du projet de règlement qui traitent de cette question, plus précisément l'article 8a) et b).

Nous avons remarqué que l'établissement de ces dégrèvements se fonde sur l'opinion du sous-ministre. Nous craignons que l'établissement du montant final repose entièrement sur l'avis du sous-ministre plutôt que sur les preuves de fait qui, nous le supposons, pourraient être déposées.

Nous avons également remarqué que d'autres dispositions de la Loi et du Règlement laissent énormément de latitude au sous-ministre du Revenu national. Les fonctionnaires du ministère du Revenu national pourraient ainsi se trouver dans une position peu agréable.

Enfin, nous espérons que, quand viendra le temps d'étudier le projet de loi et de règlement, le Comité tiendra compte du fait que la Loi antidumping adoptée par le Canada doit uniquement empêcher que l'industrie canadienne subisse un préjudice et ne doit pas devenir, comme c'est le cas de la législation actuelle, du protectionnisme injustifié qui entrave le libre échange de produits au palier international sans pour autant avantager en quoi que ce soit l'industrie canadienne.

Le 6 novembre 1968.

This official bilingual edition contains the speeches as delivered in the English or French language in the left-hand column of each page of Evidence. The right-hand column of each page of Evidence utilizes the oral translations rendered by Simultaneous Interpreters with minor necessary revisions only. For the Minutes of Proceedings, the English text appears in the left-hand column and the French text or Translation on the right.

The purpose of this format is to make available the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence in both languages in the same edition.

This edition is available by subscription to the Queen's Printer.

Cette édition bilingue officielle présente les interventions faites en français ou en anglais dans la colonne de gauche de chaque page. D'autre part, dans la colonne de droite, on utilise la transcription in extenso de l'interprétation simultanée à laquelle n'ont été apportées que de légères modifications de style ou de grammaire. Le texte anglais des procès-verbaux apparaît dans la colonne de gauche et le texte français ou la traduction dans la colonne de droite.

Le but de cette formule est d'accélérer la publication des procès-verbaux et témoignages dans les deux langues dans la même édition.

Cette édition peut être obtenue de l'Imprimeur de la Reine.

Le Greffier de la Chambre,

ALISTAIR FRASER,

Clerk of the House.

OFFICIAL BILINGUAL ISSUE
(see panel on back cover)

HOUSE OF COMMONS

First Session

Twenty-eighth Parliament, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE
ON

FINANCE, TRADE
AND
ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

No. 11

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1968

Respecting

White Paper on Anti-dumping

Including Third Report to the House

Witnesses:

Representing the Canadian Manufacturers Association: Messrs. George H. Dobbie, Vice-President; R. Lang, Manager, Tariff Department; C. C. Weeks, Member of Tariff Committee. Representing the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association: Mr. K. H. Rapsey, President. From Canadian Westinghouse Limited: Mr. W. J. Cheesman, President. From Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd.: Mr. J. H. Smith, President. And also: Mr. A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister (Customs and Excise) and Mr. C. D. Arthur, International Economics Relation Division, Department of Finance.

FASCICULE BILINGUE OFFICIEL
(voir au verso du fascicule)

CHAMBRE DES COMMUNES

Première session de la

vingt-huitième législature, 1968

COMITÉ PERMANENT
DES

FINANCES, DU COMMERCE
ET DES
QUESTIONS ÉCONOMIQUES

Président: M. Gaston Clermont

PROCÈS-VERBAUX ET TÉMOIGNAGES

N° 11

RÉUNIONS DU
JEUDI 21 NOVEMBRE 1968

Concernant

Le Livre blanc sur l'antidumping

Y inclus Troisième Rapport à la Chambre

Témoins:

Représentant l'Association des Manufacturiers canadiens: MM. George H. Dobbie, vice-président; R. Lang, gérant, département des tarifs; C. C. Weeks, membre du Comité des tarifs. Représentant The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association: M. K. H. Rapsey, président. De la Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.: M. W. J. Cheesman, président. De la Canadian General Electric Company Ltd.: M. J. H. Smith, président. Et aussi: M. A. R. Hind, sous-ministre adjoint (Douanes et Accise) et M. C. D. Arthur, Division des relations économiques internationales, ministère des Finances.

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.

Queen's Printer and Controller of Stationery

Imprimeur de la reine et contrôleur de la papeterie

Ottawa, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON FINANCE, TRADE
AND
ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. Alastair Gillespie
and Messrs.

Blair,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
Downey,
Émard,
Flemming,

Gauthier,
Gillespie,
Gray,
Hales,
Harkness,
Howard (Okanagan Boundary),

La secrétaire du comité,
Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

COMITÉ PERMANENT DE LA
FINANCE, DU COMMERCE
ET DES
QUESTIONS ÉCONOMIQUES

Président: M. Gaston Clermont

Vice-président: M. Alastair Gillespie
et MM.

Lambert (*Edmonton
West*),
Latulippe,
Portelance*,
Roberts,
Saltsman,
Trudel—(20)

*Replaced Mr. Givens on November
21, 1968.

*Remplace M. Givens, le 21 novembre
1968.

ORDER OF REFERENCE

THURSDAY, November 21, 1968.

Ordered,—That the name of Mr. Portelance be substituted for that of Mr. Givens on the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

ATTEST:

ORDRE DE RENVOI

Le JEUDI 21 novembre 1968.

Il est ordonné,—Que le nom de M. Portelance soit substitué à celui de M. Givens sur la liste des membres du comité permanent des finances, du commerce et des questions économiques.

ATTESTÉ:

Le Greffier de la Chambre des communes,

ALISTAIR FRASER,

The Clerk of the House of Commons.

REPORT TO THE HOUSE

THURSDAY, November 21, 1968.

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs has the honour to present its

THIRD REPORT

In accordance with its Order of Reference of October 16, 1968, your Committee has considered the items listed in the Revised Main Estimates for 1968-69 relating to the Department of Insurance.

Your Committee commends them to the House.

A copy of the relevant Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence (Issue No. 8) is tabled.

Respectfully submitted,
GASTON CLERMONT,
Chairman.

RAPPORT À LA CHAMBRE

Le JEUDI 21 novembre 1968

Le Comité permanent des finances, du commerce et des questions économiques a l'honneur de présenter son

TROISIÈME RAPPORT

Conformément à l'ordre de renvoi du 16 octobre 1968, le Comité a étudié les crédits paraissant au budget principal révisé de 1968-1969 se rattachant au département des assurances.

Le Comité les recommande à l'approbation de la Chambre.

Un exemplaire des procès-verbaux et témoignages s'y rapportant (fascicule n° 8) est déposé.

Respectueusement soumis,
Le président,
GASTON CLERMONT.

[Text]

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

THURSDAY, November 21, 1968.
(16)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 9:45 a.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Burton, Clermont, Comtois, Danson, Downey, Emard, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Howard (Okanagan Boundary), Lambert (Edmonton West), Saltsman and Mr. Trudel (14).

In attendance: Representing the Canadian Manufacturers' Association: Messrs. George H. Dobbie, Vice-President; R. Lang, Manager, Tariff Department; B. R. McPherson, Member of Tariff Committee; C. C. Weeks, Member of Tariff Committee; J. H. Fulcher, Member of Tariff Committee; D. H. Jupp, Ottawa Representative.

Also in attendance: From the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise): Messrs. A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division; H. D. MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section. From the Department of Finance: Mr. C. D. Arthur, International Economics Relation Division. From the Department of Industry: Mr. V. R. St. Louis, Office of Industrial Relations. From the Department of Trade and Commerce: Mr. C. J. Kelly, Office of Area Relations.

On motion of Mr. Gray, seconded by Mr. Trudel,

Resolved,—That Mr. Gillespie be re-elected as Vice-Chairman of this Committee.

On motion of Mr. Hales, seconded by Mr. Comtois.

Resolved,—That the briefs of those organizations who have indicated they do not wish to appear in person before the Committee be printed as appendices to the

[Traduction]

PROCÈS-VERBAUX

Le JEUDI 21 novembre 1968
(16)

Le Comité permanent des finances, du commerce et des questions économiques se réunit à 9 h. 45 du matin, sous la présidence de M. Clermont.

Présents: MM. Burton, Clermont, Comtois, Danson, Downey, Émard, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Howard (Okanagan Boundary), Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest), Saltsman et Trudel (14).

Aussi présents: Représentant l'Association des Manufacturiers canadiens: MM. George H. Dobbie, vice-président; R. Lang, gérant, département des tarifs; B. R. McPherson, membre du Comité des tarifs; C. C. Weeks, membre du Comité des tarifs; J. H. Fulcher, membre du Comité des tarifs; D. H. Jupp, représentant de la section d'Ottawa.

Et aussi: Du ministère du Revenu national (Douanes et Accise): MM. A. R. Hind, sous-ministre adjoint; M. T. Keam, directeur, division de l'appréciation (Douanes); H. D. MacDermid, chef de la section de l'évaluation. Du ministère des Finances: M. C. D. Arthur, Division des relations économiques internationales. Du ministère de l'Industrie: M. V. R. St-Louis, Bureau des relations industrielles. Du ministère du Commerce: M. C. J. Kelly, Bureau des relations commerciales.

Sur une proposition de M. Gray, appuyé par M. Trudel,

Il est résolu,—Que M. Gillespie soit ré-élu vice-président du Comité.

Sur une proposition de M. Hales, appuyé par M. Comtois,

Il est résolu,—Que les mémoires des organismes qui ne désirent pas venir devant le Comité, de même que les commentaires à leur sujet des hauts fonctionnaires du

Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, and that any comments of government officials on the said briefs be printed in the same appendices.

The Committee resumed consideration of the White Paper on Anti-Dumping and the representatives of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association were called and introduced. In accordance with the resolution of October 24, 1968, the briefs are attached hereto as Appendix "T".

At the invitation of the Chairman, Mr. Dobbie made an opening statement.

During the questioning which followed, Messrs. Dobbie, Lang and Weeks answered questions. Messrs. Hind and Arthur also answered questions directed to them from time to time.

The questioning having been concluded, the Chairman thanked the witnesses, who then withdrew.

At 11:50 a.m. the Committee adjourned until 3:30 p.m. this day.

gouvernement, soient imprimés en appendice aux procès-verbaux et témoignages.

Le Comité reprend l'examen du livre blanc sur l'anti-dumping. On présente les représentants de l'Association des Manufacturiers canadiens. Comme le veut la résolution du 24 octobre 1968, les mémoires figureront en appendice. (Voir Appendice «T»)

Le président invite M. Dobbie à présenter un exposé.

Ensuite, MM. Dobbie, Lang et Weeks répondent aux questions. MM. Hind et Arthur répondent aussi à quelques questions.

Les questions épuisées, le président remercie les témoins qui alors se retirent.

A 11 h. 50 de l'avant-midi, le Comité s'ajourne jusqu'à 3 h. 30 de l'après-midi.

La secrétaire du Comité,

Dorothy F. Ballantine

Clerk of the Committee

AFTERNOON SITTING (17)

The Committee resumed at 3:55 p.m., the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Clermont, Comtois, Downey, Émard, Gauthier, Gillespie, Hales, Lambert (Edmonton West), Saltsman and Trudel (10).

Also present: Mr. Ritchie, M.P.

In attendance: Representing The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association: Messrs. K. H. Rapsey, President; T. A. Lindsay, First Vice-President; J. H. Pryce, Member, Wire and Cable Division; W. J. Cheesman, Director and Member, Executive Committee, R. Noonan, Past President; A. F. Johnston, Member, Trade Committee; R. S. Sukloff, Chairman, Tariff Committee; A. S. McArthur, Member, Trade

SÉANCE DE L'APRÈS-MIDI (17)

Le Comité se réunit à 3 h. 55 de l'après-midi, sous la présidence de M. Clermont.

Présents: MM. Clermont, Comtois, Downey, Émard, Gauthier, Gillespie, Hales, Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest), Saltsman et Trudel (10).

Aussi présent: M. le député Ritchie.

Et aussi: Représentant The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association: MM. K. H. Rapsey, président; T. A. Lindsay, premier vice-président; J. H. Pryce, membre, Division des fils et câbles; W. J. Cheesman, directeur et membre du Comité exécutif; R. Noonan, ancien président; A. F. Johnston, membre du Comité du commerce; R. S. Sukloff, président du Comité des tarifs; A. S. McArthur, membre du Committee; J. H. Houser, Vice-Chairman, Tariff Committee; R. D. Pollock, Member, Trade Committee; F. G. Samis, General Manager. From Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.: Mr. W. J. Cheesman, President. From Canadian General Electric Company Ltd.: Mr. J. H. Smith, President.

Also in attendance: The same officials as at the morning sitting.

The Committee resumed consideration of the White Paper on Anti-Dumping.

The Chairman introduced Mr. Rapsey, President of The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association, who introduced the representatives of the Association accompanying him, then proceeded to make a brief introduction and summary of their submission.

In accordance with the resolution of October 24, 1968, the submission of The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association and a graph illustrating hypothetically the effects of Dump Pricing were made appendices. (See Appendices "U" and "V" respectively).

At 6:08 p.m., following the questioning of the witnesses by the Committee, the Chairman thanked them for appearing and invited Mr. W. J. Cheesman, President of Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., to come forward to make a statement or submission. Mr. Cheesman indicated that most of the points he wished to make had been raised during the previous questioning.

In accordance with the resolution of October 24, 1968, the submission of Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., was made an appendix. (See Appendix "W").

At 6:13 p.m., following very brief questioning by the Committee, the Chairman thanked Mr. Cheesman and invited Mr. J. H. Smith, President, Canadian General Electric Company Ltd., to come forward to present his company's submission.

In accordance with the resolution of October 24, 1968, the submission of Canadian General Electric Company Ltd., was made an appendix. (See Appendix "X").

Comité du commerce; J. H. Houser, vice-président du Comité des tarifs; R. D. Pollock, membre du Comité du commerce; F. G. Samis, gérant général. De la Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.: M. W. J. Cheesman, président. De la Canadian General Electric Company Ltd.: M. J. H. Smith, président.

Et aussi: Les mêmes hauts fonctionnaires que ce matin.

Le Comité reprend l'étude du livre blanc sur l'antidumping.

Le président présente M. Rapsey, le président de The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association, qui présente les membres de l'Association qui l'accompagnent avant de résumer et d'expliquer le mémoire de son groupe.

Conformément à la résolution du 24 octobre 1968, on publiera en appendices le mémoire de The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association et le graphique illustrant les effets possibles du dumping. (Voir Appendices «U» et «V» respectivement).

A 6 h. 08 de l'après-midi, le président remercie les témoins qui ont bien voulu se prêter à une période de questions et invite M. W. J. Cheesman, président de la Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., à venir faire un exposé. M. Cheesman révèle que la plupart des questions qu'il aurait voulu aborder ont été soulevées au cours de la période des questions.

En vertu de la résolution du 24 octobre 1968, on publiera en appendice le mémoire de la Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd. (Voir Appendice «W»).

A 6 h. 13 de l'après-midi, après une brève séance de questions, le président remercie M. Cheesman et invite le président de la Canadian General Electric Company Ltd., à présenter le mémoire de sa société.

En application de la résolution du 24 octobre 1968, le mémoire de la Canadian General Electric Company Ltd., est inséré en appendice. (Voir Appendice «X»).

Following a statement by Mr. Smith, and questioning by the Committee, the Chairman thanked Mr. Smith for his appearance.

M. Smith fait un exposé et répond aux questions; le président le remercie.

At 6:23 p.m., the Committee adjourned.

A 6 h. 23 de l'après-midi, le Comité s'ajourne.

Le secrétaire intérimaire du Comité,

Timothy D. Ray

Clerk of the Committee, pro tempore.

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Thursday, November 21, 1968

● 0945

[Texte]

The Chairman: Gentlemen, we have before the Committee this morning representatives of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. We will introduce the head of the delegation, Mr. Dobbie, and in turn he will introduce the people with him.

Mr. George H. Dobbie (President, Dobbie Industries Ltd., Galt, Ontario—Vice-President Canadian Manufacturers' Association): Thank you Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: I would ask the members and the representatives of the CMA to talk into the microphone, please.

Mr. Dobbie: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would like to introduce you to our delegation. There is Mr. R. Lang of CMA; next to him is Mr. Bruce R. McPherson, President of The Gibbard Furniture Shops Limited, Napanee; Mr. C. C. Weeks of the Algoma Steel Corporation. Behind me gentlemen is Mr. J. H. Fulcher of James Howden & Parsons of Canada Limited; and Mr. D. H. Jupp of the CMA.

The Chairman: Mr. Dobbie has a summary before we start discussing the brief.

Mr. Dobbie: Mr. Chairman, speaking on behalf of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association as a whole, and for my colleagues who are with me today, may I express our pleasure at this opportunity of meeting with members of this Committee to review the provisions of the draft Canadian anti-dumping act.

May I first of all compliment the government employees who were responsible for drafting this proposed Bill. They have done an excellent job in transforming into Canadian legislation an international Code which is expressed in broad general terms and which, because of its permissiveness, has given us in industry great concern that our domestic market might be thrown wide open to the dumping of surplus goods from abroad.

[Interprétation]

Le président: Messieurs, le comité reçoit ce matin les représentants de l'Association des manufacturiers canadiens. Nous vous présentons d'abord M. Dobbie, le chef de la délégation, qui nous présentera ensuite les membres de la délégation.

M. George H. Dobbie (président, "Dobbie Industries Ltd.", Galt, Ontario—Vice-président, l'Association des manufacturiers canadiens): Merci, M. le président.

Le président: Je voudrais demander aux membres et représentants de l'AMC de bien vouloir parler dans le microphone.

M. Dobbie: Merci, M. le président. Il me ferait plaisir de vous présenter notre délégation. Voici M. R. Lang de l'AMC et puis à côté de lui, M. Bruce R. McPherson, président de The Gibbard Furniture Shops Limited, Napanee; et puis M. C. C. Weeks de l'Algoma Steel Corporation. Derrière moi se trouvent M. J. H. Fulcher de James Howden and Parsons of Canada Limited; et aussi M. D. H. Jupp de l'AMC.

Le président: M. Dobbie présentera un résumé avant d'entamer la discussion du rapport.

M. Dobbie: Monsieur le président, puis-je vous exprimer, de la part de l'Association des manufacturiers canadiens et de mes collègues qui sont présents ici aujourd'hui, le plaisir que nous procure l'occasion de rencontrer les membres de ce comité afin d'examiner les prévisions du projet de loi sur l'antidumping.

D'abord, je voudrais féliciter les employés du gouvernement qui furent responsables de l'établissement de ce nouveau projet de loi. Ils ont accompli un travail excellent en assimilant à la législation canadienne un code international qui s'énonce en termes généraux et qui, à cause de sa législation facultative, a créé au sein de l'industrie une vive inquiétude à propos de notre marché intérieur qui pourrait se trouver exposé sans protection à l'écoulement de production étrangère.

[Text]

The new draft Bill does seem to have the necessary teeth in it to deter dumping and to provide the authority for the government administrators to control dumping and apply appropriate measures when dumping takes place. All this is to the good, but I would like to make a special point here. No legislation, no matter how well written, is of any value unless it is properly administered and enforced by competent, experienced personnel who are knowledgeable and dedicated to their task.

We consider it vitally important, too, that, before this legislation goes into effect, the government make a statement re-affirming its policy that anti-dumping duties will be quickly and effectively applied whenever dumping or a threat of dumping is likely to cause injury to Canadian producers.

In our submission of November 8, 1968, to the Committee, we made a number of recommendations which I would like to now briefly summarize.

1. We are pleased that no attempt has been made to define "injury" in the proposed Bill and we strongly recommend that "injury" be not defined in the regulations.

2. We approve of the new procedure which will enable the Deputy Minister of Customs and Excise to promptly impose a provisional duty on dumped imports, but we believe that the full margin of dumping should be levied in all such cases.

3. We are concerned about the problem of retroactivity. While the authority in clause 5 to impose dumping duty is limited to 90 days before provisional duty was first applied, we recommend that study be made of Section 53.56 of the United States Anti-Dumping Regulations which seems to provide a much longer period in which dumping duty may be applied retroactively.

4. We recommend that clause 7 be deleted because authority to exempt goods from the provisions of this proposed Bill is already provided for in the Financial Administration Act.

5. The Association does not believe that an export price constitutes an acceptable value for dumping duty purposes. We, therefore, recommend some consequential changes in wording in clause 9.

• 0950

[Interpretation]

Il semble que le nouveau projet de loi prévoit les pouvoirs nécessaires afin de contre-carrer l'écoulement de production étrangère au Canada et ainsi que l'autorité nécessaire pour que les administrateurs du gouvernement puissent contrôler le dumping et appliquer les mesures nécessaires en cas de dumping. Tout ceci est de bon augure, mais je voudrais pourtant m'attarder tout spécialement sur un fait. En dépit du fait qu'elle soit bien rédigée, nulle législation n'a de valeur à moins d'être administrée et mise en vigueur comme il faut par un personnel compétent et éprouvé qui fait preuve d'intelligence et de dévouement à sa tâche.

De plus, il est d'importance capitale, à notre sens, que la mise en vigueur de cette mesure soit précédée d'une déclaration du gouvernement réitérant sa politique qui prévoit l'application efficace et immédiate de droits antidumping chaque fois que le dumping porte atteinte ou risque de causer du préjudice aux producteurs canadiens.

Notre mémoire du 8 novembre 1968 renfermait plusieurs recommandations au Comité que nous voudrions résumer brièvement ici.

1. Nous constatons avec plaisir que la loi ne tente pas de définir «préjudice» et nous recommandons fortement qu'on s'abstienne aussi de le définir dans les règlements.

2. Nous approuvons la nouvelle procédure qui permettra au sous-ministre des douanes de frapper de droits provisoires immédiats toute marchandise faisant l'objet de dumping. Or nous estimons que ce devrait être au plein tarif-dumping en pareil cas.

3. La question de la rétroactivité nous préoccupe. L'autorisation dans l'article 5 d'imposer des droits de dumping se limite à une période de 90 jours avant l'imposition initiale de droits provisoires. Nous recommandons donc qu'on prenne connaissance de l'article 53.56 des règlements antidumping des États-Unis où il paraît que la période de rétroactivité prévue est bien plus longue.

4. Nous recommandons la radiation de l'article 7 car l'autorisation de faire des dérogations à cette loi est déjà prévue dans la Loi sur l'administration financière.

5. L'Association ne croit pas qu'un prix d'exportation constitue un critère valable pour l'établissement de droits antidumping. Nous recommandons certains changements fondamentaux dans le libellé de l'article 9.

6. One of the criticisms of our present anti-dumping legislation is that it does not define

6. On reproche à notre loi actuelle de ne pas préciser ce qui constitue un «prix what constitutes an "export price." We support the inclusion of clause 10 in the proposed Bill.

[Texte]

7. Clause 13 does not provide any time limit within which the Deputy Minister must either begin or complete an investigation after receipt of a written complaint of dumping. The Association recommends that the proposed Bill specify that an investigation must be instituted within 30 days and be completed, with decisions taken thereon, within 120 days from the date of receipt of a written complaint.

8. We are pleased that the Bill contains provisions whereby appeals may be lodged on the amount of dumping duty levied in any given case.

9. We recommend that clause 30 of the Bill be deleted because we are opposed to the requirement that, before issuing an order or finding, the Tribunal must seek the advice of a panel consisting of the Deputy Ministers of various government departments. We believe that this provision could cause serious delays in decision-making by the Tribunal.

10. We welcome the provisions in clause 29 which authorize the Tribunal to hold hearings in camera and to not disclose information which is given to or elicited by it in confidence.

11. We support the new provision in clause 33 which authorizes the collection of dump duty in appropriate circumstances from the person to whom the dumped goods were sold in Canada. We suggest this clause be amended, or that provision be made in the regulations, whereby exporters would be unable to reimburse importers for any dump duties levied in Canada.

12. We recommend that clause 34 be amended so that an importer will only be considered to have committed an offence when there is evidence of an intent to deceive the Deputy Minister.

13. We are pleased that provision has been made in the new sub-clause 1(a) of clause 7 of the Customs Tariff Act for emergency action to be taken in the case of imports of goods which constitute injury to Canadian producers, but where no dumping has occurred.

Finally, I might state that, while we have been hampered to some extent in preparing our submission to the Committee by the absence of the regulations which are referred to frequently in the proposed Bill, we have had d'exportation». Nous préconisons que l'article 10 soit incluse dans la loi.

[Interprétation]

7. L'article 13 ne stipule pas que le sous-ministre doive initier ou compléter son enquête dans un délai précis après réception d'une plainte écrite. Cette association recommande qu'il soit précisé dans la loi qu'enquête soit faite dans les trente jours et que suite y soit donnée dans un délai de 120 jours à compter de la réception d'une plainte écrite.

8. Il nous fait plaisir que la Loi contienne des dispositions en vertu desquelles il sera possible d'avoir recours en ce qui concerne le montant des droits de dumping à payer dans un cas particulier.

9. Nous recommandons que l'article 30 de la Loi soit abrogé parce que nous nous opposons à l'exigence en vertu de laquelle, avant de publier un ordre ou une conclusion, le Tribunal est tenu de demander l'avis d'un comité consultatif formé des sous-ministres de divers ministères. Nous croyons que cette disposition peut donner lieu à de sérieux retards dans les décisions du Tribunal.

10. Nous souscrivons à la disposition de l'article 29 qui prévoit le huis clos pour les auditions qu'accordera le Tribunal. Nous sommes également d'accord avec le fait que les renseignements qui auront été fournis confidentiellement au Tribunal, ou que celui-ci aura obtenus confidentiellement, ne doivent pas être rendus publics.

11. Nous appuyons la recommandation, à l'article 33, qui permet l'application de frais de douane dans le cas des personnes qui ont été victimes de dumping au Canada. Nous pensons que dans le règlement, il faudrait prendre des dispositions qui empêcheraient les exportateurs de rembourser les importateurs de tous frais de dumping perçus au Canada.

12. Nous recommandons que l'article 34 soit modifié de façon à ce qu'un importateur soit considéré comme coupable de délit seulement lorsqu'il sera évident qu'il a essayé de tromper le sous-ministre.

13. Nous sommes heureux de voir que l'on a prévu, dans le nouveau par. 1 A, de l'article 7 sur le Tarif des douanes, qu'une action d'urgence sera prise dans le cas d'importation de marchandises qui pourraient faire du tort aux producteurs canadiens, mais où aucun dumping ne s'est produit.

Finalement, je pourrais dire que nous avons eu quelques difficultés à préparer notre mémoire au Comité, étant donné l'absence des règlements souvent mentionnés dans la Loi. Nous avons jeté un rapide coup d'œil sur les a quick glance at the proposed draft regulations relating to clauses 9 and 10 and find them generally satisfactory. Thank you Mr. Chairman.

[Text]

The Chairman: Thank you Mr. Dobbie. Have you any general comment, gentlemen, before we go through the brief? As you will have noticed the brief is divided into paragraphs? Yes, Mr. Gray?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I think it should be of interest to the Committee to note that on page 3 of the brief the association has been kind enough to state that it finds the draft Canadian anti-dumping act generally acceptable in that the necessary authority has been provided in the act for the administration to take prompt and effective action when injury or a threat of injury has been caused to Canadian producers.

Also I think those of us who have been working on this Committee for several years might well be gratified by the comments of the Association with respect to the value of studies of this type before this Committee both now and in the past. In that regard, perhaps I might just suggest a clarification. The reference to the brief which the Association submitted in the last Parliament on the Kennedy Round was not to a similar standing committee, it was to this Committee.

Mr. Dobbie: This is right.

Mr. Gray: Yes, although of course there is some change in membership because of the results of the last election. Thank you Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert: I would suggest that while there was a beautiful bouquet though I think perhaps the Association underestimates the validity of some of its observations, because either inferentially or otherwise they join up with some of the other more pertinent criticisms of details of the act. I do not think anybody has complained about the general purpose of the act but there are certain areas on which I think we will want to question them. I think their thinking will be in line with the chemical producers and the textile producers too.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert, have you seen anything presented by human beings that was not criticized in one way or another?

Mr. Lambert: No, but—

[Interpretation]

règlements proposés relativement aux articles 9 et 10, et nous les avons trouvés satisfaisants d'une façon générale.

Merci monsieur le président.

Le président: Messieurs, avez-vous des commentaires avant que nous abordions le mémoire? Vous savez que le mémoire est divisé par article. M. Gray, vous avez la parole.

M. Gray: Monsieur le président, je pense que le Comité serait intéressé de noter qu'à la page 3 du mémoire, l'Association a eu la bonté de dire qu'elle trouve le projet de loi sur l'antidumping généralement satisfaisant. On prévoit une certaine autorité pour que l'administration prenne des mesures rapides et efficaces lorsqu'un tort ou une menace de tort est causée à des producteurs canadiens. Je pense qu'il faut remercier l'Association. Cela vaut la peine de faire de telles déclarations au Comité.

Je pourrais peut-être demander que l'on explique certaines choses dans le mémoire soumis par l'Association au dernier Parlement, au sujet du «Kennedy Round». C'est à ce Comité que le mémoire a été présenté.

M. Dobbie: Oui, c'est exact.

M. Gray: Oui, même s'il y a eu un changement de députés depuis la dernière élection.

Le président: Monsieur Lambert, vous avez la parole.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Même si c'était bien fait, je pense que l'Association sous-estime la validité de certaines de ses remarques, parce que, soit par déduction ou soit autrement, elles rencontrent les vues de critiques plus pertinentes sur des détails de la Loi. Je pense que personne ne s'est plaint de l'intention générale de la Loi. Mais il y a certainement des secteurs qui méritent des explications. L'Association rejoindra probablement la ligne de pensée des producteurs chimiques et des producteurs de textiles.

Le président: M. Lambert, avez-vous déjà vu quelque chose présenté par des êtres humains sans être critiqué?

M. Lambert: Non, mais...

[Texte]

● 0955

The Chairman: Maybe I should not have mentioned that, I may open another discussion. Yes, Mr. Hales.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, I noticed in the opening remarks of Mr. Dobbie that the act is only going to be as successful as it is administered. I know that Mr. Hind has told other delegations what they propose to do in the line of administration and it may not be amiss at this time to have them re-emphasize what they propose to do with regard to administering this act.

Mr. A. R. Hind (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise)): Mr. Chairman, the Department of National Revenue is satisfied as to the intent of the proposed legislation. We are prepared to do our best to give the various provisions quick and effective implementation. Towards this end we have for the first time in a long time managed to bring our valuation staff up to strength, so we have in place now a body for each position.

Second, we have seen fit to beef up our foreign posts in the sense that we have sent over on a permanent basis additional officers to various of our posts in foreign countries.

Third, we have opened this year one new office in the United States which is now completely operational.

Fourth, we intend to open still another office next year with a view to enabling us to move quickly and effectively.

In another area, we feel, should we be pressed and more work come in than we expect, that we have various pools from which we can draw personnel to assist on a temporary basis certainly, and if necessary a permanent basis.

We have tried to anticipate how much additional work this new legislation will cause. This is very difficult because certain new features have been added, and rather than arbitrarily taking on an additional number of bodies when we do not know whether we will require all these people on a permanent basis we have made the best "estimate" we could. We have these people in place, we think that we can carry out our function with the staff we have, and as I said before, we do have various sources from which we can draw if we find this is necessary.

Mr. Lambert: I would refer to paragraph 3 of the brief if I may in order to follow along, if there are no general comments.

[Interprétation]

Le président: Je n'aurais pas dû mentionner cela. Ce serait passer à un autre sujet. M. Hales.

M. Hales: Monsieur le président, dans ses observations d'introduction, M. Dobbie dit que la Loi ne réussira que dans la mesure où elle est bien administrée. Je sais que M. Hind a dit à d'autres délégations ce qu'ils avaient l'intention de faire sur le plan de l'administration. Peut-être qu'on pourrait insister de nouveau sur ce que l'on se propose de faire en ce qui a trait à l'administration de la Loi.

M. Hind (sous-ministre adjoint, ministère du Revenu national): Monsieur le président, le ministère du Revenu national est satisfait quant au but de la mesure législative proposée. Nous sommes prêts à mettre en vigueur rapidement et efficacement les dispositions visées par cette mesure. Pour la première fois depuis bien longtemps, nous avons réussi à remplir nos cadres. Ce qui veut dire, que, dans le moment, chaque poste est rempli.

Deuxièmement, nous avons jugé opportun de renflouer nos postes étrangers, en ce sens que nous avons envoyé, sur une base permanente, de nouveaux agents dans différents postes canadiens dans les pays étrangers.

Troisièmement, cette année, nous avons ouvert un nouveau bureau aux États-Unis et celui-ci fonctionne, dans le moment, à pleine capacité.

Quatrièmement, nous avons encore l'intention d'ouvrir un autre bureau l'an prochain, afin de pouvoir agir rapidement et efficacement.

Dans un autre secteur, nous trouvons que, si nous étions pressés et si d'autre travail nous était proposé, nous pourrions trouver facilement du personnel qui nous aiderait sur une base temporaire certainement et, si nécessaire, sur une base permanente.

Nous avons essayé de prévoir combien de travail supplémentaire visera cette nouvelle Loi. C'est très très difficile à évaluer, étant donné que certains nouveaux traits ont été ajoutés, plutôt que d'entreprendre, de façon arbitraire, d'engager plus de personnel, sans savoir exactement si nous aurons besoin de tous ces gens-là sur une base permanente.

Nous avons essayé de prévoir le mieux possible. Ces gens sont disponibles pour toute éventualité. Nous pensons pouvoir nous acquitter de nos fonctions avec l'effectif actuel. Comme je l'ai déjà dit, nous avons différentes sources d'où nous pouvons obtenir du personnel, si nécessaire.

M. Lambert: J'aimerais poursuivre à l'article 3, s'il n'y a pas de commentaire général.

[Text]

The Chairman: Yes, then we will return to paragraph 2 because we begin with paragraph 2. Are we finished with general comments gentlemen?

Mr. Lambert: No, I have nothing on paragraph 2.

Mr. Saltzman: I want to ask a question on paragraph 2, if I might. Before doing so I would like to bring to the Chair's attention that the riding of Waterloo is well represented here today through the presence of two distinguished industrialists, Mr. Dobbie and Mr. Rapsey.

In paragraph 2, the position taken by the Association seems to be somewhat different from the position taken by other groups that have appeared before us in that the Association is pleased that the definition of injury has not been spelled out too specifically.

• 1000

I would like to ask Mr. Dobbie what the reasoning of the Association is in this regard.

The Chairman: Mr. Dobbie.

Mr. Dobbie: Mr. Saltzman, I may make a slightly longer answer on this question than perhaps I should.

We feel that in a Bill such as this as opposed to dealing in tariff matters where you are dealing with specific industries, anti-dumping cuts across the fabric of all Canadian industry.

Therefore, it is of overriding importance, you could call it of even more importance in some connections than tariffs. If the anti-dumping Regulations are lax and let goods into this country which should not come in without duties, you are hurting or could conceivably hurt every Canadian industry. This is a very serious problem.

The people of Canada through the government are 50 per cent partners in every business in Canada that is a profitable one, therefore, we think the people of Canada are vitally concerned because if the industry is not healthy in Canada, obviously the people are not healthy and the economy is not healthy.

Therefore, we feel that any government must administer in the national interests an anti-dumping law to the hilt. We say this should not be spelled out with the "i's" dotted and the "t's" crossed. This discretionary power must be left with the government.

[Interpretation]

Le président: On abordera la question lorsqu'on aura étudié l'article 2. Avez-vous d'autres commentaires, messieurs?

M. Lambert: Non, pas sur l'article 2.

M. Saltzman: J'aimerais poser une question sur l'article 2. Auparavant, j'aimerais porter à votre attention que la circonscription de Waterloo est bien représentée, aujourd'hui, par la présence de deux industriels, M. Dobbie et M. Lang.

À l'article 2, la position de l'Association semble différer quelque peu de celle qui a été adoptée par d'autres groupes qui ont témoigné devant le Comité. L'Association déclare qu'elle est heureuse de voir que la définition du mot «préjudice» n'a pas été explicitée davantage.

Je voudrais demander à M. Dobbie quel est le raisonnement exact de l'association à cet égard?

Le président: Monsieur Dobbie, je vous en prie.

M. George H. Dobbie: Monsieur Saltzman, ma réponse sera peut-être plus longue qu'elle ne devrait.

Nous estimons que dans une mesure législative comme celle-ci par opposition aux mesures législatives concernant spécialement une seule industrie, dans ce cas-ci, la loi de l'anti-dumping concerne toute l'industrie canadienne.

Par conséquent, c'est une loi d'une importance primordiale et je dirais même qu'elle est de plus d'importance dans un sens, que celle des tarifs; il serait donc désastreux que les règlements antidumping soient lâches et laissent entrer des biens dans ce pays qui ne devraient pas y pénétrer sans être frappés de droit d'entrée, parce que de cette manière, vous pouvez nuire à beaucoup d'industries canadiennes. Le problème est très sérieux.

La population canadienne, par l'intermédiaire du gouvernement, est associée à 50 p. 100 dans toute entreprise rentable au Canada. Par conséquent, nous trouvons que la population canadienne est directement concernée, parce que si on nuit à l'industrie au Canada, évidemment ceci nuit aussi à la population et à l'économie.

C'est pourquoi nous pensons que tout gouvernement doit administrer, dans l'intérêt national, une loi antidumping ferme et c'est pourquoi nous disons qu'il ne faut pas fendre les cheveux en quatre mais laisser des pouvoirs discrétionnaires au gouvernement.

[Texte]

Mr. R. Lang (Manager, Tariff Department, Canadian Manufacturers' Association): Mr. Chairman, possibly I might add to that answer.

This matter was given very careful thought in a Tariff Committee of the Association and it was felt that no definition could be devised which would cover all the possible cases of injury.

In one idle moment I tried to set down for my own edification some of things which might enter into this question of injury and the result was some 18 points which, if you are agreeable, I would be glad to just mention.

Mr. Gray: I suppose if your 18 points were written into the law the first case before the Tribunal would cover a nineteenth which was not mentioned.

Mr. Lang: This is the point of what I was trying to say. You cannot possibly cover everything that might constitute injury to a Canadian producer.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, I would ask the indulgence of the representatives of CMA while the Committee conducts some official business.

Since Mr. Gillespie was temporarily off the Committee, I will receive a motion to re-elect Mr. Gillespie or someone else as Vice-Chairmen. As you are aware, he was away on a trip to Brussels to attend a NATO meeting and at the moment we have no Vice-Chairman of our Committee.

[See Minutes of Proceedings]

I would also like a motion that the briefs of those organizations which have indicated that they do not wish to appear in person before the Committee be printed as an Appendices to the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence.

• 1005

Mr. Hales: I so move.

Mr. Comtois: I second the motion.

Mr. Gray: I do not know if this requires a motion, but I suggest it be understood that if the officials wish to submit comments on any of these briefs, and I refer to briefs for which people are not going to appear, they should be entitled to have their comments appear in written form along with the appended briefs.

The Chairman: You mean the government officials?

Mr. Gray: It may be that they would like to submit comments in written form on the

[Interprétation]

M. R. Lang (gérant, division des tarifs, l'Association des manufacturiers canadiens): Monsieur le président, je pourrais peut-être ajouter ceci: On a sérieusement étudié cette question au sein du comité tarifaire de l'association des manufacturiers canadiens, et on s'est aperçu qu'aucune définition ne couvrirait tous les aspects du mot tort.

A un moment donné, j'avais quelques moments de répit et j'ai essayé d'énumérer certaines situations où il y a du tort causé. Et, j'ai finalement trouvé une liste de 18 points. Et, si vous le voulez, je serais heureux de vous en faire l'énumération.

M. Gray: Je suppose que si on inscrit vos 18 points dans la loi, le premier cas à passer en cour découlera d'un dix-neuvième point.

M. Lang: Vous avez raison, il est impossible d'énumérer tout ce qui peut faire tort aux entreprises canadiennes.

Le président: Messieurs, je présente des excuses aux représentants de l'A.M.C. et je demande des résolutions sur les questions suivantes.

Étant donné que M. Gillespie était absent, je demande une motion pour le réélire, lui ou un autre, parce que, comme vous savez, il était à Bruxelles à une réunion de l'OTAN et pour le moment, nous n'avons pas de vice-président du Comité.

[Voir procès-verbaux]

La deuxième est la suivante: que les mémoires des organisations non représentées par quelqu'un devant le Comité soient ajoutés en annexe aux procès-verbaux et témoignages.

La résolution est proposée par M. Hales appuyé par M. Comtois.

M. Gray: Je ne sais pas si une résolution est nécessaire, mais j'ai cru comprendre que certaines organisations voulaient déposer leurs mémoires sans être représentées. Je pense que si ces personnes ne peuvent pas déposer, les officiels du gouvernement devraient être autorisés à publier leurs commentaires avec...

Le président: Vous voulez dire des commentaires de la part des fonctionnaires du gouvernement.

M. Gray: Oui, peut-être voudraient-ils présenter des commentaires écrits sur les mémoi-briefs which will not be presented in person. I think it should be understood that they will have the opportunity to do so, if they wish to bring this information to the Committee's attention.

[Text]

The Chairman: Yes, if they could submit them in writing or when they appear again before this Committee they could express their views on the briefs which will be appended. Is this agreeable, Mr. Arthur and Mr. Hind?

Mr. Arthur (International Economic Relations Division, Department of Finance): Yes, sir.

The Chairman: Are there any other questions, gentlemen, on page 3 of the brief which deals with Clause 2—when I say Clause 2, I mean of the White Paper.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): No, no. Clause 2 referred to in the brief. I am sorry, yes, that is all right.

The Chairman: Of the White Paper.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): They refer to it in the brief.

The Chairman: On page 3 of the brief they refer to Clause 2 of the White Paper which you will find on page 40 of the White Paper. If there are no other questions, we will move to page 4 of the brief dealing with Clause 3 of the White Paper which you will find at page 44.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that one thing we must not develop in the administration of anti-dumping is a practice whereby importers and businessmen in this country could be terrorized by the threat of proceedings through the Anti-dumping Tribunal. I think this is perhaps implicit in the second sentence of the comment, as follows:

Our experience has been that when an importer realizes that he is going to be assessed dumping duty in addition to the regular duty payable on the imported goods, he discontinues purchasing any further goods from the same supplier at the...

—here it is said—dumped price.

That last phrase I would suggest is presupposing. I think the "alleged dumped price" would be better.

Canadian manufacturers have been terrorized in this way in exporting to the United States. May I say I would hope that we would res qui ne seront pas présentés verbalement. Et je pense qu'il serait bon de prévoir qu'ils auront l'occasion de soumettre leurs commentaires au Comité de cette manière.

[Interpretation]

Le président: En effet, ou bien ils pourront le faire lorsqu'ils reviendront devant le Comité. Ils pourront dire ce qu'ils pensent des mémoires qui seront déposés, qui seront annexés au procès-verbaux et témoignages. D'accord?

M. Arthur: Oui, monsieur.

Le président: Messieurs, auriez-vous d'autres questions sur l'article 2, page 3 du mémoire, c'est-à-dire, article 2 du Livre blanc.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Non, non, article 2 du mémoire.

Le président: Du Livre blanc.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Article mentionné dans le mémoire, d'accord.

Le président: L'article 2 en question se trouve à la page 40 du Livre blanc. Si vous n'avez pas de questions, nous passerons à la page 4 du mémoire, traitant de l'article 3, à la page 44 du Livre blanc du gouvernement.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Monsieur le président, je pense que dans l'élaboration de la loi de l'antidumping, nous ne devons pas terroriser les importateurs ou les hommes d'affaires par la menace d'une procédure devant le tribunal antidumping. Je pense que cette crainte existe et qu'elle se trouve d'une manière implicite. Dans la deuxième phrase du commentaire qui se lit comme suit:

L'expérience nous a appris que lorsqu'un importateur se rend compte qu'il aura à payer des droits de dumping en plus des droits qu'il paie ordinairement sur les marchandises importées, il cesse d'acheter du même fournisseur, à des prix de dumping, toute autre marchandise.

A des prix de dumping, je répète. Je crois que cette dernière expression «prix de dumping» est préférable mais je ne vois pas comment. Les manufacturiers canadiens craignent d'exporter aux États-Unis à cause d'un tel système; j'espère que nous n'allons pas nous en donner un aussi.

Vous allez comprendre: par exemple, l'Association des manufacturiers canadiens n'est pas dans la même position que l'Association not set up a similar pattern. I think you can readily understand this. Perhaps the Canadian Manufacturers' Association are not in the same position as, say, the Canadian Importers Association or a Canadian manufacturer could be terrorized into this if he is importing a component and a competitor files a complaint. Just where do you stand and what is the reaction?

[Texte]

Mr. Dobbie: I think we are trying to say here that if the importer knows he is bringing in goods at dumped prices and he has been caught and had to pay a fine, he is less likely to do it a second time.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I think that is self-evident, but what I am talking about is something that is very practical.

Take, for example, a Canadian manufacturer of some large equipment who regularly brings in components and his competition may suspect a dump or make an allegation of dump in order to complicate his operation.

• 1010

Frankly, I can see this happening regularly and this is something that is going to have to be guarded against because there is no penalty against a person who files, shall we say, a frivolous complaint.

Mr. Dobbie: I do not think it is spelled out, but I get the impression that it is almost implicit that most of the complaints are going to be on an industry basis. I do not think under the proposed Bill you should get frivolous complaints by any means.

Mr. Lang: I think there is less chance under this new Bill for that to happen than there is under the current legislation because under the current legislation all complaints are kept confidential, although it is the practice of the Department of National Revenue to notify an importer when a complaint has been lodged against him. So in that regard he is, at least, on notice that perhaps there is something wrong or perhaps he is doing something wrong and, therefore, he should be careful and review his own position in order to make certain that he is not contravening the present legislation.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Well, there I find myself, shall we say, at odds. My interpretation of this—I am subject to correction—is that there is provision here whereby the complainant does not have to be disclosed because in today's complex organization of business he may be complaining against one of his own customers. Therefore, he might want confidentiality.

[Interprétation]

des importateurs canadiens, ou bien, un fabricant canadien pourrait être terrorisé aussi, s'il importe un élément de production et qu'un concurrent dépose une plainte. Quelle est votre position?

M. Dobbie: Je pense que ce que nous essayons de dire ici, c'est que si l'importateur sait qu'il importe à des prix de dumping, et qu'il a dû payer l'amende il va hésiter à recommencer.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Oui, je pense que c'est bien évident, mais je vous parle de quelque chose de très pratique.

Prenons un manufacturier canadien d'équipement lourd, obligé d'importer des éléments, des pièces; son concurrent peut le soupçonner d'acheter à des prix de dumping, ou peut l'accuser sur un soupçon simplement pour compliquer ses affaires.

Je vois facilement la chose se produire, et je pense qu'il va falloir prendre des mesures pour prévenir les cas où il y aurait des plaintes, des réclamations lancées en l'air.

M. Dobbie: J'ai l'impression que c'est presque implicite, même si ce n'est pas dans le texte, que la plupart des réclamations émaneront d'une industrie en général. Je ne pense pas que d'après le Livre blanc vous allez recevoir des réclamations plus ou moins justifiées ou lancées à la légère.

M. Lang: Au terme de cette nouvelle loi, je pense qu'il y a moins de risques que ceci se produise qu'il n'y en a d'après la mesure actuelle. D'après la loi actuelle, toutes les réclamations sont quand même confidentielles. Mais lorsqu'un importateur fait l'objet d'une réclamation, le ministère du Revenu national l'en prévient de sorte qu'il sait qu'il fait peut-être quelque chose d'incorrect et qu'il devrait faire attention et reviser sa propre position pour s'assurer qu'il n'enfreint pas la loi actuelle.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Alors il y a une contradiction dans mon interprétation. Corrigez-moi si je me trompe mais il me semble qu'on dit ici qu'il n'est pas nécessaire de révéler la source de la réclamation. En effet il peut arriver dans l'organisation très complexe des affaires aujourd'hui que la réclamation soit dirigée contre un de ses propres clients. Par conséquent, on veut sauvegarder l'aspect confidentiel...

[Text]

Mr. Lang: On the other hand, if he is importing components he is not likely to be a customer.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): This point was made before us at an earlier meeting and I made this statement as an observation. Possibly in the manufacturing business there would not be any frivolous complaints, but where it is a little more cutthroat, shall we say, among the one-shot importers, you know, somebody might just make a complaint on a general basis.

This may work out by experience, but I certainly hope, if there is a tendency, that the administrators of this proposed Bill would be cognizant of it and then in some way we might be able to deal with that sort of practice.

Mr. Lang: Under the proposed Bill the fact that not only does the Department of National Revenue have to investigate to determine whether dumping occurs, the Tribunal must also be satisfied that injury is being caused to the complainant and to that industry, it is going to be rather difficult for a frivolous complaint to be lodged that could satisfy the Tribunal that injury has been caused.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I do not think you are quite following the point. I think that you do it deliberately in order to embarrass your competitors.

If you are an importer—either in manufacturing or in distribution—and somebody has filed a complaint against you—against that particular price—you are going to have to be very careful. Either you are going to reduce or eliminate your importation or you are going to have to enter into some sort of adjustment on your price with your customers in order to protect yourself.

Mr. Lang: Perhaps the Department of National Revenue can give us an indication of the number of frivolous complaints that have been lodged in the past. It might give us an idea but certainly, to the best of my knowledge and experience, they were few and far between.

• 1015

The Chairman: Did Mr. Hind catch the question from Mr. Lang?

Mr. Lang: My question dealt with whether or not there are a large number of so-called frivolous complaints.

[Interpretation]

M. Lang: De toute façon s'il importe des éléments, il n'est probablement pas un client.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Oui, cet argument nous a été présenté et ce que je vous dis là c'est simplement une observation. Je ne parle pas de réclamations lancées à la légère dans le commerce manufacturier mais, par exemple, lorsqu'il s'agit de domaines où la concurrence est acharnée, les «one-shot importers», etc. vous comprenez? alors que quelqu'un fait une réclamation de nature générale.

L'expérience nous permettra peut-être de nous adapter mais j'espère que s'il y a une tendance dans ce sens l'administrateur de la loi sera au courant et qu'il y aura moyen, d'une façon ou d'une autre, de prendre la situation en main.

M. Lang: Dans la nouvelle loi, non seulement le Ministère du Revenu national doit faire enquête et décider s'il y a eu dumping ou non, mais aussi le tribunal doit être certain qu'il y a eu préjudice au plaignant et à l'industrie, de sorte que cela rendra assez difficile une réclamation faite à la légère.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Je pense que vous ne suivez pas mon raisonnement. Je pense à ceux qui pourraient délibérément faire une réclamation pour ennuyer le concurrent.

Si vous êtes un importateur—que vous soyez fabricants ou distributeurs—il faut que vous fassiez très attention parce qu'un concurrent peut se plaindre au sujet de vos prix et alors, vous devrez réduire ou supprimer vos importations, ou bien vous allez devoir ajuster les prix consentis à votre clientèle dans le but de vous protéger.

M. Lang: Le Ministère du Revenu national pourrait peut-être nous donner une indication du nombre de réclamations faites à la légère par le passé. Cela pourrait nous donner une bonne idée de quoi il retourne ici, mais au meilleur de ma connaissance et de mon expérience, il y en a eu très peu et elles se sont présentées très rarement.

Le président: Monsieur Hind a-t-il compris la question de monsieur Lang.

M. Lang: On parle de réclamations plus ou moins lancées à la légère. . .

[Texte]

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Not so much the word "frivolous" if I may say, but not well founded.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, we have been under some criticism on a number of scores, among other things, that there have been rather unnecessary delays in our activities. As a result of this we made a study over a six-month period. We turned up some very interesting information.

Firstly, and in view of the fact that the Deputy Minister must make a final determination within 90 days, we took the period of 90 days as our anchor point. We found that in this six-month period the Department received 148 complaints. Of the 148 complaints we concluded finally 80 per cent of those complaints within the ninety-day period. Now, one might say, why did you not conclude the other 20 per cent? The reason for that is that under the existing legislation there is not the same necessity for speed that there is under the proposed bill in the sense that we put the importer on notice and once we have told him we have started an investigation under the existing Act we can go back and pick up the first importation and all subsequent importations.

However, I would like to emphasize that even though there was no necessity for us to move quickly under the existing Act we did, indeed, complete 80 per cent of these cases within a three-month period.

I will now deal specifically with Mr. Lang's point, in respect of these 148 cases that we received, 61 per cent of them were found to be absolutely unwarranted. In other words, we did not find any dumping.

In my view this is a waste of money and resources. This is why I feel that the Deputy Minister under the proposed Bill is going to have to be very careful in scrutinizing complaints when they come in to see that they are justified.

Therefore, I would urge every one who feels like making a complaint that he restrict himself to those cases where he feels that there is a likelihood that the Deputy Minister will find not only dumping, but injurious dumping. To the extent that we receive cases that should never come to us, our time is going to be wasted and we will not be able to give attention to those cases that should be examined.

The Chairman: Are there any comments from the representatives of The Canadian Manufacturers' Association on that?

[Interprétation]

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Il ne s'agit pas tellement de réclamations lancées à la légère mais plutôt de réclamations mal fondées.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, nous avons été critiqués pour bien des choses, entre autres, on nous a reproché des retards plus ou moins nécessaires dans nos activités, ce qui nous a conduit à mener une enquête répartie sur une période de six mois. Nous avons découvert des renseignements extrêmement intéressants.

Premièrement, étant donné que le sous-ministre doit se décider en l'espace de 90 jours, nous avons considéré que cette période de 90 jours était notre barème. Pendant une période de six mois, le ministère a reçu 148 réclamations. Nous avons réglé 80 p. 100 de ces réclamations dans la période de 90 jours. Vous allez demander pourquoi pas le reste? Nous vous répondrons que d'après la mesure législative actuelle, ce n'est pas aussi nécessaire de le faire qu'aux termes de la nouvelle loi, dans ce sens que dès qui nous avons averti l'intéressé, dès que nous l'avons prévenu qu'une enquête est en cours, aux termes de la mesure législative actuelle, nous pouvons agir rétroactivement et nous occuper de la première importation et de toutes les autres subséquentes.

Mais j'insiste sur le fait que même si ce n'était pas nécessaire d'accélérer les choses d'après la loi actuelle, en fait nous avons terminé 80 p. 100 de ces cas dans une période de trois mois.

Pour en venir spécifiquement à l'argument de M. Lang, au sujet de ces 148 réclamations qui ont été présentées, 61 p. 100 n'était pas justifié, dans le reste des cas, il n'y avait pas de trace de dumping.

D'après moi, c'est une perte d'argent, et de ressources. C'est pourquoi j'estime que le sous-ministre aux termes de la nouvelle loi devra faire très attention dans son examen des plaintes et veiller à ce qu'elles soient justifiées.

De plus je demande instamment à toutes les personnes qui auraient l'intention de présenter des réclamations de se limiter aux cas qui vraisemblablement seront considérés comme étant non seulement du dumping, mais du dumping qui cause préjudice par le sous-ministre. Des cas nous ont été présentés qui n'auraient jamais dû l'être et tant que ceci se produira, nous allons perdre notre temps et nous n'avons pas la chance d'étudier les cas qui le méritent.

Le président: Avez-vous des commentaires? Des commentaires de l'Association canadienne des manufacturiers?

[Text]

Mr. Trudel: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question of Mr. Hind? In your survey, Mr. Hind, did you have a breakdown of the various industries that were lodging the complaints?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, no, sir. We only had general figures. We took the total complaints received and we examined the length of time it took us to conclude them on a whole basis rather than any breakdown. I am sorry, I do not have a breakdown for you.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, we will now move on to paragraph 4. As you are aware, clauses 3 to 12 in the White Paper deal with Liability for Anti-Dumping Duty. The next paragraph makes reference to clause 4 of the White Paper.

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Chairman, I previously brought up this matter of the provisional duty and that the final duty could not be more than the provisional duty. I note you recommend the deletion of the clause that says:

...but not exceeding the provisional duty, if any, payable in respect of the goods.

I think the Department of National Revenue officials, at the time, stated that the provisional duty put on would always be appreciably high so that there would be no danger. However, you do not share that view, I take it, and I wonder if you could just elaborate a bit on what you think is likely to be the situation under the clauses advanced.

● 1020

Mr. Lang: It is very difficult to forecast just what is going to happen in a case of this kind. Now the Deputy Minister may be quite satisfied from the evidence presented to him that not only is there dumping but injury is being caused, but to attempt to determine what amount of provisional duty may be imposed is a matter of judgment. The point we are really making here is that the clause as it is presently worded almost makes it necessary for the Deputy Minister to put on a relatively high provisional duty. By the deletion of those words he could put on what he considers a fair or reasonable provisional duty, and if he finds that is lower than the actual amount of dumping discovered then he can assess the actual amount of dump. The provisional action really is a holding action you might say, pending final decision.

At the present time the Department has no authority really to impose a provisional duty so it waits until the investigation is complet-

[Interpretation]

M. Trudel: Je voudrais poser une question à M. Hind. Dans votre enquête, monsieur Hind, avez-vous le détail des différentes industries qui présentaient des plaintes?

M. Hind: Non, nous n'avons que les chiffres généraux. Nous avons pris le nombre total des plaintes et nous avons tenu compte du temps requis pour toutes les régler. Je regrette de ne pouvoir vous donner ces détails.

Le président: Messieurs, nous passerons donc au paragraphe 4, articles 3 à 12 du Livre blanc dans lequel on parle des droits anti-dumping. On se réfère à l'article 4 du Livre blanc. Monsieur Harkness.

M. Harkness: J'ai déjà parlé des droits provisoires et des droits définitifs qui ne doivent pas être plus élevés que les droits provisoires. Je remarque que vous recommandez de rayer la disposition suivante:

mais n'excédant pas le droit temporaire, s'il en est, payable pour ces marchandises.

Je crois qu'à ce moment-là, les fonctionnaires du ministère du Revenu national ont dit que les droits de douanes provisoires seraient suffisamment élevés, mais je ne pense pas que vous partagiez cet avis, et j'aimerais que vous nous expliquiez un peu plus longuement ce que vous semble être cette situation.

M. Lang: Il est très difficile de prévoir ce qui arrivera dans un cas de ce genre. Le sous-ministre est peut-être satisfait des témoignages qui lui ont été présentés, non seulement au sujet du dumping mais aussi de ses effets nuisibles. Mais de là à essayer de dire quelle est la somme des droits de douanes provisoires qui devrait être imposée, je pense que c'est une question de jugement et l'article impose d'une certaine façon au sous-ministre d'imposer des droits de douanes provisoires assez élevés. En supprimant ces mots il pourrait mettre des droits provisoires justes et raisonnables, mais, si c'est plus faible que le montant du dumping, alors, il peut évaluer la somme totale. Ce n'est qu'un dépôt en somme, en attendant le paiement final.

A l'heure actuelle, le ministère n'a aucune autorité pour s'opposer au droit provisoire, alors, il faut attendre que l'enquête soit tered. Then when it does find dumping it imposes the full amount. Really what we are asking for here is that there should be no change in that. If dumping takes place the importer should pay the full amount.

[Texte]

Mr. Harkness: Well I share that view and I would like to ask Mr. Arthur or Mr. Hind whether the Code requires that a clause of this sort be in.

The Chairman: Mr. Arthur.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, the concept of retroactivity is a special feature of the Code, and the norm that is envisaged in the Code is that dumping duties are not to be applied until a decision has been made of dumping or injury.

Mr. Chairman, I would refer you to Article 11, pages 21 and 22 of the White Paper, the Article begins:

Anti-dumping duties and provisional measures shall only be applied to products which enter for consumption after the time when the decision taken under...

... The Articles related to normal value and export price. And then it goes on to say:

If the anti-dumping duty fixed in the final decision is higher than the provisionally paid duty, the difference shall not be collected. If the duty fixed in the final decision is lower than the provisionally paid duty or the amount estimated for the purpose of the security, the difference shall be reimbursed...

...and so on.

It is the view of our draftsmen, Mr. Chairman, that the wording at the end of clause 4 of the proposed Bill is in keeping with the obligations of this particular Article of the Code. It is for that reason, sir, that this suggestion is one I do not believe could be met.

The Chairman: Are there any comments from the members of the CMA group on Mr. Arthur's reply to your suggestion that these words should be deleted?

Have you any other questions, gentlemen, on that paragraph? If not, we will deal with the first paragraph of page 5 that deals with clause 5 of the White Paper.

Mr. Hales: This would be a rather worthwhile suggestion the Association is making minée et, lorsqu'on découvre qu'il s'agit de dumping, on impose la somme totale. Il ne devrait pas y avoir de changement. S'il y a du dumping, l'importateur devrait payer la somme totale.

[Interprétation]

M. Harkness: Je partage cette opinion et je voudrais demander à MM. Arthur et Hind, si le code exige qu'un article de ce genre soit inclus dans la Loi?

Le président: Monsieur Arthur.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, le concept de la rétroactivité est une caractéristique spéciale du code et, les normes envisagées dans le code font que les droits de douanes ne doivent pas s'appliquer tant qu'on n'a pas décidé s'il s'agit de dumping ou non.

Monsieur le président, je vous réfère à l'article 11, pages 21, 22 du Livre blanc. L'article dit:

Des droits antidumping et des mesures provisoires ne seront appliqués qu'à des produits mis à la consommation après la date à laquelle la décision prise conformément ...

... les articles se rapportant à la valeur normale et au prix d'exportation. Ensuite, on dit:

Si le droit antidumping fixé par la décision finale est supérieur au droit acquitté à titre provisoire, la différence ne sera pas perçue. Si le droit fixé par la décision finale est inférieur au droit provisoirement acquitté ou au montant évalué pour la fixation de la garantie, la différence sera restituée ou le droit recalculé, selon le cas.

Selon ceux qui ont rédigé le Livre blanc, la rédaction et la fin de l'article 4 du projet de Loi proposé tiennent compte de cet article du code. Et c'est pour cette raison, monsieur le président, que je ne pense pas que la suggestion sera acceptée.

Le président: Y a-t-il des commentaires de la part des représentants de la Canadian Manufacturers' Association au sujet de la réponse de M. Arthur à votre suggestion de supprimer ces mots? Merci, monsieur Arthur.

Avez-vous d'autres questions à poser, messieurs, sur ce paragraphe? Sinon, nous passerons à la page 5, traitant de l'article 5 du Livre blanc.

M. Hales: C'est une suggestion intéressante qui est faite par l'Association, au sujet de la with regard to the retroactivity of the duty imposed by the Tribunal. Our legislation states 90 days, and I notice that the American legislation is 120 days. I would like to ask Mr. Arthur why we drafted it this way and why the penalty in Canada should be less severe than in another country, particularly our neighbour. Why should we not both have the same, 120 days?

[Text]

• 1025

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, the reference made in the brief to 120 days relates to particular importations in the American law that have not been appraised prior to a finding. I would refer the Committee's attention to page 22 of the White Paper, Article 11, subparagraph (ii) which reads as follows:

Where appraisement is suspended for the product in question for reasons which arose before the initiation of the dumping case.

Here, Mr. Chairman, I think are the important words.

—and which are unrelated to the question of dumping, retroactive assessment of anti-dumping duties may extend back to a period not more than 120 days before the submission of the complaint.

In other words, Mr. Chairman, it is only under circumstances that are unrelated to dumping, such as probably a matter of appraisal. It could, I think, possibly cover the matter of misrepresentation. In our proposed draft Bill, if misrepresentation or fraud is determined, there is provision for reappraisal and a certain retroactivity.

However, Mr. Chairman, as in earlier sessions we have mentioned that we would wish to make a statement to your Committee at a later date regarding the American legislative situation. This is a matter that we would be prepared to discuss in greater detail at that time.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Well, I am not too sure that there is an ad idem here in the thinking between this and what Mr. Arthur has said. Actually I think the CMA are concerned about what we have seen in other briefs, the possibility of the "one free dump". We are back to that, and as we know, under the Canadian Code the cumulative period of 180 days occurs in the event that the Deputy Minister has made a provisional rétroactivité des droits de douanes imposés par le tribunal. Dans notre Loi, on précise une période de 90 jours; je sais que la loi américaine impose 120 jours. Je voudrais demander à M. Arthur pourquoi nous imposons 90 jours et pourquoi l'amende est moins sévère ici que dans d'autres pays, particulièrement chez nos voisins. Pourquoi ne devrions-nous pas avoir la même chose qu'aux États-Unis, soit 120 jours?

[Interpretation]

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, dans le mémoire on parle de 120 jours, cela a trait à certaines importations dans la loi américaine et ces importations ne sont pas évaluées avant qu'on connaisse les résultats. Et, je vous réfère donc, messieurs, à la page 22 du Livre blanc, article 11, sous-alinéa (ii), où on lit ce qui suit:

(ii) où l'évaluation en douane est suspendue en ce qui concerne le produit en question pour des raisons qui sont apparues avant l'ouverture de l'affaire de dumping...

Et, je pense que, ici, nous trouvons les mots importants, c'est-à-dire, et qui sont sans rapport avec la question du dumping, les droits antidumping peuvent être appliqués rétroactivement sans que la rétroactivité porte sur plus de 120 jours avant la date du dépôt de la réclamation.

En d'autres termes, monsieur le président, ce n'est que dans des circonstances qui ne se rattachent pas au dumping, comme, par exemple, une question d'évaluation, il peut s'agir de fausses représentations. Dans notre projet de loi, il y a des dispositions pour une réévaluation et, s'il y a une fausse représentation ou fraude, et qu'on en décide ainsi, il existe des dispositions permettant de réévaluer l'affaire et d'appliquer la rétroactivité.

Toutefois, monsieur le président, comme on l'a déjà dit plus tôt, nous aimerions présenter une déclaration à votre Comité plus tard, au sujet de la loi américaine. C'est une question dont nous discuterons plus en détail plus tard.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Je ne suis pas trop sûr qu'il existe dans la façon de penser entre ceci et ce que M. Arthur a dit. Mais, l'Association canadienne des manufacturiers se préoccupe de certaines questions dont on a déjà parlé dans d'autres mémoires aussi; il s'agit du dumping libre. Et, comme nous le savons, conformément au code au Canada, une période allant jusqu'à 180 jours est permise si un sous-ministre prend des dis-assessment of duty, then there can be a total period of 180 days, combining the Deputy Minister's action and that of the Tribunal. But for goods which may have entered prior to the effective date of the Deputy Minister's provisional assessment, there is the chance for the goods to escape dumping duties.

[Texte]

• 1030

I would judge that in the United States they have used a period of 120 days; they are reaching back a little further.

I think, Mr. Arthur, one could actually bring that case in under Article 11 of the actual Code that you read out. It is quite conceivable that there could be cases, and as far as I am concerned I note the representations for 120 days as against 90 days.

The Chairman: Thank you Mr. Lambert. The next paragraph deals with clause 7 of the White Paper. Yes, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): There I part company with the CMA on this one because I think this covers another principle that we came across. There is already authority under the Financial Administration Act for exemption and there have been any number of pleas before us that in a Code of this kind one should not have to rely upon one's general and detailed knowledge of other government statutes. This has to do particularly with the publication of Orders in Council. This is covered under the Regulations Act.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that clause 7 should remain, the authority is there.

The fact that the authority exists should be drawn to the attention of people who are concerned with anti-dumping. If it were not here they would have to know something about the Financial Administration Act, and they might be sadly deceived if they did not.

Going beyond that I do not know that you can effect bilateral trade agreements quite that easily, when likely these two agreements with Australia and New Zealand are parallel in many ways to other Most Favoured Nation treaties.

If we eliminated that from Australia we would have to do that with other nations. I personally think the opportunities of exempting for dumping duties would be restricted, but you still must have that degree of flexibility.

The Chairman: Thank you very much. Have the gentlemen from the CMA any comments?

[Interprétation]

positions pour évaluer les droits de douanes, ensuite, il peut y avoir une période totale de 180 jours de par une décision et du sous-ministre et du tribunal, mais pour des marchandises entrées au pays, avant la date à laquelle le sous-ministre a établi la réévaluation, et il se peut que les produits soient exempts de douanes.

Aux États-Unis, il y a une période de 120 jours, qui est un peu plus longue que la nôtre. Et, je pense que cela pourrait se rattacher à l'article 11, du code actuel. Cela peut se concevoir très bien. Et, comme je l'ai déjà dit, il y a ici une représentation de 120 jours, en comparaison de nos 90 jours.

Le président: Paragraphe suivant. Il s'agit de l'article 7 du Livre blanc. M. Lambert.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Ici, je suis d'accord avec l'Association canadienne des manufacturiers, car on revient à un autre principe. L'autorité existe déjà dans une autre loi, c'est-à-dire, la loi sur l'administration financière, pour accorder certaines exemptions. Dans un certain nombre de cas, on a vu que, dans ce Code, on ne devrait pas se fier seulement à des connaissances et à ce qui existe dans les lois des autres pays, surtout pour ce qui est de la publication des décrets du Conseil.

Je pense, pour ma part, monsieur le président, que l'article 7 devrait être conservé.

Le fait que l'autorité existe devrait intéresser ceux qui étudient l'anti-dumping. Ils devraient être au courant de la Loi sur l'administration financière, sinon, ils seraient peut-être amèrement déçus. Pour aller plus loin, je ne sais pas si vous pouvez modifier les ententes commerciales bilatérales.

Les deux ententes avec l'Australie et la Nouvelle-Zélande sont parallèles à bien des égards. Si nous éliminons certaines clauses avec l'Australie, nous devons le faire avec d'autres pays.

S'il y a des exemptions, je pense qu'elles devraient être restreintes, tout en ayant un certain degré de flexibilité.

Le président: L'Association canadienne des manufacturiers a la parole.

[Text]

Mr. Lang: Just to comment further on our submission. There are two points involved here. First, we do not want to encourage people to come to the government and ask for exemption of dumping duties.

There have been a few notable instances where this has happened in the past and because the provision was already in the Financial Administration Act we did not think it was necessary to pinpoint it in this new legislation.

The other point was, as members of the Committee are aware, that there are certain difficulties in our trade with Australia, particularly the importation of canned fruit and this sort of thing.

This reciprocal exemption from dumping duty in one trade agreement might be extended to other countries and we feel it is a bad principle. Imports from any country ought to be subject to the provisions of the new legislation and steps ought to be taken at an early date to modify the trade agreement so that in essence all countries trading with Canada ought to be treated on the same basis.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I suppose it all depends whose ox is being gored, but I would suggest with countries where Canada enjoys a marked positive balance in commodity trade that it would be to the advantage of Canadian manufacturers and producers if Canada had the right to go to the other country to get an exemption from dumping, in particular types of installations.

• 1035

Mr. Lang: It could be.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I think with respect to this provision in clause 7, Mr. Lang has referred to the possibility of people coming to government seeking exemptions. I think this is a two-way provision. There may well be situations, for example, where an industry or a single producer in Canada may be injured, and it might be conceivable that injury could be proven. However, it might not be considered in those particular circumstances to be in the national interest to apply dumping duty to imports of that product. There may then be an exemption under this particular clause.

There are also very broad powers in the Customs Tariff Act and in the Combines Investigation Act to use tariff reductions or the exemption from dumping duties in circumstances where it is considered to be in the national interest. It is really a carry forward of a provision that now exists in the Customs Act.

[Interpretation]

M. Lang: Je voudrais commenter notre mémoire un peu. Il y a deux points en cause. Nous ne voulons pas encourager les gens à demander des exemptions.

Il y a eu des cas semblables dans le passé. Comme les dispositions faisaient déjà partie de la Loi sur l'administration financière, nous n'avons pas pensé qu'il était nécessaire d'en reparler ici.

Deuxièmement, comme les membres du Comité le savent fort bien, il y a certaines difficultés dans nos échanges avec l'Australie, surtout pour les fruits en conserves.

L'exemption réciproque pourrait être accordée à d'autres pays. C'est un mauvais principe en soi, car les importations de tous les pays devraient relever des dispositions de la nouvelle Loi. Des mesures devraient être prises dès que possible pour modifier les échanges commerciaux. En principe, tous les pays qui commercent avec le Canada devraient être traités de la même façon.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Cela dépend toujours, car je pense que, pour l'équilibre commercial, les manufacturiers et les fabricants canadiens tireraient certains avantages, si le Canada pouvait obtenir des exemptions des autres pays, pour certaines choses du moins.

M. Lang: C'est possible.

M. Arthur: Je pense, monsieur le président, que, au sujet des dispositions prises dans l'article 7, M. Lang a mentionné que certaines personnes pourraient demander des exemptions au gouvernement. Cela fonctionne dans les deux sens.

Dans certains cas, une industrie ou un producteur peuvent entrer au Canada et on peut prouver que cela a été nuisible. Dans ces cas, il en va peut-être de l'intérêt national de ne pas appliquer les droits de dumping aux importations. Ce serait une exemption conformément à cet article.

Il y a aussi de vastes pouvoirs dans la Loi relative aux enquêtes sur les coalitions et dans la Loi du tarif des douanes. Les réductions tarifaires et les exemptions des droits de dumping sont considérées, dans certains cas, comme étant dans l'intérêt national.

C'est déjà une disposition qui existe dans la Loi sur les douanes.

[Texte]

Mr. Dobbie: Mr. Chairman, could I ask Mr. Arthur if there are exemptions under this clause, are they made public?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, if you recall, at earlier meetings we discussed this at some length, and under the Regulations Act there is a requirement that these be published. There are two I might mention, although I am not suggesting that they are published, but there is the requirement under the Regulations Act that they be published within 30 days. Both automobiles and commercial vehicles imported under the terms of the Automotive Agreement are exempted from dumping duties. This is an example, of it being specifically in the interest of the country to do so.

Mr. Gillespie: Is it not also correct that there is a provision under that same Regulations Act, Mr. Arthur, which exempts the necessity to publish?

Mr. Gray: It gives the authority.

Mr. Arthur: It gives the authority to exempt them.

Mr. Gillespie: It gives the authority to exempt, publishing the exemptions.

Mr. Arthur: It gives the authority in certain specific circumstances. The general requirement is that actions of this kind be published within 30 days.

Mr. Gillespie: Thank you Mr. Chairman.

Le président: Messieurs, aux pages 6 et 7 du mémoire, nous trouvons des commentaires sur les articles 8 et 9 du Livre blanc sur l'antidumping. Oui, M. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I do not want to monopolize the meeting, but I have one question on paragraph nine. I will defer to anyone who wants to ask questions because I have been asking lots of questions.

Le président: Il ne doit pas y avoir beaucoup de commentaires sur l'article 8. Oui, M. Lambert.

• 1040

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, this is related to observations that have been made to us before about the difficulty of establishing normal value in a commodity which has very little outlet in the domestic markets of the producing exporter. Although this particular commentary does not direct itself to the strictures to be applied in connection with the Bill, where the total domestic markets shall be looked at, our other

[Interprétation]

M. Dobbie: Monsieur le président, s'il y a des exemptions, sont-elles connues et publiques?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, nous en avons déjà parlé longuement à une réunion précédente. On demande, dans la Loi sur les règlements, que ces exemptions soient publiées. Il y en a deux que je pourrais mentionner, ici. Je ne dis pas qu'elles sont publiées, mais, toutefois, on demande de le faire dans les 30 jours. Les automobiles et les véhicules commerciaux importés, conformément à une entente, sont exemptés des droits de dumping. On a considéré que c'était dans notre intérêt de le faire.

M. Gillespie: Est-il juste de dire aussi qu'il y a une disposition dans la Loi sur les règlements qui exempte de la nécessité de publier?

M. Gray: On donne l'autorité...

M. Arthur: On donne l'autorité de le faire.

M. Gillespie: On donne l'autorité d'exempter de publier les exemptions.

M. Arthur: Dans certains cas particuliers. Mais, de façon générale, des mesures de ce genre doivent être rendues publiques dans les 30 jours.

M. Gillespie: Merci, monsieur le président.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, now pages six and seven of the brief. We find comments on Articles 8 and 9 of the white paper on antidumping. Page 19. Mr. Lambert.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Je ne veux pas monopoliser la réunion, mais j'ai une question sur l'article 9. Je peux céder la parole à ceux qui veulent demander des questions. J'ai déjà demandé plusieurs questions.

The Chairman: I do not think there are many comments on Article 8. Mr. Lambert.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Monsieur le président, ceci se rattache à des observations qui ont déjà été faites. Il semble difficile d'avoir des valeurs normales pour des produits qui ont peu de débouchés sur le marché national du fabricant. Ce commentaire ne s'adresse pas directement aux restrictions que nous appliquons conformément à la Loi, qui dit que le marché national doit être considéré. Mais il faut exclure du marché national la representations have been that you must exclude from the observation of the domestic market the value of any goods imported into that market at quota or perhaps even at a dumped price and you must determine the normal value of the goods produced for domestic consumption in that market.

[Text]

Mr. Lang: Yes, we would agree with that interpretation.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): But you go further. I would like a little bit more explanation on the actual point that you want to make.

Mr. Lang: On subclause 3?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Yes, that is right.

Mr. Lang: As we pointed out in our submission, Article 6 of the GATT provides normal value may be either the highest comparable price for the like product for export to a third country, or the cost of production plus a reasonable addition for selling cost and profit. With the emphasis in almost every country to increase their exports at almost any price and certainly below the price which is normally charged in the home market, we feel that you cannot take an export price and consider this as an acceptable value for dump duty purposes. By leaving in this clause "at the option of the Minister" or, shall we go further, at the option of the investigator, it would be very easy to determine in a country, such as Japan, where they export a large volume of goods to the United States market—probably specially made for the US market with an extra 10 per cent provided for the Canadian market—that the price charged to the Canadian importer would be the same price as that charged to the American buyer. So, in essence, the Canadian buyer is getting the advantage of a large volume export price which, if the volume shipped to Canada were considered as a separate entity, the Japanese exporter could not possibly make the goods or sell them at that price.

We feel it is essential in all these matters that the Department's investigators do determine and go into the question of cost of production and, particularly, in the quantities that are exported to Canada, otherwise we are liable to get ourselves into the position of accepting any general export prices as representing normal value and this could be very detrimental to Canadian industry.

Our recommendation really is that in order to comply with the Code and with the GATT, valeur des produits importés sur ce marché, soit en vertu de contingentement ou en vertu d'un prix de dumping. Il faut plutôt considérer la valeur normale des marchandises produites pour la consommation nationale.

[Interpretation]

M. Lang: Oui, nous sommes d'accord.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Iriez-vous plus loin? Je voudrais avoir un peu plus d'explications.

M. Lang: Au paragraphe 3?

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): C'est cela.

M. Lang: Au paragraphe 3, comme nous l'avons mentionné dans notre mémoire, cet article 6 du GATT prévoit que la valeur normale peut être, soit le plus haut prix comparable d'un produit pour exportation à un troisième pays, ou le coût de production plus une addition raisonnable pour le prix de vente et le profit. Et on insiste dans presque tous les pays sur la promotion des exportations à n'importe quel prix ou très souvent au-dessous du prix demandé dans le pays d'origine. On ne peut prendre un prix d'exportation et se servir de cela comme raison valable pour faire du dumping.

En laissant cet article à la discrétion du ministre ou même à celle des enquêteurs, il est difficile de déterminer, dans un pays comme le Japon par exemple, qu'ils exportent un grand nombre de produits aux États-Unis à un certain prix, des produits fabriqués spécialement pour le marché américain et il y a peut-être un surplus de 10 p. 100 pour le marché canadien. Les prix demandés à l'importateur canadien sont les mêmes que ceux qu'on demande aux acheteurs américains.

En fait, l'acheteur canadien peut profiter des grandes quantités de marchandises exportées, et si le nombre de produits exportés au Canada était considéré comme une entité distincte, le fabricant japonais ne pourrait les fabriquer ou les vendre au même prix. Il est donc essentiel que les enquêteurs du gouvernement déterminent et étudient le coût de production surtout dans le cas des quantités exportées au Canada. Sans cela, nous serons obligés d'accepter tous les prix comme étant ceux qui représentent la valeur normale de l'article. Cela pourrait nuire énormément à l'industrie canadienne.

Notre recommandation doit donc être tout à fait conforme au code et aux règlements du we should add the words "whichever is higher" so it is axiomatic on the investigator to look into the question of costs in all such situations.

[Texte]

The Chairman: Mr. Gray?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, am I not right in suggesting that the definitions (i) and (ii) on page 7 are taken from the GATT, Article 6, whereas the wording of Article 2(d) of the Code is actually somewhat different.

For example, if you look at Article 2(d) of the Code it says:

(d) When there are no sales of the like product in the ordinary course of trade in the domestic market of the exporting country or when, because of the particular market situation, such sales do not permit a proper comparison, the margin of dumping shall be determined by comparison with a comparable price of the like product when exported to any third country which may be the highest such export price but should be a representative price, or with the cost of production in the country of origin plus a reasonable amount for administrative, selling and any other costs and for profits.

• 1045

I think what the draftsmen of the proposed Bill attempted to do was to follow more closely Article 2(d) of the Code and perhaps they felt that this should be the governing clause being the treaty under which the draft Bill is being presented to Parliament. It was my understanding that the option which you gentlemen are seeking is actually in the hands of the Deputy Minister. Am I right in this, Mr. Arthur?

Mr. Arthur: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Le président: Monsieur Lambert, avez-vous d'autres questions relatives à l'article 9 du Livre blanc?

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Cuest): Non, je crois bien que, les explications fournies par le représentant ainsi que par les fonctionnaires nous aideront à prendre une décision.

The Chairman: Gentlemen we will move now to the paragraph that deals with clause 10 of the White Paper which you will find on pages 50 to 54. You may include the paragraph that deals with clauses 11 and 12 also, all of which deal with Liability for Anti-Dumping Duty.

[Interprétation]

GATT. Nous devrions ajouter ces mots. Alors il est évident que l'enquêteur doit étudier le coût dans tous les cas.

Le président: Monsieur Gray?

M. Gray: Monsieur le président, ai-je raison de dire que les définitions données à la page 7, accompagnées des lettres minuscules «i» et double «ii», sont tirées des règlements du GATT, tandis que la rédaction de l'article 2(d) du code est un peu différente?

Par exemple, l'article 2(d) du code dit:

Lorsque aucune vente du produit similaire n'a lieu au cours d'opérations commerciales normales sur le marché intérieur du pays exportateur ou lorsque, du fait de la situation particulière du marché, de telles ventes ne permettent pas une comparaison valable, la marge du dumping sera déterminée par comparaison avec un prix comparable du produit similaire lorsque celui-ci est exporté à destination d'un pays tiers, ce prix pouvant être le prix à l'exportation le plus élevé mais devant être un prix représentatif, ou avec le coût de production dans le pays d'origine majoré d'un montant raisonnable pour les frais d'administration, de vente et autres et pour les bénéfices.

Je crois que cet article de la Loi tend à suivre de plus près l'article 2(d) du code. Peut-être que cette section devrait servir de guide étant le traité suivant lequel le projet de loi est présenté au Parlement et je pense que l'option que vous voulez choisir est présentement étudiée par le sous-ministre. Est-ce exact, monsieur Arthur?

M. Arthur: Oui, monsieur le président.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert do you have other questions concerned with Article 9 of the White Paper?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): With the explanations given by the representative of the CMA and with our officials we will be able to decide what to do.

Le président: Maintenant, messieurs, nous passerons à l'alinéa se rapportant au paragraphe 10 du Livre blanc que vous trouverez aux pages 50 à 54.

Cela comprend aussi les articles qui se rapportent aux paragraphes 11 et 12, qui traitent de l'assujettissement à un droit antidumping.

[Text]

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I am a little concerned and I think there was some concern expressed earlier, now that we are dealing with trading blocks, such as the Common Market and other regional training bodies. As you know, goods may move duty free from one partner of the Common Market into another and the question is what is the normal value of goods that may be coming to us say, from Belgium having been manufactured in Germany? It is my understanding that the administration would feel that the price in Belgium would be the determining factor rather than the one in Germany. What are your observations on that?

Mr. Lang: This factor has been put in our Customs Act valuation where problems of this kind did arise and it is inherent now in the Customs and Excise Division to check back on the price at which those goods were regularly being sold in the country of manufacture as well as in the country of export. There is provision to determine a fair market value as being the price in the country of manufacture that is higher than the price in the country of export. I believe this was transferred from the Code to clause 12. We concur with the effect of that legislation.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I question that actually because it says:

12. (1) Good bona fide exported to Canada from any country but passing in transit through another...

In the case I put to you the goods are not passing in transit through another. The export is from France or from Belgium. It is a bona fide export to Canada by an exporting firm or broker or what have you. The goods were made in Germany; he transfers them through to the common market, free of duty between Germany and Belgium, but for some reason or other there is a dump between the exporter in Belgium to here in Canada. Where do you determine the normal value of the goods, in Belgium or in Germany?

Mr. Lang: It would be the place of direct shipment to Canada. In other words, if they are diverted in Belgium, then Belgium becomes primarily the first country at which the Department of National Revenue looks for comparable home market value. But if they come through on a through bill of lading from Germany through Belgium to Canada, Germany is the country of manufacture and this is the country at which the values are determined.

[Interpretation]

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Je me préoccupe d'une question, on en a déjà parlé. Maintenant que nous parlons de blocs commerciaux, comme le marché commun, par exemple, il y a aussi d'autres organismes régionaux. Comme vous le savez, les produits peuvent être envoyés exempts de douanes d'un pays du marché commun à un autre. La question est la suivante: quelle est la valeur normale de produits qui viennent, par exemple, de Belgique, qui ont été fabriqués en Allemagne? Quelle est la valeur normale de ces produits? Et si je comprends bien, le prix en Belgique sera le facteur déterminant celui payé en Allemagne? Quels sont vos commentaires?

M. Lang: Ceci est inclus dans notre Loi sur les douanes; des problèmes ont surgi et c'est maintenant la coutume au service de Douanes de vérifier le prix normal des produits vendus dans leur pays d'origine aussi bien que dans les pays importateurs. Il y a des dispositions pour déterminer la valeur; surtout dans le pays d'origine, le prix est souvent plus élevé que dans le pays importateur. Je crois que ceci a été reporté au code, à l'article 12 sur l'effet de cette législation que nous approuvons.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): J'en doute, car il est dit:

12(1) Les marchandises exportées de bonne foi au Canada en provenance d'un pays mais transitant par un autre...

Je parle ici de produits qui ne passent pas en transit d'un pays à l'autre. Si l'exportation vient de Belgique, c'est une exportation en bonne et due forme venant au Canada, par l'entremise de courtiers ou de compagnies d'exportation. Les produits ont été fabriqués, disons, en Allemagne et vont en Belgique, libres de douanes, car il s'agit de deux pays du marché commun, mais, pour une raison ou pour une autre, il y a du dumping entre l'exportateur belge à son point d'arrivée ici au Canada. Où déterminez-vous la valeur normale des produits? En Belgique ou en Allemagne?

M. Lang: S'ils font un envoi direct au Canada, il doit y avoir un arrêté en Belgique. En d'autres mots, si les produits sont envoyés en Belgique, alors celle-ci devient le premier pays où le ministère du Revenu national s'informera pour connaître la valeur sur le marché domestique. Mais si les produits expédiés sont accompagnés d'un connaissance de l'Allemagne, en passant par la Belgique en direction du Canada, l'Allemagne est le pays d'origine et alors on les évalue au prix de ce pays.

[Texte]

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): That I grant you, but I want to get your opinion on this particular point because I think we are going to see a lot of it.

● 1050

Mr. Lang: It could be.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Are you satisfied that the valuation should be that indulgent?

Mr. Lang: We did make representations on this point, as I said, several years ago and it has been embodied in customs legislation. From our examination of clause 12 it appears that that has been put into the proposed Anti-Dumping Bill. It seems to meet with our approval.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, I do not know if this question is in order or not, but it is a supplementary to Mr. Lambert's question. It relates to this area of exports and imports in the Common Market and, in particular, to the practices of West Germany.

I am referring to a comment in the morning paper about certain steps that West Germany has taken rather than revalue its mark. The reference is that West Germany intended to reduce the import taxes and export rebates by only 3 percentage points. This would have had a revaluation effect of 4.5 per cent.

My question is directed to Mr. Arthur. Are these practices of import taxes and export rebates consistent with GATT and how are they compensated for in the application of proposed anti-dumping legislation?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I have not had the benefit of seeing this particular article, but in general, I would imagine that the West German authorities are using the escape clause provisions of the GATT in this particular circumstance.

As to how these taxes are dealt with in determining normal value if they are included in the domestic price, you determine your normal value on the basis of the experience on selling the goods in the country of export.

The export rebate is, of course, another matter. I think perhaps here Mr. Hind might wish to comment.

Mr. Gillespie: This is the export rebate that is specifically provided for in the determination of normal value under our proposed Bill.

The Chairman: Mr. Hind, would you care to comment?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, under the existing law, mainly in the Customs Act, there is

[Interprétation]

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Je voudrais connaître votre opinion sur cette question, car je pense qu'il y aura beaucoup de cas semblables.

M. Lang: C'est possible.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Pensez-vous que l'évaluation devrait être aussi indulgente?

M. Lang: Nous avons fait des commentaires sur cette question, il y a plusieurs années. Cela fait maintenant partie de la Loi sur les douanes. Après avoir étudié l'article 12, il semble que cela soit inclus dans la Loi sur l'anti-dumping. Nous sommes d'accord.

M. Gillespie: J'ai une question supplémentaire à celle de M. Lambert. C'est au sujet des exportations et des importations entre les pays du Marché commun et, surtout, pour l'Allemagne de l'Ouest. Ce matin, dans le journal, on disait que l'Allemagne de l'Ouest a pris certaines mesures au lieu de réévaluer le mark. On disait que l'Allemagne de l'Ouest veut réduire les taxes d'importations et les rabais d'exportations de 3 p. 100 seulement. Ceci produirait une réévaluation de 4.5 p. 100. Ma question s'adresse à M. Arthur: est-ce que ces pratiques de taxes sur l'importation et de rabais sur l'exportation sont conformes aux règlements du GATT? Quelle est la compensation dans le projet de loi sur l'antidumping?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je n'ai pas vu cet article, mais, de façon générale, je pense que les autorités ouest-allemandes utilisent cette disposition du GATT dans ce cas particulier. Comment traite-t-on ces taxes pour déterminer la valeur normale, si elles sont incluses dans le prix domestique? On détermine la valeur normale en se fondant sur l'expérience de la vente des produits dans le pays d'exportation. Le rabais à l'exportation est, bien sûr, une question d'un autre ordre. Peut-être que M. Hind pourrait ajouter quelque chose.

M. Gillespie: C'est le rabais à l'exportation qui est chargé de déterminer la valeur normale conformément au projet de loi que l'on propose?

Le président: M. Hind.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, conformément à la Loi actuelle, notamment la Loi sur a provision which requires the existing fair market value in the country of export to be reduced to the extent of any internal taxes that are included in that price and which are payable on goods sold for home consumption, but which are not payable on goods sold for export. In other words, if the domestic price is 100 and this price includes an internal tax of 4, let us say, then our current law will permit us to establish the fair market value at 100 less 4, namely 96. Now this provision is being carried forward into the proposed dumping legislation. I should say that this is consistent with the GATT. I believe there is a provision in the GATT that requires this to be done.

[Text]

• 1055

Mr. Gillespie: Does this actually handle the question of the rebate?

Mr. Hind: I am not sure that I understand what rebate Mr. Gillespie has in mind, but if it is a rebate of the internal tax that I have just described, it does indeed.

Mr. Gillespie: I had assumed that the rebate perhaps might be in the form of a subsidy, rebating certain taxes to manufacturers on that proportion of their business which was export business.

Mr. Hind: This is recognized in the GATT. It is recognized under our current law and it is being carried forward in the proposed legislation. It is something that is recognized as allowable, internationally.

Mr. Gray: I think it is Article 2 which appears after the Code in the White Paper.

Mr. Gillespie: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Do you mean to tell me if the domestic price were 100 and if there were an export rebate of 4, that our customs people are going to establish the normal value in the country of origin as 96, or would it be 100?

Mr. Hind: It would be 96, Mr. Chairman, in the example cited.

Mr. Danson: I have a supplementary, Mr. Chairman. As I understand that interpretation, it would be similar to, say, a Canadian exporter who has a product that sells on the Canadian market at 100, but we pay a sales tax. So if the export value is to be reduced by the amount of the sales tax which is 4 in this case, it would be 96. But in some countries—I do not know if this practice still exists—they gave a further rebate—really a subsidy—of perhaps 10 per cent for export purposes on that portion of the company's business that went to export.

[Interpretation]

les douanes, il y a une disposition qui exige que la valeur du marché dans le pays d'exportation soit réduite par rapport à toutes les taxes internes ajoutées au prix, qui sont payables sur les produits vendus sur le marché domestique, mais qui ne sont pas payables sur les marchandises destinées à l'exportation. En d'autres termes, si le prix domestique est 100, et s'il comprend une taxe de 4, alors, conformément à la Loi actuelle, nous pouvons établir la valeur du marché à 96. Cette disposition sera incluse dans la nouvelle Loi sur le dumping. Je tiens à dire que c'est conforme aux règlements du GATT. Je pense qu'il y a une disposition du GATT qui exige qu'on le fasse.

M. Gillespie: Est-ce que cela tient compte de la question du rabais?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, je ne sais pas de quel rabais M. Gillespie parle, mais s'il s'agit d'un rabais sur la taxe nationale que je viens de décrire, on en tient compte.

M. Gillespie: Le rabais peut parfois prendre la forme d'une subvention, un rabais d'une taxe payée par les fabricants.

M. Hind: C'est reconnu par le GATT. C'est reconnu par nos lois et on en tient compte dans le projet de loi. C'est un fait reconnu de façon internationale.

M. Gray: Je pense que c'est l'article 2 du Code.

M. Gillespie: Merci, Monsieur le président.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Voulez-vous dire que, si le prix national est de 100 et s'il y a un rabais d'exportation de 4, les agents des douanes établiront la valeur normale du pays d'origine à 96 ou à 100?

M. Hind: Ce serait 96 dans l'exemple donné.

M. Danson: J'ai une question supplémentaire, monsieur le président.

Si je comprends cette interprétation, ce serait semblable à un exportateur canadien qui a un produit qui se vend sur le marché canadien à 100; mais nous payons une taxe de vente. Si la valeur d'exportation est réduite de 4, le prix serait 96. Mais, dans certains pays, on accorde un autre rabais, qui est réellement une subvention, de 10 p. 100 aux fins d'exportation pour les produits destinés à l'exportation.

[Texte]

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, this additional 10 per cent does not represent a rebate of internal tax. It is laid down in the International Code, in our Customs Act at present and in the proposed Bill. If, in other words, it is a subsidy granted by the exporting country, we do not accept this or allow this either currently or in the future.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, we will move now to pages 8 through 11 of the submission which deals with procedure. You will find this from pages 58 through 78 of the White Paper.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): With regard to the comment at the top of page 9, the recommendation is that:

... an investigation must be instituted within 30 days...

My own view is that the words "shall forthwith" are much more peremptory and that 30 days gives an undesirable latitude and merely sets the period. It strikes me that he could wait for 30 days, but "shall forthwith" is now.

Mr. Dobbie: If it is, we would concur.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Because I think that perhaps your interpretation of "shall forthwith" is being equated with "as soon as possible."

Mr. Dobbie: Yes.

Mr. Lang: Actually in suggesting 30 days we took into consideration the fact that even after you lodge a complaint it is necessary for customs to find the entries that cover those goods and that information is not readily available here in Ottawa. You have to go to the regional offices or to the ports to find it and it usually takes a few weeks to find the importations. All we are doing here is giving them what we think is a reasonable time limit to get going.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I am not going to comment for the Department, but I would think that even the examination—the inquiry for the entries and so forth—is initiation of an investigation, but perhaps Mr. Hind could comment on this.

• 1100

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, as I understand the words "initiation of investigation" this occurs when the Deputy Minister has satisfied himself that evidence has been submitted to him sufficient to show that there is both dumping and injury. At that point the Deputy causes an investigation to be undertaken,

[Interprétation]

M. Hind: Un tel 10 p. 100 n'est pas un rabais sur la taxe nationale. On le précise dans le Code international, dans notre Loi sur les douanes et dans le projet de loi. Si, en d'autres termes, c'est une subvention accordée par le pays exportateur, nous ne l'acceptons pas.

Le président: Messieurs, nous allons maintenant passer aux pages 8 à 11 du mémoire, dans lesquelles on parle de la procédure. Cela correspond aux pages 58 à 78 du Livre blanc. Monsieur Lambert?

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): En ce qui concerne le commentaire, en haut de la page 9, on dit:

...Qu'une enquête doit être instituée en-deçà de trente jours...

Je pense que l'expression «immédiatement» est plus absolue et que «30 jours» ne ferait que prolonger la période. On peut donc dépasser la période de 30 jours.

M. Dobbie: Si c'est cela, nous pouvons l'accepter.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Peut-être que votre interprétation de «immédiatement» correspond à «aussitôt que possible».

M. Dobbie: Oui.

M. Lang: En suggérant 30 jours, on pense qu'il est nécessaire, lorsqu'il y a une plainte, que les douanes trouvent les droits d'entrée qui couvrent ces marchandises. Nous n'avons pas ces renseignements à Ottawa; il faut se rendre aux bureaux régionaux ou dans les ports pour les trouver. Cela prend quelques semaines avant de trouver tous les renseignements. Nous voulons seulement donner une période de temps raisonnable.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Je ne parlerai pas pour le ministère. Je pense que l'examen des entrées constitue le début d'une enquête. Peut-être que M. Hind pourrait en parler plus longuement.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, si je comprends les mots «initiation d'une enquête», cela a lieu lorsque le sous-ministre est convaincu que les preuves qui lui ont été soumises sont suffisantes pour indiquer qu'il y a du dumping et que cela est nuisible. Alors, le sous-ministre ordonne que l'enquête soit namely, he sends the invoices out to the investigational staff abroad and requires the investigators to visit the offices of the exporters to secure the necessary information. I think there is a period preliminary to that, the period between the lodging of the complaint and the decision of the Deputy whether he will initiate a full-fledged investigation or not.

[Text]

For what it may be worth the CMA has suggested a specific time limit here, I would prefer that there be no specific time limit. I think you may expect that the Deputy Minister will move with as much dispatch as possible—I hope it would not take 30 days—in which to decide whether to undertake an investigation. On the other hand if we were limited by a 30-day period it could well be that in some exceptional cases, we could not move within the 30-day period, and cases which should merit consideration would have to be rejected because we will have had to go beyond the 30-day period. I would like to feel free to move as expeditiously as possible, and not be restricted to this 30-day period.

Mr. Lang: I think, in answer to Mr. Hind's comment, we agree fully with his thoughts here. However, we have observed in the past complaints which have been lodged where possibly investigations were not instituted for several months. We want to ensure there is no sitting on a complaint, and no action taken. So we suggest that in the normal course of events 30 days ought to be quite adequate. How you word that in actual legislation, I am not sure.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I am sorry if someone else's interpretation of the words "shall forthwith" are a little more relaxed than mine.

The Chairman: Mr. Hind did you notice the recommendation of the CMA at the bottom of page 8 of the submission? It reads:

In this connection we would like to suggest to the Deputy Minister that he instruct the directors of the six regional customs offices to immediately bring to his attention all cases of suspected dumping.

If I remember well, did you not inform this Committee that such a thing is done?

Mr. Hind: Yes, sir, Mr. Chairman, I thought people might assume that this would follow as a matter of course. Indeed, we are doing this at the moment. We have instructions to port officers out now, four pages in volume, instructing our officials to submit to Ottawa immediately all invoices and entries menée, notamment en envoyant les factures au personnel d'enquête posté à l'étranger et lui demandant de visiter les bureaux de l'exportateur pour y chercher les renseignements nécessaires.

[Interpretation]

Je crois qu'il y a aussi une période préliminaire, c'est-à-dire, la période qui va entre le jour où la plainte est portée et le jour où le sous-ministre décide si oui ou non l'enquête sera instituée. L'Association canadienne des manufacturiers a proposé un délai. Je préférerais qu'il n'y ait pas de délai précis. On peut s'attendre à ce que le sous-ministre agisse aussi rapidement que possible. J'espère qu'il ne faudra pas 30 jours pour décider s'il faut enquêter ou non.

D'autre part, si nous sommes restreints à une période de 30 jours, il se peut que dans certains cas d'exception nous ne puissions pas agir dans les 30 jours et il faudrait peut-être aller au-delà de cette période.

Je voudrais être libre d'agir aussi rapidement que possible et ne pas être limité par les 30 jours.

M. Lang: En réponse à M. Hind, nous sommes tout à fait d'accord avec ce qu'il a dit. Mais, par le passé, des plaintes ont été formulées et il avait fallu plusieurs mois avant qu'on fasse démarrer l'enquête.

Nous voulons nous assurer qu'il n'y aura pas de pertes de temps et nous croyons qu'en temps normal, la période de 30 jours devraient être amplement suffisante. Mais je ne sais pas en quels termes le texte législatif devrait être rédigé.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Je regrette qu'on puisse interpréter les mots «fait immédiatement» de façon plus libérale que je ne le fais.

Le président: Monsieur Hind, page 8 du mémoire. En bas de la page 8. Avez-vous remarqué la recommandation de l'AMC?

«Nous aimerions suggérer au sous-ministre d'ordonner à ses Directeurs régionaux du Bureau des douanes de signaler immédiatement tous les cas présumés de dumping.»

Si j'ai bonne mémoire, n'a-t-il pas indiqué au comité que cela se fait?

M. Hind: Oui, monsieur le président. Je pensais que l'on comprendrait que de telles instructions seraient naturellement émises. Nos officiers aux ports d'entrée ont présentement en main des instructions—un texte de 4 pages—leur enjoignant de présenter à Ottawa, immédiatement, toutes les factures et covering a selected list of sensitive goods. As the Department of National Revenue becomes aware of sensitive areas, be it in the textile field, the footwear field and others, this list is added to, which means that the customs officers are required to submit invoices promptly to the Department.

[Texte]

Mr. Lang: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to embarrass Mr. Hind, but I just wondered whether those instructions could be put in the Minutes of the Proceedings here or could they be made public, because I think we are all...

The Chairman: They were made public at a previous meeting. I do remember they were placed before this Committee.

• 1105

Mr. Lang: Thank you very much.

The Chairman: Now, gentlemen, we will move to the paragraph that deals with the Anti-Dumping Tribunal, clauses 21 to 32 of the White Paper. Yes, Mr. Gillespie, do you have any questions.

Mr. Gillespie: No, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Dobbie: Mr. Chairman, I have a question on this clause and it is a question of interpretation. Mr. Chairman and Mr. Arthur, I am a little confused. I would like your interpretation of clause 30, which reads as follows:

The Tribunal shall, before making any order or finding or before rendering any advice on any reference made to it pursuant to subsection (3) or (7) of section 13, seek the advice of a Panel...

Does that mean that the Tribunal is limited only to seeking advice of clause 13(3) or (7)? In other words, "making an order or finding" is that attached to "before rendering any advice or reference pursuant to (3) and (7) of section 13"?

Mr. Arthur: It says it shall seek information, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Dobbie: That is true. However, I am not making myself clear then. Do the words "seek the advice" apply only to clause 13(3) or (7) or does it mean before it makes any finding whatsoever?

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, it says:

The Tribunal shall, before making any order or finding or before rendering any advice on any reference made to it pursuant to subsection (3) or (7) of section 13,...

So it is confined to those two.

[Interprétation]

les entrées de produits particuliers qui peuvent faire l'objet de dumping.

Dès que le ministère du Revenu national prend connaissance de l'existence d'autres produits ainsi qualifiés, que ce soit dans le domaine des textiles, des chaussures, ou autres, ils sont ajoutés à cette liste et les douaniers doivent transmettre toutes les factures au ministère immédiatement.

M. Lang: Je ne veux pas embarrasser M. Hind, mais j'aimerais bien que les instructions soient ajoutées à notre compte rendu, ici. Ne pourraient-elles pas être rendues publiques...

Le président: On les a déjà publiées à la réunion précédente, monsieur. Le Comité en a donc été saisi.

M. Lang: Merci beaucoup.

Le président: Maintenant, messieurs, nous passerons au Tribunal de l'antidumping, articles 21 à 32, du Livre blanc. Monsieur Gillespie, avez-vous des questions à poser?

M. Gillespie: Non, monsieur le président.

M. Dobbie: J'ai une question d'interprétation à poser. Monsieur Arthur, je voudrais que vous m'interprétiez l'article 30:

Le Tribunal doit, avant de rendre une ordonnance ou de prendre des conclusions ou avant de donner un avis sur un renvoi qui lui est fait en conformité des paragraphes (3) ou (7) de l'article 13, demander l'avis d'un Comité consultatif formé des membres suivants:

Est-ce que cela veut dire que le Tribunal doit demander des conseils seulement aux personnes énumérées aux paragraphes (3) et (7) de l'article 13? En d'autres termes, est-ce que les mots «une ordonnance ou de prendre des conclusions» se rattachent à «en conformité des paragraphes (3) ou (7) de l'article 13»?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, on dit ici: «doit demander...»

M. Dobbie: C'est vrai. Mais, je ne suis peut-être pas assez explicite. «Doit demander l'avis...» mais seulement en conformité des paragraphes (3) et (7) de l'article 13, ou bien avant de prendre une conclusion?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, on dit:

Le tribunal doit, avant de rendre une ordonnance ou de prendre des conclusions ou avant de donner un avis sur un renvoi qui lui est fait en conformité des paragraphes (3) ou (7) de l'article 13...

Donc le texte restreint à ces deux paragraphes.

[Text]

Mr. Dobbie: It is confined to those two subclauses, not to any finding on any other matter, but just confined to those two sections?

Mr. Arthur: That is right.

Mr. Dobbie: Thank you, because this makes a difference in our brief.

Mr. Lang: ...that there was a comma after "making any order or finding" that there were two sets of circumstances here. I do not think it is clear in the draft Bill because it says "making any order or finding in respect to subsection (3)" which could give rise a dual interpretation. It could be taken both ways.

Our brief was predicated on, as we said, before making any order or finding...

We are criticizing the fact that the Tribunal must in every case go to this Panel of public servants to get their advice and agreement. Whereas if it were limited to clause 13(3) or (7) which would only be in a relatively few cases, we would withdraw our objection.

Mr. Dobbie: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest this clause would read a lot clearer if it said: "The Tribunal shall, before making any order or finding and before rendering any service..." We would substitute the word "and" for "or".

• 1110

Mr. Gray: I was going to suggest, firstly that I do not see any comma between the word "finding" and the word "or," in the second line and, secondly, I think since the point you raised generally with respect to the Panel is one which appears to have been raised in other briefs already presented to us, I have suggested to the officials that one of them be given very serious study.

The Chairman: Mr. Dobbie, I think you wanted to make some comments?

Mr. Dobbie: Yes, Mr. Chairman. If the interpretation then, as I understand it, is that it is just pursuant to these two subclauses, we would change our brief on page 12 and would not be opposed to the setting up of this Panel.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, perhaps the best thing to do would be for the officials to note what you have said and take that in account in the study they are giving these representations and on which they are going to report back to the Committee after we have heard the evidence of all those who will appear before us.

[Interpretation]

M. Dobbie: Donc le tribunal doit se limiter à ces deux paragraphes et ne peut étudier d'autres questions?

M. Arthur: C'est exact.

M. Dobbie: Je vous remercie, car, c'est différent dans notre mémoire.

M. Lang: Selon notre façon d'interpréter le texte, comme il y a une virgule après «avant de donner un avis», nous avons cru qu'il prévoyait deux genres de circonstances. Je ne crois pas que le texte soit clair. On peut lui donner deux sens.

Notre mémoire fait la critique du fait que le tribunal doive consulter ce Comité de fonctionnaires et obtenir son avis et son assentiment. Mais si cette obligation de demander l'avis au Comité consultatif se limite aux cas prévus aux paragraphes (3) ou (7) de l'article 13—donc un nombre restreint de cas—nous serions prêts à retirer notre objection.

M. Dobbie: Monsieur le président, l'article serait beaucoup plus clair s'il stipulait que le tribunal «doit, avant de rendre une ordonnance ou de prendre des conclusions» et au lieu de ou «avant de donner un avis»...

M. Gray: Je voulais d'abord suggérer je ne vois pas de virgule entre les mots «prendre des conclusions» et le mot «ou» et je crois que c'est ce point que vous avez soulevé.

Je pense qu'on en a déjà parlé dans les autres mémoires, il faudrait donc étudier la question sérieusement.

Le président: M. Dobbie avait quelque chose à dire, je pense?

M. Dobbie: Oui, monsieur le président. Si je comprends l'interprétation, nous devrions changer notre mémoire à la page 12, et être d'accord.

M. Gray: Les fonctionnaires devraient en prendre note dans leur étude, et nous faire rapport des mémoires qui nous auront été présentés.

[Texte]

Mr. Lambert: I would suggest to you that clause 5 complicates the whole thing. Because that is the one that authorizes the dumping duty. It states:

5. There shall be levied, collected and paid upon all dumped goods entered into Canada (a) in respect of which the Tribunal has made an order of finding, after the entry of the goods, that
- (i) either...

Then there are conditions that follow. It seems to me that you cannot have anti-dumping duty fixed unless there has been an order of the Tribunal. The Tribunal is there for the purpose of determining injury. It is not the Deputy Minister that makes the final determination of injury, it is the Tribunal and, therefore, in order to get a dumping duty you must have both a question of the lower price and injury. The Tribunal is the one that makes the finding of injury and therefore, every order, every finding. And the disputed ones—subclause (3) of clause 13 is as to dispute. It is a form of appeal. If you will look at page 60, subclause (3) says:

- (3) Where the Deputy Minister, after receipt of a written complaint... decides not to initiate an investigation by reason only that in his opinion there is no evidence...

In his opinion—that is a prima facie case. He might say: “I do not see that there is any injury” and the aggrieved party may then say: “But I want to go to the Tribunal.” That is the reference under subclause (3) of clause 13 and, again, in subclause (7) where the Deputy Minister comes to the conclusion:

- (7)...there is no evidence of material injury or retardation...

In other words, if he does not find a prima facie case, again there is an appeal to the Tribunal. So I would suggest to you, gentlemen, that in my opinion it is mandatory to go to the Tribunal.

Mr. Dobbie: No, we were not arguing that sir. We were arguing about the Panel.

Mr. Lambert: I know, but the Tribunal must go to the Panel in all cases.

● 1115

Mr. Dobbie: Well, this is the interpretation that...

Mr. Lambert: I agree with you.

Mr. Dobbie: ...we are fundamentally at difference with...

29414—31

[Interprétation]

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): L'article 5 complique tout. C'est celui qui autorise la perception de droits de dumping:

Il est levé, perçu et payé sur toutes les marchandises sous-évaluées entrées au Canada

a) pour lesquelles le Tribunal a rendu ordonnance ou pris des conclusions, après l'entrée des marchandises portant

- (i) que...

Mais il semble qu'on ne puisse percevoir de droits de dumping, s'il n'y a pas eu de décret du tribunal. Le tribunal doit déterminer s'il y a eu dumping; ce n'est pas le sous-ministre qui prend la décision, mais bien le tribunal. Donc, pour percevoir des droits de dumping, il faut qu'il y ait prix inférieur et tort causé.

C'est le tribunal qui découvre le tort causé, et donc, rend ordonnance et prend conclusion. Dans les cas litigieux, comme on le dit au paragraphe 3, de l'article 13:

Lorsque le sous-ministre à la suite de la réception d'une plainte écrite... décide de ne pas ouvrir d'enquête, du seul fait qu'à son avis il n'y a pas d'éléments de preuve...

c'est un cas de première instance, il ne voit pas d'évidence. Ensuite la partie lésée doit pouvoir demander à se présenter au tribunal. C'est ce qu'on prévoit au paragraphe 3 de l'article 13.

Ensuite, à l'article 7 encore une fois, si le sous-ministre trouve qu'il n'y a pas de preuve matérielle, encore une fois, il y a appel au tribunal. J'estime donc messieurs, qu'il doit être obligatoire de soumettre toute cause de dumping au tribunal.

M. Dobbie: Ce n'est pas ce dont nous parlons. Nous discutons le problème du jury.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Je le sais. Mais le tribunal devrait se présenter au panel dans tous les cas.

M. Dobbie: Voilà l'interprétation que vous contestez; nous en cherchons une.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Je suis d'accord avec vous.

M. Dobbie: Nous différons d'opinion.

[Text]

Mr. Lambert: No, no, I agree with you.

Mr. Dobbie: ... and we are trying to get an interpretation on it.

Mr. Lambert: I am agreeing with you.

The Chairman: Mr. Arthur.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I believe that I misunderstood what probably Mr. Dobbie was saying in relation to the sentence structure of Clause 30. Now that I understand the point he was making I would agree with the interpretation that Mr. Lambert put to it, that the Tribunal in all cases prior to rendering an order or a finding will, in fact, seek the advice of the Panel.

I did not change my mind. I misunderstood the point you were making; that you were relating these only to the...

Mr. Dobbie: Only to subclauses 3 and 7.

Mr. Arthur: Yes.

Mr. Lang: You will note on the bottom of page 11 of our submission we point out that Clause 26 provides:

... the Tribunal may obtain the advice and assistance of any agency or department of the Government of Canada in the conduct of its business.

We are in agreement that the communications should work both ways and any government department should also be empowered to submit pertinent information or evidence to the Tribunal. What we object to is that the Tribunal, when it makes its order of finding, must take this to a Panel of public servants and get their full approval before any decision of dumping is made. We think this is entirely wrong in principle.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I think that there may be two misconceptions—misunderstandings—here. There may have been a misunderstanding on Mr. Arthur's part about Mr. Dobbie's objection, but it seems to me there may also be a misunderstanding on the part of the witness who has just spoken about the obligation of the Tribunal with respect to the Panel. I do not see anything in the clause creating the Panel which obliges the Tribunal to have the approval of the Panel before rendering a decision.

Mr. Lang: I am wrong in that respect. I should not have said, it must meet with their approval, but must seek its advice.

[Interpretation]

M. Lambert: Non, je suis d'accord.

M. Dobbie: Nous essayons d'interpréter.

M. Lambert: D'accord.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, j'ai dû mal comprendre ce que disait le comité au sujet de la phrase de l'article 30. Et maintenant que je comprends son point de vue, je suis d'accord avec l'interprétation de M. Lambert. Le tribunal, dans tous les cas, avant de prendre ordonnance ou de rendre conclusion, demandera conseil au jury.

Non, je n'ai pas changé d'avis, j'ai tout simplement compris ce que vous vouliez dire.

M. Dobbie: Je parle seulement des paragraphes 3 et 7.

M. Arthur: Oui.

M. Lang: En bas de la page 13 de notre mémoire français, vous verrez que nous signalons que l'article 26 prévoit que le tribunal pourra obtenir les conseils et l'aide de tout organisme, ministère ou département du gouvernement du Canada en vue de son bon fonctionnement. Nous sommes d'avis que le système de communication devrait fonctionner dans les deux sens et que tout ministère du gouvernement devrait soumettre les renseignements et preuves pertinentes au tribunal. Mais nous nous opposons à ce que le tribunal, pour rendre ordonnance ou prendre conclusion doive soumettre le cas à un jury de fonctionnaires, avant de décider. Ici je trouve que le principe est entièrement faux.

M. Gray: Monsieur le président, il y a peut-être deux points où nous ne nous comprenons pas: il y a l'intervention de M. Arthur en rapport avec l'objection de M. Dobbie, mais il y a aussi l'intervention du témoin qui vient de parler, et qui semble ne pas comprendre les obligations du tribunal à l'égard du jury. Pour ce qui est du jury, je ne vois rien qui oblige le tribunal à avoir son approbation avant de prendre sa décision?

M. Lang: J'avais tort, je l'admets, non pas approbation, mais avis.

[Texte]

Mr. Dobbie: Our main point there, Mr. Gray, was that this will lengthen the procedure.

Mr. Gray: I want to make clear that the point which you have raised with regard to the Panel has already been raised by other witnesses who have appeared. I think it is one well worthy of further consideration by the officials and by this Committee. That is my personal opinion, at the moment, anyway.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I think the only further comment I would like to make is to ensure that the witnesses understand that the Tribunal is under an overriding obligation to report within 90 days or to come to its order or finding within 90 days and this will govern its actions regardless of the requirements under Clause 30.

The Chairman: Are there any further questions? On page 12 we will find comments on Clause 33 which is on page 90 of the White Paper. Are there any comments on the submission by the CMA?

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Chairman, this question arose the other day when the textile industries were here and deals with the forms that an exporter would have to fill out. I would like to ask the government officials in what way does our form differ from that of the United States? The other day they informed us that there would be a new form coming before the Committee.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I did not follow Mr. Saltsman's point at all. I am sorry.

Mr. Saltsman: I will try to make it a little clearer. The other day we were discussing the type of form that an exporter has to fill out—the statement they have to fill out—and at that time it was indicated that a new form, or the form that is going to be approved, would be presented before the Committee for our examination. The Association has raised a point here regarding the kind of information that appears on United States forms as against that which appears on ours. I wonder if you would care to comment on that? To what extent will our forms be like the United States' one taking into consideration the kind of information that is reflected in the United States' forms. Am I not any clearer on that, Mr. Arthur?

• 1120

Mr. Arthur: It is not a question, Mr. Chairman that I can answer. Possibly Mr. Hind would like to comment on that.

[Interprétation]

M. Dobbie: La procédure en sera d'autant plus longue.

M. Gray: Le point que vous avez souligné, l'a déjà été par d'autres témoins. On pourrait peut-être demander aux fonctionnaires et au comité d'en discuter plus longuement.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je voudrais m'assurer que les témoins comprennent bien que le tribunal est formellement obligé de faire rapport dans les 90 jours ou de fermer son enquête dans les 90 jours.

Le président: A la page 12 du mémoire, nous avons des commentaires sur l'article 33 du Livre blanc. Nous parlons de la page 14 dans le texte français du mémoire, et de l'article 33 que l'on retrouve dans le Livre blanc. Auriez-vous des commentaires à faire sur la proposition de l'AMC?

M. Saltsman: On a parlé l'autre jour, monsieur le président, des formules que doit remplir l'exportateur; qu'est-ce qui les différencie de celles des États-Unis? De plus on nous a dit qu'une nouvelle formule devait être présentée au comité.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je n'ai pas compris du tout.

M. Saltsman: L'autre jour, nous parlions du genre de formule que doit remplir un exportateur, une sorte de déclaration qu'il doit remplir, et à ce moment-là, on a annoncé qu'une nouvelle formule serait adoptée, mais auparavant, soumise à l'examen du comité. L'Association soulève un point ici qui concerne les renseignements demandés sur les formules américaines comparativement à ceux demandés sur les formules canadiennes, et j'aimerais que vous donniez votre opinion à ce sujet. Dans quelle mesure nos formules seront-elles semblables à celles des Américains tenant compte du genre de renseignements qu'on y trouve? Est-ce que ceci est plus clair, monsieur Arthur?

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je ne peux pas répondre à cette question. M. Hind pourrait peut-être faire des commentaires à ce sujet.

[Text]

The Chairman: I know Mr. Hind made some comments at a previous meeting about a new form.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I recall the point raised on Tuesday by Mr. Saltsman, but it is my recollection that that did not relate to clause 33, rather it related to clause 34, which we are not looking at at the moment.

I did say, Mr. Chairman, that clause 34 requires the establishment of Regulations—these Regulations have not as yet been completed—and that I would undertake to table with the Committee draft Regulations which would include the prescribed form as soon as these Regulations are ready. I regret to say that I do not know what form is required by the U.S. customs authorities.

Mr. Arthur: I have no further comment on what Mr. Saltsman has raised.

Mr. Lambert: This may be something that was put in but is not really relevant to clause 33. It is a representation that there be included in the statement to be filed by the importer, an undertaking that he has not entered into any agreement with the exporter about rebates, or one thing or another like that.

I suppose it really deals with the form of entry because it is not something that is at the request of the Deputy Minister for information. Clause 33 in the general provisions deals with a debt to Her Majesty and that you can follow the goods. Then there is a subsequent statement in clause 34 asked by the Deputy Minister in the course of his investigation.

If he feels that the earlier entries have been unreliable, he may then ask the parties involved to make a statement under attestation or a statutory declaration which, of course, then makes it a little more difficult for him.

The Chairman: Mr. Hind would like to make a comment.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I did say on Tuesday last when this question or a similar question arose, that our current customs invoice forms and, I believe, our customs entry forms require certification by the exporter and the importer that the invoice and the entry exhibits the full and true facts of the case, and that there is no understanding between the importer and the exporter which would have an effect on the price, which is not disclosed by the documentation. The exporter takes the certificate and the importer for his part when he makes an entry takes a similar certificate.

[Interpretation]

Le président: Je sais que M. Hind a fait des commentaires au sujet des nouvelles formules lors d'une réunion antérieure.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, je me rappelle l'argument soulevé, jeudi, par M. Saltsman. Si je me rappelle bien, ceci n'avait pas trait au paragraphe 33, mais bien à l'article 34 que nous n'étudions pas dans le moment.

J'ai effectivement dit, monsieur le président, que l'article 34 exige l'établissement de règlements, ceux-ci ne sont pas tous prêts, que je m'engagerais à déposer au secrétariat du Comité, un avant-projet des règlements qui inclurait la formule prescrite aussitôt que les règlements seront prêts. Je regrette de dire que je ne sais pas quelle formule les autorités douanières américaines exigent.

M. Arthur: Je n'ai pas d'autres commentaires à ajouter aux observations de M. Saltsman.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): C'est une chose qui n'est pas directement liée aux dispositions de l'article 33, mais on pourrait peut-être faire des instances pour que dans la déclaration de l'importateur, il y ait également un engagement d'après lequel il dit qu'il n'a pas de contrat de rabais avec l'exportateur, ou quelque chose de semblable. Je suppose que ceci a, en fait, trait à la formule d'entrée, parce que ce n'est pas une chose qui est faite à la demande du sous-ministre pour obtenir des renseignements.

En étudiant ces dispositions générales, nous voyons que, tout d'abord l'article 33 dit que ceci réfère à une dette due et payable à Sa Majesté et que vous pouvez suivre les marchandises. Et il y a une déclaration subséquente à l'article 34 demandée par le sous-ministre au cours de son enquête. S'il estime que les renseignements donnés auparavant n'étaient pas exacts, il peut demander aux parties en cause de faire une déclaration statutaire, ce qui va lui compliquer les choses.

Le président: Monsieur Hind voudrait faire un commentaire.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, hier, j'ai dit, pardon, jeudi dernier, quand cette question a été soulevée ou une question analogue l'a été, que nos formules de factures douanières ou autres requièrent l'attestation par l'importateur et l'exportateur à l'effet que les renseignements fournis sont conformes à la vérité et qu'il n'y a pas d'entente entre l'importateur et l'exportateur qui pourrait affecter le prix qui n'est pas révélé par la documentation. Il y a un certificat pour l'exportateur et l'importateur, pour sa part, quand il fait une entrée, se sert d'un certificat semblable.

[Texte]

Mr. Saltsman: The difficulty with that provision, Mr. Hind, as was pointed out the other day, is that there seems to be some cloudiness about the legality and the effectiveness of that kind of a statement. I believe the position of the Association is to nail it down more specifically, because it has been pointed out on other occasions that one of the great difficulties is going to be in compensatory arrangements. This may frustrate the whole purpose of the anti-dumping legislation unless we do get assurance that side deals are not entered into and rebates are not given under some circumstances. I am sure your Department will be looking into this. I realize the Association has realized the importance of this matter by bringing it before us. However, we will have an opportunity to look at these forms when they are brought before the Committee.

• 1125

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I am not certain the matter that Mr. Saltsman has been referring to relates to the matter that the witnesses have raised in clause 33. As I understand their statement, they are interested in adding a clause covering reimbursement of dumping duties and that is the only item to which they direct this comment. Am I correct?

Mr. Chairman, the preliminary view of our legal counsel is that the liability for dumping duty is the liability of the importer or a debt which the importer owes to the Crown. This debt is there regardless of whether or not there would be a reimbursement or a possible reimbursement. I think this is the point that you are making, is it not? You want to ensure that that continues to be a liability of the importer?

The Chairman: Was that your understanding, Mr. Lang?

Mr. Lang: I believe Mr. Weeks of our delegation has run into this situation where the exporter guarantees if there is any assessment of dumping duty that he will reimburse the importer for any such dumping duty assessed. We want to make sure that the importer understands that this is his liability and that he may not go back and charge it to the exporter because if this happens, then the importer is not out any money and he can dump to his heart's content.

The Chairman: I understand Mr. Weeks would like to make some comments on that.

[Interprétation]

M. Saltsman: Comme on l'a dit l'autre jour, monsieur Hind, la difficulté provenant de cette disposition réside dans le fait qu'il y a quelque chose de vague quant à la légalité et l'efficacité de cette sorte de déclaration. Je crois que le but de l'Institut est d'aller plus avant dans l'exposé des détails, car on a mentionné qu'en d'autres occasions une des grandes difficultés sera l'arrangement compensatoire, que ceci peut faire échouer toute la législation sur l'antidumping, à moins d'avoir l'assurance qu'il n'y aura pas de sous-contrats ou que des rabais ne seront pas donnés en quelques circonstances. Je suis sûr que votre ministère étudiera la question, car encore une fois, c'est important et je constate que l'association s'est rendu compte de son importance en nous la soumettant. Mais nous aurons l'occasion d'étudier ces formules lorsqu'elles seront soumises au Comité.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je ne suis pas certain que la question mentionnée par M. Saltsman traite de ce qui a été soulevé par les témoins à l'article 33.

Si je comprends bien leurs observations ce qui intéresse l'Association des manufacturiers, c'est que l'on ajoute un article visant le remboursement éventuel des droits de dumping et ce n'est qu'à ce propos qu'ils ont fait ce commentaire. Ai-je raison?

Eh bien, monsieur le président, au début notre avocat-conseil trouvait que l'assujettissement à un droit de dumping était une responsabilité de l'importateur, ou une dette de l'importateur vis-à-vis la Couronne. Cette dette existe qu'il y ait ou non un remboursement éventuel. Ce que nous voulons ici, c'est veiller à ce qu'il y ait toujours une responsabilité incombant à l'importateur.

Le président: Monsieur Lang, est-ce que vous comprenez aussi? Je voulais le savoir, car le microphone n'enregistre pas les mouvements de tête ou de mains.

M. Lang: Je pense que M. Weeks, un de nos représentants, a connu une situation, où l'importateur garantit que sur une évaluation de droits de dumping, il va rembourser l'importateur pour tout droit de dumping évalué et nous voulons veiller à ce que l'importateur comprenne que c'est sa responsabilité et qu'il ne peut pas ensuite revenir et imposer le montant à l'exportateur, parce qu'autrement l'importateur peut faire du dumping à son tour tant qu'il voudra.

Le président: Je crois que M. Weeks a quelques commentaires à faire à ce sujet.

[Text]

Mr. C. C. Weeks (Vice President, Algoma Steel Corporation): Mr. Chairman, with respect to the second paragraph on page 12 which deals with clause 33 which says: "Section 53.52 of the United States Anti-dumping Regulations requires that the importer file a written statement to the effect that he has not entered into any agreement or understanding" and so on.

I have seen carbon copies of purchase orders for the importation from a foreign country on which it was spelled out that any dumping duty assessed later would be for the account of, or reimbursed by the exporter, despite this section 53.52. It was a condition of the purchase order.

Mr. Lang: I think this is important because as Mr. Hind pointed out, there is this statement on the customs invoice at the present time. The question of the assessment of dumping duty is really a transaction that occurs much after the transaction at customs and while there may not have been any intention of having any compensatory arrangement, the fact is that once an importer has been assessed dumping duty he is a little provoked and he goes back to the exporter and says, "look you got us into this mess, now you take us out of it and pay for it".

The Chairman: Mr. Arthur or Mr. Hind, do you have any comments?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I would say that under the existing law this would not be permitted. In other words, the collection of dumping duty is for the account of the importer and to the extent that the exporter might endeavour to reimburse the importer for the dumping duty, he would be creating a further dumping situation and we would continue to collect dumping duty up to a maximum of 50 per cent of the value of the goods. That is under the existing legislation.

The Chairman: What about this proposed legislation?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, this may be something that could be given some further study. I would like to draw to the attention of the Committee clause 33(1) on page 90 which reads as follows:

• 1130

33.(1) The true amount of duty or provisional duty payable to Her Majesty on any goods entered into Canada from

[Interpretation]

M. C. C. Weeks (vice-président, Algoma Steel Corporation): Monsieur le président, le deuxième paragraphe de l'article 33, à la page 12, ou l'article 53.52 des règlements américains antidumping exige de l'importateur une déclaration écrite à l'effet qu'il n'a conclu aucune entente ou arrangement en vertu duquel le fabricant, etc.

J'ai vu moi-même des copies au carbone d'offres de commandes de bons d'achat pour importation d'un pays étranger où on disait que tout frais de douane évalué plus tard serait porté au compte ou remboursé par l'exportateur, en dépit de cet article 53.52. C'était une condition du bon d'achat.

M. Lang: Je pense que c'est très important, parce que comme le dit M. Hind, il y a une déclaration sur la facture des douanes dans le moment.

La question d'évaluation des droits de dumping, c'est une transaction qui se produit bien longtemps après la transaction aux douanes et même s'il n'y a pas d'intention d'avoir des arrangements compensatoires, le fait demeure qu'une fois qu'on a établi des droits de dumping à un importateur, il ressent cela comme une provocation et il retourne voir l'exportateur pour dire: Bien, écoute, c'est toi qui nous as embarqués là-dedans, tu nous as mis dans le pétrin, sors-nous en. C'est toi qui vas payer pour.

Le président: Monsieur Arthur, monsieur Hind, avez-vous des commentaires?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, je vous dirai ceci. Aux termes de la loi actuelle, ceci ne serait pas permis. En d'autres mots, la perception des droits de douanes est à la charge de l'importateur, l'exportateur, à son tour, peut essayer de rembourser l'importateur pour ces droits de douane, mais en agissant ainsi, il empirerait la situation du dumping et on continuerait à percevoir des droits de dumping jusqu'à 50 p. 100 de la valeur des marchandises, ceci aux termes de la mesure législative actuelle.

Le président: Mais que pensez-vous de ce projet de loi?

M. Gray: Monsieur le président, ceci mériterait une étude plus approfondie, mais je voudrais attirer l'attention du Comité sur l'article 33. (1) a), page 90 du Livre blanc:

33. (1)(a) Le montant exact d'un droit, temporaire ou non, payable à Sa Majesté sur des marchandises entrées au Canada,

[Texte]

and after the time such duty should have been paid or accounted for constitutes a debt due and payable to Her Majesty, jointly and severally,

(a) by the person who was the owner of the goods at the time of the entry thereof, and

(b) by the importer of the goods,...

Mr. Lambert: That does not affect it at all. There is no denying the debt and there is no denying that the importer would pay the debt of the importing duty. Having paid it, he just turns around and goes to the exporter and says: "compensate". It is on this compensatory agreement that the representation is being made. I would think that the officials could consider the inclusion of a provision in the Bill that would make any such agreement null and void.

Mr. Lang: The first part of the clause that Mr. Gray just read says: "by the person who was the owner of the goods". As you are quite aware, there are substantial importations into Canada on consignment and those goods are the property of the exporter. He is the owner of those goods until they are sold in Canada.

Mr. Gray: It was my understanding, Mr. Chairman, that goods exported into Canada on consignment can also be subject to the application of anti-dumping duties. Am I correct in this Mr. Arthur?

Mr. Arthur: That is correct.

Mr. Dobbie: Mr. Chairman, this is still very fuzzy because this could happen. The compensation could take place long after the entry came in and if there is no penalty involved for compensation or any means of trying to track it, this clause could be useless.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, as I mentioned previously, the legal officers responsible for the drafting of the proposed Bill are of the view that that circumstance is covered. I would suggest that it may well be considered as a compensatory arrangement and it will apply where there has been an order or finding and where there has been an assessment. In other words, it falls within the provision of this Bill.

Mr. Harkness: I would think one of the chief fears lies in the detection of arrangements of this kind. What provisions or what means are there for detecting an affair of this sort?

[Interprétation]

à compter de la date où le droit aurait dû être payé ou comptabilisé, constitue une dette due et payable à Sa Majesté, solidairement,

a) par la personne qui était le propriétaire des marchandises à la date de leur entrée, et

b) par l'importateur des marchandises.

M. Lambert: Ayant payé la dette des droits d'importation, l'importateur peut se retourner et dire à l'exportateur de faire une compensation. Il y a une convention de compensation à cet effet. Je pense qu'on pourrait peut-être prévoir dans la loi que de telles ententes seront nulles et non avenues.

M. Lang: Pour ce qui est de l'article que vient de lire M. Gray, la première partie.

«... par la personne qui était le propriétaire des marchandises»

Il y a beaucoup d'importations au Canada, qui se font en consigne. Ces biens-là sont la propriété de l'exportateur qui est toujours propriétaire tant que les marchandises ne sont pas vendues au Canada.

M. Gray: Si je comprends bien, monsieur le président, les biens exportés vers le Canada et en dépôt dans ce pays sont soumis à l'application de droits antidumping. Est-ce juste, M. Arthur?

M. Arthur: C'est exact.

M. Dobbie: C'est très vague, monsieur le président, parce que la compensation peut se faire bien longtemps après l'entrée des marchandises, et si on ne prévoit pas de peines visant la compensation, si on ne fait pas les enquêtes nécessaires pour mettre à jour les cas de compensation, tout est annulé.

M. Arthur: Eh bien, monsieur le président, comme je l'ai déjà mentionné, l'agent juridique responsable de la présentation du projet de loi estime que ce cas est couvert et je pense qu'on pourrait le considérer comme une disposition compensatoire dans le cas où il y eut un ordre d'enquête et une évaluation. Ceci relèverait des dispositions du présent projet de loi.

M. Harkness: Quel moyen avez-vous pour déceler une affaire comme celle-ci?

[Text]

Mr. Gray: I would like to ask a further question. As a practical matter, what is the value of the statement called for by the United States regulations?

Mr. Lang: I think its value is that it is brought specifically to the attention of the importer that he is responsible for the payment of the dumping duty and he may not charge it back. If he does charge it back then he has committed a further offence and is liable to the penalties provided under the law. I think that by making the importer sign a declaration of this kind puts a flag in front of him and he knows if he should accept such reimbursement that he is leaving himself open to difficulty.

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, with respect to Mr. Harkness' question regarding the detection of these activities. First of all, we must remember that a certificate is taken by the exporter and the importer.

Secondly, this type of requirement has been in effect for many, many, many years so that importers are aware of what this means.

Thirdly, it has been made abundantly clear to people who have tried this that it is contrary to the law because we have assessed dumping duty in such circumstances.

Fourthly, we have in the Department of National Revenue, an investigational staff which makes a practice of auditing the records of importing companies and they are watching out particularly for transactions of this kind. When violations are found their regulations permit them to assess pretty heavy penalties.

• 1135

M. Émard: Monsieur le président.

Le président: Oui, monsieur Émard.

M. Émard: Avec le nouveau règlement, est-ce que les investigateurs, avec la nouvelle législation, est-ce que les investigateurs pourront avoir assez de temps pour retourner en arrière?

Le président: Voulez-vous recommencer, Monsieur Émard, s'il vous plaît?

M. Émard: Monsieur le président...

...croyez-vous que cette nouvelle législation donnera un laps de temps suffisant aux enquêteurs pour revenir en arrière?

[Interpretation]

M. Gray: Je pourrais peut-être poser une autre question sur le plan pratique. Que vaut la déclaration exigée par les règlements américains?

M. Lang: Je pense que sa valeur est de signaler à l'exportateur qu'il doit payer le droit de dumping, et qu'il ne peut pas réimputer ces frais à d'autres, et s'il le fait, il est responsable d'un nouveau délit, et il peut être frappé des sanctions prévues par la loi. Une déclaration comme celle-ci, c'est un avertissement, si vous voulez, qui fait qu'il sait que s'il accepte un remboursement comme celui-ci, il risque d'avoir des problèmes.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, au sujet de la question de M. Harkness, autrement dit, comment décelez-vous ces activités? Premièrement, nous devons nous rappeler qu'un certificat est pris par l'importateur et l'exportateur. Deuxièmement, ce genre d'exigence existe depuis bien des années, de sorte que les importateurs savent très bien ce que ça veut dire. Troisièmement, on a clairement dit aux gens qui avaient essayé ceci, que c'était contraire à la loi parce que nous avons fixé des droits de dumping dans ces cas. Quatrièmement, au ministère du revenu national, nous avons aussi un service d'enquête qui a l'habitude de vérifier les comptes des compagnies d'importation, et l'on fait très attention à des transactions comme celle-ci et lorsqu'on s'aperçoit qu'il y a eu une violation ou une infraction, le règlement permet au personnel de fixer des sanctions assez lourdes.

Mr. Émard: Under the new regulations would the investigators have enough time to start over—

The Chairman: Would you mind repeating that, Mr. Émard?

Mr. Émard: Do you feel this new legislation will give the investigators enough time to go back over the records?

The Chairman: Mr. Émard, would you please repeat your question.

Mr. Émard: I will repeat the question. Mr. Hind has just said that investigators have examined the books and files to find out what imports have been. With the new regulations you have set a deadline. You stated, for instance, 90 days, I think. Is this sufficient time for these investigators to check what is going on?

[Texte]

Le président: Voulez-vous recommencer, monsieur Émard?

M. Émard: Oui. Me référant à ce que M. Hind vient de dire à l'effet que certains investigateurs ont fouillé les dossiers pour vérifier ce qui s'est fait comme importations, je voudrais savoir si la limite de temps établie à 90 jours, par la nouvelle législation, sera suffisante pour faire les vérifications qui s'imposent?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I should make it clear that this investigational staff that I now speak of is not to be confused with the values investigators who are the people charged with the responsibility under the Deputy Minister of determining the normal value under the law. Quite apart from this staff, there is an independent group which is called the investigational staff whose job it is to audit the books and records of importers. This activity normally takes place more than 30 or 90 days after importation.

If I have not answered the question, I would be pleased to—

M. Émard: Oui, oui. Mais, dans un cas de délit, quel recours avez-vous contre ceux qui ont été trouvés coupables?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I do not have before me the scale of penalties, but my understanding is that not only do we collect the amount that was reimbursed, but there is an additional penalty that might be in the amount of the duty paid value of the goods, that is, the value of the goods plus the duty. So it is a rather substantial penalty that is collected from the importer who violated his trust.

Le président: Très bien, Monsieur Émard?

Gentlemen, now we will move to page 13, conclusions.

Mr. Lambert: Clause 34. I would think then, Mr. Chairman, that since the statement on which the information is being given is under statutory form and under oath, it should be sufficiently correct. If it had been a standard statement I would say, yes, there is no absolute penalty, but since the information is given under a declaration you must be absolutely careful. I would not go to the point of imposing upon the court or anyone called to adjudicate on this, "the intent to deceive". One of the most difficult things to do is to pin down "intent to deceive". If it were not under

[Interprétation]

M. Hind: Je signale qu'il ne faut pas se tromper sur le genre d'activités du personnel enquêteur; celui-ci ne doit pas être confondu avec celui qui enquête sur les évaluations et qui est responsable au sous-ministre lorsqu'il s'agit de déterminer la valeur normale aux termes de la Loi. En plus de ce personnel, il y a un groupe indépendant qui s'appelle le «service d'enquête» qui fait la vérification des livres et des dossiers des importateurs. Ceci prend plus que 30 ou 90 jours après.

Si je n'ai pas répondu à la question, veuillez me le dire?

Mr. Émard: Yes. But when there is a violation what recourse do you have against those who have been found guilty of irregularities?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, je n'ai pas sous les yeux l'échelle des sanctions, mais je crois comprendre que non seulement nous percevons le montant remboursé, mais il y a une amende supplémentaire qui peut-être de l'ordre de la valeur douanière payée pour les marchandises, soit la valeur des marchandises plus le droit. C'est un montant, donc, substantiel qui est demandé à l'importateur qui n'a pas respecté la confiance qu'on avait placée en lui.

The Chairman: Is that all right, Mr. Émard? Nous allons maintenant passer à la page 13, les conclusions.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Article 34. C'est l'article 34 dont vous parlez, n'est-ce pas? Monsieur le président, étant donné que ces renseignements sont fournis au moyen d'une déclaration statutaire et assermentée, vous devez faire bien attention. Si, au contraire, cette déclaration est faite sous une forme ordinaire, il n'y a pas de pénalisation.

Je n'irai pas jusqu'à dire qu'il faut imposer au tribunal quelqu'un qui est chargé de porter un jugement à l'effet qu'il y a eu intention de tromper. C'est très difficile à prouver. S'il n'y avait pas d'assermentation, oath I would agree with you, but since it is under oath, I am sorry, my view is as is in the legislation.

[Text]

The Chairman: You means you do not agree with the suggestion that "misleading" should replace the word "incorrect"?

• 1140

Mr. Lambert: No. The word "incorrect" should not be replaced by the word "misleading" in the clause.

The Chairman: Are there any comments, gentlemen, on the paragraphs dealing with the conclusion of the submission?

Mr. Gray: The Canadian Manufacturers' Association at the conclusion of their brief state and I quote:

We strongly urge therefore that a statement be made at this time by the Canadian Government re-affirming its policy that anti-dumping duties will be quickly and effectively applied whenever dumping or a threat of dumping is likely to cause injury to Canadian producers.

I would like to draw to the attention of the Association and this Committee that as far back as July 10, 1967, the Honourable Mitchell Sharp, then Minister of Finance, while discussing the results of the Kennedy Round stated:

I should like to reiterate that where dumping threatens injury to Canadian producers your government intends to see to it that in Canada anti-dumping duties are quickly and effectively applied.

I think he reiterated these views when he appeared before the Finance Committee earlier this year. I think I can say that nothing I am aware of has been said to lessen the significance of what I think is a very firm statement. I think it would be useful to put this statement on the record again at this time.

The Chairman: Mr. Danson, then Mr. Saltzman.

Mr. Danson: The word "producers" is used here and I think the interpretation of producers included workers in my understanding of previous proceedings. It is just not the manufacturer himself that might be injured, but it might be the economy through the employees.

[Interpretation]

je serais d'accord, mais comme il y en a une, je regrette, mais j'abonde dans le même sens que celui exprimé dans la législation.

Le président: Autrement dit, vous n'êtes pas d'accord avec la suggestion que le mot «misleading» soit remplacé par le mot «incorrect»?

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Non, je regrette que le mot «incorrect» soit remplacé par le mot «misleading» dans cet article.

Le président: Messieurs, avez-vous des commentaires sur la conclusion de ce mémoire?

M. Gray: L'Association des manufacturiers canadiens, à la conclusion de son mémoire, recommande fortement, et je cite:

Nous recommandons donc instamment que le gouvernement du Canada se hâte de faire une déclaration par laquelle il confirmera sa politique que des droits antidumping seront rapidement et efficacement appliqués chaque fois qu'un dumping ou une menace de dumping seront susceptibles de causer un préjudice aux producteurs canadiens.

Je voudrais attirer l'attention de l'Association et celle du Comité, que le 10 juillet 1967, l'honorable Mitchell Sharp, alors ministre des Finances, au cours d'une discussion sur les résultats des négociations Kennedy, a déclaré:

Je voudrais réitérer qu'en cas de menace de dommages par le dumping aux producteurs canadiens, votre gouvernement a l'intention de faire en sorte qu'au Canada des droits antidumping soient appliqués promptement et d'une façon efficace.

Et je crois qu'il a insisté de nouveau à ce sujet quand il est venu au Comité des Finances plus tôt cette année. Et je peux dire que rien à ma connaissance n'a été dit pour amoindrir la signification de ce que je crois être une déclaration très ferme. Je pense donc qu'il serait utile de déposer cette déclaration dans le procès-verbal maintenant.

Le président: Monsieur Danson et ensuite monsieur Saltzman.

M. Danson: Le mot «producteurs» est employé ici et je pense que l'interprétation de «producteurs» englobe les travailleurs, si je comprends bien les procès-verbaux précédents, alors ce n'est pas seulement le fabricant lui-même qui peut subir des dommages, mais l'économie à travers les employés.

[Texte]

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to direct this question to Mr. Dobbie. On the bottom of page 13 dealing with the conclusion, the brief states:

The Association has evidence that some wholly owned Canadian subsidiaries of foreign companies are giving consideration to discontinuing their manufacturing operations in Canada...

I wonder whether you are in a position to give the Committee the names of those companies for our information?

Mr. Dobbie: No, Mr. Saltsman, unfortunately I cannot in your first specific question.

Your second question pertaining to the last part of that paragraph, we have had many instances that a feeling still persists among Canadian importers and foreign exporters that after January 1, 1969, dumping into Canada will be legal, which, of course, is correct. You have to prove injury subsequent to the dumping, but the view is prevalent among our importers and exporters that it is going to be far easier to get goods into Canada come January 1, 1969. I have even had exporters in my office trying to sell me merchandise first, under the claim, come July 1, 1968, you do not have to worry, now it has become January 1, 1969.

We are extremely concerned that on January 1, there is going to be a hiatus because of this feeling in the country and abroad. We are very concerned about it and that is why we included this paragraph. I think it would help at this time if the government came out with a statement re-affirming, perhaps, what Mr. Sharp, the previous Minister of Finance, said. We are most concerned about this subject.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, if I could respond at least in part, it seems to me there are a number of firm statements which have been placed on the record by spokesmen of the government since the Kennedy Round package has been announced and these statements, representing the views of the government, have not been amended or withdrawn in any way. I think they stand with the same force and effect as when they are first expressed. It would seem to me the subsidiaries to whom you refer, and you refer to some wholly-owned Canadian subsidiaries as giving consideration to discontinuing their manufacturing operations in Canada in the belief that Canadian industry will receive very little protection from foreign dumping after January 1, are giving such consideration on the basis of what I would suggest is a mistaken belief.

[Interprétation]

M. Saltsman: Monsieur le président, je voudrais poser une question à M. Dobbie. Au bas de la page, dans la conclusion à la page 15, vous dites:

L'Association a des preuves que des filiales de propriété entièrement canadienne mais dont la société mère est étrangère envisagent de mettre fin à leur exploitation manufacturière au Canada...

Je me demandais si je pourrais poser la question suivante, à savoir si vous pouvez donner au Comité le nom de ces compagnies?

M. Dobbie: Non, malheureusement, monsieur Saltsman, je ne peux pas répondre à votre première question. Quant à la deuxième, pour ce qui est de la dernière partie de ce paragraphe, il arrive bien souvent qu'un sentiment persiste chez les importateurs canadiens et les exportateurs étrangers à l'effet qu'après le premier juillet, le dumping au Canada sera illégal, ce qui est exact. Vous devez prouver qu'il y a eu dommage par suite de dumping. Mais l'impression qui prévaut chez les importateurs et les exportateurs, c'est qu'il sera plus facile d'importer des marchandises au Canada à partir du 1<sup>er</sup> janvier 1969.

Des exportateurs sont venus chez moi me vendre leurs marchandises avant le 1<sup>er</sup> juillet 1968, en vertu du règlement, mais il n'y a aucune inquiétude à avoir, c'est maintenant reporté au 1<sup>er</sup> janvier 1969. J'ai l'impression qu'au 1<sup>er</sup> juillet il va y avoir un hiatus à cause de ce sentiment dans le pays et à l'étranger. Ceci nous inquiète beaucoup, c'est pourquoi nous avons inclus ce paragraphe et je pense que ça aiderait beaucoup maintenant, que le gouvernement fasse une déclaration pour affirmer de nouveau, peut-être, ce qu'a dit M. Sharp, l'ancien ministre des Finances. Ceci nous inquiète beaucoup.

M. Gray: Est-ce que je peux répondre en partie, monsieur le président?

Il me semble qu'il y a bien des déclarations très fermes qui ont été consignées au procès-verbal et faites par des porte-parole du gouvernement depuis un an, à la suite de l'annonce du résultat des négociations Kennedy et il me semble aussi que des déclarations représentant l'opinion du gouvernement n'ont pas été amendées ou modifiées et elles ont la même vigueur qu'au moment où elles furent faites.

Vous parlez de certaines filiales entièrement canadiennes qui envisagent de mettre fin à leur exploitation manufacturière au Canada, parce qu'elles ont l'impression que l'industrie canadienne sera très peu protégée du dumping après le 1<sup>er</sup> janvier. D'après moi, il faut porter une attention à la déclaration du

[Text]

• 1145

I would also like to draw the attention of the Committee to the comment made by the present Minister of Finance in the introduction to the White Paper we are studying. The first paragraph contains a sentence with respect to the negotiation that led to the Code which provided the basis for the draft bill. The Minister says:

Canadian representatives took an active part in negotiating the Code to ensure that, on the one hand, it protected Canadian exports against the unreasonable use of dumping duties by other countries and, on the other, would leave the Canadian Government free to apply dumping duties quickly and effectively when dumping caused or threatened injury to Canadian industry.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Well, Mr. Chairman, we have heard this, and of course it is the intention. However, you know there is a road to a certain place that is paved with good intentions. I think it boils down to—certainly the Government is determined—a question of how effective the action is going to be by the Department, and I am sure the Department is quite anxious to get on with it. It depends on the government, I think, and how soon they will set up the Tribunal because we have the problem that no order for dumping duty shall be made unless by the Tribunal. This Tribunal will have to be set up immediately and begin functioning. I think there may be a hiatus, but I do not think that people should be quite so apprehensive.

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, may I add that one might take note of a comment made by a member of our Committee, Mr. Danson, in the House the other day.

He spoke on the resolution to introduce the Bill to implement the Kennedy Round tariff changes. He was talking about the machinery program, and he reminded the House of the fears and apprehensions expressed by some segments of Canadian industry with respect to what might or might not have happened once the machinery program was operating.

Then he confirmed from his own experience as a manufacturer of machinery, as an importer, and as an exporter, that these fears have not been justified by experience, and that the machinery program, a rather novel concept of the Canadian customs administration, was working at quite a satisfactory level in a way that met with general approval from all concerned and particularly the interests of our country.

[Interpretation]

ministre des Finances actuel dans l'introduction du Livre blanc que nous étudions. Le premier paragraphe contient la phrase suivante, au sujet de la négociation qui a amené le Code qui a servi de base au projet de Loi. Voici ce que dit le ministre:

Les représentants canadiens prirent une part active à sa négociation, afin de s'assurer, d'une part, que les exportations canadiennes soient protégées contre un recours excessif aux droits antidumping dans d'autres pays et d'autre part, que le gouvernement canadien soit laissé libre d'imposer rapidement et efficacement des droits antidumping, lorsque le dumping cause ou menace de causer un préjudice à l'industrie canadienne.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Nous avons entendu ceci et nous savons que c'est une déclaration d'intention. Nous savons aussi qu'à un certain endroit, il y a un chemin pavé de bonnes intentions. Je veux savoir dans quelle mesure les dispositions du ministère seront efficaces. Je pense que les mesures dépendent entièrement du gouvernement et de la rapidité avec laquelle il va constituer son tribunal.

Nous avons le problème que pas un seul décret de frais de dumping ne sera énoncé, sinon par le tribunal. Le tribunal doit être constitué rapidement et doit commencer à fonctionner. C'est vrai qu'il peut y avoir une lacune, mais les gens n'ont pas raison d'être aussi appréhensifs.

M. Gray: Je pourrais noter un commentaire qu'un membre du Comité, M. Danson, a fait en Chambre l'autre jour. Il parlait de la résolution pour introduire le projet de loi pour appliquer les changements tarifaires du Kennedy Round. Il parlait d'un programme et rappelait à la Chambre les craintes et les appréhensions exprimées par certains secteurs de l'industrie canadienne, au sujet de ce qui arriverait ou de ce qui n'arriverait pas une fois que le système commencera à fonctionner.

A partir de son expérience comme manufacturier de machines, importateur et exportateur, il a déclaré que le passé ne justifie pas de telles craintes. La nouvelle conception de l'administration des douanes fonctionne très bien. Elle rencontre l'approbation générale de ceux qui sont concernés et sert les intérêts de notre pays.

[Texte]

It is my feeling that with the type of effective administration referred to by Mr. Lambert, which I think is the type intended by the officials and which is being confirmed by them with each successive answer they give, apprehensions of the type the witnesses have mentioned to us will not be borne out any more than the apprehensions that were expressed before the introduction of the machinery program which is now operating in quite a satisfactory manner.

Perhaps it might be noted that I am on this Committee not merely as a member of the House but in what might be at least a semi-official capacity. Also, perhaps, the comments I have made bringing to the attention of the Committee and the witnesses statements made by ministers on behalf of the government might help to provide the assurance of re-affirmation of policy implicit in these statements.

The Chairman: No doubt, too, Mr. Gray there will be no objection from the present Minister of Finance to re-affirming what has been already said about the Government's intentions.

Mr. Gray: I certainly think he would have no objection and perhaps in his absence my comments might help at least to fill that requirement.

The Chairman: Have you any other questions on the conclusion, gentlemen? If not, I thank the CMA for their submission and comments made by Messrs. Dobbie, Lang and Weeks.

Mr. Dobbie: Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the CMA and my colleagues I wish to thank you and members of your Committee very much. We appreciate this hearing and hope that in some way we have been helpful in our remarks.

The Chairman: There is no doubt about that, Mr. Dobbie.

Gentlemen, we are adjourning to this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock when we will have before us the submission from Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, Canadian General Electric Company Limited, Canadian Westinghouse Limited. Thank you.

AFTERNOON SITTING

The Chairman: Gentlemen, we have before us a representative of Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, known as CEMA, and representatives of Canadian General Electric Company Limited and Canadian

[Interprétation]

D'après moi, avec le genre d'efficacité de l'administration dont M. Lambert a parlé, les hauts fonctionnaires confirment que les appréhensions, qui nous ont été mentionnées, ne seront pas plus justifiées que les appréhensions qui existaient avant l'introduction du programme visant les machines. Ce programme fonctionne très bien.

On pourrait peut-être noter aussi que je suis membre du Comité non seulement à titre de député, mais aussi à titre de spécialiste semi-officiel. Peut-être que les commentaires que je fais, en signalant à l'attention du Comité et des témoins des déclarations faites par les ministres au nom du gouvernement, pourraient aider à réaffirmer la politique implicite dans ces déclarations.

Le président: Il n'y aura pas d'objection de la part du ministre des Finances actuel, si on vous demande de réaffirmer ce que l'on a déjà dit quant à l'intention du gouvernement.

M. Gray: Il me semble qu'il n'y aura pas d'objection. Peut-être qu'en son absence, mes commentaires pourront aider à remplir cette exigence.

Le président: Avez-vous d'autres questions, messieurs? Je remercie l'Association des manufacturiers canadiens de son mémoire et je remercie messieurs Dobbie, Lang et Weeks de leurs observations.

M. Dobbie: Monsieur le président, au nom de l'AMC et de mes collègues, je veux vous remercier, vous et les membres du Comité. Nous sommes très heureux d'avoir pu témoigner devant vous et nous espérons que notre présentation sera utile d'une façon ou de l'autre.

Le président: Il n'y a pas de doute là-dessus. Messieurs, nous ajournons jusqu'à 3 h. 30, ou environ, cet après-midi. Vous serez saisis des mémoires de la Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, de la Compagnie générale électrique du Canada Limitée et de la Canadian Westinghouse Company Limited. Merci.

RÉUNION DE L'APRÈS-MIDI

Messieurs, nous avons devant nous les représentants de la Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, ou CEMA, les représentants de la Compagnie générale électrique du Canada, et de la Canadian Westinghouse

[Text]

Westinghouse Co. Ltd. I understand that Mr. Rapsey has some comments to make before the Committee on their submission. I would ask you gentlemen to speak to the microphone, please.

• 1555

Mr. K. H. Rapsey (President of CEMA and President Allen-Bradley Canada Ltd.): Would you wish me, Mr. Chairman, to first introduce the members of our delegation?

The Chairman: On my right is Mr. Rapsey and I will ask him to introduce the other gentlemen with him.

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, on my right is Mr. Samis, the General Manager of the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association. We then have Mr. McArthur, Assistant to the President of Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd. and Mr. A. F. Johnston, Manager of Corporate Relations. If any of you are working on the list I am, the title has been changed recently to Manager of Corporate Relations, Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. We have a number of others who are here to be of assistance or to answer questions as may be necessary.

Sitting behind me on my right, I have, first of all, Mr. R. S. Sukloff, Manager of Customs, Corporate Department, Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd.; then Mr. T. A. Lindsay, President of Phillips Cables Limited; Mr. W. J. Cheesman, President, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.; Mr. J. H. Houser, General Manager, Purchases and Traffic, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.; Mr. J. H. Price, Vice-President of Sales, Canada Wire & Cable Co. Ltd.; Mr. R. D. Pollock, Executive Assistant to the President, Canada Wire & Cable Co. Ltd. and Mr. R. Noonan, President and General Manager, Pioneer Electric (Ontario) Limited.

That is our delegation, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Thank you, Mr. Rapsey.

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, I do have a preliminary remark or series of remarks that I would like to make. When composing the brief for the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, we did make a deliberate effort to keep it that way—brief. It is, therefore, somewhat difficult to make a summary of a summary. Our salient points, however, are these.

This Association represents an industry that, in 1967, has an output valued at $2.1 billion and which employed 139,000 Canadians in that year. This Association believes in

[Interpretation]

Company Limited. Je crois comprendre que M. Rapsey a quelques commentaires à faire devant le comité, au sujet du mémoire présenté. Messieurs, je vous demande de vous adresser directement dans les microphones.

M. K. H. Rapsey (président de CEMA et président, Allen-Bradley Canada Ltd.): Monsieur le président, désirez-vous que je présente d'abord les membres de ma délégation?

Le président: Pardon. A ma droite, monsieur Rapsey, qui va présenter les gens qui l'accompagnent.

M. Rapsey: A ma droite, M. Samis, gérant général de la Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, M. McArthur, adjoint au président de Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., et M. A. F. Johnson, gérant des relations corporatives, de la Compagnie générale électrique du Canada Limitée. Aussi, plusieurs représentants qui sont ici comme conseillers ou pour répondre à vos questions, si nécessaire. Derrière moi, à ma droite, M. R. S. Sukloff, gérant des douanes, corporations et service de planification de la Compagnie Générale Électrique du Canada Ltée, M. T. A. Lindsay, président de Phillips Cables Limited, M. W. J. Cheesman, président de Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd, M. J. H. Houser, gérant général des achats et du trafic, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd, M. J. H. Price, vice-président des ventes, Canada Wire & Cable Co. Ltd., M. R. D. Pollock, adjoint au président, de la Canada Wire & Cable Co. Ltd., M. R. Noonan, président et gérant général de Pioneer Electric (Ontario) Ltd.

Voilà notre délégation, monsieur le président.

Le président: Je vous remercie, monsieur Rapsey.

M. Rapsey: Monsieur le président, j'aimerais vous présenter une série de commentaires. En préparant le mémoire de la Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, nous nous sommes efforcés d'en faire un mémoire très bref. Il est difficile de faire le résumé d'un résumé, mais voici les points saillants.

Cette association représente une industrie qui en 1967 avait un rendement de deux milliards cent millions de dollars, et employait cent trente neuf mille Canadiens.

[Texte]

expanding international trade for the benefits that flow from it, but it must be trade which is fair and equitable to all competitors. In particular, we contend that dumping is a destructive practice leading eventually to curtailment of world trade.

This Association has examined the proposed legislation and it is our opinion that it meets the obligations of Canada under GATT. Also, that it provides the framework for the protection of Canadian industry against the unfair practices of injurious dumping.

With reference to that new term "injurious" we submit that the Deputy Minister in his preliminary determinations should consider that injury is anything that adversely affects one or more of the following: the maintenance and growth of profitable markets and the efficient utilization—and I stress the word "efficient"—of capital, manpower and production facilities in Canada. However, we are pleased to note that no detailed definition of "injury" has been included in the Bill. Effective legislation requires equally effective enforcement. This is especially true of this proposed legislation.

As far as our industry is concerned, we contend that dumping has been taking place and that it has seriously injured this industry. For example, to the degree of about 35 per cent, our market for power generation and transmission equipment has disappeared to off-shore competitors. Prices quoted have been on the average 48 per cent of the prices quoted by those off-shore competitors in their own markets. These are the very practices which are condemned in Article VI of GATT. The dual pricing practices of the foreign competitors are supported by dual costing operations or tax rebates and other subsidies or drawbacks. The result of these tactics has been the loss of markets referred to earlier.

•1600

Canadian firms have, therefore, attempted to enter the markets of these other countries, for example, the United Kingdom, to replace the lost domestic business. However, hidden non-tariff barriers have defeated such initiative and have prevented even an invitation to bid in the utility business in that country. These are the realities of the workaday world of international trade and Canada must not ignore or forget them.

Other countries are eager to, as it is called, export their unemployment to Canada, but they are not so eager to grant reciprocity to Canada. Therefore, the administrative bodies and the Tribunal must be staffed by individuals with a broad knowledge of the realities of world trade.

[Interprétation]

Cette association croit qu'il faut étendre le commerce international et profiter de ses avantages, mais de façon juste et équitable pour tous les concurrents. Nous estimons, particulièrement, que le dumping est une mauvaise pratique qui finalement nuit au commerce international. Notre association a étudié le projet de législation, et, à notre avis, il est conforme aux engagements du Canada aux termes de GATT. Elle prévoit aussi certaines garanties qui protègent l'industrie canadienne contre les pratiques injustes du dumping préjudiciable.

Pour ce qui est du mot «préjudiciable», nous suggérons au sous-ministre de considérer comme préjudiciable, tout ce qui peut affecter l'un ou plusieurs des facteurs suivants: la croissance du marché, l'utilisation efficace, et j'insiste sur «efficace», l'«utilisation efficace» des capitaux, main-d'œuvre et de la productivité au Canada.

Toutefois, nous sommes heureux de noter qu'aucune définition du mot «préjudice» n'a été inscrite dans la loi.

Une loi efficace doit être appliquée efficacement, spécialement dans le cas de la proposition de loi antidumping. Notre industrie, par exemple, a perdu, à cause de pratiques de dumping, 35 p. 100 de son marché de générateurs et d'équipement de transmission d'électricité, aux mains de concurrents étrangers. Leurs prix de vente au Canada étaient en moyenne évalués à 48 p. 100 de leurs prix de vente locaux.

C'est ce que condamne l'article 6 de GATT. Cette pratique de doubles prix de nos concurrents est appuyée par le double coût des opérations et des rabais d'impôts et autres subventions aux retraits. Cette tactique a occasionné la perte des marchés dont j'ai parlé tantôt.

Les entreprises canadiennes ont donc essayé d'entrer sur le marché de ces autres pays, comme le Royaume-Uni, pour compenser les marchés domestiques perdus. Toutefois, des barrières non tarifaires ont empêché une telle initiative, et ont même empêché une invitation à des appels d'offres sur le marché des services publics au Canada. Voilà les réalités du commerce international et le Canada ne doit pas les oublier ou les ignorer.

Certains pays exportent leur chômage au Canada mais ils ne sont certainement pas prêts à nous accorder beaucoup d'avantages en retour. Les organismes administratifs des tribunaux doivent être composés de gens qui connaissent très bien les normes des échanges internationaux.

[Text]

Our concerns are also related to the broad economic and social objectives of Canada. We are concerned with the fact that we must have a climate that is conducive to the continued expansion of industry. Only in this way will we be able to provide the jobs for our better educated craftsmen, industrial workers and professional men and women who will be joining the labour force in increasing numbers in the years ahead.

With all this in mind we recommend enactment of this legislation and we urgently remind the government of the day and all future governments of the need to provide the competence to enforce this legislation aggressively.

This, I think, is the gist of our submission, Mr. Chairman. I would ask you whether it would be possible, in view of the relative shortness of our printed submission, to have it attached to the minutes so that it will be available for those who will be reading the proceedings of this Committee.

The Chairman: Mr. Rapsey, it has always been the practice of this Committee that any brief sent to the Committee is printed as an appendix to the Minute of Proceedings and Evidence.

Mr. Rapsey: I see. Thank you Mr. Chairman. This delegation, of course, stands ready to answer any questions on our brief or related to the electrical manufacturing industry.

The Chairman: Yes, before accepting any questions from our members we have also with us Mr. Arthur from the Department of Finance and Mr. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister, the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise). I was asked for your help, gentlemen of the Committee. When one of your colleagues has the floor and you wish to ask a question, will you raise your hand? This will help our technicians in their work. I recognize Mr. Lambert, followed by Mr. Hales.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Bearing in mind what was said at the hearings last January by the representatives of CEMA and bearing in mind what you have said today, there is an inference that dumping has taken place notwithstanding the activities of the Department of National Revenue. How much of this loss of market that you attribute—you said 35 per cent—has been lost as the result of what you say is dumping, because we are

[Interpretation]

Il faut aussi tenir compte des objectifs économiques et sociaux beaucoup plus vastes du Canada. Nous sommes intéressés par le fait qu'il y a un climat qui amène l'expansion constante de l'industrie. C'est seulement de cette façon que nous pourrions fournir les emprunts nécessaires pour avoir des employés, des ouvriers, des professionnels mieux éduqués, hommes et femmes, qui vont dans le monde du travail et augmenter les effectifs du travail dans les années à venir.

Tenant compte de ceci, nous demandons que l'on applique des mesures législatives et nous rappelons au gouvernement actuel, et à tous les autres gouvernements qui lui succéderont, qu'il faut appliquer de façon agressive cette mesure législative.

Et voilà la liste de nos propositions, monsieur le président. Je voudrais vous demander s'il serait possible, étant donné que notre mémoire écrit est assez court, de le faire ajouter à l'annexe au procès-verbal pour rendre service aux membres du comité?

Le président: Tout mémoire envoyé au Comité est habituellement ajouté en annexe aux procès-verbaux et au compte rendu.

M. Rapsey: Merci, monsieur le président. Notre délégation est évidemment disposée à répondre à toutes les questions que vous voudrez poser sur ce mémoire, ou aux questions qui auraient trait à l'industrie électrique.

Le président: Avant d'accepter des questions, je vous signale que M. Arthur, du ministère des Finances, et M. Hind, sous-ministre adjoint du Revenu national sont ici et je demanderais donc aux membres du Comité, lorsqu'un collègue a la parole et qu'un de vous désire poser une question, de bien vouloir lever la main afin de permettre aux techniciens de mieux accomplir leur travail. Je donne la parole à M. Lambert qui sera suivi de M. Hales.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Tenant compte de ce qu'on a dit au cours de l'audience de janvier dernier et des affirmations des représentants de CEMA, et de ce que vous dites aujourd'hui, je crois comprendre que le dumping s'est produit nonobstant les activités du ministère du Revenu national. Quelle part de cette perte de marché, vous dites que 35 p. 100 a été perdu à cause du dumping.

[Texte]

concerned here with dumping. If it is somebody who with a pencil that is a little sharper, would you recognize that as legitimate competition in the same way that you sharpen your own pencils? However, we are interested in dumping. If it is prevalent now, can we stop it under the new legislation or do we have to take other steps?

• 1605

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, this raises a question of pricing practices which I referred to briefly and there is some mention of it in our presentation. I think it would help the Committee if we could at this time present a chart which we had prepared and which we have copies of to hand out, but we also have a large one which I think we can work from in this meeting. This chart shows the arithmetic of this sort of thing—the type of thing that does happen. With your permission, Mr. Chairman, I would like to call upon Mr. McArthur to present the chart at this time and then I think other members may have some detailed examples of exactly of what Mr. Lambert is talking about.

Mr. A. A. McArthur (Member of CEMA Trade Committee and Assistant to the President, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.): Thank you, first of all, Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out that we made up this chart to help ourselves analyse the sort of situation that we would be up against if the proposed legislation became law together with what Regulations have been made available to date.

I would like, first of all, to point out that this is an example of several alternative transactions which could occur for one product. We have assumed a figure of 100 as being the fair market value of this product in the country of origin and we further assumed that if that is the fair market value in the country of origin and it is a continuing business, that this is profitable to those who are engaging in the business and selling at that price.

On the left hand side of the chart we have fair market value on the first line; then we have a line called normal value; we have have a line called export price and a line called margin of dumping. I hope you will not feel that I am trying to inform you people who are much more knowledgeable about the techniques, but merely for clarity am I going through this.

[Interprétation]

On parle de dumping ici. Si quelqu'un a un crayon un peu plus aiguisé, diriez-vous que c'est de la concurrence en regard de la façon dont vous aiguisiez votre crayon? Mais ce qui nous intéresse, c'est le dumping. Si c'est ce qui prévaut à l'heure actuelle, pouvons-nous y mettre un frein au moyen de la nouvelle législation, ou devons-nous prendre d'autres mesures?

M. Rapsey: Ce sont les établissements des coûts qui entrent en jeu ici; nous en avons parlé dans notre mémoire et ça pourrait peut-être aider le Comité que nous présentions le tableau que nous avons préparé et dont nous avons des exemplaires que nous pouvons distribuer. Mais, nous avons aussi un plus grand format dont nous pouvons nous servir en ce moment et qui démontre comment nous faisons nos calculs. Et, avec votre permission, monsieur le président, je vais demander à M. McArthur de nous présenter cette carte ou ce tableau. Ensuite, peut-être que d'autres membres du Comité pourront avoir des exemples plus détaillés sur le sujet soulevé par M. Lambert.

M. A. A. McArthur (Adjoint au président de Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., et membre du conseil CEMA): Merci, monsieur le président. Tout d'abord, je voudrais vous faire remarquer que nous avons fait ce tableau pour nous aider à analyser les différentes situations que nous aurons à affronter si l'avant-projet devenait Loi, de même que les règlements qui sont déjà en vigueur aujourd'hui.

J'aimerais, tout d'abord signaler que, vous avez ici un exemple de plusieurs transactions qui peuvent se produire pour un tel produit. Nous avons assumé, au départ, que le chiffre de 100 était la juste valeur commerciale de ce produit dans le pays d'origine.

Nous avons aussi posé comme hypothèse que si c'était la valeur juste et équitable d'un produit dans un pays d'origine et que c'est une entreprise constante c'est-à-dire que l'on continue la fabrication qui est profitable pour les gens qui sont dans cette entreprise et qui vendent à ce prix.

A gauche du tableau, nous avons la juste valeur sur le marché sur la première ligne, ensuite, nous avons une autre ligne, valeur normale, troisièmement: prix d'exportation, ensuite, marge de dumping. J'espère que vous ne trouverez pas que j'essaie de parler à des gens qui sont beaucoup plus renseignés que moi au point de vue technique, mais c'est simplement pour clarifier les choses que j'agis ainsi.

[Text]

The fair market value and the export price, of course, will appear on the customs documents. The normal value is a matter for determination by the Deputy Minister. The margin of dumping by definition in the proposed legislation is the excess of normal value over export price.

I would like to explain some of the other things in a few moments. The first column in blue represents the transaction where the fair market value is 100. We are giving the benefit for the purposes of this exposition of any possible allowances that might be considered, bearing in mind the Regulations are not yet complete. We are giving the benefit to the exporter that the normal value might be 90 relative to the 100 and we will say that the exporter is selling at 90. There will be no margin of dump. There will be no anti-dumping duty. We have for this particular example used 15 per cent as the current rate of duty. The import duty would be $15.00, and $90.00 export price plus $15.00 is $105.00 the landed cost.

The two middle columns are examples of the kind of dump foreign pricing or the arithmetic of it that can occur with intermediate types of goods. We are, as one of the members of the Committee pointed out, up against this type of thing all the time. You will see there that the export price is $20 less than the normal value. The margin of dumping is $20 and unless under the new law injury to the production of like goods is found by the Tribunal that order will have a landed cost in Canada of $85. We would consider that that might be an order lost to Canadian production.

● 1610

In the next column, however, if the Tribunal were to bring in a finding of injury, the anti-dump duty of $20 would apply and the total would come up to $105 as the landed cost.

The two right hand columns are an example of the incremental costing and pricing which can occur, particularly in the heavy apparatus end of the business. These heavy apparatus businesses all over the world are highly cyclical. In a number of countries they are an extremely important matter at the federal level.

There are, as has been explained, I think, arrangements whereby the national supply of power must be guaranteed and, therefore, the producers must provide the capability and

[Interpretation]

La valeur du marché juste et le prix d'exportation évidemment sont indiqués sur les documents aux douanes. La valeur normale doit être déterminée par le sous-ministre. La marge de dumping, par définition dans le projet de loi, est l'excédent de la valeur normale par rapport au prix d'exportation. Je vais expliquer ça tout à l'heure. La première colonne en bleu représente la transaction où la valeur du marché est 100. Nous donnons le bénéfice, pour les objectifs de cet exposé, à toute allocation qui pourrait être considérant, nous rappelant que le projet de loi n'est pas encore terminé.

Donc, nous donnons l'avantage à l'exportateur, que la valeur du marché puisse être 90, relativement à 100, et nous dirons que l'exportateur vend à 90. Il n'y a pas de marge de dumping et pas de droits d'antidumping. Et ici nous nous servons, à titre d'exemple de 15 p. 100, comme étant le taux courant du droit. Le droit d'entrée serait de $15; prix d'exportation totaux une fois le prix arrivé au pays importateur $90, plus $15, donne un total de $105, une fois le produit livré au pays.

Aux deux colonnes suivantes, vous avez l'exemple du genre d'établissement des prix de dumping étranger avec les biens intermédiaires de consommation. Certains membres du Comité ont déjà signalé que nous devons affronter ce genre de situation constamment. Ici vous voyez que le prix d'exportation est de $20 de moins que la valeur normale. La marge de dumping est de 20 et, à moins qu'avec la nouvelle loi, le tribunal déclare qu'il y a un préjudice à la production de telles marchandises le prix, au Canada, sera de 85. D'après nous, ce serait une perte pour la production canadienne.

Dans la colonne suivante cependant, si le tribunal devait trouver qu'il y a un préjudice, les droits antidumping de 20 s'appliqueraient et le total serait de 105 une fois rendu au pays.

Dans les deux colonnes de droite maintenant, vous avez un exemple de l'augmentation du coût et du prix, qui peut se produire surtout dans les industries d'appareils lourds de l'entreprise. Ces entreprises d'équipement lourd suivent un cycle, partout dans le monde. Dans bien des pays, ce sont des choses très importantes au niveau fédéral.

Comme on vous l'a expliqué, il y a des ententes d'après lesquelles l'approvisionnement national de pouvoirs doit être garanti. Par conséquent, les producteurs doivent four-the capacity to supply this equipment during the years of peak requirement for a new plant.

[Texte]

In years when these peak new suppliers are not required, they will have a considerable amount of excess capacity and they are very anxious to use this up.

The $100 fair market value is a profitable figure to them. They can, therefore, price down to what we call direct product cost, that is to say, the material cost, the direct labour input for the particular order and only that additional variable overhead which occurs because of taking that additional order. The number in the order of the export price shown there of $50 is quite in order and they are still not losing money incrementally.

If we were able to prove injury or the Tribunal found injury, the final landed cost would be $105. If not, it would be $65. I think that explains the arithmetic.

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, we have not answered Mr. Lambert's question. I was going to ask Mr. Samis to do so, but is there some question from the Committee directly on this chart before I turn it over to Mr. Samis?

Mr. Hales: I think my question would be in the line opposite export price. In the second last column on the left, the export price of $50. I would like to know how they arrived at this, how it would pass our customs officials as being all right and what devices, tax structures or other things were used in these countries to arrive at this export price.

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Hales, I do not think it would pass our customs and I think what I am going to ask for in a further report will explain that. If you would not mind leaving that question for a moment.

Le président: Oui, M. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Even if there were dumping duty imposed, when you get into the heavy equipment which is not of a series but, say, for a plant and it is a multi-million dollar item—it is on a tender basis; there is a firm contract—the Canadian purchaser is usually a public authority or a private utility company who holds to that price. Now, regardless of whether dumping duty is applied or not, that dumping duty will be paid by the person who supplies, surely, nir la capacité et la possibilité de fournir ces équipements pendant les années d'exigence de pointe d'une nouvelle usine. Les années où ces nouveaux besoins ne sont pas nécessaires, il y aura une capacité excédentaire considérable et on tient beaucoup à en tirer profit.

[Interprétation]

Le $100 de la valeur du marché normal est rentable pour eux.

Donc, il faut tenir compte du coût direct du produit, c'est-à-dire le coût du matériel, de l'apport direct de main-d'œuvre pour produire un bien de consommation. Les frais supplémentaires variables se présentent seulement lorsqu'on a des commandes supplémentaires. Ensuite, pour les prix d'exportation, on indique 50 et les fabricants ne perdent pas d'argent, si on tient compte de l'accumulation.

Si on peut prouver qu'il y a un préjudice, le coût final de l'exportation serait 105, sinon, il serait de 65. Je pense que cela explique à peu près le calcul.

M. Rapsey: Monsieur le président, nous n'avons pas répondu à la question de M. Lambert. Je voulais demander à monsieur Samis de le faire. Je veux savoir si les membres du comité ont des questions à poser au sujet du tableau, avant que l'on passe à M. Samis.

M. Hales: J'ai une question à poser sur la ligne opposée au prix d'exportation, dans l'avant-dernière colonne, où le prix d'exportation est de $50. Je voudrais savoir comment ils sont arrivés à ceci, et comment les agents des douanes pourront l'accepter. Je voudrais savoir exactement quelle structure fiscale est utilisée dans ces pays pour arriver à ce prix d'exportation.

M. Rapsey: M. Hales, je ne pense pas que ce serait accepter aux douanes. Ceci sera expliqué dans un prochain rapport que je demanderai. Si vous voulez retenir votre question pour l'instant.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Lambert?

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Même s'il y avait des droits de dumping, l'équipement lourd pour une entreprise est une affaire de plusieurs millions de dollars. Il y a un appel d'offres et un contrat en bonne et due forme. L'acheteur canadien, qui est une autorité publique ou une entreprise privée, est prêt à payer tel prix. Que le droit de dumping s'applique ou non, ce droit de dumping sera payé par la personne qui fournit l'équipement, sans aucun doute. La commande est perdue pour le and the order is lost. In so far as the Canadian manufacturer is concerned the business has gone anyway.

[Text]

• 1615

The Chairman: Mr. Gillespie?

Mr. Gillespie: Did you say, Mr. Lambert, that the exporter would be paying it or the importer would be paying the duty?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I would say the importer would be paying under a firm contract.

Mr. Gillespie: I would then like to direct the question to Mr. Arthur or Mr. Hind for clarification.

The Chairman: Mr. Hind?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, if the export price is f.o.b. point of direct shipment to Canada, all duties and taxes including dumping duties would be the responsibility of the importer. We would look to the importer for the payment of the dumping duty and if the importer were to charge this back to the exporter, he would merely dig himself in deeper as far as the application of dumping is concerned.

In other words, to the extent that the exporter continued to pay all the dumping duty that we charged the importer we would continue to build up a greater liability to the maximum that is allowed under the current law, which is 50 per cent of the value of the goods.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): What is the practice? Is it really f.o.b. the point of export, or is it usually f.o.b. the delivery site?

Mr. Hind: That, Mr. Chairman, is a matter for the exporter and the importer to arrange. I think it is done both ways in actual fact.

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, to avoid perhaps unfairly putting the Department on the spot I would like at this time to ask Mr. Johnston to make a comment on this and to explain why this is something where, perhaps, the Department may not yet be involved.

Before doing so, though, I would like to make one personal comment. You will notice from this chart where dumping duty is applied that the total landed cost comes back to where it would have been if there had been no dump. I point that out merely because there seems to be a certain tendency to look on dumping duty as an added penalty, manufacturier canadien et l'entreprise est perdue.

[Interpretation]

M. Gillespie: Avez-vous dit, M. Lambert, que l'exportateur paierait le droit, ou bien l'importateur?

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): L'importateur paierait selon un contrat rigide.

M. Gillespie: Je voudrais poser une question à M. Arthur ou à M. Hind.

Le président: M. Hind.

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, si le prix d'exportation est f.o.b., au point d'expédition au Canada, c'est l'importateur qui devra payer les droits de dumping. Si l'importateur envoyait la facture à l'exportateur, il serait encore plus dans le pétrin, pour ce qui est des frais de dumping.

En d'autres mots, dans la mesure où l'exportateur continuerait à payer tous les droits de dumping imposés à l'importateur, la dette serait de plus en plus grande jusqu'au maximum permis par la loi actuelle, soit 50 p. 100 de la valeur de la marchandise.

Le président: M. Lambert.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Voulez-vous dire f.o.b., au point d'exportation ou de destination?

M. Hind: Monsieur le président, c'est à l'importateur et à l'exportateur de s'entendre là-dessus. Ça se fait dans les deux sens.

M. Rapsey: Pour ne pas embarrasser le ministère, je pense que M. Johnston pourrait commenter cette question et expliquer pourquoi le ministère n'est pas encore impliqué dans cette affaire. Auparavant je veux faire un commentaire personnel. Vous remarquez, sur le tableau, que, lorsqu'on applique un droit de dumping, le coût total du produit revient au prix qu'il aurait s'il n'y avait pas eu de dumping. Les droits de dumping sont considérés comme une sanction additionnelle. En fait, ils ne font que ramener le prix du produit entré au pays, au point où il aurait dû être au départ. Je veux demander à M. Johnston de répondre à cette question.

[Texte]

whereas dumping duty merely restores the landed cost to where it should have been in the first place. However, that is a side comment and I would like to ask Mr. Johnston to speak to this original question.

Mr. A. F. Johnston (Manager, Corporate Relations and Services, Canadian General Electric Company Limited): Mr. Chairman, to come back to Mr. Lambert's original question on whether or not the industry is inefficient in terms of letting somebody have a sharper pencil—at least that is how I interpret the question. Is that correct, Mr. Lambert?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): No, there is an element of both, but what I am concerned about is, was this lost through dumping under the present legislation? That concerns us at this present time.

The other question of whether you have a sharper pencil than the others or they have better than yours, well, that is something that concerns us in another context.

Mr. Johnston: In the context of international trade this was a profitable industry before 1960. I am talking now about power generation equipment, power transformers or power transmission equipment, circuit breakers and power transformers. I am talking about that part of the electrical industry—the heavy electrical industry.

Prior to 1960 it was a profitable business. In the last seven years it has had serious losses, that is six of those seven years, and the prices we have had to meet in this situation have been so low that it has concerned us. Some of us have done considerable work in trying to put together intelligence as to what goes on in the world of international trade on the pricing situation.

We have pooled information that indicates that some of our foreign competitors from foreign countries carry out a dual pricing system which they support in some cases, as with the U.K., with a dual costing system.

• 1620

The dual costing system consists of absorbing all their fixed overheads and in some cases some of their variable overheads when they get down to real marginal basis, against the home domestic sales.

When they are serving a national utility, as in the case of the U.K. like the Central Electricity Generating Board where you get agreements between CEGB and the manufacturers involved, such as switch gear manufacturers and transformer manufacturers, they can guarantee a price on this equipment that will guarantee them 16½ per cent return on investment on a one to one turnover basis, which

[Interprétation]

M. Johnston (gérant, Corporate Planning and Services, Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd.): Monsieur le président, pour revenir à la question initiale de M. Lambert, qui voulait savoir si l'industrie était efficace ou non, c'est permettre à quelqu'un d'avoir un crayon mieux aiguisé. C'est ainsi que je comprends la question.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Je veux savoir si cette perte est due au dumping aux termes de la législation actuelle. C'est cela qui nous intéresse dans le moment.

Quant à savoir si vous avez un crayon plus aiguisé que les autres, ou vice-versa, ceci ne nous intéresse pas pour le moment.

M. Johnston: Dans le domaine du commerce international, si vous considérez cette industrie depuis les six ou sept dernières années, vous voyez qu'avant 1960, c'était une industrie rentable. Je parle de l'équipement des générateurs et de la transmission de l'énergie, des coupe-circuit et des transformateurs. Nous parlons de ce secteur de l'industrie électrique, de l'industrie électrique lourde. Avant 1960, c'était une industrie rentable. Au cours des sept dernières années, il y a eu des pertes sérieuses, c'est-à-dire pendant six des sept dernières années. L'établissement des coûts qu'on a dû faire était si bas, que cela nous a inquiétés. Certains d'entre nous ont fait beaucoup de travail pour essayer de rassembler nos cerveaux, afin de découvrir ce qui arrivait dans le domaine du commerce international à l'égard de l'établissement des prix. Nous avons d'autres renseignements qui indiquent que certains de nos concurrents étrangers dans les pays étrangers ont un double système d'établissement des prix, qui va de pair avec un double établissement des coûts comme au Royaume-Uni. Ce qui consiste à absorber tous les frais supplémentaires fixes et ceux qui sont variables, lorsqu'on arrive sur une base marginale, aux dépens des ventes domestiques. Dans le cas du Royaume-Uni et de la Commission centrale de l'énergie électrique, vous avez des ententes entre CEGB et les manufacturiers, comme, par exemple, les manufacturiers de dispositifs interrupteurs et de transformateurs. Ces ententes peuvent garantir un prix sur cet équipement, qui leur assurera un revenu de 16.5 p. 100 sur leurs investissements. Ce qui veut dire qu'ils vont faire 16.5 p. 100 sur leurs means they are going to make 16½ per cent on sales, coupled with the fact that the balance of the rest of their overhead is absorbed in other domestic business.

[Text]

They then can marginally cost and say: "Well, we are making a profit on our export sales." When really if they had to do this on the same basis as we do or they applied an overhead on the same basis as their domestic sales, they certainly cannot come down to the prices that we have been experiencing in the market.

This has ended up with putting this industry in jeopardy and the industry is struggling to survive at this point in time.

We also know that in most of these items such as transformers, for example, when it comes to our cost efficiencies and productivity that we can equal or better these competitors about whom I am speaking.

We contend that this dumping has occurred; it has put this industry in jeopardy and it is true that in the past there has been the contention on the part of the administration, probably, that there has been difficulty in determining what the fair market value price was in the country of origin.

This is probably true because the ratings are such that they are not in use in the U.K. or France for the high voltage systems we have in this country or on this continent.

In fact one of the peculiarities of the industry here in Canada is that we supply utility systems. They are the second and fourth largest on the continent and they certainly rank in the top 10 in the world. We have an industry that has, in the past, been capable of supplying this at a profit.

In recent years, the European capacity as well as the U.K. and Japanese capacities have built to the point where after supplying their own market they now have surplus capacity and this situation is getting more acute. They are going to these marginal costing operations to support their pricing in the market, but making sure they absorb their overheads in the home market.

This is the reason we feel dumping has definitely occurred, but it has been difficult to prove. Just recently we have been able to put intelligence together that shows us where we sit productivity-wise, cost efficiency-wise and what is really going on in this world of international trade.

It is a cruel world; it is a rough and ready world; the foreign competitors are not worried about the workers in Canada and as someone so aptly put it: "They are exporting their unemployment to Canada."

[Interpretation]

ventes, en plus du fait que leur surplus est absorbé sur le marché domestique.

Ils peuvent établir un coût marginal et dire qu'ils font un profit sur leurs ventes d'exportation. En fait, s'ils avaient fait cela sur la même base que nous ou s'ils appliquaient des frais généraux comme pour leurs ventes domestiques ils n'atteindraient pas nos prix. Ceci a mis cette industrie en danger et l'industrie essaie de survivre maintenant. En ce qui concerne des articles comme des transformateurs, par exemple, nous savons aussi que nos coûts d'efficacité et de productivité peuvent soutenir la concurrence.

Donc, nous estimons que le dumping s'est produit et a fait du tort à l'industrie. Il a été prouvé que, dans le passé, il a été allégé, par l'administration probablement, qu'il était difficile de déterminer la juste valeur du marché dans le pays d'origine. C'est vrai, parce que la situation est telle qu'on ne se sert pas de ces prix, au Royaume-Uni ou en France, pour les systèmes en haut voltage, que nous avons dans ce pays.

Ici au Canada, la différence est que nous fournissons des systèmes de services publics. Notre service est au deuxième et au quatrième rang sur ce continent, et certainement dans les dix premiers dans le monde. Notre industrie, par le passé, a pu fonctionner avec profit. Ces dernières années, la capacité européenne, la capacité britannique et japonaise ont augmenté à tel point qu'ils peuvent approvisionner leurs propres marchés. Ils ont, depuis quelques années des excédents de capacité qui vont en s'accroissant. Maintenant, ils se tournent vers ces opérations à frais marginaux afin d'appuyer leur fixation de prix sur le marché, tout en s'assurant qu'ils absorbent leurs frais généraux dans le marché intérieur. C'est pour cette raison que nous pensons qu'il y a eu du dumping. C'est difficile à prouver.

Récemment, nous avons réussi à rassembler des renseignements qui nous montrent où nous en sommes sur le plan de l'efficacité et de la productivité et ce qui se passe réellement dans le milieu international du commerce.

C'est un mode cruel. C'est un monde qui emploie des méthodes grossières et expéditives et les concurrents étrangers ne se font pas de soucis à l'égard des travailleurs du Canada et comme quelqu'un l'a si bien dit «Ils exportent leurs chômeurs au Canada.»

[Texte]

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to clarify one or two points that had come up earlier, but do not directly relate to the matters Mr. Johnston was discussing.

The Chairman: Mr. Hales, is your question related to what Mr. Johnston just said?

Mr. Hales: Yes, I was going to ask Mr. Johnston if there is provision in the new legislation to take care of the very problem that he spoke about, particularly that of dual pricing which goes on in other countries?

I would like to back up his statement about the effects of dumping in this country because the General Electric plant is situated in my riding. I am well aware of the fact that they laid off 130 men just recently, because of the dumping of transformers into Canada and I am very, very interested whether this new legislation will take care of this problem.

Mr. Johnston, do you see protection against this kind of practice in the new Regulations?

• 1625

Mr. Johnston: I see the frame work for the protection of Canadian industry in this situation, but as Mr. Rapsey, the President of our Association, put it in his opening remarks, sound legislation requires very sound and aggressive enforcement and implementation. Only to the degree that the present government or future governments are prepared to enforce the legislation aggressively and to be very knowledgeable and sophisticated about what goes on in the workaday world of international trade where there is surplus capacity such as exists in the electrical industry world wide, are we going to be guaranteed that we will not suffer these kind of market losses and under utilization of our Canadian capacities and skills.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Johnston, no doubt you will be alerting the Department the minute you realize dumping is taking place?

Mr. Johnston: This is correct.

Mr. Gillespie: I would like to address my questions to Mr. Johnston. I have a few remarks to make on which, perhaps he would like to comment.

I have read that the electrical industry has a rather special problem here and I wondered if it might not be in part, because of the non-tariff type of protection. What I am getting at is this: If a country such as the U.K., that you have mentioned, protects its domestic manufacturers with non-tariff barriers

[Interprétation]

M. Arian: Je voudrais simplement préciser un ou deux points qui ont été soulevés plus tôt, mais qui n'ont pas de rapport avec ce que M. Johnston...

Le président: M. Hales, votre question a-t-elle un rapport avec ce que vient de dire M. Johnston?

M. Hales: Je veux demander à M. Johnston s'il croit que la nouvelle législation s'occupera du problème dont il parle notamment la fixation double des prix qui se pratique dans les pays étrangers. J'aimerais étayer sa déclaration sur les effets du dumping dans ce pays, parce que l'usine General Electric se trouve dans ma circonscription. Cette société vient de congédier 130 employés à cause du dumping de transformateurs au Canada. J'ai un très vif intérêt à voir que cette nouvelle législation prenne soin de ce problème. Monsieur Johnston, à ce sujet, croyez-vous que les nouveaux règlements pourront offrir le système de protection nécessaire?

M. Johnston: J'entrevois, dans ces règlements, un cadre qui puisse protéger l'industrie canadienne mais comme l'a dit M. Rapsey, le président de notre Association, dans ses remarques initiales, une bonne législation comprend une mise en vigueur et une exécution très judicieuse et agressive. Nous ne pourrions garantir que nous ne souffrirons pas des pertes de marché de ce genre, tout en utilisant nos capacités et nos talents canadiens, qu'en autant que le gouvernement actuel ou futur soit prêt à mettre la législation en vigueur de façon agressive et à faire preuve d'intelligence et de doigté en ce qui concerne les développements quotidiens du commerce international, qui font preuve d'un potentiel de surplus tel qu'il en existe dans l'industrie électrique partout dans le monde.

M. Hales: Vous avertirez, sans doute, le ministère aussitôt que vous vous rendrez compte qu'il y a du dumping, n'est-ce pas, monsieur Johnston?

M. Johnston: En effet.

M. Gillespie: J'aimerais poser ma question à M. Johnston, à propos d'un commentaire sur lequel il voudrait peut-être nous dire quelques mots. J'ai lu que l'industrie électrique se trouve face ici à un problème plutôt particulier et je me demande si ce ne serait pas dû, en partie, au système de protection du type non tarifaire. Voici ce que je veux dire: si un pays tel que le Royaume-Uni, comme vous avez dit, protège ses propres manufacturiers par un système non tarifaire, il faut because it has the domestic market which will enable it to allocate its overhead, it is then free to indulge in the kind of practice that you talked about. The size of the domestic market then is critical and the protection of it is critical in order to engage in the kind of practices that you referred to.

[Text]

Am I correct in assuming that this is, in fact, occurring, that is non-tariff barrier protection, keeping you out of other markets and securing them at their home base? Is this one of the reasons why you feel that your industry is perhaps more vulnerable than others?

Mr. Johnston: Yes, Mr. Gillespie, this is certainly true and you have practically answered the question, but I could elaborate on it to some length. In the U.K., for example, it is impossible to get an opportunity to bid to the Central Electricity Generating Board for any kind of equipment.

We, as a company, did secure one order for transformers some years ago, about 1963 or 1964, and we were accused of dumping into Britain when we had quoted a price which was roughly 5 per cent higher than the British manufacturers were quoting in Canada.

Since that time we have been refused permission to even quote. In fact, Sir Stanley Brown, has recently as this year, wrote us a letter in reply to a letter from our export manager saying that they had no desire at the present time to expand their circle of suppliers, or words to that effect. So we are shut out of that market.

There are all kinds of subtle and not so subtle ways that we are shut out of other markets if we try to get into them, mainly through such things as border taxes and other devices. For example, to Japan, no one can get into Japan. Ask people like the wire and cable manufacturers or ask how many companies own any part of a Japanese company.

There is just no way to get into these foreign markets because of these non-tariff barriers and we are not in a position whereby we are able to retaliate. Coupled with the fact that the Europeans and the U.K. are very sophisticated about this, they recognize that they must have a sound domestic base from which to operate for export and this is an economic principle which no one can defeat.

We, in Canada, should remember that we cannot allow our domestic base to be destroyed even if we wish to export. We must have a strong domestic base. The British recognize this as well as the West Germans, the French and the Italians and they build a qu'il ait un marché intérieur qui puisse absorber ses frais généraux; ce qui lui donne la liberté d'agir de la façon dont vous avez parlé.

[Interpretation]

L'étendue du marché intérieur et son système de protection sont des éléments critiques dont il faut tenir compte pour s'engager à suivre les pratiques dont vous avez parlé. Ai-je raison en supposant que ceci se fait effectivement, c'est-à-dire, qu'un système de protection non tarifaire vous empêche de pénétrer dans d'autres marchés, tout en mettant ces marchés à l'abri dans leur propre pays? Est-ce une des raisons pour lesquelles vous croyez que votre industrie est peut-être plus vulnérable que les autres?

M. Johnston: Oui, monsieur Gillespie. C'est bien vrai et vous avez répondu assez complètement vous-même à la question. Je pourrais développer un peu l'idée. Au Royaume-Uni, par exemple, il est impossible de faire une soumission, pour de l'équipement, à l'Office central de l'énergie électrique, quel que soit l'équipement en cause. On a bien passé une commande pour des transformateurs, il y a quelques années, en 1963 ou en 1964. On nous a accusé alors de faire du dumping, bien que notre prix fût plus élevé de 5 p. 100 environ que celui des manufacturiers britanniques faisant affaire au Canada.

Depuis lors, on ne nous a même pas permis de faire des soumissions. En effet, nous avons reçu une lettre de Sir Stanley Brown, cette année même, en réponse à celle de notre directeur d'exportations, nous informant qu'aucune addition à la liste de fournisseurs n'était prévue. Ce marché nous est donc fermé. Nous sommes exclus, par de nombreux combines plus ou moins subtiles, d'autres marchés. Il y a, par exemple, des taxes frontalières et d'autres manœuvres. Prenez le cas du Japon. C'est un marché impénétrable. Ces marchés étrangers nous sont complètement fermés à cause de ces restrictions non tarifaires, qui ne nous laissent aucune possibilité de représailles. Les Anglais et les Européens sont très fins à cet égard. Ils se rendent compte que l'exportation est impossible à moins d'avoir comme base un marché intérieur bien établi. C'est là un principe économique inéluctable.

N'oublions donc pas, nous autres Canadiens, que notre marché intérieur est une base qu'il faut sauvegarder même si nous voulons exporter. Il faut d'abord un marché national bien solide. Ce principe est reconnu par les Britanniques, les Allemands occiden-strong domestic base from which they work out on their exports. They can thus absorb their overhead as you have pointed out.

[Texte]

• 1630

Mr. Gillespie: Yes. Referring to the chart we have here, this particular package we have been talking about is likely to be built around this incremental pricing, that is, the fixed cost allocations of the home market, and direct cost to variable costing for the export market.

What has been your experience with our Department of National Revenue, first in the sense that they are sensitive to this problem, and second, their ability to get the kind of information which is needed to compare what might be considered normal prices at home and the export prices?

I am referring in part to the fact that you are tendering against specifications, and there may be difficulties in comparing apples with oranges for instance.

Mr. Johnston: Could I have Mr. Sukloff, our Manager of Customs, reply to that question, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. R. S. Sukloff (Manager of Customs, Corporate Department, Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd.): Mr. Gillespie, when we lose an order naturally our management wants to know some of the reasons and we have international sources—global sources—of getting rather quick intelligence. These people are familiar with the prices in both the utility market and the cost of production under normal business conditions. This is fed back to us pretty quickly.

There is a far more insidious way of dumping that I think Mr. Lambert referred to. While complying with the customs regulations of billing the importer and the exporter are the same person, and we take considerable comfort from the fact the Code devotes much attention, or I should say, the White Paper, devotes much attention to the relationship between the exporter and the importer.

For instance, an agency is set up in Canada that does the importing—Mr. Hind may, of course, challenge me on this point—and the importer is billed by the exporter at the normal price so as to avoid any scrutiny of the document. The price quoted to the end user, the utility, is considerably below that level or, in other words, below the duty paid level. They are able to do this because of the relationship. Now this is the sort of intelligence that we get rather quickly.

[Interprétation]

taux, les Français et les Italiens, qui établissent d'abord une base solide au marché intérieur avant d'exporter.

M. Gillespie: Pour construire ce barème de prix, il semble qu'on se basera sur le prix sur le marché local et qu'on tiendra compte aussi des exportations. Quel genre de rapports avez-vous eus avec le ministère du Revenu national? c'est-à-dire, le ministère est-il sensibilisé à ce problème? Le ministère peut-il obtenir les renseignements voulus pour comparer un prix normal au pays et un prix pour l'exportation.

Dans ce cas, il s'agit de spéculations, et il peut exister des difficultés si l'on veut comparer, par exemple, des pommes et des oranges.

M. Johnston: Je pense que notre gérant des douanes devrait répondre à cette question, monsieur le président.

M. R. S. Sukloff (gérant des douanes et des services corporatifs de la Cie Générale Électrique du Canada Limitée): Lorsqu'on perd une commande on veut savoir pourquoi. Et, nous avons des experts internationaux chargés d'obtenir les renseignements voulus. Ces gens connaissent le coût de production et les prix du marché, dans des conditions normales. Nous obtenons ces renseignements très rapidement.

Toutefois, il y a des façons beaucoup plus insidieuses de faire du dumping. Les importateurs et les exportateurs sont parfois les mêmes personnes et il est bon que, dans le Livre blanc, on parle beaucoup de rapports entre exportateurs et importateurs. La compagnie peut ouvrir une succursale au Canada, et celle-ci reçoit une facture de l'exportateur, au prix du marché dans le pays exportateur, de manière à éviter une enquête. Le prix payé par l'utilisateur est considérablement au-dessous de ce niveau ou, du moins, au-dessous du prix sur lequel on se base pour calculer les droits de douane. Ils peuvent le faire à cause de leurs rapports étroits. Voilà des renseignements qu'on nous fournit rapidement.

[Text]

Now, as to the efficiency of the Department of National Revenue, we, of course, have no way of knowing how effective our complaints are because, of course, it is very secret. All we know is that statistically instead of reducing the disappearance of our market to imports they are increasing. So one would ask oneself, is there effective administration? Now in the last two years we have found, and maybe it is a question of priority, that considerable attention has been devoted to the field of heavy electrical apparatus, and we feel, our feedback is, that some importers have been rather severely penalized.

Mr. Gillespie: If I may interrupt, what I am really trying to get at is the basis of pricing the export price, and the question of like product really. You are dealing with a product which may or may not be comparable to other products. I do not know. This is what I would like some comment on.

If it can be varied by writing the specifications in a certain way, then it seems to me it might be possible to export it on the basis of a very low price, sustain it on a direct costing basis, and say that method is all right. If, on the other hand, there is something similar to that product being produced in the home market then there would be a way of catching this if our own officials are aware of this practice. This was my particular point.

Mr. Sukloff: I do not think there is any doubt that the products are "like". They have been quoted from the same sources. The products have similar specifications and similar uses. So, if ever you came to a definition of "like" product I think you hit it right on the nose. These products on which we quote are practically identical with those of the exporter. There may have been certain evaluations that provide technical difference, but they were very narrow in the question of "class or kind." I would say they were closer to type or size—identical—and I do not think there would be a legal point in differentiating.

• 1635

Mr. Gillespie: I wonder if I have made myself absolutely clear. I am thinking, for instance, of an exporter in the U.K., as this country was mentioned, who is considering a tender in Canada. You are competing for the same item in Canada as he is. I am wondering whether the U.K. exporter could say: "Well, the particular item that I am tendering on in Canada is not like anything that I have supplied to my home market and, therefore, I can sustain my export price; cost it on a direct costing basis; and attract no dumping duty." This is the example I was thinking of.

[Interpretation]

Maintenant, quant à l'efficacité du ministère du Revenu national, nous n'avons aucun moyen pour savoir jusqu'à quel point nos plaintes sont entendues car, tout est très secret et confidentiel. Mais, au lieu de diminuer, l'importation nuisible à notre marché, on augmente. Alors, on se demande si l'administration est efficace. Depuis deux ans, c'est peut-être une question de priorité, on a surveillé de près l'importation d'appareils électriques lourds. Il semble que certains importateurs aient été pénalisés assez durement.

M. Gillespie: Je parle de la base sur laquelle on établit les prix d'exportation des produits similaires. Ici vous parlez de produits qui ne se comparent peut-être pas. Il semble qu'il soit possible d'exporter certaines marchandises sur une base de prix peu élevés et soutenir ce prix. Si d'autre part, un produit similaire est fabriqué au pays, il y a sûrement moyen de découvrir cette fraude, si nos fonctionnaires sont au courant de cette pratique.

M. Sukloff: Il n'y a pas de doute que les produits soient similaires. Les prix viennent des mêmes sources. Les produits ont des devis semblables et un usage semblable. Alors, je pense que vous arrivez vraiment à une définition juste de produit similaire. Les produits sur lesquels nous soumettons des prix sont presque identiques aux produits de l'exportateur. Il y a peut-être des différences techniques, mais les différences sont minimes quant à la catégorie et à la grosseur. On aurait de la difficulté à les différencier légalement.

M. Gillespie: Je ne sais pas si je suis clair. Prenons un exportateur du Royaume-Uni qui songe à répondre à des appels d'offre au Canada, pour le même produit que vous fabriquez. Je crois que l'exportateur du Royaume-Uni prétendra qu'il n'y a pas de produit similaire vendu dans son pays, qu'il basera son prix sur son coût de production, et sans encourir de droits de dumping.

[Texte]

Mr. Sukloff: Yes.

Mr. Johnston: This is exactly right. Consider the ratings of high voltage power transformers that have been made in this country, say for the Manicouagan project; certainly there are no similar ratings in use in England. We do not have a 735KV system in England. So this is true.

However, when an exporting manufacturer absorbs all his overhead against domestic business; only puts material cost, and maybe even some of the direct labour can be considered as labour variance and absorbed against domestic business—this has happened—plus some of the variables overhead; leaves the fixed overhead out completely on a marginal costing basis; leaves out all commercial or administrative expenses incurred in his own country; only includes those marketing expenses, or sales expenses, or agents' commissions incurred in the country to which they are importing; then you get down to a basis where the United Kingdom manufacturer can say that he is making money on his export business.

This is not internationalist trade that is fair and equitable to all, and this kind of pricing is certainly condemned in Article VI of the GATT. If we could play on these rules in their market absolute chaos would no doubt reign there. But they protect their home market as we have found out before.

The Chairman: I think, Mr. Gillespie, Mr. Rapsey would like to make comments too.

Mr. Rapsey: I would like to make a comment, Mr. Chairman. I think there are two questions here that we have not really answered yet. I am not at all sure that we have satisfied Mr. Lambert. Dealing first with Mr. Gillespie's point, as I understand it, he is asking if there is not a "like" product or a "like" size in the country of origin whether the Department, either under existing laws, or more specifically, under the proposed new act, has ways of assigning a fair market value, and a normal value for such a product which does not have any comparable sale in the country of origin.

Mr. Gillespie: Yes, that is right, as related to the second series of columns illustrated based on direct costing.

Mr. Rapsey: I believe that the mechanism is there, Mr. Gillespie, for doing just that. It is difficult, as Mr. Johnston has been saying, but there are methods available under the Bill whereby the Department will be able to set the fair market value and the normal value.

[Interprétation]

M. Sukloff: C'est fort possible.

M. Johnston: C'est exactement le cas pour le matériel de haut voltage, par exemple; celui destiné au projet de Manicouagan n'a rien de semblable à celui du Royaume-Uni. C'est donc vrai. Mais, si l'exportation couvre tous les frais généraux par la vente dans son marché national, et n'a qu'à ajouter le prix du matériel, une partie du temps des employés, et les dépenses de ventes de commercialisation, les commissions, les agents, etc., peut même arriver à faire des profits avec ces exportations, en établissant son prix à partir des coûts.

Mais, ce n'est pas du commerce international et ce genre de prix est sûrement condamné dans l'article 6 du Code du GATT. Si nous pouvions jouer sur ces règlements sur leur propre marché, ce serait un chaos absolu, mais leur marché est protégé.

Le président: Je pense que M. Rapsey souhaiterait faire des commentaires.

M. Rapsey: Il y a deux questions, ici, auxquelles on n'a pas répondu. Je ne sais pas si, par exemple M. Lambert est satisfait des réponses que nous avons données.

Pour revenir à la question de M. Gillespie, il dit que s'il n'y a pas de produits semblables ou identiques à ceux du pays d'origine, est-ce que d'après l'ancienne loi ou la nouvelle le ministère peut trouver une juste valeur pour le marché et une valeur normale pour un produit qui n'est pas vendu dans le pays d'origine?

M. Gillespie: Cela se rapporte à la deuxième série de chiffres, basée sur le coût.

M. Rapsey: Je pense qu'un mécanisme existe, monsieur Gillespie, dans ce but précis. Comme on vient de le dire, c'est difficile pour le ministère, mais, il existe des méthodes prévues par la loi qui permettent au ministère d'établir le juste prix du marché et la valeur normale.

[Text]

The Chairman: What is the other question by Mr. Lambert to which you think you did not reply completely?

Mr. Rapsey: Well, the question of what constitutes dump and what constitutes a lower cost production permitting a lower cost sale is also a very difficult one to answer. I was going to suggest that if the Committee is interested we could call on a couple more witnesses who would have examples of this kind of thing.

Mr. Gillespie: Mr. Chairman, just before we leave this matter I wonder if I could just put one further question to Mr. Rapsey? You say there are methods available under the provisions of this draft legislation. Are you satisfied that they are going to be adequate to this problem?

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, considering the difficult nature of the problem I think they are as adequate as can be expected. I believe we would be satisfied with these methods.

• 1640

Mr. Gillespie: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Mr. Énard? Yes, Mr. Hales?

Mr. Hales: Before we finish dealing with Mr. Johnston's comments, I was very interested in his remark that people in the heavy electrical business are not allowed to quote on the U.K. market. Is that the statement you made?

Mr. Johnston: In the U.K. utility market, to the Central Electricity Generating Board, which is the only supplier of electrical energy in the U.K. That is the only major supplier.

Mr. Hales: Now may I ask the reverse of that? Do we in Canada allow the U.K. manufacturer of heavy electrical equipment to tender on contracts in Canada?

Mr. Johnston: This is an open season as it were. All the electrical utilities in Canada request bids from U.K. manufacturers. The electrical utilities in this country are by and large owned by the provincial governments, apart from two or three major systems in the West and East.

Mr. Hales: Can you or other representatives of like businesses in Canada give us examples of how you have lost business to the U.K. market on this basis? Has this happened?

[Interpretation]

Le président: Quelle est l'autre question à laquelle vous vouliez répondre?

M. Rapsey: Qu'est-ce que le dumping? Qu'est-ce que la production à prix moins élevé? Il est difficile de répondre à ces questions.

Je voulais suggérer que, si cela intéresse le Comité, nous pourrions convoquer d'autres témoins pour nous donner des exemples de ce genre.

M. Gillespie: Une autre question. Vous dites qu'il existe d'autres méthodes prévues dans le projet de loi. Pensez-vous qu'elles seront adéquates ou qu'elles nous donneront satisfaction?

M. Rapsey: Monsieur le président, considérant la nature difficile du problème, elles sont aussi satisfaisantes que possibles. Nous en serons satisfaits.

M. Gillespie: Merci, Monsieur le président.

Le président: Monsieur Énard, oui, monsieur Hales.

M. Hales: Avant de terminer cette période de questions, je m'intéresse beaucoup aux observations de M. Johnston. Il dit que dans l'industrie électrique lourde, on n'a pas le droit d'établir les prix en se basant sur le marché du Royaume-Uni. Est-ce là ce que vous avez déclaré?

M. Johnston: La Central Electricity Generating Board est le seul fournisseur d'énergie électrique au Royaume-Uni. C'est le seul fournisseur important.

M. Hales: Est-ce que nous, au Canada, permettons aux fabricants d'équipements électriques lourds du Royaume-Uni de faire des appels d'offres au Canada?

M. Johnston: C'est ouvert. L'achat d'équipement électrique provenant du Royaume-Uni est soumis aux appels d'offres. Cependant, les services publics d'électricité sont la propriété des gouvernements provinciaux, à l'exception de deux ou trois dans l'Est et l'Ouest.

M. Hales: Pouvez-vous, vous ou d'autres représentants de compagnies identiques, nous donner des exemples démontrant comment vous avez perdu une partie de vos commandes au profit du Royaume-Uni? Cela s'est-il produit?

[Texte]

Mr. Johnston: I did not follow your question, Mr. Hales.

Mr. Hales: You say that the U.K. manufacturers are allowed to tender in Canada. Have provincial governments or Canadian governments accepted tenders from the U.K., placed orders there and side-stepped our own Canadian manufacturers?

Mr. Johnston: Most certainly they have accepted the lowest price.

Mr. Hales: Purely on price.

Mr. Johnston: Yes.

Mr. Hales: I am amazed that we allow U.K. manufacturers to tender in Canada, and they will not allow us to tender in their country. Of course, this is a matter of policy, and it is rather surprising to me that this situation exists.

Mr. Johnston: If this is discussed with the local utility—particularly the provincially owned utility, their reaction is that this is a federal matter, as far as international trade is concerned. Their job is to supply electricity at the cheapest cost to the consumer and they look at the capital costs involved. They are not concerned about a dumping situation because they are not really the importer of record. They usually buy through an agent of the foreign manufacturer who is resident in Canada who becomes the importer of record.

Mr. Hales: Could you tell the Committee what percentage figure the provinces use, or the federal government uses, when it comes to establishing the low bidder. Supposing you were second low bidder by 10 per cent, or 15 per cent, what figure is used, I wonder, before they decide to buy out of the country?

Mr. Johnston: I could not give you any figure that applies generally to all utilities. You might get a utility like Quebec Hydro who gives preference to a Quebec manufacturer first, a Canadian manufacturer second, and then buys outside the country otherwise, using percentages which can vary by product line and may vary according to the economic climate in the province.

The Chairman: Mr. Émard?

[Interprétation]

M. Johnston: Je n'ai pas compris votre question.

M. Hales: Vous dites que les fabricants du Royaume-Uni peuvent présenter des appels d'offres au Canada. Est-ce que les gouvernements provinciaux ou le gouvernement du Canada ont accepté des appels d'offres du Royaume-Uni et ont placé des commandes dans ce pays en négligeant les fabricants canadiens?

M. Johnston: Oui, bien sûr, ils acceptent le prix le plus bas.

M. Hales: Et ce n'est qu'une question de prix?

M. Johnston: Oui.

M. Hales: Je suis très étonné de voir qu'on permet des choses semblables, qu'on préfère des appels d'offres du Royaume-Uni à ceux du Canada. Bien sûr, c'est une question de politique, mais il me semble très étonnant qu'une situation semblable existe.

M. Johnston: Si on en parle avec les compagnies d'utilités publiques locales, particulièrement celles des provinces, on répond que c'est du ressort fédéral quand il s'agit du commerce international et que leur responsabilité est de produire l'électricité au coût le plus bas possible. Si on considère les frais en capitaux, ce n'est pas une question de dumping qui les préoccupe, car ces compagnies d'utilités publiques ne sont pas les importateurs directs, ils achètent plutôt d'un agent, qui réside au Canada.

M. Hales: Pourriez-vous dire aux membres du Comité quel pourcentage les provinces ou le gouvernement fédéral utilisent lorsqu'il s'agit de trouver l'offre la plus basse. Supposons que vous êtes le deuxième plus bas soumissionnaire par une marge de 10. p. 100, ou 15 p. 100. De quel chiffre se sert-on avant de décider d'acheter à l'étranger?

M. Johnston: Je ne pourrais pas vous donner de chiffres s'appliquant à toutes les utilités. Il y a l'Hydro-Québec qui accorde la préférence d'abord aux fabricants du Québec, ensuite à ceux du Canada ensuite à ceux de l'étranger. Le pourcentage varie pour chaque produit et cela dépend du climat économique de la province aussi.

Le président: Monsieur Émard.

[Text]

M. Émard: Monsieur le président, à la page 4 de leur mémoire, on dit ceci:

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association affirme que le dumping est en train de s'infiltrer dans le marché du matériel électrique au Canada, etc.

Pourrait-on m'expliquer pourquoi les grands manufacturiers de produits électriques ont établi des succursales au Japon pour fabriquer des produits qui l'étaient au Canada auparavant, et qui maintenant sont exportés ici? Je ne dirai pas que c'est du dumping, mais, le prix de ces produits est de beaucoup inférieur à celui des produits canadiens.

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Johnston could perhaps speak to that. With your permission, Mr. Chairman, I would like to call on Mr. Cheesman, and I think at the same time we are changing chairs, Mr. Lindsay. Both these gentlemen would have some examples, Mr. Cheesman specifically in answer to the question of Mr. Émard.

• 1645

The Chairman: Granted.

Mr. W. J. Cheesman (Director and Member of Executive Committee of CEMA and President, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.): Mr. Chairman, I must apologize that I was not able to follow the question completely because I did not have the translation.

Le président: Voulez-vous poser notre question à nouveau, monsieur Émard?

M. Émard: Je voudrais qu'on m'explique pourquoi les grands manufacturiers de produits électriques ont établi des succursales au Japon pour fabriquer des produits qui l'étaient au Canada auparavant et qui maintenant, sont exportés ici? Je disais que ce n'est peut-être pas du dumping, mais le prix de ces produits, importés ici du Japon, est de beaucoup inférieur aux produits canadiens.

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, thank you for waiting. First of all, let me say I am not familiar with any specific examples of the kind of action that you refer to. You mention appliance manufacturers opening subsidiary operations for manufacturing in Japan and then using those operations as a source of products for the Canadian market. The nearest examples of the kind of thing that I think you have in mind would be some of the operations that have been opened in Asia, in places such as Hong Kong, for the manufacture or assembly of such component products as transistors. Some of those manu-

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: Mr. Chairman, on page 4 of the brief it says that: the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association states that dumping is infiltrating the electrical equipment market in Canada, etc.

Could you explain why the large electrical appliances manufacturers have set up subsidiary companies in Japan to produce goods that were made in Canada before, and which are now exported to Canada? I would not say that it is dumping, although the price of these products is much lower than that of Canadian products.

M. Rapsey: Monsieur le président, je pense que M. Johnston pourrait répondre. Avec votre permission, monsieur le président, je voudrais donner la parole à M. Cheesman, et pendant que nous changeons de sièges je crois que M. Lindsay pourra donner des exemples. M. Cheesman pourra répondre spécifiquement à la question qui a été posée par M. Émard.

Le président: Accordé.

M. Cheesman (directeur et membre du comité exécutif du CEMA): Monsieur le président, je m'excuse mais je n'ai pas pu suivre la question car je n'avais pas mon écouteur à l'oreille.

The Chairman: Would you like to ask your question once more, Mr. Émard?

Mr. Émard: Could you explain why the large manufacturers of electrical appliances have opened subsidiary companies in Japan to produce all the goods that were previously made in Canada?

These are now imported into Canada? I said that it is perhaps not dumping, although the price of these goods imported from Japan is much lower than that of Canadian products.

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, merci d'avoir attendu. D'abord, je ne connais pas d'exemples précis comme ceux dont vous parlez. Vous parlez de fabricants d'appareils électriques ayant des filiales au Japon et qui réintroduisent ces produits sur le marché canadien. Le meilleur exemple que je pourrais vous donner, pour revenir à ce que vous dites, ce serait celui d'industries ouvertes en Asie, comme à Hong-Kong, par exemple, où l'on fabrique, ou plutôt où l'on assemble des transistors, entre autres. Certaines de ces opérations sont, en fait, des filiales de compagnies américaines. C'est le meilleur exemple facturing operations are in fact subsidiaries of American corporations. That is the nearest example that comes to my mind of the sort of thing to which I believe the question refers.

[Texte]

M. Émard: Sûrement, il y a des filiales de compagnies américaines, mais des succursales de compagnies américaines en ont ici au Canada. Par exemple, Marconi, a une succursale au Japon, Canadian Westinghouse, aussi, si je ne me trompe pas. Je suis sûr que vous êtes beaucoup plus au courant que moi et vous pourriez m'en nommer d'autres.

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman with respect to the first example which was cited, Canadian Marconi Co. is, as far as I am aware, a subsidiary of a United Kingdom company, English Electric Canada. If they have a subsidiary in Japan, or an associate company in Japan, I think their ownership in that would be severely limited under Japanese law of ownership of industry. With respect to your second example of Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd. having a subsidiary in Japan, there is none that I am aware of, sir.

M. Émard: Je peux vous raconter ce qui m'est arrivé. Je suis allé chercher un petit poste de radio pour mon garçon dans un magasin d'appareils électriques, je ne voulais pas acheter un produit japonais, alors j'en ai acheté un de marque Marconi. Je m'en viens chez moi, je regarde et je lis made in Japan. Alors je ne sais pas si cela a été fabriqué à Montréal, portant une estampille du Japon. Je peux vous l'apporter, je l'ai encore.

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, the example which has been raised, of course, is perhaps the ultimate example of injury to an industry in Canada or North America. The manufacturer of radios, particularly transistor radios, small portable radios, on this continent has virtually disappeared because the production of those products has been centred for the past five to ten years in Japan principally, and in other Asiatic locations such as Hong Kong and Taian.

• 1650

The practice you refer to, of Marconi having a transistor radio made for them to distribute on the Canadian market is, in fact, the practice which is followed today by essentially all Canadian manufacturers and distributors of electrical and home entertainment products. It has long been recognized by us that it was just not possible for us to compete with the low labour costs in countries such as Japan for products such as this.

[Interprétation]

que je puisse vous donner, se rapportant à ce que vous venez de mentionner.

Mr. Émard: There are certainly subsidiaries of American companies in Japan, but there are subsidiaries of American companies in Canada also. For example Marconi has a subsidiary in Japan and Canadian Westinghouse I believe also has subsidiaries in Japan.

I am sure that you are much more aware of this than I and you could give me more examples of this.

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, le premier exemple qui a été donné se rapporte à la compagnie Marconi. D'abord Canadian Marconi est, en autant que je le sache, une filiale d'une compagnie britannique qui s'appelle English Electric. S'il y a une filiale au Japon, ou encore une compagnie associée, je pense que cela devrait être limité par les lois de propriété qui existent au Japon. Le deuxième exemple, pour la Canadian Westinghouse, qui a une filiale au Japon, à ma connaissance il n'y en a pas.

Mr. Émard: I can tell you—I could tell you what happened to me. I bought my son a small radio in an electric supply store. I did not wish to buy a Japanese product so I bought a Marconi, it said, on that radio "made in Japan". I do not know if it was made in Montreal with a Japanese stamp. I doubt that. I could show the radio to you, I still have it at home.

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, l'exemple qu'on vient de donner est vraiment ultime, c'est la façon la plus grave par laquelle on peut nuire à l'industrie nord-américaine et canadienne. Les fabricants d'appareils radio ou de transistors sont presque disparus, en Amérique, car cette production provient du Japon, entre autres, et d'autres villes asiatiques comme Hong-Kong et Taïwan depuis quatre ou cinq ans. Et cette pratique, à laquelle vous référez, à savoir la compagnie Marconi fabriquant un appareil radio-transistor pour être distribué au Canada. C'est une pratique qui est suivie par presque tous les fabricants et les distributeurs canadiens aujourd'hui. On sait depuis longtemps qu'il n'est pas possible de concurrencer des pays comme le Japon où la main-d'œuvre coûte peu.

[Text]

M. Émard: Vous m'avez dit tout à l'heure je crois, que vous ne connaissez aucune succursale de compagnie canadienne ou américaine de fabrication électrique qui est établie au Japon?

Mr. Cheesman: That is correct; there are very minor holdings today by American companies in Japan. As I understand it, and I am certainly not an expert familiar with it in detail, the percentage of equity which the Japanese government allows foreigners to hold in their manufacturing industry is extremely low indeed. The arrangements in Japan of those companies I am familiar with are substantially ones of technical cross-licensing for exchange of development and technical information. As you have mentioned in the case of transistor radios, practically all members of the whole entertainment industry in North America now have their transistor radios manufactured for them in Asia, principally in Japan. These are then sold through their distribution channels, using them as supplementary products to their basic product line.

In this way, I might say, we are doing everything we can to continue survival of our industry and maintain employment for other parts of our industry, such as television, both black and white and colour, and stereo. Without having the efficiency and productivity in our distribution organization that goes with having a full line of products we would not have survived this long.

M. Émard: Ici, en page 14 de votre mémoire, vous dites: «Au Canada, les gouvernements, quels qu'ils soient, dépensent d'énormes sommes pour favoriser le développement et la recherche des capacités...»

Je crois que, surtout dans votre industrie, dans l'industrie électrique, les produits électriques et les produits électroniques subissent des transformations constantes, et je pense que le marché est ouvert à ceux qui peuvent présenter les dernières réalisations, c'est-à-dire les méthodes les plus avancées. Maintenant, je voudrais savoir qu'est-ce que votre industrie fait en matière de recherche, ici, au Canada?

Le président: M. Rapsey, s'il vous plaît? A moins que M. Cheesman puisse répondre?

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman I will undertake to reply to that question. First of all I think you will find on examination that in consultation with the Department of Industry and the National Research Council the electrical and electronics industry—the majority of the companies here are active in both segments of the industry—is one of the largest

[Interpretation]

Mr. Émard: I think you said earlier that so far as you were aware there is no subsidiary of Canadian or American Companies manufacturing electrical goods in Japan?

M. Cheesman: C'est bien cela. Il n'y a que de bien petites compagnies américaines au Japon. Je ne suis pas un spécialiste de ces questions. Le pourcentage d'actions que les étrangers peuvent posséder dans les industries du Japon est très bas, et dans le cas des compagnies dont je connais les ententes avec le Japon, il s'agit plutôt de licences techniques pour l'échange de renseignements techniques, et comme vous l'avez vu dans le cas des radios transistor, dans ces domaines, presque tous les transistors sont fabriqués en Asie, et surtout au Japon, pour des sociétés des États-Unis. Ensuite, ils sont vendus par leur service de distribution. Ces produits japonais viennent compléter leur éventail de produits. Et de cette façon, nous faisons tout en notre pouvoir pour survivre ici, et pour avoir de l'emploi, dans les autres parties de notre industrie comme la fabrication des télévisions en blanc et noir, en couleur, et pour les stéréos. Il faut donc de l'efficacité dans notre distribution et des lignes complètes de produits pour survivre, sans ça, nous n'aurions pu survivre.

Mr. Émard: On page 14 of your brief you say that in Canada government at all levels spends an awful lot on development and research. Especially in your industry, in the electrical industry, electric and electronic products there are constant changes and the market is open to those who can supply the most up-to-date models. I would like to know what you are doing as far as research is concerned in Canada.

The Chairman: Mr. Rapsey please? Unless Mr. Cheesman can reply.

M. Cheesman: J'essaierai de répondre. D'abord, après avoir étudié la question et consulté le ministère de l'Industrie et le Conseil national de recherches, l'industrie de l'électricité et de l'électronique—la plupart des compagnies, sont actives dans ces deux secteurs—nous faisons énormément de recherche. C'est peut-être nous qui en faisons le plus dans performers of research and development in Canadian manufacturing industry. It is probably only matched in level of research and development by the aircraft industry.

[Texte]

To my knowledge there is a great deal of research and development being done in this country. For example, the fulfilment of the extra high voltage requirements of the Canadian generating utilities which were referred to by Mr. Johnston in his reply to the question regarding the type of apparatus which was imported from the United Kingdom. It is a matter of record that the heavy electrical apparatus manufacturers in Japan and Europe look to Canada as being an excellent place in which to practice advanced technology because we have requirements.

• 1655

Those of us in the heavy electrical apparatus business have made, and are continuing to make, very heavy expenditures in research and development in an endeavour to try to fulfil these requirements of the Canadian utilities. Our concern is that if the kind of pricing which we have portrayed here prevails, of course, it will be very difficult for us to get a reasonable return for the investment we are making. However we are determined not to be defeated; we will continue to fight. We believe with the kind of anti-dumping legislation that is being proposed here, and its administration, that we can make this a fair fight, and that we can survive.

M. Émard: Est-ce que...

Le président: Un instant, monsieur Émard, M. Rapsey voudrait faire un commentaire.

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, the figures that we just pulled out here were in response to the question on research and development. Our industry is rather proud of the fact that we are among the leaders in the relative amount spent on research and development in this country.

I might say with respect to transistor radios, one of the confusing things at the present time is that many of these radios are brand named. In other words, they are being produced in Japan and elsewhere, but the Canadian industry which is a manufacturer in other things and no longer acting as a manufacturer of those radios, is simply a dealer or distributor or agent whose name is printed on them. This may perhaps have given rise to the idea that there were a lot of subsidiaries in Japan and elsewhere which were doing that. This is more a brand name type of operation.

[Interprétation]

toutes les industries canadiennes. Il y a peut-être seulement les compagnies qui fabriquent des avions qui font plus de recherche que nous.

Nous faisons beaucoup de recherche, par exemple, pour les systèmes d'extra-haut voltage pour les génératrices dont M. Johnson a parlé en répondant à la question sur les appareils qui étaient importés du Royaume-Uni. Je tiens à dire publiquement que pour les appareils électriques lourds, au Japon et en Europe, on se tourne vers le Canada qui est considéré comme un excellent pays où mettre à l'essai les techniques avancées car la demande est élevée.

Dans ce domaine des appareils électriques, le Canada fait beaucoup de dépenses en recherche et en développement. Nous essayons de répondre aux demandes du pays. Si la façon de fixer les prix dont nous avons parlé est adoptée, il sera bien difficile d'avoir un bon rendement pour toutes les dépenses que nous faisons. Toutefois, nous ne voulons pas perdre la partie, et nous continuerons de lutter. Tandis qu'on présente une loi sur l'anti-dumping, nous voulons lutter de façon honnête, et nous voulons survivre.

Mr. Émard: I would like to ask something else. Is it a fact that . . . ?

The Chairman: Just a moment, Mr. Émard, Mr. Rapsey would like to say something.

M. Rapsey: Monsieur le président, dans les chiffres que nous venons de citer au sujet de la recherche et du développement, notre industrie est très fière d'être un chef de file, car nous dépensons énormément pour la recherche et le développement au Canada. Au sujet des radios transistor, il y a un élément qui prête à confusion: un grand nombre de modèles portent des marques connues; ces radios sont fabriquées au Japon et ailleurs, et l'industrie canadienne, qui fabrique d'autres choses, ne fabrique plus de radios elle-même, les vend ou les distribue en leur donnant ses marques de commerce. Donc les radios ont des marques canadiennes. On a pu penser qu'on avait plusieurs filiales au Japon et ailleurs. C'est plutôt une question de marque de commerce.

[Text]

I might say this has been by no means completely a matter of dumping. The Japanese have done a very fine job of that, so we cannot complain that it was entirely dumping that brought us to the present condition. The Electronic Industries Association, I am sure, will have something to say about this general situation. I do not know, sir whether that subject was finished. I was going to ask Mr. Cheesman if he had some other examples.

Le président: Je crois que M. Émard a d'autres questions.

M. Émard: Non, je ne suis pas tellement intéressé par le cas des radios transistor, c'est quelque chose que je connaissais personnellement. Mais ce qui m'intéresse, moi, c'est la recherche. Parce qu'aujourd'hui, on dit partout que les seuls pays qui ont une chance de rester sur la scène internationale pour l'exportation, ce sont les pays qui ont été plus avancés que les autres sur le plan de la recherche.

J'aimerais que vous mentionniez certaines de vos compagnies-membres qui ont des laboratoires de recherche organisée. Quatre, ou cinq peut-être. Je connais la compagnie Northern Electric, ici, à Ottawa, qui a un laboratoire de recherche, mais c'est la seule que je connaisse. Est-ce qu'il y en a d'autres?

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, I can give other examples. I think all of the companies in CEMA represented here today have research and development laboratories and sizeable teams of development engineers as well, working on the designs and testing prototypes of new products. We in Canadian Westinghouse have a research and development laboratory with some 80 to 85 people in it. That is basically just the tip of the iceberg, because in our 18 manufacturing and operating divisions each engineering department carries out a development program on its own specific product line, and it is supported by basic research and development.

I believe Canadian General Electric's approach is the same. Certainly in the wire and cable business the laboratories of the companies represented here are quite well known in our industry. The research department of Noranda Mines Limited, which I think you may be familiar with, is part of the organization which Canadian Wire & Cable is associated with.

• 1700

It is a fact, of course, which you perhaps have in mind that we do also utilize the output of research and development which is done by our associated companies in other

[Interpretation]

Il ne s'agit pas exactement de dumping. Les Japonais ont fait un excellent travail. Nous ne pouvons pas nous plaindre et dire qu'il s'agit vraiment de dumping. L'association de l'industrie électronique aurait sûrement quelque chose à dire à ce sujet. Je ne sais, monsieur, si nous avons fini l'étude de cette question.

The Chairman: I think Mr. Émard has something else to say.

Mr. Émard: I am not particularly interested in transistor radios. I am more interested in research but today we see everywhere that the only countries that can stay on the international export market are the countries as advanced as others on the research level. I would like you to name a few of your companies who have research laboratories that are fully organized and set up. Four or five perhaps. I know that Northern Electric has a research laboratory here in Ottawa, but that is the only one I know of. Are there other companies like this?

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, je pourrais vous donner d'autres exemples. Je crois que toutes les compagnies représentées ici, aujourd'hui, ont des laboratoires de recherche et de développement et ont aussi des ingénieurs qui s'occupent de développement, qui s'occupent de la conception et de la mise à l'épreuve des prototypes. La Canadian Westinghouse a un laboratoire de recherche et de développement et a quatre-vingt ou quatre-vingt-cinq personnes qui y travaillent. Et je ne vous montre que le sommet de l'iceberg: chaque service a son propre projet de développement, pour tel ou tel produit.

En général, je pense que General Electric a la même attitude, surtout pour les câbles et les fils. Les laboratoires des fabricants de câbles et de fils représentés ici sont très bien connus dans notre industrie: la Noranda Research, que vous connaissez probablement, est une partie de la Canadian Wire and Cable. Vous songiez peut-être aussi au fait que nous utilisons aussi les recherches et le développement faits par nos associés dans d'autres pays. Nous considérons que c'est une preuve de gestion efficace, car il n'est pas rentable d'investir des sommes dans la recherche pour réinventer la roue dans chaque pays. Je pense que les rapports qui existent entre les laboratoires du Canada sont semblables aux rap-countries. This we consider to be only prudent, efficient and effective management because it does not pay to spend money on research and development to re-invent the wheel. I think the relationship you find between the laboratories that I have mentioned in Canadian industry and those of their parents or associates in other countries is similar to the relationship that exists between Northern Electric laboratories that you referred to, and the well-known Bell laboratories in the United States, where they have very large and significant laboratories doing a great amount of research and development.

[Texte]

The amount of attention, the amount of effort, the amount of money going into research and development in Canada is rising in a very encouraging manner. My own concern as a manager is that we are doing something that is very necessary, but not necessarily all that is sufficient in order to utilize the output of that research and development. The kind of unfair and unequitable trade practices that we have been discussing, of course, will tend to negate the best results of research and development.

We believe that a continuing effort in research and development will only be justified and will only continue in this country if we have more protection in our home market, particularly in those large heavy apparatus products which do inherently require the highest level of technical support. The extra high voltage systems that are being installed in this country are stretching the state of the art in using all the very latest knowledge available in the word in electrical engineering.

The Chairman: I understand that Mr. Samis will add his comments on the question of research.

Mr. F. G. Samis (General Manager, Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association): Thank you. Mr. Chairman in a survey which CEMA made a little over a year ago 40 member companies reported that they were doing research and development in Canada. A DBS publication which I have here entitled Daily Bulletin Supplement 3, dated April 12, 1967 shows that the electrical products industry in Canada spent on research and development in 1963 $38.6 million; in 1964, $48.8 million; in 1965, $63 million; and in 1966, $71.5 million, and in all four of those years it led all other industries in Canada.

M. Émard: Il est normal que dans l'industrie électrique et électronique, vous soyez à ports qui existent entre les laboratoires de la Northern Electric et les laboratoires de la Bell, aux États-Unis. Ce sont des laboratoires très importants où l'on fait beaucoup de recherche.

[Interprétation]

L'attention, l'effort et l'argent impliqués dans les recherches au Canada augmentent de façon très encourageante et intéressante. Nous avons fait des choses très utiles, mais cela ne veut pas dire que ce soit suffisant pour utiliser le rendement des recherches et du développement.

Et cette pratique commerciale injuste dont nous avons parlé ici aura pour effet d'annihiler les meilleurs résultats de ces recherches. Nous pensons que l'effort continu dans les recherches et le développement ne sera justifié et ne continuera dans ce pays, que si nous avons plus de protection sur notre marché domestique, surtout en ce qui regarde ces appareils lourds, c'est-à-dire les grandes pièces d'équipement lourd, qui requièrent un appui le plus considérable. On est à installer des systèmes à très haut voltage et pour ce faire, on a besoin des meilleurs savants en matière de génie électronique.

Le président: Je crois que M. Samis a des commentaires à faire sur la question de la recherche.

M. Samis (gérant général, Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association): Merci, monsieur le président. Dans une enquête faite par CEMA il y a un peu plus d'un an, 40 compagnies-membres ont dit qu'elles faisaient du développement et de la recherche au Canada. La publication du Bureau fédéral de la statistique que j'ai sous les yeux intitulée: «Supplément numéro 3 du Bulletin quotidien», en date du 12 avril 1967, montre que l'industrie des produits électriques au Canada a dépensé pour la recherche et le développement en 1963, $38.6 millions; en 1964, $48.8 millions; en 1965, $63 millions et en 1966, $71.5 millions. Au cours de ces quatre années, elle était à la tête de ces industries.

Mr. Émard: We should realize also that in an industry such as electricity and electronics l'avant-garde; ce n'est peut-être pas totalement à votre crédit que vous dépensiez un montant d'argent aussi pour les recherches. Sans vouloir critiquer, je crois que l'industrie électrique et électronique demande beaucoup plus de recherche que les autres industries en général.

[Text]

Je voulais savoir aussi si, dans vos laboratoires, vous vous adonnez à la recherche pure ou si vous vous limitez au développement. Je pense que c'est ce qui importe, car si on veut développer un produit, complètement nouveau, ici au Canada, ce sera beaucoup plus facile de le vendre à travers le monde, tandis que si on ne fait que copier ceux qui ont été inventés ailleurs, comme aux États-Unis, par exemple, dans la plupart des cas, et qu'on essaie de les adapter, les développer et les améliorer, nos chances de nous affirmer sur le marché mondial sont beaucoup plus difficiles.

Mr. Rapsey: I might seem to differ with Mr. Émard, but on this question of what is pure research and what is development, of course, it is difficult to put an exact dividing line. I feel very strongly that actually what Canada needs in addition to as much more pure research as we can support is a lot more product development, because when it comes to pay-off in dollars it is the development aspect that puts the dollars into the economy. I think I am supported by numerous bodies that have been commenting on science policy in Canada which is now under study as you know, and while I would be the last one to play down or to wish to do less pure research—I wish we would do more of it—I feel we need to do much more of the product development type, than we have at the present time because this is actually what produces the dollars.

• 1705

Le président: Mais voici monsieur Émard, je vais accepter votre question, mais vous savez que la coutume de ce Comité est d'accorder vingt minutes à chaque député.

M. Émard: Une minute, et je ne parlerai pas après.

Le président: Non, ce n'est pas là, la question. Vous avez le droit de revenir après les autres. Monsieur Émard.

M. Émard: Vous avez mentionné tout à l'heure la difficulté d'établir un marché de fils et câbles au Japon. Est-ce vrai?

[Interpretation]

you should be ahead anyway. Perhaps it is not altogether to your credit to spend such amounts for research because—of course I do not want to criticize—I think that in electricity and in electronics you require much more research generally speaking than in other industries. I also would like to add this question: Do you do pure research in your labs or do you confine yourself to applied work? I think this is most important too, because I think that if you can develop a completely new product here in Canada it will be much easier to sell it throughout the world, while if we simply take products which have been invented say in other countries, such as the United States, in the majority of cases and if we tried to adjust them and to adapt them here and develop or improve them—I do not think I know what word you use but anyway, improve them—our chances to assert ourselves on the world market of course are much smaller.

M. Rapsey: Je peux sembler différer d'opinion avec M. Émard, mais la question de savoir ce que sont au juste la recherche pure et le développement. C'est assez difficile d'établir la ligne de démarcation, n'est-ce pas? Mais pour ma part, je suis certain que ce qu'il faut au Canada, en plus de la recherche pure, c'est beaucoup plus le travail de développement des produits, parce que quand on en vient au prix de revient en dollars, c'est l'aspect développement qui contribue à investir les dollars dans l'économie.

Pour ma part, et je pense ici que je suis certainement appuyé par bien des organismes qui ont fait des commentaires sur la politique des sciences du Canada qui fait l'objet d'une étude comme vous le savez, je serais certainement le dernier à sous-estimer ou à vouloir faire moins de recherche pure. Je voudrais qu'on en fasse davantage, mais je crois que nous devrions en faire beaucoup plus dans le domaine du développement d'un produit que nous n'en faisons à l'heure actuelle, car c'est ce qui donne le dollar, en fin de compte.

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Émard. Now, I will accept this question but you know the practice of this Committee is to grant 20 minutes to each member.

Mr. Émard: I will just take one minute and then I will not say a word after that.

The Chairman: I am not saying that you cannot speak after that. You can come back after the others have had their chance.

Mr. Émard: Well, you mentioned the difficulty of establishing a market for wire and cables, in Japan, is that so?

[Texte]

Mr. Rapsey: We would like to call on Mr. Lindsay to speak on the wire and cable aspect.

Mr. T. A. Lindsay (First Vice President of Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association and President of Phillips Cables Limited): I am sorry Mr. Chairman, I did not quite catch the question.

Le président: Voulez-vous répéter votre question. On va vous accorder une autre minute, monsieur Émard.

M. Émard: Je crois qu'on a mentionné tout à l'heure la difficulté d'établir un marché pour les fils et câbles canadiens au Japon. Est-ce vrai ou si j'ai bien entendu?

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Chairman, I actually welcome the opportunity to reply to Mr. Émard's question. For the past 18 months, the Japanese cable makers have been making a determined and intensive drive for wire and cable business in Western Canada. Beginning in Vancouver in late 1966, Japanese wire and cable companies have offered power cable to utilities in Western Canada at dump prices, and have now virtually succeeded in excluding Canadian wire and cable companies from that particular market.

The consequent loss of the market and the depression of power cable prices has been the major consideration in the decision of our company, Phillips Cables Limited, to close down our Montreal plant. This plant has been making high voltage paper insulated power cable for the past 50 years, and we consider this not only an economic loss to the company but to Montreal and to Canada, as the skills of our Montreal employees have been irrevocably lost.

We understand that the Japanese cable manufacturers are intending to make further penetration of the Canadian market, both in the power and communication sectors, and we cannot help being apprehensive that regardless of what anti-dumping measures are taken that further injury to the wire and cable industry is imminent.

In connection with the question which Mr. Gillespie raised, it is particularly disturbing to our company that the whole Japanese wire and cable industry are effectively protected in their own market by non-tariff barriers, and are therefore able to enjoy a high degree of protection which effectively absorbs their total overhead. If you would be interested in just one specific example, our Vice-President of Sales was sent to Japan this year in an attempt to see what business he could get in Japan because the power cable and communi-

[Interprétation]

M. Rapsey: Je voudrais demander à M. Lindsay de traiter de ce sujet.

M. Lindsay (1er vice-président de Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association): Excusez-moi, monsieur le président je n'ai pas très bien saisi la question.

The Chairman: Would you repeat please your question Mr. Émard.

Mr. Émard: I think you mentioned the difficulty of establishing a market for Canadian wires and cables in Japan, is that true or was I mistaken? Did I understand you correctly?

M. Lindsay: Monsieur le président, en fait je suis très heureux d'avoir l'occasion de répondre à M. Émard. Pendant les 18 derniers mois, les fabricants de câbles japonais, ont fait une campagne intensive pour étendre leurs échanges ou plutôt leurs envois de câbles et de fils dans l'Ouest du Canada.

Débutant à Vancouver à la fin de 1966, ils ont offert des câbles de pouvoir aux services publics de l'Ouest du Canada à des prix de dumping et maintenant, ils ont presque complètement réussi à supprimer les compagnies de fils et câbles du marché dans l'Ouest.

La perte de marchés consécutive et la dépression des prix des câbles sur le marché est la question la plus importante qui a amené Phillips Cables Limited à prendre la décision de fermer son usine de Montréal. Cette usine fabriquait des câbles à haut voltage à isolant de papier depuis 50 ans et c'est une perte économique pour Montréal et pour le pays, et ainsi les talents de ces employés de Montréal ne sont pas mis à profit. Les fabricants japonais de câbles ont de plus l'intention de pénétrer plus avant dans le marché canadien, à la fois dans le secteur du pouvoir et celui des communications et nous ne pouvons pas nous empêcher d'éprouver beaucoup d'appréhension. Quelles que soient les mesures antidumping qui seront prises, il existe une menace pour l'industrie de fils et câbles. Quant à la question que M. Émard a soulevée, c'est assez inquiétant pour notre compagnie de constater que toute l'industrie de fils et câbles au Japon est protégée sur son propre marché par des barrières non-tarifaires.

Par conséquent, les fabricants japonais ont un grand degré de protection qui, en fait, absorbe tous leurs frais supplémentaires d'exploitation. Si vous voulez un exemple concret: notre représentant des ventes a été envoyé au cations cable prices are quite attractive in that country. He saw several of the communication and power utilities, asked for tenders and in every instance was refused. The refusal usually took the course of him asking for a tender and the reply was that he could not have a tender because we were not a qualified supplier. So he said: "Well, how do we become a qualified supplier?" They said "You must have the specifications and have been able to submit an approved sample of your product." He said: "Well then I would like the specifications". The answer was: "We only give the specifications to qualified suppliers."

[Text]

• 1710

The Chairman: Mr. Hind, Mr. Lindsay said those cables were placed on the Canadian market at dump prices. What happened in your Department?

Mr. Hind: Mr. Chairman, I would first of all like to congratulate the CEMA organization for keeping the Department of National Revenue well informed of past importations, and prospective importations. They have furnished us with valuable information which has enabled us to go ahead in the past. I would like to hope that they will continue to do so.

On the basis of information that they have furnished to us we have looked into the value of a number of the commodities that have been mentioned today, namely, transformers, power cable, turboelectric generator sets, and a number of other things that I could mention as well. In some cases we have found dumping. We have collected dumping duty. In other cases we have found no dumping and have collected no dumping duty. I might say to Mr. Lindsay that we have found dumping in respect of the power cable that he has just mentioned.

Mr. Hales: Not at the moment, my question has been answered.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert, you were the first one to ask a question and we cut you off part way. Have you any more questions?

Mr. Lambert: Well I thought Mr. Rapsey was going to come back to the point that I had raised, but his answering was diverted.

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, either one of the two gentlemen who spoke last, I think perhaps more likely Mr. Cheesman, might

[Interpretation]

Japon cette année pour essayer d'y trouver des débouchés parce que les prix des câbles de pouvoir électrique sont assez bas dans ce pays. Il a vu plusieurs des services de communication et d'énergie hydraulique; il a demandé des soumissions, ce qu'on lui a refusé.

En général, il demandait, par exemple, une offre et on lui répondait: nous ne pouvons pas vous fixer de prix ou vous faire des offres, parce que vous n'êtes pas un fournisseur qualifié.

Alors, nous avons dit: comment devenons-nous un fournisseur qualifié? Alors on nous répondait: il faut que vous ayez les spécifications et que vous ayez été capable de soumettre un échantillon approuvé de votre produit. Alors nous répondions: donc, donnez-nous les spécifications. Voici la réponse: on donne des spécifications seulement aux fournisseurs qualifiés.

Le président: M. Lindsay dit que ces câbles ont été placés sur le marché canadien au prix de dumping. Qu'est-ce que votre ministère a fait?

M. Hind: Tout d'abord, monsieur le président, je voudrais féliciter l'organisation CEMA qui a toujours tenu le ministère du Revenu national au courant des importations et des prévisions d'importation. Elle nous a donné des renseignements d'une grande valeur qui nous ont facilité notre travail par le passé. J'espère qu'ils vont continuer à nous tenir au courant.

Au moyen des renseignements que nous avons obtenus de cette association, nous avons pu étudier la valeur d'un bon nombre des marchandises mentionnées aujourd'hui, soit transformateurs, câbles électriques, générateurs turbo-électriques, etc.

Dans certains cas, nous avons perçu des droits de dumping; dans d'autres cas, il n'y avait pas de dumping; par conséquent, nous n'avons pas perçu de droits de dumping. Mais je dirais à M. Lindsay qu'il y avait dumping dans l'affaire du câble dont il vient de parler.

M. Hales: Je n'ai pas de questions pour le moment, on y a déjà répondu.

Le président: Monsieur Lambert, vous étiez le premier et nous vous avons coupé la parole, avez-vous d'autres questions?

M. Lambert: Je pensais que M. Rapsey devait revenir aux questions que j'avais soulevées, et je pense qu'il s'en est écarté.

M. Rapsey: Monsieur le président, je pense que M. Cheesman serait le mieux qualifié pour répondre à cette question. Quelle part de wish to speak to this point of how much of our trouble is dumping, and how much is because we are just not as efficient or as smart or a high volume or what have you.

[Texte]

Qualified supplier is the term. One of the reasons we have not answered Mr. Lambert more fully and more directly is because it is a very difficult question to answer. We do not entirely know the answer ourselves, but I think that we can make some comment on it. Would you care to take that Mr. Cheesman.

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, I will endeavour to answer. As our president of CEMA has said, it is a difficult subject. In part, and only in part, of course, there is the characteristic that Mr. Gillespie asked some questions about some time ago. Are the products which are being offered and will be eventually shipped into the Canadian market identical to products sold in the country of origin, and therefore are our investigators and the government's investigators able to see precisely similar transactions. The answer is no. Particularly in large heavy electrical apparatus there is a high degree of custom tailoring, custom designing.

However, this quite frankly is not a matter of great substance. There are comparisons of products close enough and the real cost difference due to the differences in technical features are very much smaller than the differences in prices we see. When we see prices as we have said of 48 per cent of the price level for the nearest equivalent product in the country of origin, then we know it is not a difference in technical features or compliance with specifications.

The other point in this regard, and one point that is not portrayed on our chart that Mr. McArthur put for you, is that the supplier shows the export price as a fair market value price. The customs officer looking at this of course, does not see a dump. He says this is a fair market value so the onus then comes back upon us to try to find out the fact of dump. As I say it is very difficult in these products to get to it.

• 1715

The other thing, of course, under the present legislation, which we hope is going to be greatly eased under the proposed new legislation, is that at the present time there can be no action taken until the goods enter the country. In the case of a product such as a water-wheel generator there can be a 20 to 36 month gap between the time of placement of order and delivery of goods into the country. In fact, some of the major injury to the Canadian water wheel generator industry has taken place and there was very little, if any-nos ennuis est due au dumping, et quelle autre part est due au fait que nous ne sommes pas aussi efficaces ou pas aussi fins que...

[Interprétation]

Une des raisons pourquoi nous n'avons pas répondu plus directement à M. Lambert, c'est que sa question est bien difficile. Nous n'avons pas nous-mêmes toutes les réponses, mais je pense que nous pouvons faire des commentaires. Monsieur Cheesman, voulez-vous répondre?

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, c'est un sujet bien difficile. M. Gillespie, je pense, a posé des questions, à ce sujet, il y a quelque temps. Est-ce que les produits offerts et qui éventuellement seront mis sur le marché canadien, sont identiques aux produits vendus dans leur pays d'origine, et ainsi nos enquêteurs et ceux du gouvernement sont-ils capables de comparer exactement les transactions? La réponse est non. Surtout pour les appareils électriques lourds. On les fait sur mesure, sur commande. On compare des produits très semblables et les différences de caractéristiques techniques sont bien plus petites que la différence de prix.

Quand on voit des prix, de quarante huit pour cent du prix du produit le plus semblable dans le pays d'origine, on s'aperçoit qu'il n'est pas question de différences techniques ou de conformité aux spécifications. L'autre argument à cet égard, et qui ne ressort pas du tableau que nous a présenté M. McArthur, c'est que le fournisseur déclare le prix d'exportation comme la juste valeur du marché. L'officier des douanes découvre que la loi est respectée, puisqu'il s'agit de la juste valeur du marché. C'est donc à nous de découvrir les faits et c'est difficile. De plus, aux termes de la législation actuelle, qui, nous l'espérons, sera beaucoup plus large, on ne peut rien faire avant que les biens n'entrent au pays. Dans le cas d'articles comme un générateur de moulin à eau, vous pouvez avoir une différence de vingt à trente six mois entre la commande et la livraison de l'équipement dans le pays. Un tort considérable a été causé à l'industrie canadienne des générateurs de moulins à eau, et il y a très peu qu'on pouvait faire suivant la législation actuelle parce que le produit ne sera pas livré avant au moins un an.

En 1967, les fournisseurs étrangers ont fourni 65.7 p. 100 soit deux tiers des générateurs de moulins à eau au marché canadien, soit une valeur de onze millions et demi. En 1964, c'était 18 p. 100, et en 1959, 26 p. 100. Les projets comme la Manicouagan, les chutes Churchill, Peace River ou Nelson River commandent de grandes quantités d'équipement tous les trois ou quatre ans. C'est un phénothing, that could have been done under present legislation because delivery of those water-wheel generators will not take place until more than a year from now.

[Text]

In 1967 the orders placed by Canadian customers for water-wheel generators were some $11.5 million of which 65.7 per cent, two-thirds, were placed with offshore suppliers. There were three previous years in which high percentages went to offshore suppliers, in 1964, 18 per cent; in 1959, 26 per cent. As you will appreciate from what is well known about projects such as Manicouagan, Churchill Falls, Peace River and Nelson River, this is a highly cyclic business, large orders come up for bidding by the industry once every three of four years. A manufacturer gets his share of that or he is out for quite a long time to come.

In the case of my company we were very much out in the last round when 66 per cent of the orders went to offshore suppliers. In fact that put us well below an economically viable unit in the water wheel generator business in Canada, and we had to face up to what we would do with that operation. We have closed it down. Some 275 people, many of them long service employees because we have been making this product in Canada for over 50 years, were affected. We have, of course, done everything we can to relocate them but no matter how you cut it 275 people in our company are without work as a result of that.

I wish I could give a direct answer. I wish I knew the direct answer to Mr. Lambert's question, of how much of the injury we have suffered is because of dump. However, as I say I must reciprocate Mr. Hind's statement that there has been good communication between the industry and the Department. It is not for lack of detective work on our part; it is for lack of success in detective work that we have not proven this. As Mr. Johnston said earlier we are starting to find things. We have in our hands as an industry association documentation concerning the practices in the United Kingdom. It may take us longer and it may be more difficult to establish similar evidence vis-a-vis Japan.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, I asked this question because we have dumping legislation on the books; we are bringing in new legislation, and I want to see whether the old legislation was defective and whether this new legislation will improve the position. We are concerned with dumping legislation and not the question of the level of a customs tariff, or of the level of research, or the efficiency of the Canadian industry. I asked, how much of this, shall we say, drop or inroad in the mène cyclique. Les industries, les fabricants doivent obtenir leur part de commandes, autrement, leur production s'en ressent longtemps. C'est le cas de ma compagnie qui a vu 66 p. 100 des commandes passer à l'étranger, la plaçant dans une position absolument non viable. Nous avons dû fermer nos portes. Deux cent soixante quinze personnes, souvent des employés qui avaient des années de service, parce que nous fonctionnions au Canada depuis plus de cinquante ans. Nous avons été durement affectés. Nous avons fait évidemment tout ce que nous avons pu pour replacer ces employés mis à pied. Malgré tout, quand vous avez deux cent soixante-quinze personnes sans travail dans votre compagnie, c'est sérieux.

[Interpretation]

J'aimerais bien connaître, la réponse à la question de M. Lambert. Quel part de préjudice vient du dumping. Je dois rendre la pareille à M. Hind: il y a eu de bonnes communications entre l'industrie et le ministère.

Ce n'est pas à cause d'un manque de recherche de notre part, mais d'un manque de succès. Comme l'a dit M. Johnston, nous commençons à découvrir des choses. Nous avons en main, comme association industrielle, de la documentation concernant les pratiques au Royaume Uni. Ça peut être plus long et plus difficile d'établir un dossier semblable concernant le Japon.

M. Lambert: Nous avons une loi antidumping, nous présentons un nouveau projet de loi, et je voudrais bien savoir si l'ancienne mesure législative était inefficace, et si la nouvelle va l'améliorer. Ce qui nous intéresse, c'est la mesure sur le dumping, non pas la question du niveau du tarif douanier ou le niveau de recherche ou l'efficacité de l'industrie canadienne.

Si le dumping nuit à l'industrie canadienne, c'est qu'il y a une faille dans la loi et que

[Texte]

Canadian market may be the result of dumping because if it is an open sore, an open wound, then we have to do something about it. If the inroads have not been the result of dumping then none of this legislation will be of any help.

Mr. Rapsey: I have some general comments. The new legislation in some ways should be a help. We believe that everything will depend on how vigorously it is administered. That is the reason we said something of that in our presentation. We do have, of course, injury as a new requirement of proof and this is a great big question mark which we really do not know the answer to yet, and no one does. We have spent some time on that today because we felt it was most important.

• 1720

Returning to this chart of typical examples, there is an illustration of why it is rather difficult to conceive of dumping which is not, in considerable measure, injurious. There are two cases, one at $85 and one at $65, depending on the degree of cutting or the degree of overhead absorption that the exporter was asking for in his quoted price. Obviously it is rather hard to conceive of a product that you could cut from $100 down to $65, take the order and still make any money. In fact, it is rather difficult for me to conceive of anything that you could cut down from $100 to $85 and still make money at the present margins.

It is the case though where imports are occurring at these even slightly reduced figures that they do have a depressing effect on the Canadian market which inevitably means that the profitability and ability to provide employment is somewhat reduced by the depression of the price level.

The Chairman: Mr. Saltzman. Are you finished Mr. Rapsey?

Mr. Rapsey: I was going to make one more comment. The ability to compete will, of course, vary from section to section of the industry. We have been spending a good deal of time on heavy equipment today. The industries that are directly involved, have done enough analysis to know that on a basis of straight cost competition—cost in the usual sense—that Canada could consider itself quite competitive. There are other industries where we might have more trouble if the difference is not dumping but simply low labour costs.

It is most difficult to give an over-all broad answer, but there are quite a few sections of the industry where we believe we have information that we are competitive on a straight basis of productivity and efficiency.

[Interprétation]

nous devons y remédier. Mais si le préjudice n'est pas causé par le dumping, cette mesure législative nouvelle ne servira à rien.

M. Rapsey: La nouvelle mesure législative devrait être utile. Tout dépendra de la vigueur avec laquelle on l'administrera. Nous en avons parlé dans notre exposé. Évidemment, les préjudices, il faut les prouver, c'est une nouvelle exigence. Mais il y a un point d'interrogation auquel personne ne connaît la réponse. Nous avons passé un certain temps là-dessus aujourd'hui parce que nous trouvions que c'était extrêmement important.

Pour revenir à ce tableau d'exemple typique, nous en avons un autre qui nous montre pourquoi il est difficile de concevoir un dumping qui ne soit pas nocif dans une bonne part. Ici vous avez deux cas, 85 p. 100 et 65 p. 100, suivant les degrés de recoupage ou d'absorption d'overhead demandés par l'exportateur dans son prix fixé.

Évidemment, c'est assez difficile de concevoir un produit que l'on puisse réduire de 100 à 65, prendre la commande et faire encore un profit. Je trouve assez difficile de concevoir que l'on puisse faire certaines déductions de 100 à 85, avec un profit, à l'heure actuelle.

Les importations ont quand même, avec ces prix légèrement réduits, un effet de dépression sur le marché canadien, ce qui inévitablement, veut dire que la rentabilité et la capacité de fournir un emploi se trouvent quelque peu réduites par la dépression des niveaux des prix.

Le président: Monsieur Saltzman? Avez-vous fini, monsieur Rapsey?

M. Rapsey: Je voulais dire une autre chose. La possibilité de soutenir la concurrence va évidemment varier, d'un secteur à l'autre de l'industrie. Nous avons passé beaucoup de temps aujourd'hui à traiter de la question de l'équipement lourd. Les industries directement intéressées ont fait beaucoup d'analyses sur la concurrence des coûts directs, coûts dans le sens usuel, où le Canada pourrait se considérer comme assez concurrentiel. Il y a d'autres industries où on peut avoir plus de difficultés si la différence n'est pas simplement le dumping, avec des coûts de main-d'œuvre plus faibles, d'autres secteurs de l'industrie.

C'est difficile de donner une réponse générale, mais il y a des articles de la loi où nous

[Text]

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Chairman, the subject has stretched a little to encompass other things besides the anti-dumping provisions we were discussing. While we have these gentlemen here I would like to ask them a number of questions about the competitiveness of their industry. A number of studies have been made on electrical industry, and a number of statements by electrical industry indicating that there has been, or they have, excessive duplication of product lines, and that there is a need to rationalize segments of this particular industry. Also, if we suffer from anything in this country, we may be suffering from excess competition. The result is that many of our manufacturers are in a position where they cannot compete because they do not get the range of production or the length of production that is necessary to take advantage of modern technology.

There was an item in the Globe and Mail on September 12, 1967, in which representatives of your industry made a submission. It is a report of a submission made to the Economic Council of Canada, where you requested changes to the Combines Investigation Act in order to permit the rationalization of your industry, in order to permit people within your industry to become more effective in terms of bidding and penetration of foreign markets. Under the present provisions of the Combines Investigation Act, you are permitted to combine for export purposes, but you will be prosecuted if you do it in the domestic market. The comment has been made that it is impossible to do it one way without doing it the other way.

• 1725

We realize that the industry has serious problems. I think, perhaps, the example Mr. Cheesman was giving may have applied to an industry in my riding that had to be phased out, which is regrettable and it caused great distress. I am very much concerned about the future of the electrical industry in Canada. It seems to me, and I would invite your comments gentlemen, that unless we take additional steps to rationalize and to encourage the rationalization of Canadian industry, that free trade, rather than doing it for us, may very well destroy the industry unless these concurrent steps are taken. I would invite your comments on that, if I may.

[Interpretation]

pensons avoir assez de renseignements, nous pensons que nous sommes concurrentiels, sur une base stricte de productivité et d'efficacité.

M. Saltsman: Monsieur le président, on a étendu un peu les cadres pour aborder d'autres sujets, en plus des mesures antidumping que nous discutons. Pendant que ces messieurs sont ici, j'aimerais leur poser des questions sur la position concurrentielle de leur industrie. Beaucoup d'enquêtes ont été faites sur l'industrie électrique, ainsi que beaucoup de déclarations de gens de l'industrie électrique, indiquant qu'il y a eu, ou qu'il y a, un recoupement excessif de certaines lignes de produits, qu'il faudrait faire une certaine épuration d'un secteur de cette industrie en particulier, et si nous souffrons de quoi que ce soit dans ce pays, peut-être que nous souffrons de trop de concurrence. Ce qui amène comme résultat que bien des fabricants canadiens ne peuvent pas soutenir la concurrence parce qu'ils n'ont pas la gamme de production, la durée de production qui est nécessaire pour profiter de la technologie moderne.

Maintenant, il y a un article dans le Globe and Mail du 12 septembre 1967, dans lequel des représentants de votre industrie font une soumission. C'est un rapport d'une déposition faite au Conseil économique du Canada. Dans ce rapport, vous demandez des changements dans la Loi d'enquêtes sur les coalitions, afin de permettre aux gens de votre industrie d'être plus efficaces lorsqu'ils font des offres et veulent avoir accès aux marchés étrangers.

D'après la loi actuelle d'enquêtes sur les coalitions, vous pouvez vous coaliser pour des fins d'exportation, mais l'on poursuivra si vous le faites sur le marché domestique. Et les commentaires faits là-dessus sont qu'il est impossible de le faire dans un sens sans le faire dans l'autre sens.

Nous nous rendons compte que l'industrie éprouve des problèmes sérieux. Dans ma propre circonscription, je pense que le principe de M. Cheesman s'appliquerait à une industrie qui a fini par être obligée de fermer ses portes et de déphaser ses opérations, ce qui est regrettable et a été assez pénible.

Je suis très inquiet de l'avenir de l'industrie électrique au Canada. Il me semble, et je vais vous demander de faire des commentaires là-dessus, messieurs, il me semble, dis-je, qu'à moins de prendre des mesures supplémentaires pour rationaliser l'industrie canadienne, ou pour l'y encourager, que le commerce libre, au lieu de le faire pour nous, peut très bien détruire l'industrie, à moins que ces mesures soient prises. Je vous invite à faire des commentaires là-dessus, si vous me le permettez.

[Texte]

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, I agree with Mr. Saltsman's observation that there is over-capacity in the Canadian electrical manufacturing industry. There is also a problem in this country, more than other countries, of too wide a variety of products being manufactured in our factories.

It is interesting and, I hope, useful to observe that that part of our industry which has suffered the greatest damage due to off-shore competition, is that part of the industry in which, in fact, those of us who are in it—the large heavy apparatus—are not very many. The unit costs are much less sensitive to volume than they are in highly repetitive products such as the previously discussed small transistor radio. As I think has been referred to, our studies of comparative real costs of our Canadian production of power transformers, for example, are that we are fully competitive.

So rationalization has to be approached and considered by thinking about specific product lines. It may be there would be something we possibly could do in the light of a change in the Combines laws of this country. Certainly, I think, the submission you referred to from a year and a half ago was made with that in mind.

However, under the present situation, of course, we cannot even get together for meaningful discussion of the potential on this. We can only make individual conjecture on it. I think there is some rationalization taking place. I referred previously to water-wheel generators, a year ago there were three manufacturers in Canada, and today there are two. Presumably this is an improvement in that direction.

Mr. Saltsman: It is a hard way to rationalize though.

Mr. Cheesman: That is right. It is a question of definition of rationalization. If the fact that Canadian Westinghouse has ceased to manufacture water-wheel generators means that in turn someone else should hand over to us their share of the market of product X, certainly in my present situation you can appreciate I would look favourably on that. Whether that is realistic in a free enterprise system is another question.

I am saying too much and not answering your question, because I honestly...

Mr. Saltsman: I realize the delicate position of a conversation...

[Interprétation]

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, je suis plutôt d'accord avec les observations de M. Saltsman, qui dit qu'il y a une surcapacité de l'industrie électrique de fabrication canadienne. Il y a certains problèmes que nous avons plus ici que dans d'autres pays, une trop grande variété de produits qui sont fabriqués dans nos usines.

C'est intéressant, et peut-être utile, d'observer que cette partie de notre industrie qui a souffert des plus grands torts, à cause de la concurrence étrangère, est cette partie de l'industrie où, en fait, ceux d'entre nous qui y sont, celle de l'équipement lourd, ne sont pas très nombreux. Le coût par unité est beaucoup moins affecté par le volume que dans les produits que l'on fabrique en série, comme, par exemple, les petits radios à transistors. Je pense qu'on a déjà parlé de notre étude de coûts comparés de la production canadienne de transformateurs de pouvoir, par exemple, où nous sommes entièrement concurrentiels dans ce cas-ci.

Il faut donc considérer la rationalisation, il faut y penser. Mais je pense à des séries de produits particuliers et il se peut qu'il y ait quelque chose que nous pourrions faire peut-être, pour changer la loi sur les coalitions de ce pays. Mais sans aucun doute la proposition dont vous avez parlé, qui a été avancée il y a environ un an et demi, l'avait été dans cette intention. Mais évidemment, dans le moment, nous ne pouvons même pas nous réunir pour discuter sérieusement des possibilités.

Donc, tout ce que nous pouvons faire, ce sont des hypothèses personnelles. Je pense qu'il y a une certaine rationalisation qui se fait. J'ai mentionné l'an dernier qu'il y avait trois fabricants de générateurs à roue hydraulique au Canada, il n'y en a plus que deux. Je présume que c'est une amélioration dans ce sens.

M. Saltsman: C'est tout de même une façon ardue de rationaliser.

M. Cheesman: C'est vrai. C'est une question de définition de la rationalisation. Si cela veut dire que Canadian Westinghouse cesse de fabriquer des générateurs à roue hydraulique, qu'en retour, quelqu'un d'autre veuille nous transmettre leur part du marché du produit «X», vous comprendrez que, dans l'état actuel des choses, je serais plutôt favorable. Que ce soit réaliste dans ce système d'entreprises libres, c'est une autre question. Mais, je parle trop, je ne réponds pas à votre question, je pense.

M. Saltsman: Je me rends compte de la tournure délicate d'une conversation...

[Text]

Mr. Cheesman: Excuse me, sir. I am not trying to be evasive because of any concern about delicate positions specifically which, perhaps, I do not appreciate, but rather the question of just how is this going to be brought about? Are we going, in fact, to have someone saying, "This company will manufacture all power circuit breakers for Canadian utilities; this company will manufacture all the power transformers for Canadian utilities"? Amongst other things we have to consider our customers in this regard. We have seen no sound indications that they are particularly keen to go along with this. So there is a great deal of study and a great deal of convincing of people that would have to be done in order to achieve this kind of rationalization. It would require a major departure from what we loosely call the free enterprise system. I am not passing judgment on that, at the moment. Maybe this is what we are being driven to by the course of events.

• 1730

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Chairman, further to my question to Mr. Cheesman, I might point out that I am not suggesting a major departure from the free enterprise system because some of our major competitors are doing exactly what I suggested. There is a rationalization board in Sweden and instead of discouraging people from coming together they actually encourage the manufacturers to work together. This was the pattern and I believe in all European countries the people were facing heavy competition from it. Therefore, what I am suggesting is perfectly within the framework of our traditional attitude and outlook on business. It is a way of, perhaps, even saving business from itself. The things they are not prepared to do individually or are able to do individually, in the national interest have to be discussed to see what can be done in this area. Obviously, the suggestions would have to come from the industry. The people in the industry would have the best knowledge of what the approaches should be, but I do think this is a serious problem. In closing I would like to put one question to you.

The Chairman: Just a second, Mr. Saltsman. I understand that Mr. Johnston would like to make a comment on your first question.

Mr. Johnston: There was one part of your question, Mr. Saltsman, that I would like to comment upon. You mentioned that free trade would probably drive us to some kind of rationalization.

[Interpretation]

M. Cheesman: Excusez-moi. Je n'essaie de contourner la question ou d'y échapper à cause de positions délicates que peut-être je ne comprends pas très bien, mais la question consiste à savoir comment on va pouvoir réaliser notre objectif. En fait, allons-nous demander à quelqu'un de dire: telle compagnie va fabriquer tous les interrupteurs de pouvoir pour les services d'utilité publique au Canada; cette compagnie va fabriquer tous les transformateurs de pouvoir pour les mêmes services? Entre autres choses, il faut tenir compte aussi de nos clients, à cet égard, et rien ne laisse croire qu'ils tiennent particulièrement à l'accepter. Donc, il y a beaucoup d'étude et beaucoup de travail de persuasion à faire pour mener à bien ce genre de rationalisation. Cela exige que nous nous écartions de ce qu'on appelle le système d'entreprises libres. Et je ne rends pas un jugement à ce sujet, mais c'est probablement dans cette direction que nous devrons aller.

M. Saltsman: Je ne veux pas dire que nous devons abandonner le système de libre entreprise, car certains de nos principaux concurrents font exactement ce que j'ai décrit. Il y a une commission de rationalisation en Suède. Elle encourage plutôt les fabricants à travailler ensemble. Je pense que de la sorte ils font une forte concurrence à tous les pays d'Europe maintenant. Je pense que cela convient à notre tradition industrielle.

Mais ce que les industries ne peuvent faire individuellement, elles devront en discuter ensemble, dans l'intérêt national, parce qu'elles sont les mieux placées pour savoir ce qu'il y a à faire. Avant de terminer, j'aimerais vous poser une question.

Le président: Un instant, s'il vous plaît, monsieur Saltsman; je pense que M. Johnston voudrait ajouter quelque chose.

M. Johnston: Vous avez dit, au sujet de l'entreprise libre, qu'elle conduira probablement à la rationalisation sous une certaine forme.

[Texte]

Mr. Saltzman: No, I did not say that. I said it might destroy you before it drove you to rationalization.

Mr. Johnston: It might destroy us?

Mr. Saltzman: Yes.

Mr. Johnston: If we refer to the present situation as being free trade, that is the reduction of tariffs and the introduction of the Kennedy Round package, it is our view that this is not free trade. You can take all your tariffs off and have zero tariffs, but as long as we face the rough and tumble situation that exists in international trade today with these non-tariff barriers which are both subtle and not so subtle, then we do not have free trade, even if we take off all the tariffs. So, it is not quite a situation of free trade destroying us, real free trade might be the answer to our survival.

Mr. Saltzman: You are taking the position of Gunnar Myrdal who pointed out that the tariffs are becoming insignificant in the trade pattern of the world today and I think there is a lot of truth to what you say.

Mr. Johnston: Yes, that is right.

Mr. Saltzman: I simply agree with you. This, however, does not diminish the point I am trying to make that there is a need for something to be done. It is not only in your industry, I think many other industries in Canada are in the same position.

The Chairman: Mr. Saltzman, I am sorry I understand that Mr. Rapsey would like to add something to what has already been said by Mr. Johnston and Mr. Cheesman.

Mr. Saltzman: It is getting more and more difficult to make a speech, Mr. Chairman, in this Committee. I will defer to Mr. Rapsey.

Mr. Rapsey: I am sorry, I did not intend to interrupt, but I was going to say that one of the reasons we hesitate as an industry to go full tilt down this road is that you thereupon are going in the direction of what we see in the U.K. or in Sweden for that matter. These are matters of allocation, collusion and all those nasty words and we are not too sure that that is what we as an industry would want. Actually, we have been talking about inability to get into the U.K. in this utility type of market. We as an industry would prefer to have access there rather than come to Ottawa and say keep those other fellows out. We would rather be able to get in and have world-wide competition on an equal

[Interprétation]

M. Saltzman: Non, j'ai dit qu'elle périrait avant de vous conduire à une rationalisation de vos méthodes.

M. Johnston: Vraiment?

M. Saltzman: Oui.

M. Johnston: Si la situation actuelle, c'est l'entreprise libre, c'est-à-dire la réduction des tarifs et l'ensemble des négociations du Kennedy Round, nous croyons que non, et même si vous éliminez tous les tarifs. Si nous considérons la situation qui existe sur la scène internationale, même les régions qui n'ont plus de tarifs, il n'y a pas d'entreprise libre, même en éliminant les barrières tarifaires.

Ce n'est pas exactement une situation d'entreprise libre qui nous détruira, mais c'est peut-être cela qui nous permettra de survivre.

M. Saltzman: Vous dites, comme GUNNAR MURDO que les tarifs n'ont plus d'importance dans notre univers aujourd'hui.

M. Johnston: Je crois qu'il y a du vrai là-dedans.

M. Saltzman: Toutefois, cela n'enlève pas l'importance des faits que j'avais mentionnés. Il importe que quelque chose se fasse, non seulement dans votre industrie, mais aussi dans les autres.

Le président: Monsieur Saltzman, je m'excuse, mais je pense que M. Rapsey voulait ajouter quelque chose.

M. Saltzman: Il est de plus en plus difficile de faire des discours ici.

M. Rapsey: Je m'excuse, je ne voulais pas vous interrompre, monsieur. Mais nous hésitons à suivre la même orientation que le Royaume Uni ou la Suède. Il y a des questions de distribution, de collusion et je ne sais pas si c'est ce que notre industrie veut. Nous avons dit qu'il était difficile de pénétrer au Royaume Uni dans ce genre de marché. Nous préférierions toutefois y avoir accès, plutôt que de venir dire à Ottawa de les empêcher de venir ici. Nous voulons une concurrence juste. Je pense que notre mémoire est claire, nous ne demandons pas votre protection, nous voulons tout simplement notre juste part. Mais en prenant des décisions sur la rationalisation, il faut savoir quel prix on doit payer basis. I think our submission makes it rather clear that we are not pleading for protection from the other fellow. We would just like a fair share of it, but in deciding on rationalization there are these questions to determine: what do you pay for the rationalization and what do you achieve? It is a big question.

[Text]

• 1735

Mr. Saltsman: I am throwing this out, however, as something that, I think, Canadian industry has to consider. Mr. Cheesman made the reference that certain industries are getting fewer and fewer people in them, but while this is going on in Canada at a certain pace it is going on at a more rapid pace in Europe where the industries in some cases are already bigger than our own and consolidations are taking place between the giants in Europe. It means that we are going to be facing international giants with perhaps Canadian pygmies and this is a very serious problem for the future development of this country. This is why I took advantage of you gentlemen being before this Committee to put this question to you in the hope that you will give it some consideration and assist those of us in Parliament who are grappling with the problem.

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, there is just one point I would like to make which I think is relevant to what Mr. Saltsman said, an observation that, of course, we have other forces at work in this country which seem to me to be doing everything they can to increase the problem. Again, it is part of our general approach to things, but we are offering a great deal of incentive and encouragement to companies that would come into Canada and open up new manufacturing operations, such as area incentives, and these are adding to the already observed problems.

Again, I can obviously be accused of being selfish. We are here; we have been here for 65 years and we could say; "keep the other people out". We do not say that, but this would, in fact, be the effect of rationalization, would it not?

Mr. Saltsman: If I may be specific, I think, one of the cases you referred to was the situation in Owen Sound where a plant was opened up under area incentives—this is one of the ones of which I have knowledge—that is capable of producing enough television tubes to keep up with twice the population we have now. This is when we already have others in the field and they obviously cannot get the entire market to themselves. So, without talking about specific things though, Mr.

[Interpretation]

pour la rationalisation et quel but cela permet-il d'atteindre.

M. Saltsman: Je pense que l'industrie canadienne doit songer à ceci: Certaines industries fléchissent de plus en plus au Canada; mais le phénomène est plus rapide en Europe. Certaines industries sont déjà plus grandes que les nôtres, et s'unissent de plus en plus. Et face à ces géants internationaux, nous aurons l'air de pygmées. C'est un problème grave pour l'avenir et le développement de notre pays. C'est pourquoi je profite de l'occasion pour vous poser cette question, en espérant que vous pourrez aider ceux qui doivent faire face à ces problèmes tous les jours.

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, à la suite de ce que M. Saltsman a dit, il y a d'autres éléments influents au Canada. Il semble que certains veulent aggraver ce problème. On offre beaucoup de stimulant aux industries qui veulent venir s'installer au pays; aux nouvelles industries, et cela ajoute au problème qui existe déjà.

Encore une fois, on m'accusera peut-être d'être égoïste, mais nous sommes installés ici depuis longtemps, et nous sommes portés à dire: «Que les autres restent chez eux.» Ce n'est pas ce que nous disons, mais cela sera l'effet de la rationalisation.

M. Saltsman: Pour être précis, parlons de l'usine d'Owen Sound, ouverte en vertu du programme de développement régional, et qui produit suffisamment de lampes de télévision pour approvisionner un marché deux fois grand comme celui du Canada. Et il y a encore d'autres producteurs.

Sans nécessairement traiter de ce problème précis, monsieur le président, je voulais que nous étudions ce problème dans l'intérêt de l'industrie et de la nation. A moins que vous

[Texte]

Chairman, my remarks were merely to point out the need of looking at this particular problem in the interests of the industry and in the interests of the nation.

I would like to move on, if I may, unless you gentlemen wish to respond to my comment, to another question directed to Mr. Rapsey.

The Chairman: Mr. Saltzman, may I add to Mr. Cheesman's remarks that the area development subsidies are not only offered to foreign companies, they are offered to Canadian companies as well.

Mr. Saltzman: They are offered to everyone.

Mr. Saltzman: In a newspaper report which appeared in the Globe and Mail of October 1, 1968, Mr. Rapsey was quoted as follows:

Proving injury to a Canadian manufacturer, as will be required by an anti-dumping code to be introduced in Parliament later this year, becomes almost impossible.

"Because of direct contracts between the producer and the buyer, we would not have the slightest way of knowing about many cases of dumping."

However, there is a method of locating these if the Department of National Revenue co-operated. "They are the only ones who would be aware of dumping. They could check on this through their customs invoices, and I am hopeful that this will take place."

I would like to ask Mr. Rapsey if he is optimistic that the Department is prepared to do this?

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Saltzman, I was speaking with that reporter for about an hour and a half and it is not too surprising that he did not quite get the full story.

Mr. Saltzman: I thought that was the politician's field of being misquoted!

Mr. Rapsey: I was pointing out to him that there is a certain class of goods entering Canada which do not become visible and the injured party, if there is an injury, is not even aware of it. You have, of course, retail products, the clothing industry is a prime example, which become very visible in the ordinary course of retail business after they reach Canada. If there is dumping going on, the chances are that injured Canadian producers will become aware of this.

[Interprétation]

vouliez répondre à ces commentaires, messieurs, je voudrais passer à un autre sujet.

Le président: Monsieur Saltzman, je voudrais ajouter que le programme de développement régional est aussi offert aux compagnies canadiennes.

M. Saltzman: Dans un article de journal, paru le 1<sup>er</sup> octobre 1968 dans le Globe and Mail, on a cité M. Rapsey comme suit:

Je cite l'article du journal:

Il sera désormais presque impossible pour un manufacturier canadien, victime de procédure de dumping, de prouver qu'il a bien subi un préjudice aux termes de la nouvelle loi qui sera déposée dans le courant de l'année parlementaire.

En raison des contrats directs entre le producteur et l'acheteur, rien ne nous permet de déceler les nombreux cas de dumping.

Il y a toutefois une méthode de dépister ces manœuvres si le ministère du Revenu national voulait bien coopérer. Il n'y a que ce ministère qui serait au courant, en cas de dumping. Ce ministère serait à même d'effectuer des contrôles grâce aux factures de douanes qu'il détient et j'espère bien qu'il en sera ainsi. Je suis plutôt optimiste à cet égard.

Je voudrais poser une question à M. Rapsey: Est-ce que, selon lui le ministère est prêt à le faire.

M. Rapsey: Monsieur Saltzman, j'ai discuté avec ce même journaliste, et il n'est pas étonnant qu'il n'ait pas tous les faits.

M. Saltzman: Je croyais que seuls les politiciens étaient mal renseignés.

M. Rapsey: Je lui disais que certaines catégories de produits qui entrent au Canada ne sont pas visibles, et que l'industrie qui en souffre ne s'en aperçoit pas toujours.

Il y a, par exemple la vente au détail dans l'industrie du vêtement, c'est facilement visible, si une telle importation se produit.

S'il y a du dumping, les producteurs canadiens le sauront. Aujourd'hui, on parle de gros appareils et le prix du contrat devient propriété publique, c'est donc porté à la con-

[Text]

• 1740

[Interpretation]

We have been talking today of large apparatus which is purchased on tender and, of course, the bid price—the contract price—becomes public property so this is a matter of public knowledge.

There is another class of goods and my particular company happens to be involved in this class of thing where they are not sold at retail; they are not, as a rule, purchased on tender; they are very often bought as part of machinery and the machinery is a direct negotiation between the user and the supplier. It does not appear on the market place and if we are injured by a dumped import of this kind, we have no way of knowing that it was bought, in the first place or that it came to Canada and was put in someone's factory. So there is a class of product which does not become visible and the only people in Canada who would know there is any dumping going on would be the Department of National Revenue, Customs and Excise Division. I am quite satisfied that the Department of National Revenue is doing and will continue to do everything they can to make sure that such dumping, if it is injurious, will be detected.

Mr. Saltzman: Thank you.

Mr. Gillespie: I would like to follow up on this point for a moment—the area of components. When you were referring, Mr. Rapsey, to a part coming in, were you talking about a part that would be used in a piece of equipment in a factory or one that would be installed as a component in something which is resold?

Mr. Rapsey: Actually, we are in a rather special position in this sort of thing. We make electrical motor controls as do several in Canada and these are not usually imported directly, as such, into Canada, and there are a lot of them coming into Canada. They come in mounted on or purchased with some machinery which is invariably an electrically-operated machine and the motors, the controls and so forth come in with or on that machine so that they do not become visible as an electrical importation nor do they go through any usual channels of wholesale and retail trade. They come into Canada as very invisible items, indeed, and we would have no method of knowing whether we were, in fact, being injured by any such importation.

Mr. Gillespie: This is sold directly to the end user?

Mr. Rapsey: That is right.

naissance du public. Il y a une autre catégorie de produits, et il se trouve que ma compagnie en fabrique qui ne sont pas vendus au détail, et règle générale, ils ne sont pas achetés au moyen d'appels d'offres; ils sont souvent achetés comme une partie de l'équipement et celui-ci fait partie d'une négociation directe entre l'utilisateur et le fournisseur.

Cela n'apparaît pas sur le marché.

Et si nous sommes affectés par une importation de ce genre il n'y a pas moyen de savoir que cela a été acheté, tout d'abord que cela est entré au Canada et placé dans une usine quelconque.

Il y a donc une catégorie de produits pour lesquelles cela n'est pas visible, et les seules personnes au Canada qui savent qu'il se fait du dumping dans cette catégorie de produits, sont le ministère du Revenu national, la division des Douanes et Accises.

Je suis convaincu que le ministère du Revenu national fait un excellent travail qu'il continuera à faire, et si le dumping est nuisible, eh bien, on le saura.

M. Saltzman: Merci.

M. Gillespie: Je voudrais revenir sur ce point, monsieur Rapsey. On parle de pièces utilisées dans des pièces d'équipement ou encore une composante pour quelque chose qui est revendue.

M. Rapsey: C'est une position assez spéciale. Nous fabriquons des appareils de contrôle pour moteurs électriques, comme font plusieurs au Canada. D'habitude, ce n'est pas importé directement comme tel, quand nous en recevons, et il en vient beaucoup au Canada. Cela arrive monté ou acheté avec une machine qui, invariablement, est électrique, et les moteurs et contrôles viennent avec ou sur cette machine, de sorte que cela n'est pas visible comme une importation d'appareils électriques, et ne passe pas par les chemins usuels du commerce en gros ou au détail.

Alors, le tout vient au Canada comme un article invisible et nous n'avons aucun moyen de savoir si, en fait, nous sommes affectés par une telle importation.

M. Gillespie: C'est vendu directement à l'utilisateur.

M. Rapsey: Oui.

[Texte]

Mr. Gillespie: That clarifies my question. The question I wanted to ask earlier, Mr. Chairman, was the one that was referred to by Mr. Cheesman, the question of the transistor that is manufactured in Hong Kong or Japan and imported as a branded item by Canadian manufacturers and distributors. Under the existing law, as I understand it, if this item came in at a price below the fair market value this would be dumping and duties could be assessed against it. Under the proposed Bill, the item could come in and it would require injury to be shown before there would be any duty. As there are no Canadian manufacturers of this particular item and as the Canadian manufacturers themselves are importing it, we see an interesting juxtaposition or potential conflict in this regard. It is very much in their interests now, perhaps, to encourage the very types of policies that we have been talking about—costing policies, direct costing—with transistor radios so that they can offer the item at a lower price and expand their market thereby. I would like Mr. Cheesman to comment on this interesting and potential conflict of principle.

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, I think Mr. Gillespie has a point that the majority of us are distributors as well as manufacturers. I cannot speak for the industry although maybe Mr. Samis has these statistics. In fact, Canadian Westinghouse Company, Limited, acts as a distributor in some 2 per cent of its total sales. In other words, we are a manufacturer of 98 per cent and a distributor, in effect, of 2 per cent of our total sales.

• 1745

Returning to the transistor radio, you are quite right and there is, so far as I am aware, no remaining residual Canadian industry in Canada. It could only be under the proposed legislation if someone were proposing to establish such production again that we might be able to protect such industry. What you are saying is that perhaps some of us would find ourselves in a schizophrenic position if that were proposed.

Mr. Gillespie: That is right. Your interests are to beat the supplier down now because you have the argument that it does not matter because there is no injury, so you can cost this on the set of direct costing principles. They are acceptable. You are not going to complain about injury as an industry because you are importing.

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, may I speak further? Let us face it then; as individuals

[Interprétation]

M. Gillespie: La question que je voulais poser, monsieur le président, est la question des transistors, à laquelle M. Cheesman a fait allusion des transistors fabriqués à Hong-Kong au Japon, ceux qui sont importés par les fabricants canadiens avec leur marque de commerce.

Selon les lois actuelles, si le prix est plus bas que la juste valeur du marché, il s'agit peut-être de dumping. Dans la loi proposée, cela nuirait probablement avant qu'on ait à payer les droits de douanes. Comme aucun fabricant canadien ne fabrique cet article particulier et comme les fabricants canadiens eux-mêmes l'importent, nous avons là une juxtaposition intéressante ou un conflit éventuel. C'est maintenant dans leur intérêt d'encourager ces genres de politiques dont nous avons parlé, politiques coûteuses dans le secteur des radios-transistors, afin qu'ils puissent offrir cet article à un prix plus bas et, par le fait même agrandir leur commerce. Je voudrais bien avoir vos commentaires à ce sujet.

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, je pense que M. Gillespie soulève un point important. La plupart d'entre nous sont distributeurs aussi bien que fabricants. Je ne peux parler de toute l'industrie, bien que M. Davies ait ces statistiques. En fait, la Canadian Westinghouse agit comme distributeur de 2 p. 100 de ses ventes totales, c'est-à-dire on fabrique 98 p. 100.

Maintenant, pour revenir aux transistors, vous avez bien raison, en autant que je sache, il n'y a pas d'industrie canadienne résiduaire au Canada. Ce ne serait qu'en vertu de ce projet de loi, si quelqu'un proposait d'établir une telle production, que nous pourrions protéger cette industrie et ce que vous dites, c'est que peut-être quelques-uns d'entre nous se retrouveraient dans un état schizophrénique si c'était proposé.

M. Gillespie: C'est vrai. Votre intérêt, c'est de battre le fournisseur, car vous avez un argument qu'il n'y a pas de dommages. Cela peut être basé sur des prix directs. Nous ne nous plaindrons pas de cela.

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, puis-je continuer? Nous aimons tous acheter des we are all faced with this. We all like to buy our own requirements at the lowest possible price. As manufacturers we like to sell as much as we can from our factories. What we, as an Association would do in the face of this is, of course, a hypothetical question and I do not think we, for one, would oppose this. Quite frankly, we are not, in our segment of the industry, going to be worried about the injury we would suffer if someone were to establish transistor radio manufacture in Canada. Again, I speak for only one corner of the industry. Maybe some people representing—

[Text]

Mr. Gillespie: You would not be concerned about anything?

Mr. Cheesman: We would not be concerned about that.

The Chairman: Would this not injure their business?

Mr. Cheesman: As a Canadian I would say it would be a good idea because it would be a step towards establishing fully competitive trade policies and practices in this country.

Mr. Gillespie: I am not sure I understand you. Are you saying that you would encourage the idea of dumped—

Mr. Cheesman: No, I would encourage the idea of protecting someone who wanted to establish a Canadian manufacture of such products, let us face it.

Mr. Gillespie: Until such time came along we are forced to encourage the foreign supplier to offer his merchandise to you and for the Canadian market at the lowest possible prices?

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, that is correct. As I said, we are treading on the ground that, I believe, is going to be covered before your Committee next Tuesday by the Electronic Industry Association of Canada with which we are closely allied, of course, but I think the facts of life in connection with transistor radios, which are your specific example, are that they have to be treated about the same way as bananas in Canada now. There is no indigenous industry and there are no any practical prospects of there being one, so that we buy our bananas as cheaply as we can—and I think it is in our national interest to do so—from those people with whom we are trading in other commodities such as wheat.

Mr. Gillespie: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Are there any more questions?

[Interpretation]

choses le meilleur marché possible comme personne, et alors comme fabricant nous aimons vendre autant que possible. C'est une question hypothétique, bien sûr, et nous, nous nous y opposerions, nous ne sommes pas pour le faire. Dans notre secteur de l'industrie, même si l'on s'inquiète du tort que cela peut nous causer, si quelqu'un avait des entreprises de transistors au Canada. Je parle d'un aspect seulement.

M. Gillespie: Vous ne seriez pas inquieté par cela?

M. Cheesman: Cela ne nous inquiéterait pas.

Le président: Dommages à leur industrie.

M. Cheesman: Comme Canadien, je pense que c'est une bonne idée. Cela nous permettra d'avoir de bonnes politiques commerciales au pays.

M. Gillespie: Je ne suis pas certain de bien vous comprendre. Dites-vous que vous encouragerez le dumping?

M. Cheesman: Non. Je voudrais encourager quelqu'un qui voudrait protéger un Canadien qui fabriquerait ces produits.

M. Gillespie: D'ici là, nous sommes obligés d'encourager les fournisseurs étrangers au prix le plus bas possible.

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, c'est juste. Je pense que l'industrie de l'électronique en parlera la semaine prochaine. Au sujet des transistors, c'est un exemple précis, il faut les traiter comme les bananes ici. Il n'y a plus d'industrie indigène ou nationale et il ne semble pas qu'il y en aura non plus. On achète les bananes le meilleur marché possible, il en va de notre intérêt d'en acheter des pays, par exemple, qui achètent notre blé.

M. Gillespie: Merci, monsieur le président.

Le président: Avez-vous d'autres questions, messieurs?

[Texte]

Mr. Hales: I wonder, due to the fact that Mr. Hind and Mr. Arthur are here if some of the witnesses might have some questions with respect to their part of this and if so, we should give them an opportunity to ask them.

The Chairman: I know that Mr. Arthur, at the beginning of our session, wanted to comment on the Canadian Manufacturers' Association brief, but I stopped him. I think he has had a very good afternoon. Are you rested? Maybe he cannot.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, I am not sure just what the point was we were discussing at that time, but I would like to comment on two points that have been made.

One was this matter that was raised on the two-price system. I think the Association is fully aware that the proposed draft Bill provides that the normal value, however it may be calculated, is based on domestic market sales in the country of export so that while there may well be a two-pricing system, under normal determinations it should be based on the experience in the exporting countries in their domestic sales.

I have one other point that I would really like to make. Under clause 3 of the proposed draft Bill it says that dumping duty will be collected after the Tribunal has made an order of finding if dumping has caused, is causing or is likely to cause injury. I believe, although rather than go through it, Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Association if they understand that in this case the liability for dumping can be made at the time of a contract as opposed to under the present law where the liability for dumping and the collection of dumping does not occur until importation.

• 1750

The Chairman: Mr. Houser, I understand would like to comment on your report.

Mr. J. H. Houser (General Manager, Purchases and Traffic, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.): I welcome the opportunity to react to this because—and if I might just elaborate a little—it is something that I would have liked to have referred to in answer to Mr. Lambert's first question of the afternoon when he inquired whether this 35 per cent of the market which disappeared last year in heavy apparatus was or was not being dumped.

We have tried to answer this in various ways because obviously the answer is, we do not really know. But I would venture to say first of all that none of these products—or

[Interprétation]

M. Hales: Je me demandais, vu que M. Hind et M. Arthur sont ici, peut-être que les témoins auraient des questions à poser. Peut-être qu'on devrait leur permettre de poser des questions.

Le président: Je sais que M. Arthur voulait faire des commentaires, relativement au mémoire de l'Association des manufacturiers canadiens mais je l'avais interrompu. Je pense qu'il a eu un bon après-midi, qu'il est bien reposé, qu'il pourrait poser des questions maintenant.

M. Arthur: Je ne me souviens plus exactement de ce que je voulais dire, ce qu'on discutait à ce moment-là, mais je pense, je voudrais commenter deux points. Primo, la question du système des prix parallèles. Je crois que l'Association sait très bien que dans le projet de loi, on calcule la valeur normale en se fondant sur les ventes du pays d'origine au marché d'exportation; même s'il y a un double système de prix, on devrait se fonder sur l'expérience des pays exportateurs.

Un autre point que je voudrais faire. Conformément à l'article 3 du projet, on dit que les droits de dumping seront recueillis lorsque les tribunaux en sont venus à une conclusion ou encore si le dumping cause cela. Je voudrais demander aux membres de l'Association s'ils comprennent que, dans ce cas, la responsabilité peut être faite au moment où le contrat est signé. Par opposition à la loi actuelle, la responsabilité du dumping et la perception du dumping ne se produisent pas avant l'importation.

Le président: M. Houser aimerait commenter votre mémoire.

M. J. H. Houser (gérant général, achats et commerce, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.): Monsieur le président, je suis très heureux de pouvoir répondre à cela. Si vous me permettez de donner quelques détails, j'aurais voulu en parler pour répondre à la première question de M. Lambert, au début de l'après-midi lorsqu'il a demandé si nous étions au courant que ces 35 p. 100 de notre marché disparus l'an dernier, pour l'industrie lourde, n'étaient pas dus au dumping. On peut répondre de diverses façons, car nous ne savons pas la réponse exactement.

Cependant, je puis dire d'abord que ces produits ne sont pas encore arrivés au pays very few of them—have entered the country as yet, and therefore, under the existing laws the Customs and Excise Division have no way to deal with them until January 1. Of course, we do understand that there is provision in the proposed Bill for action to be taken from the point of tender acceptance in any of these large apparatus orders. This, we think, is one of the major improvements in this new anti-dumping legislation.

[Text]

In our brief we made the point that we would like to see action vigorously pursued in the Department of National Revenue. We are thinking, primarily, of quick action on these outstanding orders which have yet to reach the country.

The onus to determine whether or not dumping actually exists, rests of course, with the Department rather than with the industry and we have to look to them for that evidence to come. In that respect I took some comfort from what Mr. Hind said this morning when he indicated that he had already issued to the various ports across the country, instructions to advise Ottawa in respect of importations of sensitive products—the ones that have already been associated with dumping. I think this is a good first move.

However, as an association, we urge that the type of product that we are dealing with here, particularly the heavy apparatus—the long term delivery items—be dealt with very quickly, as soon as the authority by law is given to the Department. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): I have a supplementary to that, though. How is the Department going to act? Take, for example, an electricity authority that calls for tenders. It receives these submissions which at the moment are not subject to any review. None of these will be reviewed by the Department of National Revenue nor will they be subject to review on their own by the Anti-dumping Tribunal. The dump that will hurt or the action that will hurt the Canadian industry is if some offshore supplier is deemed to be the lowest bidder and is to get the contract. Then, what happens? Does a copy of the specifications under the successful tender have to be submitted to the Department of National Revenue for examination?

Mr. Houser: The industry has certainly an onus here to provide the Department with whatever evidence we can, and one of the first things would, of course, be the tender information on the price levels. Of course, we have a responsibility, too, to be reasonably sure in our own minds that there is a reasonable possibility of a dumping situation being existent and, at the same time under the et, conformément aux lois actuelles, la Division des douanes n'a aucun recours avant le 1<sup>er</sup> janvier prochain. Nous comprenons toutefois qu'il y a des dispositions dans la nouvelle loi, pour qu'on accepte des appels d'offres pour toutes les commandes d'appareils lourds. C'est, à mon avis, une grande amélioration apportée par cette nouvelle loi sur l'antidumping.

[Interpretation]

Dans notre mémoire, nous disons qu'on aimerait qu'on prenne des mesures vigoureuses au ministère du Revenu national. Nous pensons principalement à des mesures sur les commandes qui n'ont pas encore été livrées au pays. Quant à savoir si le dumping existe vraiment, cela concerne le ministère plutôt que l'industrie. Nous devons donc nous tourner au ministère, pour qu'il nous donne des preuves.

M. Hind a indiqué, ce matin, qu'il avait déjà donné des instructions, dans divers ports du pays, pour qu'on renseigne Ottawa sur l'importation de produits qui représentent des points de litige. C'est déjà un bon début. Mais notre association précise que, pour ce genre de produits, notamment les appareils lourds, il faut agir rapidement, dès que l'autorité sera donnée au ministère. (Texte: voir p. 5a)

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Question supplémentaire. Comment le ministère agira-t-il? Nous avons une autorité pour l'électricité. On fait des appels d'offres. Il n'y a aucune révision faite par le ministère du Revenu national, à l'heure actuelle, et le tribunal de l'antidumping ne fait rien non plus. Cela nuira à l'industrie canadienne, si certains fournisseurs étrangers sont ceux qui présentent les offres les plus basses et qui obtiennent le contrat. Qu'arrive-t-il? Est-ce qu'on tient compte des spécifications? Est-ce que les spécifications devront être fournies au ministère du Revenu national pour examen?

M. Houser: L'industrie doit avertir le ministère et doit donner toutes les preuves nécessaires, entre autres les renseignements sur les niveaux des prix. Nous avons aussi des responsabilités. Il faut être raisonnablement sûr qu'il y a des possibilités de dumping. E même temps, conformément aux nouveaux règlements et aux nouvelles lois, nous devons voir aux pertes.

[Texte]

proposed Bill we will have to speak to the injury that the loss of the order will cause.

• 1755

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): May I ask another question? How do you get hold of that information? I know of some business concerns in this country—one of them a major Crown corporation—that will give out no information on other bids—no information. They will not even give the names of the other bidders and there is no public opening of tenders. This is where I am concerned about the mechanics of this.

Mr. Houser: Mr. Chairman, this is quite true and I have to agree that it represents an extension of the problem that we are discussing.

I think the industry would probably have to look at the source. We would have to be aware, first of all, of injury and I think we would have to turn in most cases to the authorities in the Department of National Revenue who are the only people who do have access to much of the information that you suggested is not available to us.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, to go back to this matter of publication that, I think, we discussed in this Committee earlier, as I understand it in a number of provinces if the hydro authority puts a public tender out, it is also obliged to publish the acceptance—not all of them do this, but some of them do—so the low tender bid in some instances would be public knowledge.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Yes, but I am concerned that we are going to place an onus on the Department of National Revenue and on this Tribunal, but they will be denied any way of acting because they will not be able to get the information and I doubt if they would have the authority to demand, within a reasonable time, copies of these specifications and the prices of the successful tender.

The Chairman: During the time Mr Arthur is looking for the information—

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, the only response I can make is that normally if a foreign bid had been accepted and it became known to any of the Canadian industries that that foreign bid had been accepted and the price were known, it seems to me that it would be open at that point of time for the industry to make this evidence available to the Department of National Revenue and if information were provided on the domestic price of such goods then this is a matter that then could be

[Interprétation]

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Comment obtenez-vous ces renseignements? Je connais certaines entreprises, entre autres une grande société de la Couronne, qui ne donnent pas de renseignements sur les offres qui sont faites. On ne donne même pas les noms des autres. Les offres ne sont pas rendues publiques. C'est pourquoi, je m'interroge sur les méthodes à suivre.

M. Houser: Monsieur le président, c'est bien vrai, et je dois avouer que cela donne encore plus d'importance au problème que nous discutons.

L'industrie devra étudier les sources. Il faut savoir si cela est nuisible et dans la plupart des cas, nous devons nous tourner vers les autorités du Revenu national, car il n'y a que le ministère qui a accès à ces informations.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, je veux revenir à la question des audiences publiques. Si je comprends bien, dans un certain nombre de provinces, si les autorités de l'hydro font des appels d'offres publics, ils doivent publier les résultats. Alors, l'offre la plus basse, dans certains cas, est connue.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Le ministère du Revenu national et le tribunal devront s'en occuper et ils n'auront aucun moyen d'agir, parce qu'ils ne pourront pas avoir les renseignements. Je doute qu'ils aient l'autorité de demander, dans un temps raisonnable, des copies de ces spécifications et les prix de l'offre acceptée.

Le président: M. Arthur, cherchez-vous ce renseignement?

M. Arthur: Si une offre étrangère a été acceptée, si certaines industries canadiennes le savent et si les prix sont connus, je pense que l'industrie pourrait alors communiquer les renseignements au ministère du Revenu national. Si des renseignements étaient donnés sur le prix national de ces produits, c'est une question qui pourrait être étudiée par le ministère et par le tribunal. Si cela atteint le tribunal, il aura sûrement les moyens d'obtenir les renseignements.

[Text]

processed both by that Department and on to the Tribunal. Of course, if it got to the point of the Tribunal, the Tribunal has means of obtaining information.

The Chairman: Mr. Rapsey, I understand...

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Is there time enough, though, to help the Canadian industry that may be injured? After all, a tender has been awarded to an off-source supplier which includes an element of dumping. True enough, the electricity authority—the public utility authority—may be penalized if it is an f.o.b. off-shore, but in the interval the domestic manufacturer is standing around with an empty shop and unemployed men.

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, on that particular contract it would not have any effect. The assumption would be, though, if a hydro authority or some other authority were, in fact, exposed to the payment of dumping duty at the time they did import the goods, that when tendering for a similar product in the future, they would be mindful of their experience.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Yes, but how often do you get a Peace River Development? This is the point that concerns me. How are we going to give adequate protection to the Canadian industry after the event? There is no way of compensating the Canadian supplier. I am not blaming anybody, but I am facing up to what I think is a very essential problem. I would suggest also that in the utility field, few, if any, people do publish tender results. It may require some other sort of action in order to get this information. However, it is my information, definitely, that few, if any, utility authorities publish tender information.

• 1800

Mr. Hales: Would it be a fact that the tender price would be given, subject to dumping duties or some other provision?

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, this is one of the things that has yet to be worked out. We do not know and I am sure the Department does not know the exact details. It is true that many utilities do not publish tender prices. I understand that is true here in Ontario.

The encouraging possibility, though, of this new procedure is that if the Department wishes to do so and is given access to the information, they will in future be permitted to make a determination one way or the other at an early stage—as soon as the contract is let.

[Interpretation]

Le président: M. Rapsey, je crois...

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Aurons-nous le temps d'aider l'industrie canadienne qui peut être en danger? Car une offre a été accordée à un fournisseur étranger et elle était sujette au dumping. Je pense que l'autorité du service public pourrait être pénalisée, mais, entretemps, les fabricants nationaux ont les mains vides.

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, pour ce contrat, cela n'aurait aucune influence, si l'autorité de l'hydro est exposée, au moment où les biens sont importés, à payer les droits de dumping. Lorsque, dans l'avenir, on fera une soumission pour un produit semblable, on se rappellera de cette expérience.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Avez-vous souvent des projets comme celui de la rivière de la Paix? Comment pourrions-nous donner la protection suffisante à l'industrie canadienne? Il n'y a pas moyen de donner de compensation aux fournisseurs canadiens. Je ne blâme personne, mais je pense que c'est un problème important. Dans le domaine des utilités publiques, il y en a très peu qui publie les résultats des appels d'offres.

M. Hales: Et les prix seront-ils donnés en tenant compte des trois antidumping?

M. Rapsey: Monsieur le président, il faudra encore étudier la question. Le ministère ne connaît pas les détails exacts. Il est vrai qu'un bon nombre de compagnies d'utilité publique ne publient pas les prix des appels d'offre et c'est vrai notamment en Ontario. Il y a des possibilités encourageantes toutefois pour cette nouvelle procédure. Si le ministère veut le faire et s'il a accès à ces renseignements, à l'avenir, il pourra tirer une conclusion dans un sens ou dans l'autre dès que le contrat sera accordé.

[Texte]

I agree with you, sir, if the utility on the one hand and the offshore manufacturer on the other hand, tells the Department of National Revenue to go peddle their papers—they will not give them any information at that stage—I should think the Department would have difficulty. However, then the utility would be very well aware that the subject was not closed, but that a ruling was going to be made at the time of entry when the Department would be in a position to demand some of this information and if they did not get it, to go to the best information they could go to and make their determination. I would venture to predict that the utilities would be interested in having the ruling at an early date so that they would know whether they were going to be hit over the head at the actual time of entry which might be two years later. We do not know, but we share your concern.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): What concerns me mostly, though, is that while we are all working this out or you are waiting for the working entry to be made, our Canadian industries will be standing around unemployed.

The Chairman: Mr. Lambert, possibly all the utility companies should follow the example of Quebec Hydro, that I think was cited here by one of the members. They buy, first, from their own province and from the rest of Canada, second. If they followed that procedure maybe they would have less trouble.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): That, in essence, is the practice that is followed in Britain, is it not?

The Chairman: If the hydro authority in one province does it, I do not know why the others do not do the same.

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a word with regard to Mr. Lambert's concern about how many of the electrical utilities publish their bid openings. I have not been able to add up in my mind how many, but the majority of them do. Unfortunately, the percentage of the market that is represented by the few who do not, is very considerable. Therefore, the problem that you refer to does exist, but not quite to the degree that I think you feared, albeit I appreciate your fear, of course.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): From the information that has come to me, most rules of tender with regard to published utility tender calls have a requirement that the exporter or the successful tenderer will protect the

[Interprétation]

Je reconnais toutefois, que ce sera très difficile si les compagnies d'utilité et les fabricants étrangers disent au ministère du Revenu national qu'ils ne leur donneront aucun renseignement. Les compagnies d'utilité publique sauront très bien que le dossier n'est pas fermé et qu'on s'en occupera au moment de l'entrée lorsqu'on pourra demander ces renseignements. Si on ne les obtient pas, le ministère pourra alors se baser sur les renseignements qu'il a en main et faire son évaluation. Alors, j'irais jusqu'à dire que les compagnies d'utilité publique aimeraient bien que cela soit décidé dès que possible pour qu'ils sachent s'ils seront ou non punis au moment de la livraison qui se fera peut-être deux ans plus tard. Cependant, nous ne le savons pas. Nous partageons toutefois vos inquiétudes.

M. Lambert: Ce qui m'inquiète le plus, c'est que, pendant que nous élaborons cette politique, l'industrie canadienne n'est pas protégée.

Le président: M. Lambert, peut-être que toutes les compagnies d'utilité publique devraient suivre l'exemple de l'Hydro-Québec. L'Hydro-Québec se tourne d'abord vers les fournisseurs du Québec ensuite les Canadiens, ensuite les étrangers. On devrait probablement suivre cet exemple, on aurait alors moins de difficulté.

M. Lambert: En fait, c'est ce qu'on fait en Grande-Bretagne, n'est-ce pas?

Le président: Si l'Hydro-Québec le fait, je ne vois pas pourquoi les autres ne le feraient pas.

M. Cheesman: Poul calmer les inquiétudes de M. Lambert, qui disait que les compagnies d'utilité publique ne publient pas les appels d'offre, je puis dire que la majorité le font. Malheureusement, les compagnies qui ne le font pas représente une portion considérable du marché. Et le problème dont vous parlez existe mais peut-être pas au point où vous semblez le croire. Cependant, je comprends que vous vous inquiétiez.

M. Lambert: D'après mes renseignements la plupart des règlements régissant les soumissions concernant les compagnies de service public précisent que l'exportateur ou le soumissionnaire heureux protégera authority against any subsequent changes in duty which, of course, is what we were talking about. This is a form of a rebate or compensatory agreement is it not?

[Text]

The Chairman: Mr. Arthur, have you any other comments?

Mr. Arthur: Only to agree with Mr. Lambert. As we mentioned this morning, in our view anyway, such an arrangement would be covered by the proposed legislation and the importer would be liable regardless of what may be included in the contractual arrangement.

• 1805

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): All I can say, now, is that I think there is a very serious problem here. The industry, the Department and the administration are soon going to have to work out a successful way of getting at this along with, shall we say, the Canadian customers, otherwise we are not going to have the protection we think we have.

The Chairman: Gentlemen of the Committee, I am in your hands now.

We have dealt with the CEMA brief, but we also agreed to look over two other briefs or letters today. We have a letter from Canadian General Electric Company Limited, signed by the President, Mr. Smith, who I understand, is with us now. The other one is from Canadian Westinghouse Company Limited, signed by Mr. Cheesman, who has been with us most of the afternoon. Will we stop at six o'clock and come back at eight o'clock we try to go through and finish it before six o'clock? I do hope you will not misunderstand these remarks.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, possibly you could ask the two people whom you mentioned if they feel there is anything in their briefs that has not already been covered and, if so, we would happy to come back. However, it might be that we have covered all the points that they have in their briefs.

The Chairman: I will reply to your question first, then I will let Mr. Cheesman reply for himself. I understood from some of Mr. Saltsman's remarks that Mr. Smith could give us some additional information on the same subject. What are your wishes, Mr. Cheesman?

Mr. Cheesman: Mr. Chairman, I would certainly be very happy to go along with the suggestion. We submitted a brief letter to the l'organisme contractant contre tous les changements dans les droits de douane. C'est de cela qu'on parlait, c'est un rabais en somme.

[Interpretation]

Le président: Monsieur Arthur, avez-vous des commentaires?

M. Arthur: Je reconnais comme Monsieur Lambert et comme vous l'avez dit ce matin, que cette disposition sera couverte dans le projet de loi; l'importateur serait responsable sans tenir compte de ce qui est contenu dans les contrats.

M. Lambert: Je pense que cela implique un problème grave. L'industrie, le ministère et le gouvernement devront trouver une façon de s'y attaquer ainsi que les clients canadiens. Sans cela nous n'aurons pas la protection que nous croyons avoir.

Le président: Messieurs, nous avons entendu le mémoire du CMA et aujourd'hui, nous avons accepté d'étudier deux autres mémoires; un du Canadian General Electric, une lettre envoyée par le président M. Smith qui est avec nous, je crois, et l'autre, envoyé par M. Cheesman de la Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., qui a été avec nous presque tout l'après-midi. Nous devrions peut-être nous interrompre à six heures et revenir à huit heures ou est-ce que nous devrions essayer de finir maintenant?

M. Hales: Monsieur le président, peut-être qu'il faudrait demander à ces deux personnes s'il y a des questions contenues dans leur mémoire et qui n'ont pas été discutées cet après-midi. Dans ce cas, nous reviendrons avec plaisir mais peut-être que nous avons déjà tous ces points.

Le président: Je répondrai d'abord à votre question, ensuite je laisserai répondre M. Cheesman. Je pense que M. Saltsman a donné certains renseignements. M. Cheesman voudrait peut-être ajouter autre chose au sujet de la planification ou autres questions? Quant à vous, monsieur Cheesman, qu'avez-vous à dire?

M. Cheesman: Monsieur le président, je serais très heureux d'accepter la suggestion qui a été faite. Nous avons présenté un

[Texte]

Committee because of the major importance of this subject of anti-dumping and, as you are well aware, we have participated very actively with the Association in the scrutiny of the proposed anti-dumping legislation. Other than re-emphasizing the grave importance of this matter to us as a company as well as our industry, I have nothing to say other than that we are available to assist the Committee in any way we can, today or at any time, by answering questions that you might want to put to myself or to these people from the company with me. We would be willing to forego any appearance before the Committee, as a company.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, are you through with your line of questions to the CEMA group? If so, I thank them as a group on your behalf.

Mr. Rapsey: Mr. Chairman, on behalf of CEMA, I want to say a very heartfelt word of thanks to you for having us here today and for being very patient with us. It has been, for us, a very useful experience. Thank you, sir.

Mr. J. H. Smith (President, Canadian General Electric Company Limited): Mr. Chairman, our company has been represented, as you know, in the CEMA presentation and, in a sense, my appearance is redundant. However, I feel the work of this Committee is of such tremendous importance to the Canadian electrical industry that I wish to emphasize that importance by presenting a separate letter and accepting your gracious invitation to appear before you.

I believe all of the points I would care to make, have been made and I certainly support the answers to the questions. I have, however, prepared a brief statement of possibly four minutes in length and if I may have the privilege, sir, I would like to read it.

The Chairman: You have.

Mr. Smith: There are four major points we desire to make with the Committee and the public at this time. These are:

Canadian General Electric believes in the concept of expanding international trade, unfettered by hidden barriers against the movement of goods across frontiers or by unfair practices such as subsidies and tax remittances. Canadian General Electric fully supports the efforts of the Government of Canada in seeking to create this kind of a world trade environment.

[Interprétation]

mémoire, une lettre plutôt au comité, et à cause de l'importance de l'antidumping et comme vous le savez, nous avons participé très étroitement avec les industries du même genre pour l'étude de cette nouvelle loi. Nous insistons sur la grande importance de la question.

Pour notre compagnie ainsi que pour l'industrie en général, je n'ai rien d'autre à ajouter sauf de dire que je suis prêt à vous venir en aide et à répondre à vos questions. Mais nous n'avons rien d'autre à ajouter et en tant que société nous ne tenons pas à comparaître devant le Comité. Quant à vous M. Smith, qu'avez-vous à dire?

Le président: Messieurs, avez-vous d'autres questions à poser? Alors, très bien. Je remercie donc, en votre nom, nos témoins du groupe CEMA.

M. Rapsey: Monsieur le président, au nom de la CMA, je voudrais dire quelques mots. Je voudrais d'abord vous remercier de nous avoir invité à venir aujourd'hui et vous avez aussi été très patients.

Pour nous, c'est une expérience des plus utiles, merci.

M. Smith (président du General Electric): Monsieur le président, notre société est représentée, comme vous le savez, dans la présentation de la CMA. Et d'une certaine façon, je fais double emploi ici mais je pense que le travail du comité est d'une si grande importance pour l'industrie de l'électricité au Canada que je veux insister sur cette importance en présentant une autre lettre et en acceptant avec plaisir votre invitation à témoigner devant le comité. Je pense que tous les points dont je voudrais parler ont déjà été mentionnés et je fais miennes les réponses faites aux questions.

Toutefois, j'avais préparé une brève déclaration de quatre minutes et avec votre permission, monsieur le président, je la lirai.

Le président: Vous l'avez.

M. Smith: Il y a quatre points que nous voulons mentionner.

Premièrement, la Canadian General Electric croit à l'expansion du commerce international libre de toute entrave que constituent les restrictions déguisées du mouvement de marchandises à travers les frontières, ainsi que des conditions injustes comme les rabais de taxes etc. et les subventions. La Canadian General Electric appuie pleinement les efforts du gouvernement du Canada visant à créer une telle ambiance qui favorisera le com-

[Text]

[Interpretation]

• 1810

Canadian General Electric believes, however, that in legislating in this field we must be realistic in recognizing the facts of life that confront us in the world today with respect to international trade. There is no doubt that many hidden barriers to trade exist today in almost all countries of the world. We also know that certain governments are encouraging and financing practices which enable foreign competition to practice dumping into Canada. These are facts which we ignore at our peril as Canadians. Therefore, we must ensure that legislation to implement our GATT agreements with respect to anti-dumping properly provides for the appropriate degree of protection for our Canadian industrial workers against these kinds of unfair practices. It is the opinion of this company that the proposed bill provides for this kind of fair treatment; and we urge the Committee to support it and recommend its enactment to Parliament.

Canadian General Electric is also concerned about the administration of the legislation once it is enacted into law. It is our assumption that such important legislation, based as it is on four or five years of skilled and intensive negotiations by our representatives at Geneva, will be administered in the same competent and resolute manner as the negotiations were carried out. Failure to do so would undermine the intent and purpose of the GATT Agreements as related to providing expanding job opportunities for Canada's skilled craftsmen, industrial workers and professional employees. Therefore, the government must provide the necessary competence, in terms of skills and facilities, to effectively and aggressively enforce the proposed legislation.

Finally, there is no doubt that dumping, resulting from the unfair practices which presently exist in international trade, will result in serious and irrevocable employment losses in this country. Such unfair and predatory practices would deny Canadian industry the economic base from which it could develop opportunities for increasing its research and development expenditures and increasing its productivity, as has been so properly recommended by government leaders and the Economic Council of Canada. These needed things cannot be done if we ignore the realities of the workaday world in international trade and fail to both enact the proposed legislation and rigorously enforce it. Our concern is predicated on many years of involvement in international trade related to the world-wide growth of the business of our merce international. (2) La General Electric croit qu'en légiférant dans ce domaine, il faut être réaliste et il faut reconnaître aussi les réalités de la vie moderne en ce qui concerne le commerce international. Sans aucun doute, plusieurs barrières anti-commerciales invisibles existent dans presque tous les pays du monde aujourd'hui. Nous savons que certains gouvernements encouragent et financent même des pratiques qui favorisent le dumping au Canada. Ce sont des faits que tous les Canadiens doivent connaître; par conséquent, si nous voulons appliquer les règlements du GATT contre l'antidumping, il faut protéger les travailleurs canadiens contre cette pratique injuste. Notre compagnie est d'avis que le projet de loi permettra d'avoir un traitement juste et nous demandons au comité de le reconnaître et nous espérons que le projet de loi sera adopté.

Canadian General Electric s'intéresse aussi à l'application de la loi. Nous pensons qu'une loi aussi importante fondée sur 4 ou 5 ans de travail, de négociations faites par nos représentants à Genève, sera appliquée de façon constante et ferme, dans le même esprit que les négociations. Si nous échouons, cela ira à l'encontre de l'esprit de GATT qui voulait donner plus de travail aux travailleurs de l'industrie, aux professionnels et aux techniciens du Canada. Par conséquent, le gouvernement doit donner plus de facilité aux Canadiens et doit aussi appliquer la Loi comme il se doit.

Sans doute, le dumping résultant de pratiques injustes qui existent dans le commerce international, sera une source de chômage au Canada. Des pratiques aussi injustes empêcheront l'industrie canadienne d'avoir l'assiette économique qui lui permettrait de créer des débouchés, de poursuivre ses recherches, d'augmenter sa productivité comme l'ont si bien recommandé le Conseil économique du Canada et nos chefs d'État. Cela ne peut se faire si nous ignorons les réalités d'aujourd'hui dans le commerce international, si la loi n'est pas acceptée, et si nous ne réussissons pas à l'appliquer de façon rigoureuse. Nous nous fondons sur plusieurs années d'expérience dans le commerce international, car, nous sommes dans ce domaine depuis longtemps.

[Texte]

Company in heavy machinery and consumer goods.

The Chairman: Thank you, Mr. Smith. Are there any questions, gentlemen?

Mr. Lambert: I have one, Mr. Chairman arising out of what Mr. Saltsman said in connection with the related subject of assisting Canadian manufacturers to more effectively compete in foreign markets. This would tend to require amendments to the Combines Investigation Act and perhaps the formation of, shall we say, not cartels but syndicates for the purpose of bidding on major jobs. Is this a practical proposition, Mr. Smith, in your opinion?

Mr. Smith: Unless one carefully studies a suggestion like that there is some danger in an offhand comment, sir. We have on an entrepreneurial basis developed such consortiums. For example, we have put together a consortium to put an extension on a paper mill in Pakistan; we put together a consortium to put in a hydraulic generating plant in Ceylon. I can think of several examples where we have done this thing on an entrepreneurial basis.

I think the opportunity exists, and I am not sure there is a need for government assistance other than the very effective assistance that industry is now being given through the activities of the Export Credits Insurance Corporation. We have built our own export business up to well over $40 million a year from a very small amount in five or six years. I feel that probably the most significant single aid from the government has been from the work of the ECIC, and the very effective work of the Department of Trade and Commerce representatives around the world.

• 1815

Mr. Lambert: Thank you.

Mr. Hales: Do you feel that if the non-tariff barriers are looked after, and you are allowed to play in the same ball diamond with the same set of rules as people making the heavy industrial equipment, that we in Canada would have no trouble competing in world markets?

Mr. Smith: Sir, none whatever. I have absolute confidence predicated on our own experience in some areas of the world where there has been a free fight. I think on the basis of costs we were successful in supplying all the water-wheel generating equipment for the Volta River development in Ghana about two or three years ago. That was on World Bank financing and we think an open, com-

[Interprétation]

Le président: Merci, monsieur. Avez-vous des questions, messieurs?

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Au sujet de la suggestion de M. Saltsman voulant que l'on assiste les fabricants canadiens pour qu'ils soient plus en mesure de concurrencer les autres pays. C'est un amendement porté à la loi sur les cartels, et possiblement la création peut-être pas de cartels, mais de consortiums pour répondre aux appels d'offre? Est-ce pratique, à votre avis, monsieur Smith?

M. Smith: Il faut étudier une suggestion de ce genre avec soin, car tout commentaire à pied levé peut être dangereux. Au niveau des entrepreneurs, il y a des consortiums. Par exemple, nous collaborons au consortium pour les moulins de pâte à papier au Pakistan et à celui pour les génératrices d'électricité au Ceylan.

Je peux songer à plusieurs exemples où il s'agissait de contrats d'entrepreneurs. Les débouchés existent, et je ne crois pas qu'il soit nécessaire que le gouvernement ne nous vienne en aide autrement que par le truchement de la «Export Credit Insurance Corporation».

Nous avons édifié notre propre commerce d'exportation. Cela représente 40 millions de dollars, maintenant depuis 5 ou 6 ans. Et, je pense que le gouvernement nous a accordé beaucoup d'aide par l'entremise de l'ECIC et par ses représentants à l'étranger.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Merci.

M. Hales: Pensez-vous que, si les barrières tarifaires tombent et si vous avez le droit d'appliquer les mêmes règlements que ceux qui sont dans l'industrie lourde, les Canadiens pourront concurrencer les étrangers sur les marchés internationaux?

M. Smith: J'ai confiance. J'ai entière confiance et notre expérience prouve dans certaines régions du monde où la lutte a été libre et sur la base des coûts, nous avons réussi à fournir, par exemple, toutes les génératrices nécessaires au harnachement de la Volta au Ghana il y a quelques années.

C'était une concurrence ouverte. Les industries canadiennes peuvent concurrencer tous petitive situation. This does not mean that Canadian industry can compete against the world on all products. In this particular one we have confidence in Canada because we have the great rivers and the relatively low heads. We have great confidence and we think we can stand against the world.

[Text]

We have completed a study over the last two or three years of the costs through concentrated approach, determining, we think quite accurately, the cost of our major competitors from Italy up through to England. For example, the cost in the plant in your riding, sir, on power transformers is lower than the cost of any of the competitors in Europe.

To illustrate, and this relates specifically to the dumping problem, I will take two specific examples and this may relate to a question that you asked earlier about whether or not we are defeated by sharp pencils or our poor costing, or inefficiency.

The Chairman: That was Mr. Lambert's question.

Mr. Smith: Yes, Mr. Lambert. I will give you just two examples. In May a year ago, we quoted on a 220,000-volt transformer, and I have all the specifications here. The British landed price in Canada predicated on recent purchases in England, and the central authority, on a per KVA basis—which brings it to a meaningful figure—was $4.32 per KVA. This was the price the British authority had purchased those transformers at the same specification, within a matter of months. Our price was $3.06 per KVA against $4.32. We lost the order to the English Electric Canada Company. We do not know, of course what their price was. We lost the order so it was to a lower price. Obviously our $3.06 was a lower price than the price prevailing in England. A price on exactly the same rating in United States transactions by the purchasing authorities in the United States in the free marketplace was $4.04. At that $3.06 we were satisfied to take the order.

Two months later, similarly the British landed price in Canada for a 234,000-volt transformer, specific specification checked, was $2.10 per KVA in the United Kingdom. We quoted 87 cents and the American price was $1.06. We lost the order. We do not know what it was quoted at.

Mr. Hales: From what was said here earlier it would appear that the United Kingdom order would be assessed for dumping purposes at the time the contract was let.

[Interpretation]

les autres pays en tout, mais dans le domaine de l'électricité, par exemple, nous avons confiance car nous avons des ressources hydrauliques importantes et je pense que nous pouvons être fiers de notre position dans le monde. Depuis deux ou trois ans, nous avons fait des études de coût pour déterminer les prix demandés par nos concurrents, l'Italie et l'Angleterre, par exemple, et nos prix sont moins élevés que ceux de tous nos concurrents européens.

Pour revenir à la question du dumping, je citerai deux exemples précis, cela revient peut-être à une question posée plus tôt, au sujet de votre manque d'efficacité.

Le président: La question venait de M. Lambert.

M. Smith: En mai dernier, pour un transformateur de 220,000 volts, le prix des Britanniques, fondé sur des achats récents en Angleterre, $4.32 par unité.

Notre prix: $3.06, contre $4.32. Nous avons perdu la commande; nous ne savons pas quel était leur prix, mais il était sûrement plus bas.

Notre prix de $3.06 était évidemment plus bas que le prix courant en Angleterre. Le prix aux États-Unis sur le marché libre était de $4.04 et nous étions satisfaits d'obtenir $3.06. Deux mois plus tard, dans un cas semblable, le prix des britanniques au Canada pour 234,000 volts $2.10 par unité. Au Royaume-Uni, nous avons demandé 0.87, les Américains $1.06; nous avons perdu la commande. Nous ne savons pas quelle était l'offre.

M. Hales: D'après ce qu'on a dit plus tôt, il semble que les commandes électriques venant du Royaume-Uni devront être considérées comme contrevenant à la loi antidumping au moment où le contrat a été signé.

[Texte]

● 1820

Mr. Arthur: Mr. Chairman, you could establish after the contract was let a liability for dumping duty, if the product was imported under the conditions of the contract. You can establish under the proposed legislation a liability for dumping duty.

Mr. Hales: Well, then there is a chance that dumping duty can still be placed on these transformers coming into Canada.

Mr. Arthur: Oh, yes, at the time they are entered. Yes, sir.

Mr. Hales: But in the interval, as you were saying, there are a couple of hundred people out of work.

Mr. Gillespie: This surely is one of the biggest...

The Chairman: Mr. Gillespie?

Mr. Gillespie: I just made a comment.

The Chairman: When you said that in certain sectors Canadian industrialists and Canadian manufacturers can face the world, does that mean that our productivity is par or better than other countries in those sectors?

Mr. Smith: Yes, in power transformers, water-wheel generators of large ratings for large flow rivers and relatively low heads, the Canadian type river, and many types of power breakers.

This was an interesting point. We lost orders in September of this year for power circuit breakers, from France, Merlin-Gérin. We checked France and established the price at $120,000 each for the recent purchase of the French power authority. They were quoted at $35,000, and we lost the order.

We have done more work in the last two years in order to attempt to provide information to the Department which will be meaningful. The support we have had from the Department is absolutely outstanding. However, the legislation which prevented action on the part of the Department, until after the goods entered the commerce of Canada by delivery, placed the manufacturer of heavy equipment—where the deliveries are usually two years or so—in an impossible position. It was simply embarrassing your good customers. With this new legislation permitting action to be taken at the time of tendering, we have an opportunity to correct an injustice, if an injustice is, in fact, occurring.

[Interprétation]

M. Arthur: Monsieur le président, une fois le contrat signé, vous pouvez imposer les droits de dumping si le produit a été importé selon les termes du contrat. Le projet de loi prévoit la responsabilité pour les droits de dumping.

M. Hales: Les droits de dumping peuvent donc être imposés sur des transformateurs envoyés au Canada.

M. Arthur: Oh! oui, monsieur. Au moment où ils sont inscrits.

M. Hales: Mais, en attendant, il y a, comme vous disiez, plusieurs centaines de gens qui chôment.

M. Gillespie: C'est assurément l'un des plus grands...

Le président: Monsieur Gillespie.

M. Gillespie: Ce n'était qu'un commentaire.

Le président: Excusez. Je parlais pour l'opératrice des micros. Lorsque vous avez dit que dans certains secteurs, les industriels et fabricants canadiens peuvent faire concurrence au marché mondial, entendiez-vous par là que votre productivité est comparable ou même meilleure que celle d'autres pays dans les secteurs en question?

M. Smith: Oui, en matière de transformateurs électriques, de dynamos hydrauliques à rendement élevé dont l'usage convient aux rivières canadiennes, et certains genres de disjoncteurs. C'est là un point intéressant au fait. Nous avons perdu des commandes de disjoncteurs en septembre dernier. Nous avons pris des renseignements en France (Merlin-Gérin) selon lesquels le prix payé récemment par l'Office national d'énergie aurait été de $120,000 pour chaque appareil. Le prix de soumission avait été de $35,000 la pièce et nous avons perdu la commande.

Au cours des deux dernières années, nous nous sommes efforcés de fournir au ministère des renseignements plus significatifs, qui permettent de mieux formuler des décisions. Le ministère nous a secondés admirablement bien, la législation qui empêchait le ministère d'agir avant l'arrivée au marché canadien des marchandises en question, a placé le fabricant canadien d'équipement lourd dans une situation intenable, car le délai de livraison de ce genre de marchandise est de l'ordre de deux ans. C'était gênant pour les bons clients. Or, étant donné que la mesure à l'étude nous permet d'agir au moment de la soumission, nous serons à même de rectifier les injustices, s'il y en a.

[Text]

The Chairman: Are there any other questions, gentlemen?

My thanks to Mr. Smith and again my thanks to the representatives of the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association. Thank you very much members for your patience because I have had you work very early and late today. The meeting is adjourned until next Thursday.

[Interpretation]

Le président: Y a-t-il d'autres questions, messieurs?

Je remercie M. Smith et je réitère mes remerciements à l'Association canadienne des manufacturiers. Je remercie aussi les députés que j'ai fait beaucoup travailler aujourd'hui. On a commencé de bonne heure et on a fini très tard.

La séance est levée. Le Comité se réunira jeudi prochain, pardon, mardi prochain.

[Texte]

APPENDIX T

November 8, 1968

Mr. Gaston Clermont, Chairman, and Members,
Standing Committee on Finance, Trade
and Economic Affairs,
House of Commons,
OTTAWA, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Clermont:

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association welcomes the opportunity of presenting its views to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs on the Draft Canadian Anti-dumping Act.

In doing so we would like to point out that three-quarters of the Association's present membership of approximately 6,500 consists of companies which employ fewer than 100 persons. The problems and needs of small manufacturers are therefore uppermost in the counsels of the Association at all times. It is these same small manufacturers who are likely to suffer most from, or who will be specially vulnerable to, dumping from abroad.

Last January, the Association submitted a brief to a similar Standing Committee of the last Parliament pertaining to the resolutions covering proposed amendments to the Customs Tariff to implement Canada's commitments under the Kennedy Round agreement. In that brief, the Association stated that the reduction in levels of Canadian tariff had not disturbed manufacturers nearly as much as the proposed revision of our anti-dumping laws which we have always viewed as an effective and essential safeguard against the unfair competition of dumped surplus goods from abroad. We also stated at that time that the new Code transformed into Canadian legislation would likely mean more leniency in Canadian anti-dumping procedures than prevails at present.

In the discussions with the previous Standing Committee we requested that important legislation such as the Draft Canadian Anti-dumping Act, which will have a profound effect on the whole Canadian economy, should not be enacted into law until all interested segments of the Canadian public had had an opportunity to furnish their views regarding it to a Parliamentary Committee. We are pleased that this request has been acted upon.

[Interprétation]

APPENDICE T

Le 8 novembre 1968

Monsieur Gaston Clermont, président
Messieurs les membres
Comité permanent sur les finances, le commerce et les questions économiques
Chambre des Communes
Ottawa, Ontario

Monsieur le président,

L'Association des manufacturiers canadiens est heureuse d'avoir l'occasion d'exposer ses vues au Comité permanent sur les finances, le commerce et les questions économiques.

Nous aimerions d'abord souligner que les trois quarts des quelque 6,500 membres de notre Association sont des sociétés dont l'effectif est inférieur à 100. Ce sont donc toujours les problèmes et les besoins des petits fabricants qui font le premier objet de nos délibérations. Ces petits industriels sont, plus que tous les autres, susceptibles d'être touchés par le dumping, leur position à cet égard étant particulièrement vulnérable.

En janvier dernier, l'AMC a soumis à un comité permanent du Parlement précédent, comité analogue au vôtre, un mémoire sur les résolutions applicables aux modifications devant être apportées au tarif douanier afin que prennent effet les engagements du Canada conformément à l'Accord du Kennedy Round. Dans ce document, l'Association a déclaré que la réduction des taux du tarif canadien était loin de préoccuper nos fabricants autant que le projet de révision de nos lois antidumping; en effet, nous avons toujours vu dans nos statuts existants une protection efficace et essentielle contre la concurrence déloyale que constitue la pénétration sur notre marché intérieur des surplus de la production étrangère écoulés à des prix si bas qu'ils portent préjudice à nos propres entreprises. Nous avons également déclaré, à l'époque, qu'une fois assimilé à la législation canadienne, le nouveau Code relatif à cette question donnerait probablement lieu à un accroissement de la tolérance que permettent actuellement les procédures canadiennes antidumping.

En janvier dernier, nous avons demandé au Comité permanent qu'un projet de législation aussi important que celui de la Loi canadienne antidumping, laquelle aura de sérieuse

[Text]

Shortly after the signing in June, 1967 of the International Code on the application of anti-dumping duties ("Agreement on Implementation of Article VI of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade"), the Minister of Finance established a Special Committee on Anti-Dumping. The Association forwarded a comprehensive submission in November, 1967, to the Special Committee on Anti-Dumping, and this was followed up by a meeting with the Committee. We are pleased that all the special Canadian anti-dumping problems referred to in our submission to the Special Committee on Anti-Dumping have been taken into consideration in the Draft Canadian Anti-dumping Act. We commend this procedure which has made it possible to take into account the experience and constructive suggestions of industry in the drafting of legislation.

As may be inferred from the above, the Association finds the Draft Canadian Anti-dumping Act generally acceptable in that the necessary authority has been provided in the Act for the administration to take prompt and effective action when injury or a threat of injury has been caused to Canadian producers.

Our chief difficulty in determining the adequacy or otherwise of the Act is the absence of the regulations which are referred to frequently in the Act. We have not yet had sufficient time to study the draft regulations relating to Sections 9 and 10 of the Act recently tabled with your Committee and so are unable to comment thereon in this submission. We express the hope, however, that all of the regulations will be made public in draft form well in advance of January 1 next. This will enable the Association to make known its views to the Government on the draft regulations before they are promulgated by Order in Council.

The following comments are made on specific sections of the Draft Canadian Anti-dumping Act.

Section 2—

The definitions set forth in this section appear to be adequate for the purpose of interpreting, administering and enforcing the Act. We are particularly pleased that no attempt has been made to define "injury" in the Act. We strongly recommend that "injury" be not defined in the regulations. We ses répercussions sur toute notre économie nationale, ne prenne pas force de loi avant que tous les segments de la population canadienne qu'il intéresse n'aient eu l'occasion d'exposer leur point de vue au Comité parlementaire compétent. Nous sommes donc heureux que cette requête ait été agréée.

[Interpretation]

Peu après la signature de juin 1967 du Code international sur l'application des droits antidumping (Accord sur la mise en vigueur de l'article VI du GATT), le ministre des Finances a institué un Comité spécial sur l'antidumping. En novembre 1967, l'AMC a adressé un mémoire détaillé à ce Comité spécial sur l'antidumping et notre délégation en a, par la suite, rencontré les membres. Nous nous réjouissons du fait que dans le projet de la Loi canadienne antidumping, on ait tenu compte de tous les problèmes propres au Canada sur lesquels notre mémoire avait attiré l'attention du Comité. La procédure grâce à laquelle, dans la préparation d'une législation, il est possible de tenir compte de l'expérience et des suggestions constructives des industriels s'est, à notre avis, avérée fort utile.

Comme le laissent entendre les observations qui précèdent, l'AMC trouve le projet de la Loi canadienne antidumping acceptable dans l'ensemble, ce projet de loi prévoyant les pouvoirs nécessaires pour que l'administration puisse promptement prendre des mesures efficaces lorsqu'un producteur canadien a subi un préjudice ou en est menacé.

Il nous est particulièrement difficile de savoir si, à d'autres égards, cette Loi est adéquate ou non, étant donné l'absence des règlements auxquels elle fait de nombreuses références. N'ayant pas eu suffisamment de temps pour analyser les projets de règlements qui ont été récemment présentés à votre Comité relativement aux articles 9 et 10 de la Loi, il nous est impossible de les commenter dans le présent mémoire. Nous exprimons cependant l'espoir que tous les règlements seront rendus publics sous forme de projets bien avant le 1<sup>er</sup> janvier prochain. Ainsi, l'Association pourrait faire connaître ses vues au gouvernement sur les règlements proposés avant leur promulgation par arrêté en conseil.

Nous commentons dans les paragraphes suivants certains articles spécifiques de la Loi canadienne antidumping.

Article 2—

Les définitions que renferme cet article semblent adéquates aux fins d'interprétation, d'administration et d'application de la Loi. Nous nous réjouissons tout particulièrement du fait que l'on ait pas tenté de définir dans la Loi le terme «préjudice». A notre avis, le Tribunal institué en vertu de l'article 21 de-believe that the Tribunal appointed under Section 21 should establish its own criteria for use in determining injury to Canadian producers as every case which comes before it should be judged on its merits.

[Texte]

Section 3—

We concur with this section which provides the necessary authority to levy duty on dumped goods imported after the Tribunal has determined injury. Our experience has been that when an importer realizes that he is going to be assessed dumping duty in addition to the regular duty payable on the imported goods, he discontinues purchasing any further goods from the same supplier at the dumped price. The dumping generally ceases at this stage. The effect of the application of dumping duty is, therefore, to restore the price of the imported goods to their normal level.

Section 4—

This section authorizes the levying of duty on dumped goods in cases where the Deputy Minister has already applied a provisional duty on the same goods and the Tribunal has determined that such dumped goods are causing or likely to cause injury. The Association believes that a duty of not less than the actual margin of dumping should be levied in all such cases. We therefore recommend deletion of the clause at the end of this section which reads: "but not exceeding the provisional duty, if any, payable in respect of the goods." As presently worded, this section places a special responsibility on the Deputy Minister to impose a provisional duty sufficiently high to protect the revenue and to prevent further dumping taking place pending completion of the Department's investigation.

Section 5—

This section outlines the circumstances under which the Tribunal may order that duty be paid retroactively on dumped goods. The authority is limited however to goods entered during a period of 90 days before the Deputy Minister applied a provisional duty to the same type of dumped goods. We note that under Section 53.56 of the United States Antidumping Regulations (Federal Register, Vol. 33, No. 107, Saturday, June 1, 1968) the Secretary of the Treasury may assess a special dumping duty on all dumped goods which were entered or withdrawn from warehouse for consumption not more than 120 days before the question of dumping was vrait établir son propre critère pour ce qui est de déterminer le préjudice causé aux producteurs canadiens, chacune des causes dont il sera saisi devant être jugée selon son bien-fondé particulier.

[Interprétation]

Article 3—

Nous sommes d'accord avec cet article qui prévoit les pouvoirs nécessaires pour imposer des droits sur les marchandises une fois que le Tribunal aura déterminé qu'elles causent un préjudice aux producteurs canadiens. L'expérience nous a appris que lorsqu'un importateur se rend compte qu'il aura à payer des droits de dumping en plus des droits qu'il paie ordinairement sur les marchandises importées, il cesse d'acheter du même fournisseur, à des prix de dumping, toute autre marchandise. Le dumping s'arrête généralement à ce stade. L'application du droit de dumping a donc pour effet de replacer le prix des marchandises importées à son niveau normal.

Article 4—

Cet article autorise l'imposition de droits sur les marchandises sous-évaluées dans les cas où le Sous-ministre a déjà imposé un droit temporaire sur les mêmes marchandises et où le Tribunal a établi que ces marchandises sous-évaluées causent un préjudice aux producteurs canadiens ou menacent de le faire. L'Association croit qu'un droit correspondant au moins à la marge véritable de dumping devrait être imposé dans tous les cas du genre. Nous recommandons donc l'abrogation de la disposition rédigée comme suit à la fin de cet article: «mais n'excédant pas le droit temporaire, s'il en est, payable pour ces marchandises.» Dans sa rédaction actuelle, cet article impose au Sous-ministre la responsabilité spéciale d'ordonner un droit temporaire assez élevé pour protéger le revenu et empêcher qu'un autre dumping n'ait lieu en attendant que le Ministère ait terminé son enquête.

Article 5—

Cet article décrit dans quelles circonstances le Tribunal peut ordonner le paiement rétroactif de droits sur des marchandises sous-évaluées. Ce pouvoir est toutefois limité aux marchandises entrées au cours des 90 jours précédant l'imposition, par le Sous-ministre, d'un droit temporaire sur des marchandises sous-évaluées du même genre. Nous notons qu'en vertu de l'article 53.56 des règlements américains anti-dumping (Federal Register, Vol. 33 No. 107, du samedi 1<sup>er</sup> juin 1968) le Secrétaire du Trésor peut imposer un droit spécial de dumping sur toute marchandise sous-évaluée entrée dans un entrepôt ou qui en a été retirée pour consommation en raised by or presented to the Secretary. We recommend that Section 5 be amended to provide a period of retroactivity not less than that contained in Section 53.56 of the United States regulations.

[Text]

Section 7—

While it is our understanding that the Governor in Council already has authority under the Financial Administration Act to exempt any goods or classes of goods from any Act of Parliament, we are uncertain under what circumstances the Governor in Council would exempt goods from the application of the Anti-dumping Act where there is clear evidence of injury having been caused to domestic producers.

It may be, however, that the government has in mind the present provisions of the Canada-Australia Trade Agreement and the Canada-New Zealand Trade Agreement. In these two trade agreements provision is made for the reciprocal exemption from dumping duty of goods shipped between these countries, subject, of course, to certain specified conditions involving appropriate discussions when dumping has taken place. Since both countries, Australia and New Zealand, are members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, we recommend that steps be taken at an early date to modify these two trade agreements by rescinding the provisions covering reciprocal exemption from dumping duty. We recommend that Section 7 be deleted.

Section 8—

We are in agreement with the definitions of dumping and the margin of dumping contained in this section.

Section 9—

This section defines how the normal value of imported goods is to be determined. While it is similar in many respects to the definition of fair market value as set forth in the Customs Act, there are a number of differences between the two terms as indicated in the proposed draft regulations. The fact that two values have now to be determined in the case of all goods suspected of being dumped places an additional heavy responsibility on the Customs Administration.

Subsection 3 provides that, where there is not a sufficient number of sales of like goods in the domestic market of the exporting country from which to determine the normal dejà de 120 jours avant que le Secrétaire ait soulevé la question du dumping ou avant qu'il en ait été saisi. Nous recommandons que l'article 5 soit modifié de façon à prévoir une période de rétroactivité au moins équivalente à celle que mentionne l'article 53.56 des règlements américains.

[Interpretation]

Article 7—

Même si nous comprenons qu'en vertu de la Loi sur l'administration financière, le Gouverneur en conseil a déjà le pouvoir d'exempter toute marchandise ou catégorie de marchandises d'une loi quelconque du Parlement, nous ne connaissons pas précisément dans quelles circonstances le Gouverneur en conseil exempterait des marchandises de l'application de la Loi antidumping dans les cas où il est probant qu'un préjudice a été causé aux producteurs canadiens.

Il se peut, toutefois, que le gouvernement songe aux dispositions actuelles de l'Accord commercial canado-australien ainsi qu'à celles de l'Accord commercial canado-néo-zélandais. Ces deux Accords prévoient l'exemption réciproque des droits de dumping sur les marchandises expédiées entre ces pays, pourvu naturellement que certaines conditions spécifiques soient respectées, lesquelles comprennent les pourparlers appropriés au moment du dumping. Ces deux pays, l'Australie et la Nouvelle-Zélande, étant membres du GATT, nous recommandons que l'on prenne, le plus tôt possible, des mesures pour modifier ces deux Accords commerciaux en abrogeant les dispositions portant sur l'exemption réciproque du droit de dumping. Nous recommandons la suppression de l'article 7.

Article 8—

Nous sommes d'accord avec les définitions du dumping et de la marge de dumping que renferme cet article.

Article 9—

Cet article définit comment doit être déterminée la valeur normale des marchandises importées. Même si cette définition concorde, à maints égards, avec celle de la juste valeur marchande telle qu'exposée dans la Loi sur les douanes, il existe nombre de nuances entre les deux termes d'après la rédaction des projets de règlements. Le fait qu'il faille maintenant déterminer deux valeurs dans le cas de toutes les marchandises que l'on peut supposer être sous-évaluées ajoute une responsabilité nouvelle et fort lourde à l'administration douanière.

Le paragraphe 3 prévoit que lorsqu'il ne s'effectue pas sur le marché du pays exportateur un nombre suffisant de ventes de marchandises semblables pour permettre de value of goods shipped to Canada, such normal value shall be determined at the option of the Minister as either the price of like goods sold by the exporter to importers in countries other than Canada, or the aggregate of the cost of production of the goods plus a mark-up to cover administrative, selling and all other costs including profits.

[Texte]

Article VI of the GATT and Article 2(d) of the Code on the other hand provide two alternatives for determining normal value when there is no comparable domestic price in the country of export. These are either:

- (i) the highest comparable price for the like product for export to any third country in the ordinary course of trade, or
- (ii) the cost of production of the product in the country of origin plus a reasonable addition for selling cost and profit.

The Association does not believe that an export price constitutes an acceptable value for dumping duty purposes. With the increased emphasis being placed by all countries on expanding their export trade, the practice of offering goods for export at special dump prices can be expected to become more prevalent.

If, however, it is felt that Canada is committed under the Code to taking into consideration export prices for the purpose of determining the normal value of goods imported under these circumstances, then it is recommended that the words "whichever is higher" be added at the end of Subsection 3, and the words "at the option of the Minister" be deleted therefrom.

Section 10—

One of the major criticisms of Canada's present anti-dumping legislation as set out in Section 6 of the Customs Tariff lies in the fact that there is no clear cut definition of what constitutes an "export price". The Association welcomes the addition of this new section to our anti-dumping legislation and will be studying carefully the regulations made thereunder.

Section 11—

The Association appreciates that situations will arise where the Customs Administration is not able to determine either normal value or export price because of the failure of the exporter to co-operate and provide the necessary information. The final responsibility for déterminer la valeur normale des marchandises expédiées au Canada, c'est au gré du Ministre de déterminer cette valeur normale comme étant soit le prix de marchandises semblables vendues par l'exportateur à des importateurs dans tout pays autre que le Canada, soit le coût global de production des marchandises plus un montant pour les frais d'administration, les frais de vente, tous autres frais ainsi que les profits.

[Interprétation]

D'une part l'article VI du GATT et d'autre part l'article 2(d) du Code prévoient deux alternatives pour la détermination de la valeur normale en l'absence de prix comparable dans le pays exportateur.

Ces alternatives sont:

- (i) Le prix comparable le plus fort pour le même produit exporté à tout tiers pays dans le cours normal du commerce, ou
- (ii) Le coût de production du produit au pays d'origine plus un montant raisonnable pour les frais de vente et le profit.

L'Association ne croit pas qu'un prix à l'exportation constitue une valeur acceptable aux fins de droits de dumping. Maintenant que tous les pays attachent plus d'importance à l'expansion de leur commerce d'exportation, on peut s'attendre à une généralisation de la pratique qui consiste à vendre les marchandises exportées à des prix spéciaux de dumping.

Cependant, si l'on a l'impression qu'en vertu du Code, le Canada s'est engagé à tenir compte des prix à l'exportation aux fins de détermination de la valeur normale des marchandises importées dans les circonstances précitées, l'AMC recommande alors que les mots «le plus élevé des deux» soient ajoutés à la fin du paragraphe 3, et que les mots «au gré du Ministre» soient supprimés.

Article 10—

L'une des principales critiques dont fait l'objet la législation canadienne antidumping actuelle exposée dans l'article 6 du Tarif des douanes porte sur le fait qu'il n'existe pas de définition bien précise de ce qui constitue un «prix à l'exportation». L'Association se réjouit de l'addition de ce nouvel article à notre législation antidumping et elle étudiera soigneusement les règlements qu'il permet de promulguer.

Article 11—

L'Association comprend qu'il surviendra des cas où l'administration douanière ne pourra déterminer ni la valeur normale ni le prix à l'exportation parce que l'exportateur ne coopérera pas et ne fournira pas les renseignements nécessaires. Dans tous les cas de taking action in all such cases should logically be centered in the Minister.

[Text]

Section 12—

This section closely parallels Section 41A of the Customs Act which deals with goods exported to Canada from a country other than the country of origin. We concur in the wording of this section.

Section 13—

The Association fully supports the provision contained in this section which authorizes the Deputy Minister to commence an investigation into dumping on his own initiative. It is fundamental that this be done as many dumped imports into Canada may well escape detection by Canadian producers for several months after the goods have been imported.

In this connection we would like to suggest to the Deputy Minister that he instruct the Directors of the six Regional Customs offices to immediately bring to his attention all cases of suspected dumping. This procedure could easily be established since all Customs entries are examined at the Regional offices within a few days after entry.

Section 13 does not provide any time limit within which the Deputy Minister must either begin or complete an investigation after receipt of a written complaint of dumping. The Association recommends that the Act specify that an investigation must be instituted within 30 days and be completed, with decisions taken thereon, within 120 days from the date of receipt of a written complaint.

We realize that this time limit may cause some difficulty for the Customs Administration. However, as Canadian Customs investigators are already posted in the United States, Japan, Britain, and Europe, the only real problem which such a time limit would appear to create would be on imports from other countries where there is no Canadian Customs representative. Even in these cases it should be possible to obtain the information required by the Deputy Minister on which to determine normal value and export price through communication by air mail.

Section 14—

This section authorizes the Deputy Minister to make a preliminary determination of ce genre, c'est au Ministre que devrait normalement revenir la responsabilité finale de prendre des mesures.

[Interpretation]

Article 12—

Cet article se rapproche de très près de l'article 31A de la Loi sur les douanes, article qui a trait aux marchandises exportées au Canada par un pays autre que le pays d'origine. Nous sommes d'accord avec sa rédaction.

Article 13—

L'Association souscrit sans réserve à la disposition de cet article qui autorise le Sous-ministre à instituer, de sa propre initiative, une enquête portant sur le dumping. C'est là une habilitation essentielle car il est fort possible que de nombreuses importations au Canada de marchandises sous-évaluées échappent, pendant plusieurs mois après leur importation, à la surveillance des producteurs canadiens.

A ce sujet, nous aimerions suggérer au Sous-ministre qu'il donne des instructions aux Directeurs des six bureaux régionaux de la douane afin que ces derniers lui soulignent tous les cas qui leur semblent suspects à l'égard du dumping. C'est là une procédure qui pourrait facilement être instituée, toutes les importations en douane étant examinées à ces bureaux régionaux quelques jours après leur entrée.

L'article 13 ne prévoit pas de délai en deçà duquel le Sous-ministre doit, soit commencer, soit terminer, une enquête après avoir reçu une plainte écrite relative au dumping. L'Association des manufacturiers canadiens recommande que la Loi spécifie qu'une enquête doit être instituée en deçà de trente jours et complétée, décisions prises sur le cas, dans les 120 jours à compter de la date de réception de la plainte écrite.

Nous nous rendons compte que la prescription de ces délais peut poser certaines difficultés à l'administration douanière. Toutefois, la Douane canadienne ayant déjà des enquêteurs en service aux États-Unis, au Japon, en Grande-Bretagne et sur le continent européen, le seul problème réel auquel la prescription de tels délais pourrait donner lieu se poserait dans le cas des importations en provenance d'autres pays, là où il n'y a pas de représentant de la douane canadienne. Même dans ces cas, il devrait être possible, en recourant au courrier aérien, d'obtenir les renseignements dont le Sous-ministre a besoin pour déterminer la valeur normale et le prix à l'exportation.

Article 14—

Cet article autorise le Sous-ministre à faire une détermination préliminaire du dumping in cases where he is satisfied that dumping is taking place and the actual or potential volume of imports is not negligible without awaiting the decision of the Tribunal regarding the question of injury. We consider it most important that this authority be given to the Deputy Minister so that he may take prompt action in cases where from the evidence on hand it is clear that dumping of a continuing nature is going on. We concur with the provision that the Deputy Minister be required to make a final determination of dumping within three months from the date of the preliminary determination.

[Texte]

Section 15—

The application of provisional duty to all imports of goods subsequent to the preliminary determination of dumping by the Deputy Minister is highly desirable. Under Canada's present anti-dumping legislation, such action is only taken after the final determination of dumping has taken place. This has created difficulty in collecting the dumping duty payable on past imports where several months elapsed between the time the investigation was commenced and the time the final determination of dumping was made.

Section 16—

This section authorizes the Anti-dumping Tribunal to investigate and determine whether or not injury has been caused or is likely to be caused to Canadian or potential Canadian producers of like goods when provisional duty has been applied to imported goods by the Deputy Minister.

We support the provision in this section which authorizes the Tribunal to extend the scope of its investigation into the importation of other imported goods which closely resemble the goods to which the preliminary determination applies. The intent of subsection 2(a) would be made more clear by the addition of the word "other" before the word "goods" in the first line of this subsection.

Section 17—

In order to ensure that the Deputy Minister acts promptly in making a final determination of dumping after the Tribunal has made an order or finding, we suggest that the word "forthwith" be added to line 3 in this section.

Sections 18 to 20—

We are pleased that the Act contains provisions whereby appeals may be lodged on the dumping et ce, sans attendre la décision du Tribunal concernant le préjudice causé, lorsqu'il est convaincu que le dumping a lieu et que le volume réel ou potentiel des importations en question n'est pas négligeable. Selon nous, il est très important que ce pouvoir soit conféré au Sous-ministre afin qu'il puisse prendre promptement des mesures dans les cas où, d'après la preuve dont il dispose, il est clair qu'il s'agit d'un dumping persistant. Nous sommes d'accord avec la disposition de cet article à l'effet que le Sous-ministre soit tenu de faire une détermination définitive du dumping dans les trois mois de la date de la détermination préliminaire.

[Interprétation]

Article 15—

Une fois que le Sous-ministre a fait la détermination préliminaire du dumping, il est fort souhaitable que les droits temporaires soient imposés sur toutes les importations de marchandises de la même sorte. Selon la législation canadienne antidumping actuelle, cette mesure n'est prise qu'après la détermination définitive du dumping. Ceci a créé des difficultés dans la perception des droits de dumping payables sur les importations antérieures dans les cas où plusieurs mois s'étaient écoulés entre la date de l'institution de l'enquête et celle de la détermination définitive du dumping.

Article 16—

Lorsque le Sous-ministre a appliqué le droit temporaire à des marchandises importées, cet article autorise le Tribunal antidumping à faire enquête et à déterminer si oui ou non un préjudice a été causé ou est susceptible d'être causé aux producteurs canadiens actuels et en puissance de marchandises semblables.

Nous appuyons la disposition de cet article qui autorise le Tribunal à étendre le champ d'application de ses enquêtes à l'importation d'autres marchandises dont les caractéristiques ressemblent étroitement à celles des marchandises auxquelles s'applique la détermination préliminaire du dumping. L'esprit du sous-alinéa 2(a) de cet article serait rendu plus clair si l'on y ajoutait, en première ligne, le mot «autres» avant le mot «marchandises».

Article 17—

Afin d'être assurés que le Sous-ministre fera promptement la détermination définitive du dumping une fois que le Tribunal a émis une ordonnance et des conclusions, nous suggérons que le mot «immédiatement» soit ajouté dans la troisième ligne de cet article.

Articles 18 à 20—

Nous sommes heureux que la Loi renferme des dispositions en vertu desquelles chaque amount of dumping duty levied in any given case.

[Text]

Sections 21 to 32—

These sections deal with the establishment of a new Anti-dumping Tribunal of five persons whose principal function is to determine whether or not injury has been caused or is likely to be caused to Canadian producers whenever dumped goods are being imported into Canada. As indicated previously, we are pleased that no attempt has been made to define in the Act the criteria by which the Tribunal is to determine injury.

The Association believes it is important that the chairman and members of the Tribunal should be persons with considerable experience in commerce and industry. The decisions of the Tribunal must be made promptly in order to prevent widespread disruption of the Canadian market.

Section 26 provides that the Tribunal may obtain the advice and assistance of any agency or department of the Government of Canada in the conduct of its business. In the Association's view this communication should work both ways and any government department should be empowered to submit pertinent information or evidence to the Tribunal. We are, however, opposed to the requirement in Section 30 that before issuing an order or a finding, the Tribunal must seek the advice of a panel consisting of the deputy ministers of various government departments. We believe that this requirement could cause serious delays in decision making by the Tribunal and we recommend therefore that Section 30 be deleted from the Act.

We are pleased that provision has been made in Section 29 for hearings to be held in camera by the Tribunal as well as for the non-disclosure of information which is given or elicited in confidence to the Tribunal. We consider this to be vitally important to Canadian producers since injury or a threat of injury cannot be easily determined unless the Tribunal is to have access to confidential records.

Section 33—

This section requires that dump duty be collected from the owner or importer of the dumped goods including in certain circum-

[Interpretation]

fois qu'une personne se croit lésée en ce qui concerne le montant des droits de dumping elle peut en appeler de cette décision.

Articles 21 à 32—

Ces articles traitent de l'institution d'un nouveau Tribunal antidumping, composé de 5 personnes et dont la fonction principale consistera à déterminer si oui ou non un préjudice a été causé ou est susceptible d'être causé aux producteurs canadiens chaque fois que des marchandises sous-évaluées sont importées au Canada. Tel que déjà mentionné dans le présent mémoire, l'Association se réjouit du fait que l'on n'ait pas tenté de définir dans la Loi le critère auquel recourra le Tribunal pour déterminer le préjudice.

Selon l'Association, il est très important que le président et les membres du Tribunal soient des personnes qui possèdent une vaste expérience dans les domaines commercial et industriel. Les décisions de ce Tribunal devront être prises rapidement afin d'empêcher que le marché canadien ne devienne morcelé de toutes parts.

L'article 26 prévoit que le Tribunal pourra obtenir les conseils et l'aide de tout organisme, ministère ou département du gouvernement du Canada en vue de son bon fonctionnement. L'AMC est d'avis que cette communication devrait être bilatérale et que tout ministère du gouvernement du Canada devrait également pouvoir soumettre des preuves ou renseignements pertinents au Tribunal. Ce à quoi nous nous opposons cependant, c'est à l'exigence de l'article 30 en vertu duquel le Tribunal est tenu de demander l'avis d'un Comité consultatif formé des sous-ministres de divers ministères. Nous croyons que cette exigence peut donner lieu à de sérieux retards dans les décisions du Tribunal et nous recommandons conséquemment l'abrogation de cet article.

Nous souscrivons à la disposition de l'article 29 qui prévoit le huis clos pour les auditions qu'accordera le Tribunal. Nous sommes également d'accord avec le fait que les renseignements qui auront été fournis confidentiellement au Tribunal, ou que celui-ci aura obtenus confidentiellement, ne doivent pas être rendus publics. A notre avis, ce point est souverainement important pour les producteurs canadiens car il n'est pas facile de déterminer que ceux-ci ont souffert un préjudice ou en ont été menacés à moins que le Tribunal n'ait accès à des registres confidentiels.

Article 33—

Cet article exige que les droits de dumping soient perçus du propriétaire des marchandises sous-évaluées ou de celui qui les a stances the person to whom the dumped goods were sold in Canada.

[Texte]

Section 53.52 of the United States Antidumping Regulations requires that the importer file a written statement to the effect that he has not entered into any agreement or understanding for the payment or refunding by the manufacturer, producer, seller, or exporter of all or any part of the dumping duty assessed against him. We recommend that Section 33 be amended by adding thereto a clause covering such possible reimbursement of dumping duty to the importer by the exporter.

Section 34—

Subsection 3 provides that where a statement submitted by or on behalf of an importer to the Deputy Minister contains false or incorrect information, the importer is guilty of an offence and liable to a penalty equal to the duty paid value of the imported goods.

We suggest that the word "misleading" be substituted for "incorrect" in this section so that it will only apply in cases where there is a clear intent to deceive the Deputy Minister.

Section 37—

Canada's present Customs legislation provides for emergency action to be taken in the case of imports of goods which constitute injury to domestic producers but where no dumping has occurred.

The Association is pleased that provision has been made for such emergency action in the new Subsection 1a of Section 7 of the Customs Tariff. This authorizes the imposition of a surtax on imported goods that cause or threaten serious injury to Canadian producers.

Authority for this kind of action is provided for an Article XIX of GATT. The new Subsection is considered to be a highly necessary and essential element of Customs legislation covering the import of goods into Canada.

Conclusion

The Association has evidence that some wholly owned Canadian subsidiaries of foreign companies are giving consideration to discontinuing their manufacturing operations in Canada in the belief that Canadian industry will receive very little protection from foreign dumping after January 1, 1969. We strongly urge therefore that a statement be made at this time by the Canadian Government re-affirming its policy that anti-dumping duties will be quickly and effectively applied importées ou même, en certaines circonstances, de la personne à qui elles ont été vendues au Canada.

[Interprétation]

L'article 53.52 des règlements américains antidumping exige de l'importateur une déclaration écrite à l'effet qu'il n'a conclu aucune entente ou arrangement en vertu duquel le fabricant, le producteur, le vendeur ou l'exportateur paiera ou remboursera la totalité ou une partie quelconque du droit de dumping qui lui aura été imposé. Nous recommandons que l'article 33 soit modifié par l'adjonction d'une clause portant sur un tel remboursement éventuel du droit de dumping à l'importateur par l'exportateur.

Article 34—

Le paragraphe (3) prévoit que lorsqu'un état soumis par ou au nom d'un importateur contient des renseignements faux ou inexacts, l'importateur est coupable d'une infraction et passible d'une amende égale aux droits de douanes sur la valeur impossible des marchandises importées.

Nous suggérons que le mot «misleading» remplace le mot «incorrect» dans cet article afin que le terme ne s'applique qu'aux cas où l'intention de tromper le Sous-ministre est évidente.

Article 37—

La législature canadienne actuelle sur les douanes prévoit qu'une mesure d'urgence soit prise lorsque des importations de marchandises constituent un préjudice aux producteurs canadiens sans qu'il y ait eu dumping.

L'Association est heureuse que le nouveau sous-alinéa 1(a) de l'article 7 du Tarif des douanes prévoit cette mesure d'urgence. Cette nouvelle disposition autorise l'imposition d'une surtaxe sur les marchandises importées qui causent ou menacent de causer un préjudice grave aux producteurs canadiens.

L'article XIX du GATT prévoit ce genre de mesure. L'Association juge que ce nouveau sous-alinéa est fort nécessaire et qu'il constitue un élément essentiel de la législation douanière applicable à l'importation de marchandises au Canada.

Conclusion

L'Association a des preuves que des filiales de propriété entièrement canadienne mais dont la société-mère est étrangère envisagent de mettre fin à leur exploitation manufacturière au Canada parce qu'elles ont l'impression que l'industrie canadienne sera très peu protégée du dumping après le 1<sup>er</sup> janvier 1969. Nous recommandons donc instamment que le gouvernement du Canada se hâte de faire une déclaration par laquelle il confirmera sa politique que des droits antidumping whenever dumping or a threat of dumping is likely to cause injury to Canadian producers.

[Text]

While the Association considers the Draft Canadian Anti-dumping Act to be generally satisfactory, its effectiveness will depend in large part on the thoroughness and promptness with which the Customs Administration and the Anti-dumping Tribunal carry out their special responsibilities under the Act. The Association pledges its full co-operation to both these agencies in the discharge of their duties.

The Association would be pleased to supplement these views in any way the Committee might desire.

Yours very truly,

J. C. WHITELAW,
Executive Vice-President and General Manager.

[Interpretation]

seront rapidement et efficacement appliqués chaque fois qu'un dumping ou une menace de dumping seront susceptibles de causer un préjudice aux producteurs canadiens.

Même si l'Association considère qu'en général le Projet de loi canadienne antidumping est satisfaisant, elle trouve que son efficacité dépendra en grande partie de la minutie et de la diligence avec lesquelles l'Administration douanière ainsi que le Tribunal antidumping assumeront les responsabilités particulières qui leur incombent en vertu de cette Loi. L'Association s'engage à coopérer pleinement avec ces deux organismes dans l'accomplissement de leurs fonctions.

L'Association explicitera bien volontiers, de la façon qui conviendra le mieux à voire Comité, les vues exposées dans le présent document.

Veuillez croire, monsieur le président, que les présentes recommandations vous sont bien respectueusement soumises et agréer l'expression de ma haute considération.

Le vice-président exécutif et directeur général,

J. C. WHITELAW

[Texte]

APPENDIX U

Brief of the Canadian Electrical
Manufacturers Association*Introduction*

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, with its head office at 10 Price Street, in the City of Toronto, is an Association of 158 manufacturers who are engaged in the manufacture of electrical products in Canada. The volume of sales of the members of the Association represents approximately 90 % of the output of the entire Canadian electrical manufacturing industry.

The Electrical Manufacturing industry in Canada had an output in the year 1967 valued in excess of $2.1 billion and in that year employed 139,000 Canadians.

The objects of the Association, as set out in the Letters Patent of Incorporation are as follows:

(a) to increase the amount of electrical service to the public and improve the quality of this service;

(b) to promote the standardization of electrical products;

(c) to collect information relating to the electrical industry and to disseminate such information to the members of the Association and the public;

(d) to appear for the members of the Association before and to co-operate with legislative committees, governmental departments and agencies and other bodies in regard to matters affecting the industry and

(e) to promote a spirit of co-operation among the members of the Association in the attainment of improved production, enlarged distribution and increased efficiency in the use of electrical products.

Further information concerning CEMA is given in the following Appendices to this Submission.

List of CEMA members—Annex A List of CEMA Officers and Directors—

Annex B

Position on International Trade

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association believes in fair equitable trade under existing laws and agreements. Further,

[Interprétation]

APPENDICE U

MÉMOIRE DE LA CANADIAN ELECTRICAL
MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION*Introduction*

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association dont le siège social est situé au 10 Price Street à Toronto, est une association groupant 158 fabricants de matériel électrique au Canada. Le volume des ventes des membres de l'Association représente environ 90 % du rendement total de l'industrie canadienne de la fabrication de matériel électrique.

La production de l'industrie de la fabrication de matériel électrique au Canada pour l'année 1967 a été évaluée à plus de $2.1 milliards et l'effectif de la main-d'œuvre employée à cet effet comptait 139,000 Canadiens.

Les buts de l'Association, tels qu'ils figurent dans les lettres patentes d'incorporation, sont les suivants:

(a) accroître non seulement le volume du service électrique destiné au public, mais en améliorer aussi la qualité;

(b) stimuler la normalisation du matériel électrique;

(c) accumuler les renseignements relatifs à l'industrie électrique et les diffuser aussi bien aux membres de l'Association qu'au public;

(d) comparaître, pour les membres de l'Association, devant les comités législatifs, les agences et les services gouvernementaux et autres corps constitués et collaborer avec eux quant aux questions qui affectent l'industrie; et

(e) stimuler l'esprit de collaboration entre les membres de l'Association afin de pouvoir améliorer la production, étendre la distribution et accroître l'efficacité dans l'utilisation du matériel électrique.

Des renseignements supplémentaires sur CEMA figurent dans les annexes à ce mémoire, savoir:

Liste des membres de la CEMA—Annexe A

Liste des cadres et des administrateurs de la CEMA—Annexe B

Situation du commerce international

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association est partisane d'un commerce équitable en vertu des lois et des conventions

[Text]

CEMA believes in the maximum flow of world trade. It believes that dumping, the use of subsidies, direct or indirect, and other non-tariff barriers are destructive practices leading to trade wars and eventual curtailment of world trade.

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association contends that dumping is taking place in the market for electrical products in Canada and, further, that this has been injurious to a destructive degree to a large segment of the Canadian Electrical Manufacturing industry. These practices, which circumvent the intent of existing trade laws and agreements, are not conducive to two-way trade.

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association believes in the benefits of international trade, but, a trade equally fair to all competitors and conducted with strict observance to established agreements and laws of the importing countries concerned.

The Proposed New Anti-Dumping Legislation

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association has examined the proposed new anti-dumping legislation contained in the White Paper on Anti-Dumping, September 1968, and concludes that it is consistent with the International Code on anti-dumping to which Canada has subscribed at Geneva in 1967 and believes that it lays the foundation to ensure that fair trading practices apply to foreign producers and Canadian producers alike.

The proposed legislation introduces a new concept to Canada—that of “injury to production” and provides that evidence of both DUMPING and INJURY must be established before penalties are applied.

Evaluation of Injury

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association is pleased to note the proposed Act provides for a Tribunal to be appointed for the purpose of determining injury to Canadian production. It is the opinion of the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association that there should be no attempt made to define “injury” in the language of this Act but that judgment of injury be in the hands of the Tribunal as stipulated.

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association suggests that the Deputy Minister, acting in his administrative capacity in existantes. De plus, la CEMA est partisane d'un courant de commerce international porté à son maximum. Elle est persuadée que le dumping, les subventions—directes et indirectes—et autres barrières douanières non tarifaires, sont les méthodes destructrices qui ne contribuent qu'à envenimer les relations commerciales et conduisent finalement à une réduction dans l'ampleur du commerce international.

[Interpretation]

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association affirme que le dumping est en train de s'infiltrer dans le marché du matériel électrique au Canada et, de plus, que la méthode a été nuisible et même destructrice pour un large segment de l'industrie canadienne de fabrication de matériel électrique. Ces pratiques, qui circonviennent les desseins des lois et des conventions commerciales existantes ne sont pas favorables au succès des échanges commerciaux.

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association prise les avantages d'un commerce international, mais d'un commerce équitable pour tous les concurrents et régit selon la stricte observation des accords conclus avec les pays importateurs et des lois qui les gouvernent.

Le projet de loi antidumping

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association a étudié le projet d'une nouvelle loi antidumping contenu dans le Livre blanc sur l'antidumping, septembre 1968, et elle en a conclu que ce projet est conforme au code international sur l'antidumping auquel le Canada a adhéré à Genève en 1967. Elle est persuadée que ce projet représente la base nécessaire pour garantir des pratiques commerciales équitables entre les producteurs canadiens et étrangers.

La législation proposée introduit au Canada un nouveau concept—celui du «préjudice à la production»—selon lequel la preuve tant du DUMPING que du PRÉJUDICE doit être établie avant que les pénalités puissent être imposées.

Évaluation du préjudice

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association est fière de constater que le projet de loi prévoit un tribunal dont les fonctions consisteront à déterminer le préjudice causé à la production canadienne. The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association est d'avis qu'aucune tentative de définition du préjudice ne doit être faite, au sens de cette loi, mais que l'appréciation du préjudice soit laissée au tribunal, comme stipulé.

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association suggère que le sous-ministre, agissant dans l'exercice de ses fonctions en ce the determination of injury, should consider that injury or threat of injury is anything which adversely affects one or more of the following: the maintenance and growth of profitable markets; the efficient utilization of capital, manpower, production facilities, material and supplies in any industry, which is established or about to be established.

[Texte]

The Need for Effective Enforcement

While the legislative proposals on anti-dumping appear to make adequate provisions for the safeguarding of Canadian industry against unfair trade practices, we recommend that the administrative enforcement against dumping equally strong, so that in the case of injurious dumping, the authorities can move effectively and aggressively. This is important to producers of electrical equipment because certain sectors of our industry are fighting for their very survival.

The inroads made by British and other European exporters to traditional markets for some of our product lines have reached overwhelming proportions. This is especially the case in regard to electric power generation and transmission equipment where, in the past two years, over 35 per cent of our domestic market has disappeared to offshore competitors.

Evidence available to us indicates that the export pricing tactics of these offshore competitors departs significantly from the pricing basis applicable to their own domestic markets; the very practice that is condemned in Article VI of GATT.

We have found that in the case of electric power generation and transmission equipment, the export prices quoted to our Canadian markets are, on the average, about 48 per cent less than the comparable price, in the ordinary course of trade, for the like products when destined for markets in the exporting country.

Further, when we attempt to equate the offshore export costs to a concept of normal value, we also find that the same disparate situation prevails as in the dual pricing method and this is, of course, important in the determination of normal value of goods, based on the aggregate of the cost of production of the goods and an amount for administration, selling and all other costs and for qui concerne la détermination du préjudice, devrait s'appuyer sur le principe selon lequel le préjudice ou la menace des préjudices est constitué par tout facteur qui exerce une influence défavorable sur un seul ou sur plusieurs des éléments suivants: conservation et croissance de marchés profitables, utilisation efficace des capitaux, main-d'œuvre, aménagement de la production, matériaux et fournitures dans toute industrie déjà fondée ou sur le point de l'être.

[Interprétation]

Des mesures exécutoires efficaces s'imposent

Bien que les projets de loi sur l'antidumping semblent prévoir la sauvegarde de l'industrie canadienne en la préservant judicieusement contre les pratiques commerciales déloyales, nous voudrions que les mesures exécutoires administratives contre le dumping soient prises aussi fermement afin que dans les cas d'un dumping préjudiciable les autorités puissent prendre l'offensive et agir avec efficacité. La question revêt une importance particulière pour les fabricants d'équipement électrique car certains secteurs de notre industrie en sont arrivés au point où ils doivent combattre pour ne pas succomber.

Les incursions faites par les exportateurs britanniques et autres exportateurs européens dans le secteur des marchés ordinairement réservés à certaines gammes de notre production ont atteint des proportions invraisemblables. Le cas s'applique particulièrement à l'équipement générateur et de transmission d'énergie électrique où plus de 35% de notre marché intérieur a été accaparé par des concurrents lointains au cours des deux dernières années.

La preuve que nous avons pu obtenir indique que les tactiques dictant les prix à l'exportation de ces concurrents lointains s'écarte sensiblement de la base applicable à leurs propres marchés intérieurs; cette pratique est condamnée dans l'article VI de GATT.

Nous avons constaté, pour l'équipement générateur et de transmission d'énergie électrique, que les prix à l'exportation cotés pour nos marchés canadiens sont, en moyenne, inférieurs de 48 % aux prix comparables, pour les mêmes produits, dans le cours ordinaire des affaires, lorsque ces produits sont destinés aux marchés d'exportation.

En essayant d'égaliser les coûts des exportations lointaines au niveau du concept de la valeur normale, nous avons constaté par ailleurs que, tout comme avec la méthode de double fixation des prix, la même situation disparate prévalait ce qui, bien entendu, est important dans la détermination de la valeur normale des marchandises lorsque celle-ci est basée sur le coût global de leur production, profits. The export costing methods used by our European competitors are on an incremental basis while in the ordinary course of trade for home consumption, values are equated to costs by using standard costing methods.

[Text]

It is becoming increasingly evident that Japanese wire and cable manufacturers are employing similar tactics to gain a significant share of Canadian power cable market.

Intensive efforts have been made over the past few years to replace lost domestic business by increased export sales. Despite these efforts, the Canadian Electrical Manufacturing industry has found itself unable to penetrate certain export markets, because of artificial barriers which are being erected by certain governments and their agencies to protect domestic production. A substantial body of evidence on these practices has been compiled by our industry.

Unless the realities of the international trading situation on electrical equipment are recognized by those charged with implementing Canada's new Anti-Dumping legislation, irreparable damage to the Canadian Electrical Manufacturing industry must inevitably result.

In view of the critical decisions which the Tribunal will be called on to make, it is imperative that it be staffed by individuals of the highest calibre with broad experience in commerce and industry. The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association believes that every effort should be made to secure the services of senior individuals with extensive practical experience in a cross-section of Canadian industry and government.

Canadian Economic & Social Objectives

We have given our views on the proposed Anti-Dumping Act and we are prepared to answer questions and discuss it in more detail. We have expressed the industry's keen concern that, pursuant to the Act, Regulations be issued and administrative action be provided consistent with the spirit and intent of the proposed Act. But overriding these concerns is the need to relate them to the broader economic and social objectives of Canada and the continued welfare and prosperity of Canadians generally.

From the Economic Council of Canada and elsewhere, we have heard of the productivity

[Interpretation]

plus une certaine somme pour l'exportation, les frais de vente et autres, et compte tenu des profits. Les méthodes de calcul du coût à l'exportation utilisées par nos concurrents européens sont basées sur l'accroissement, alors que dans le cours ordinaire du commerce national, les valeurs sont égalisées par rapport aux coûts calculés selon les méthodes standard d'établissement des prix de revient.

Il devient de plus en plus évident que les fabricants japonais de fils et câbles emploient des tactiques similaires pour acquérir une part importante du marché canadien des câbles électriques.

D'immenses efforts ont été entrepris au cours des dernières années pour équilibrer le fléchissement des affaires intérieures en augmentant les exportations. Malgré tout, l'industrie canadienne de la fabrication de matériel électrique s'est trouvée dans l'impossibilité de pénétrer dans certains marchés d'exportation par suite des barrières artificielles érigées par certains gouvernements et leurs agences respectives afin de protéger la production intérieure. Notre industrie a réussi à accumuler des preuves flagrantes de ces pratiques.

A moins que le réalisme de la situation du commerce international en ce qui concerne le matériel électrique soit reconnu par les organismes chargés d'exécuter la nouvelle loi antidumping au Canada, l'industrie canadienne de la fabrication de matériel électrique sera la victime d'irréparables dommages.

Compte tenu des décisions critiques que le tribunal devra prendre, il est impérieux qu'il soit constitué par des personnalités de haut calibre possédant une vaste expérience du commerce et de l'industrie. The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association est persuadée qu'aucun effort ne doit être épargné pour s'assurer les services de cadres supérieurs ayant une expérience pratique étendue, aussi bien à l'échelon gouvernemental qu'à l'échelon industriel canadien.

Objectifs sociaux et économiques canadiens

Ayant présenté nos vues sur le projet de loi antidumping, nous sommes prêts à répondre aux questions et à les discuter en détail. Nous avons exprimé l'extrême intérêt de l'industrie à voir édicter, en conséquence de la loi, des Règlements et des mesures administratives conformes à l'esprit et aux intentions du projet en question. Cependant, ce qui l'emporte sur l'intérêt manifesté par l'industrie, c'est en particulier le besoin de rattachement à des objectifs économiques et sociaux beaucoup plus vastes et, en général, le maintien du bien-être et de la prospérité des Canadiens.

Nous avons entendu parler, entre autres, par l'entremise du Conseil Économique du gap between Canadian and United States industry. We have heard of the gap in Research and Development. We have heard of the gap in levels of education, particularly at senior management level.

[Texte]

We are also aware of the growing increase in Canada's potential work force and of the need to train and prepare these people so that they can make an adequate contribution toward increased productivity, toward more research and development, toward better management and toward a higher Canadian living standard. For example.

—During the period 1970-75 the increase in new job requirements is forecast at 230,000 per year; a rate more than 50% higher than the 150,000 per year in the 1960-65 period.

—This rate of entry to the total work force is 50% higher than that in the United States and higher than in any other industrialized nation.

Governments at all levels are vitally concerned with establishing a climate for the development of job opportunities not only in sufficient quantity but, equally important, of high quality. Governments at all levels are spending vast sums of money to promote the development of a Canadian research and development capability, to extend educational facilities of all kinds and to upgrade the educational standards.

It is therefore quite important that industry, and particularly secondary manufacturing industry, which is more labour intensive, be given every opportunity to grow and progress in every possible way so that it will be able to employ productively the Canadians who will be entering our work force in the near future.

At the pleasure of the Committee, a delegation from the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association would be willing to attend a session of the Committee for further discussion. It is our opinion that such discussion would be productive for both the Committee and the Association.

F. G. Samis,

General Manager.

K. H. Rapsey

President.

[Interprétation]

Canada, du fossé qui séparait l'industrie canadienne de l'industrie américaine en matière de productivité. Nous avons entendu parler également de la brèche qui sépara la recherche et la mise au point, comme de celle qui existe entre les niveaux d'éducation, particulièrement dans le domaine des cadres de direction.

Nous sommes parfaitement au courant de l'accroissement du potentiel de la main-d'œuvre au Canada et de la nécessité de former et de préparer cette main-d'œuvre afin qu'elle puisse apporter sa contribution à l'amplification de la productivité, à la recherche, à la mise au point, à une meilleure gestion et à un standard de vie plus élevé. Par exemple:

—Durant la période 1970-1975, on prévoit que l'accroissement des exigences en matière de nouveaux métiers sera de 230,000 par an; c'est-à-dire un taux supérieur de 50% aux 150,000 par an pour la période 1960-1965.

—Ce taux d'accès à la main-d'œuvre est supérieur de 50% à celui des États-Unis et plus élevé que celui de n'importe quel autre pays industrialisé.

Les gouvernements, à tous les échelons, tentent de créer un climat propice à la mise au point de perspectives favorables à la création de nouveaux emplois non seulement suffisants en nombre, mais en qualité. Au Canada, les gouvernements, quels qu'ils soient, dépensent d'énormes sommes pour favoriser le développement et la recherche des capacités, pour étendre les conditions favorables à l'éducation dans tous les domaines et, dans l'ensemble, pour rehausser les normes de l'éducation.

En conséquence, il est donc important que l'industrie, et particulièrement l'industrie secondaire de la fabrication, soit en mesure de s'étendre et de progresser dans tous les secteurs possibles afin de fournir des situations enviables aux Canadiens qui constitueront la main-d'œuvre de demain.

Une délégation de la Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association se tient à la disposition du Comité pour assister à une de ces sessions, afin de discuter de la question en cause. Nous croyons sincèrement que ces discussions porteront leurs fruits tant pour le Comité que pour l'Association.

F. G. Samis
Directeur général.

K. H. Rapsey
Président.

[Text]

ANNEX A

LIST OF CEMA MEMBER COMPANIES

Company and Official Representative

Acme Division, Polygon Services Ltd., E. C. Hamlin; Allen-Bradley Canada Limited, K. H. Rapsey; Allen West (Canada) Ltd., K. J. Trudgen (1st Alt); Alpin Otis Elevator Co. Ltd., G. Fecteau; Aluminum Company of Canada Ltd., M. Emmett; Amalgamated Electric Corporation Ltd., C. A. Calderone; The Arborite Company, E. L. Crossman; Arrow-Hart & Hegeman (Canada) Ltd., G. R. Hooper; Ascoelectric Brantford Ltd., F. E. Lewis; Automatic Sprinkler Company (1964) Ltd., B. E. Ruscoe; Bay Bronze (1962) Ltd., M. S. Wallace; Bedard-Girard Limited, J. Phaneuf; A. Belanger, Limitée, T. St. Laurent; E. W. Bliss Company (Canada) Ltd., G. Montgomery; British Columbia Transformer Co. Ltd., H. N. Burgess; Brown Boveri (Canada) Ltd., W. O. Rowan; Burndy Canada Ltd., F. H. McLenaghan; Canada Wire & Cable Co. Ltd., J. H. Stevens; Canadian Admiral Corporation Ltd., S. D. Brownlee; Canadian Allis-Chalmers Limited, B. T. Ellis; Canadian Armature Works Corp., V. Zyto; The Canadian Chromalox Co. Ltd., V. N. Stock; The Canadian Coleman Co. Ltd., I. D. Campbell; Canadian Controllers Limited, S. A. Musselman; Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd., A. F. Johnston; Canadian Ohio Brass Co. Ltd., E. R. Davey; Canadian Phoenix Steel & Pipe Ltd., A. D. Morris; Canadian Porcelain Co. Ltd., W. B. Hall; Canadian Sterling Electric Ltd., J. Hawes; Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., W. J. Cheesman; Canadian White Star Products Ltd., W. E. White; Canron Limited, C. A. Shupe; Cansfield Electrical Works Ltd., P. D. Smith; James B. Carter Limited, D. Sprague; CEB Limited, R. J. Geleziunas; A. B. Chance Co. of Canada Ltd., W. H. White; Commercial Enclosed Fuse Co. (Canada) Ltd., B. F. Hahn; Conduflor Canada Limited, H. J. Hoseason; Conduits National Company Limited, R. Clarke, Jr.; Crompton Parkinson Electrical Ltd., T. L. Berridge; Crouse-Hinds Company of Canada, Ltd., C. F. Graham; Cutler-Hammer Canada Limited, C. A. Wilde; The Danby Corporation, J. B. Miller; Darling Brothers Limited, A. Hynd; Dominion Cutout Limited, D. C. Ferguson; Dominion Electric Manufacturing Co. Ltd.; Dover Corporation (Canada) Ltd., F. S. Harwood; F. X. Drolet Inc., A. Belanger; Eagle Electric of Canada Ltd., N.

[Interpretation]

ANNEXE A

LISTE DES COMPAGNIES MEMBRES
DE LA CEMA

Compagnie et représentant officiel

Acme Division, Polygon, Services Ltd., E.C. Hamlin; Allen-Bradley Canada Limited, K.H. Rapsey; Allen West (Canada) Ltd., K. J. Trudgen (1st Alt); Alpin Otis Elevator Co. Ltd., G. Fecteau; Aluminum Company of Canada Ltd., M. Emmett; Amalgamated Electric Corporation Ltd., C. A. Calderone; The Arborite Company, E. L. Crossman; Arrow-Hart & Hegeman (Canada) Ltd., G. R. Hooper; Ascoelectric Brantford Ltd., F. E. Lewis; Automatic Sprinkler Company (1964) Ltd., B. E. Ruscoe; Bay Bronze (1962) Ltd., M. S. Wallace; Bedard-Girard Limited, J. Phaneuf; A. Bélanger, Limitée, T. St-Laurent; E. W. Bliss Company (Canada) Ltd., G. Montgomery; British Columbia Transformer Co. Ltd., H. N. Burgess; Brown Boveri (Canada) Ltd., W. O. Rowan; Burndy Canada Ltd., F. H. McLenaghan; Canada Wire & Cable Co. Ltd., J. H. Stevens; Canadian Admiral Corporation Ltd., S. D. Brownlee; Canadian Allis-Chalmers Limited, B. T. Ellis; Canadian Armature Works Corp., V. Zyto; The Canadian Chromalox Co. Ltd., V. N. Stock; The Canadian Coleman Co. Ltd., I. D. Campbell; Canadian Controllers Limited, S. A. Musselman; Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd., A. F. Johnston; Canadian Ohio Brass Co. Ltd., E. R. Davey; Canadian Phoenix Steel & Pipe Ltd., A. D. Morris; Canadian Porcelain Co. Ltd., W. B. Hall; Canadian Sterling Electric Ltd., J. Hawes; Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., W. J. Cheesman; Canadian White Star Products Ltd., W. E. White; Canron, Limited, C. A. Shupe; Cansfield Electrical Works Ltd., P. D. Smith; James B. Carter Limited, D. Sprague; CEB Limited, R. J. Geleziunas; A. B. Chance Co. of Canada Ltd., W. H. White; Commercial Enclosed Fuse Co. (Canada) Ltd., B. F. Hahn; Conduflor Canada Limited, H. J. Hoseason; Conduits National Company Limited, R. Clarke, Jr.; Crompton Parkinson Electrical Ltd., T. L. Berridge; Crouse-Hinds Company of Canada, Ltd., C. F. Graham; Cutler-Hammer Canada Limited, C. A. Wilde; The Danby Corporation, J. B. Miller; Darling Brothers Limited, A. Hynd; Dominion Cutout Limited, D. C. Ferguson; Dominion Electric Manufacturing Co. Ltd., Dover Corporation (Canada) Ltd., F. S. Harwood; F. X. Drolet Inc., A. Bélanger; Eagle Electric of Canada Ltd., N. W.

[Texte]

W. Leddy; Eastern Wire & Conduits Limited, H. E. R. Merker; Edwards of Canada Limited, R. A. Yates; Electrical Mfg. Co. Ltd., C. Rousseau; Electric Power Equipment Limited, R. Bartholomew; Electroheat Limited, A. B. Johnson; Electroline Manufacturing Co. Ltd., A. Berniker; Electromode Division, Singer Co. of Canada, I. L. Campbell; Electrovert Ltd., J. Gogan; Emerson Electric Canada Limited, M. K. Douglas; English Electric Co. of Canada Ltd., H. B. Style; The Enterprise Foundry Co. Ltd., E. M. S. Fisher; Esna Limited, J. R. Lindsay; Fairgrieve & Son Limited, D. M. Fairgrieve; Federal Pacific Electric of Canada, B. W. Ball; Federal Wire & Cable Co. (Canada) Ltd., E. L. Dalton; Ferranti-Packard Electric Limited, T. Edmondson; Fibreglas Canada Limited, A. J. Fisher; Fieldcraft Lamps Limited, J. W. Kerr; Findlays Limited, A. J. Illingworth; Fittings Limited, H. G. Palmer; Franklin Manufacturing Co. (Canada) Ltd., P. Salipante; Frigidaire Products of Canada Ltd., E. V. Rippingille, Jr.; Furnas Electric Canada Ltd., N. E. Brown; General Freezer Limited, J. R. Goodwillie; General Steel Wares Limited, F. R. Johnson; General Wire & Cable Co. Ltd., K. Fabricius; Gilson Manufacturing Co. Ltd., A. J. Kendrick; Great Lakes Electrical Specialties Ltd., H. D. Young; Hamilton Porcelains Limited, A. V. Mason; Harvey Hubbell of Canada Ltd., D. Houston; Heron Cable Industries Ltd., R. A. Phillips; The Holophone Company Limited, A. R. Parrish; Honeywell Controls Limited, J. H. Fox (1st Alt); Horn Elevator Limited, E. Horn; Hupp Canada (1961) Limited, Y. L'Heureux; Iberville Fittings Limited, V. N. Longtin; Ilsco of Canada Limited, D. M. Ottmann; Industrial Wire & Cable Limited, G. D. Zimmerman; John Inglis Co. Limited, H. Nuttall; I-T-E Circuit Breaker (Canada) Ltd., R. R. Farrell; ITT Wire & Cable, C. Desjardins; Kearney National (Canada) Ltd., G. R. Raisbeck; Kelvinator Sales Corporation Ltd., N. H. Leach; Klockner-Moeller Ltd., W. B. Peterkin; Kondu Mfg. Company Limited, D. H. Kirkwood; Lacal Industries Limited, R. C. Walker; Leeds & Northrup Canada Ltd., J. M. Jackson; Leonard Refrigerator Co. of Canada Ltd., N. H. Leach; Lewis-Shepard (Canada) Ltd., E. Best; Lincoln Electric Co. of Canada Ltd., M. N. Vuchnich; Manitoba Bridge & Engineering Works, D. N. S. Hodgson; Markel Electric Products, Ltd., D. Markel; Marr Electric Limited, D. P. Marr; Moffats Limited, J. C. Cooper; Moloney Electric Co. of Canada Ltd., G. E. Dunfield; Montgomery Elevator Co. of Canada Ltd., J. F. Roelofson; Murray-Jensen Mfg. Ltd., N. W. Leddy; McGraw-Edison of Canada Ltd., T. G. Quance; National Fibre

[Interprétation]

Leddy; Eastern Wire & Conduits Limited, H. E. R. Merker; Edwards of Canada Limited, R. A. Yates; Electrical Mfg. Co. Ltd., C. Rousseau; Electric Power Equipment Limited, R. Bartholomew; Electroheat Limited, A. B. Johnson; Electroline Manufacturing Co. Ltd., A. Berniker; Electromode Division, Singer Co. of Canada, I. L. Campbell; Electrovert Ltd., J. Gogan; Emerson Electric Canada Limited, M. K. Douglas; English Electric Co. of Canada Ltd., H. B. Style; The Enterprise Foundry Co. Ltd., E. M. S. Fisher; Esna Limited, J. R. Lindsay; Fairgrieve & Son Limited, D. M. Fairgrieve; Federal Pacific Electric of Canada, B. W. Ball; Federal Wire & Cable Co. (Canada) Ltd., E. L. Dalton; Ferranti-Packard Electric Limited, T. Edmondson; Fibreglas Canada Limited, A. J. Fisher; Fieldcraft Lamps Limited, J. W. Kerr; Findlays Limited, A. J. Illingworth; Fittings Limited, H. G. Palmer; Franklin Manufacturing Co. (Canada) Ltd., P. Salipante; Frigidaire Products of Canada Ltd., E. V. Rippingille, Jr.; Furnas Electric Canada Ltd., N. E. Brown; General Freezer Limited, J. R. Goodwillie; General Steel Wares Limited, F. R. Johnson; General Wire & Cable Co. Ltd., K. Fabricius; Gilson Manufacturing Co. Ltd., A. J. Kendrick; Great Lakes Electrical Specialties Ltd., H. D. Young; Hamilton Porcelains Limited, A. V. Mason; Harvey Hubbell of Canada Ltd., D. Houston; Heron Cable Industries Ltd., R. A. Phillips; The Holophone Company Limited, A. R. Parrish; Honeywell Controls Limited, J. H. Fox (1st Alt); Horn Elevator Limited, E. Horn; Hupp Canada (1961) Limited, Y. L'Heureux; Iberville Fittings Limited, V. N. Longtin; Ilsco of Canada Limited, D. M. Ottmann; Industrial Wire & Cable Limited, G. D. Zimmerman; John Inglis Co. Limited, H. Nuttall; I-T-E Circuit Breaker (Canada) Ltd., R. R. Farrell; ITT Wire & Cable, C. Desjardins; Kearney National (Canada) Ltd., G. R. Raisbeck; Kelvinator Sales Corporation Ltd., N. H. Leach; Klockner-Moeller Ltd., W. B. Peterkin; Kondu Mfg. Company Limited, D. H. Kirkwood; Lacal Industries Limited, R. C. Walker; Leeds & Northrup Canada Ltd., J. M. Jackson; Leonard Refrigerator Co. of Canada Ltd., N. H. Leach; Lewis-Shepard (Canada) Ltd., E. Best; Lincoln Electric Co. of Canada Ltd., M. N. Vuchnich; Manitoba Bridge & Engineering Works, D.N.S. Hodgson; Markel Electric Products, Ltd., D. Markel; Marr Electric Limited, D. P. Marr; Moffats Limited, J. C. Cooper; Moloney Electric Co. of Canada Ltd., G. E. Dunfield; Montgomery Elevator Co. of Canada Ltd., J. F. Roelofson; Murray-Jensen Mfg. Ltd., N. W. Leddy; McGraw-Edison of Canada Ltd., T. G. Quance; National Fibre Co. of Canada Ltd., H.

[Text]

Co. of Canada Ltd., H. A. Frankel; National Porcelain, E. Dodd; Northern Electric Co. Ltd., V. O. Marquez; Otis Elevator Co. Ltd., G. H. Blumenauer; R. Payer Co. Ltd., R. Payer; The Peelle Co. Ltd., J. N. Sproule; Permali (Canada) Ltd., R. J. Yates; Philco Ford of Canada Ltd., R. A. MacDonald; Phillips Cables Limited, T. A. Lindsay; Pierce Fuse Limited, G. A. Barrett; Pioneer Electric, D. E. Mathewson; Pioneer Electric Brandon Limited, J. B. Thorsteinsson; Pioneer Electric Ontario Limited, R. Noonan; Pirelli Cables Limited, D. G. McKay; E. W. Playford Company Limited, E. R. Hickman; Powerlite Devices Ltd., D. S. Young; Powertronic Equipment Ltd., D. E. Bawden; Pyle-National (Canada) Ltd., I. Y. Morrison; Pyrotenax of Canada Limited, A. J. C. Ward; Railway & Power Engineering Corp. Ltd., P. Davidson; Ranco Controls Limited, G. E. Downie; RCA Victor Company Ltd., R. H. Girouard; Reliance Electric & Engineering (Canada), N. J. McCartney; Renfrew Electric Co. Ltd., J. R. Longstaffe; Reynolds Cable Company Limited, J. D. Murphy; The Robbins & Myers Co. of Canada, Ltd., E. G. Jones; Wm. Roberts Electric Ltd., H. C. Scott; Robertson-Irwin Limited, K. C. MacKenzie; Sangamo Company Limited, L. C. Collingwood; S & C Electric Canada Limited, A. R. Morrison; Siemens Canada Limited, W. B. Waite; Simplicity Products Limited, R. J. Collins-Wright; Slater Steel Industries Ltd., D. F. Grant; Smith & Stone Limited, H. A. Martin; Square D Company Canada Limited, C. R. Verrier; The Steel Co. of Canada Ltd., F. I. Baine; Swift Devices Limited, D. M. Horn; Tappan-Gurney Ltd., C. R. Lair; Taylor Electric Mfg. Co. Ltd., A. J. Taylor; Temco Electric Manufacturing Co., F. J. Ryan; Thomas & Betts Limited, R. E. Bailey; Trench Electric Limited, R. W. Eden; Triangle Conduit & Cable (Canada), A. E. Beckley; Unelco Limited, C. J. Pratt; Unifin Division, F. S. Brown; Universal Wire & Cable Co. Ltd., E. D. Perry; Walker-Parkersburg, F. P. Thorpe; Ward Leonard of Canada Ltd., J. H. Kluge; W. W. Wells Limited, J. E. Kennedy; Westeel-Rosco Limited, D. A. Young; W. C. Wood Company Limited, W. C. Wood.

Total No. of CEMA Companies—158.

[Interpretation]

A. Frankel; National Porcelain, E. Dodd; Northern Electric Co. Ltd., V. O. Marquez; Otis Elevator Co. Ltd., G. H. Blumenauer; R. Payer Co. Ltd., R. Payer; The Peelle Co. Ltd., J. N. Sproule; Permali (Canada) Ltd., R. J. Yates; Philco Ford of Canada Ltd., R. A. MacDonald; Phillips Cables Limited, T. A. Lindsay; Pierce Fuse Limited, G. A. Barrett; Pioneer Electric, D. E. Mathewson; Pioneer Electric Brandon Limited, J. B. Thorsteinsson; Pioneer Electric Ontario Limited, R. Noonan; Pirelli Cables Limited, D. G. McKay; E. W. Playford Company Limited, E. R. Hickman; Powerlite Devices Ltd., D. S. Young; Powertronic Equipment Ltd., D. E. Bawden; Pyle-National (Canada) Ltd., I. Y. Morrison; Pyrotenax of Canada Limited, A. J. C. Ward; Railway & Power Engineering Corp. Ltd., P. Davidson; Ranco Controls Limited, G. E. Downie; R.C.A. Victor Company Ltd., R. H. Girouard; Reliance Electric & Engineering (Canada), N. J. McCartney; Renfrew Electric Co. Ltd., J. R. Longstaffe; Reynolds Cable Company Limited, J. D. Murphy; The Robbins & Myers Co. of Canada, Ltd., E. G. Jones; Wm. Roberts Electric Ltd., H. C. Scott; Robertson-Irwin Limited, K. C. MacKenzie; Sangamo Company Limited, L. C. Collingwood; S & C Electric Canada Limited, A. R. Morrison; Siemens Canada Limited, W. B. Waite; Simplicity Products Limited, R. J. Collins-Wright; Slater Steel Industries Ltd., D. F. Grant; Smith & Stone Limited, H. A. Martin; Square D Company Canada Limited, C. R. Verrier; The Steel Co. of Canada Ltd., F. I. Baine; Swift Devices Limited, D. M. Horn; Tappan-Gurney Ltd., C. R. Lair; Taylor Electric Mfg. Co. Ltd., A. J. Taylor; Temco Electric Manufacturing Co., F. J. Ryan; Thomas & Betts Limited, R. E. Bailey; Trench Electric Limited, R. W. Eden; Triangle Conduit & Cable (Canada), A. E. Backley; Unelco Limited, C. J. Pratt; Unifin Division, F. S. Brown; Universal Wire & Cable Co. Ltd., E. D. Perry; Walker-Parkersburg, F. P. Thorpe; Ward Leonard of Canada Ltd., J. H. Kluge; W. W. Wells Limited, J. E. Kennedy; Westeel-Rosco Limited, D. A. Young; W. C. Wood Company Limited, W. C. Wood.

Nombre total des compagnies de la CEMA: 158.

[Texte]

ANNEX B*CANADIAN ELECTRICAL MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION*EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS 1968-69

President: *K. H. Rapsey, President, Allen-Bradley Canada Ltd., 135 Dundas St., Galt, Ont.

1st Vice President: *T. A. Lindsay, President, Phillips Cables Ltd., King St. West, Brockville, Ont.

2nd Vice President: W. G. Ward, Executive Vice President, & General Manager, Power Utilities Division, Canadian General Electric Co., 1900 Eglinton Ave. East, Scarborough, Ont.

3rd Vice President: K. C. Hague, General Manager, Electrical Division, Canron Limited, 160 St. Joseph St., Montreal 32, P.Q.

Other Members: *J. H. Stevens, President, Canada Wire & Cable Co. Ltd., Postal Station "R", Toronto 17, Ont.; J. G. Little, Executive Vice President, Northern Electric Co. Ltd., P.O. Box 6123, Montreal, P.Q.; *W. J. Cheesman, President, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., P.O. Box 510, Hamilton, Ont.

Treasurer: *C. F. Graham, President, Crouse-Hinds Co. of Canada, 1160 Birchmount Rd., Scarborough, Ont.

Secretary: *C. R. Verrier, President, Square D Company Canada Ltd., 120 Industry St., Toronto 15, Ont.

Immediate Past President: R. M. Barford, President, General Steel Wares Ltd., Box 426, Terminal "A", Toronto 1, Ont.

*Official Representative for Company.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS 1968-69

C. A. Albini

McGraw-Edison of Canada Ltd.,
3595 St. Clair Ave. E.,
Scarborough, Ont.

*B. W. Ball

President,
Federal Pacific Electric of Canada,
19 Waterman Avenue,
Toronto 16, Ont.

R. L. Cliff

President,
British Columbia Transformer Co.
1740 One Bentall Centre,
505 Burrard St.,
Vancouver 1, B.C.

29414-8½

[Interprétation]

ANNEXE B*CANADIAN ELECTRICAL MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION*COMITÉ EXÉCUTIF DU CONSEIL D'ADMINISTRATION

Président: *K. H. Rapsey, président, Allen-Bradley Canada Ltd., 135, rue Dundas, Galt, Ontario.

1<sup>er</sup> Vice-président: *T. A. Lindsay, président, Phillips Cable Ltd., rue King ouest, Brockville, Ontario.

2<sup>e</sup> Vice-président: W. G. Ward, vice-président exécutif et gérant général, Power Utilities Division, Canadian General Electric Co., 1900 est, avenue Eglinton, Scarborough, Ontario.

3<sup>e</sup> Vice-président: K. C. Hague, gérant général, Electrical Division, Canron Limited, 160, rue St-Joseph, Montréal 32, P.Q.

Membres: *J. H. Stevens, président, Canada Wire & Cable Co. Ltd., Station «R», Toronto 17, Ontario.

J. G. Little, vice-président exécutif, Northern Electric Co. Ltd., Boîte postale 6123, Montréal, P.Q.

*W. J. Cheesman, président, Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., Boîte postale 510, Hamilton, Ontario.

Trésorier: *C. F. Graham, président, Crouse-Hinds Co. of Canada, 1160, chemin Birchmount, Scarborough, Ontario.

Secrétaire: *C. R. Verrier, président, Square D Company Canada Ltd., 120, rue Industry, Toronto 15, Ontario.

Président précédent: R. M. Barford, président, General Steel Wares Ltd., Boîte postale 426, Terminal «A», Toronto 1, Ontario.

*Représentants officiels de leurs compagnies.

CONSEIL D'ADMINISTRATION 1968-1969

C. A. Albini

McGraw-Edison of Canada Ltd., 3595 est, avenue St. Clair, Scarborough, Ontario.

*B. W. Ball

président, Federal Pacific Electric of Canada, 19, avenue Waterman, Toronto 16, Ontario.

R. L. Cliff

président, British Columbia Transformer Co., 1740 One Bentall Centre, 505, rue Burrard, Vancouver 1, C.-B.

[Text]

- *J. C. Cooper
President,
Moffats Limited,
Gibson & Wright Avenues,
Weston, Ont.
- *R. J. Geleziunas
General Manager,
CEB Limited,
950 Warden Avenue,
Scarborough, Ont.
- *F. R. Johnson
Vice President,
General Steel Wares Limited,
Box 426, Terminal "A",
Toronto 1, Ont.
- *Y. L'Heureux
President,
Hupp Canada (1961) Ltd.,
L'Assomption, P.Q.
- *H. A. Martin
Executive Vice President,
Smith & Stone Limited,
50 St. Clair Ave. West,
Toronto 7, Ont.
- *I. Y. Morrison
President,
Pyle-National (Canada) Ltd.,
2560 South Sheridan Way,
Clarkson, Ont.
- J. Newell
Vice President,
Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd.,
P.O. Box 510,
Hamilton, Ont.
- *H. Nuttall
President,
John Inglis Co. Ltd.,
14 Strachan Avenue,
Toronto 3, Ont.
- D. D. Panabaker
Secretary-Treasurer,
Otis Elevator Co. Ltd.,
414 Victoria St. North,
Hamilton, Ont.
- *R. A. Phillips
President,
Heron Cable Industries Ltd.,
1 Adam St.,
Kitchener, Ont.
- *T. G. Quance
Managing Director,
McGraw-Edison of Canada Ltd.,
3595 St. Clair Ave. East,
Scarborough, Ont.
- *D. Sprague
President,
James B. Carter Limited,
P.O. Box 963,
Osborne & Mulvey Avenues,
Winnipeg 13, Man.

[Interpretation]

- *J. C. Cooper
président, Moffats Limited, Avenues Gibson et Wright, Weston, Ontario.
- *R. J. Geleziunas
gérant général, CEB Limited, 950, avenue
Warden, Scarborough, Ontario.
- *F. R. Johnson
vice-président, General Steel Wares
Limited, Boîte postale 426, Terminal «A», Toronto 1, Ontario.
- *Y. L'Heureux
président, Hupp Canada (1961) Ltd.,
L'Assomption, P.Q.
- *H. A. Martin
vice-président exécutif, Smith & Stone Limited, 50 ouest, avenue St. Clair, Toronto 7, Ontario.
- *I. Y. Morrison
président, Pyle-National (Canada) Ltd.,
2560 South Sheridan Way, Clarkson, Ontario.
- J. Newell
vice-président,
Canadian Westinghouse Co. Ltd., Boîte
postale 510, Hamilton, Ontario.
- *H. Nuttall
président, John Inglis Co. Ltd., 14, avenue
Strachan, Toronto 3, Ontario.
- D. D. Panabaker
secrétaire-trésorier, Otis Elevator Co.
Ltd., 414 nord, rue Victoria, Hamilton,
Ontario.
- *R. A. Phillips
président, Heron Cable Industries Ltd.,
1, rue Adams, Kitchener, Ontario.
- *T. G. Quance
directeur-gérant, McGraw-Edison of Canada Ltd., 3595 est, avenue St. Clair, Scarborough, Ontario.
- *D. Sprague
président, James B. Carter Limited, Boîte postale 963, Avenues Osborne et Mulvey, Winnipeg 13, Manitoba.

[Texte]

J. E. Thomas

Vice President, Sales,
Phillips Cables Ltd.
King St. West,
Brockville, Ont.

J. H. Smith

President,
Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd.,
214 King St. West,
Toronto 1, Ont.

[Interprétation]

J. E. Thomas

vice-président, ventes, Phillips Cable Ltd., rue King ouest, Brockville, Ontario.

J. H. Smith

président, Canadian General Electric Co.
Ltd., 214 ouest, rue King, Toronto 1,
Ontario.

[Text]

APPENDIX V

	No Dump Pricing	Example No. 1 of Dump Foreign Pricing		Example No. 2 of Dump Incremental Costing and Pricing
Fair Market Value FMV— In Country of Origin.....	$ 100	100	100	100	100
Normal Value.....	$ 90	90	90	90	90
Export Price.....	$ 90	70	70	50	50
Margin of Dumping— Normal Value—Export Price.....	$ 0	20	20	40	40
Anti-Dumping Duty.....	$ 0	0 If Not Injury	20 With Injury Finding	0 If Not Injury	40 With Injury Finding
Rate of Duty— Under Canadian Customs Tariff (Say)..	15%	15%	15%	15%	15%
Import Duty.....	$ 15	15	15	15	15
Landed Cost.....	$ 105	85 Lost Order	105	65 Lost Order	105

CEMA
11-21-68

[Interpretation]

APPENDICE V

(Canadian Electrical Manufacturers' Association)

	Pas de sous- évaluation	Exemple n° 1 de sous-évaluation		Exemple n° 2 de sous-évaluation plus poussée
Prix raisonnable— dans le pays exportateur.....	$100	100	100	100	100
Valeur normale.....	$ 90	90	90	90	90
Prix à l'exportation.....	$ 90	70	70	50	50
Importance de la sous-évaluation— (Valeur normale—prix à l'exportation)...	$ 0	20	20	40	40
Droit antidumping.....	$ 0	0 Sans préjudice	20 Avec preuve de préjudice	0 Sans préjudice	40 Avec preuve de préjudice
Tarif des douanes— Conformément au tarif des douanes canadiennes.....	15%	15%	15%	15%	15%
Droit d'importation.....	$ 15	15	15	15	15
Prix final au pays.....	$105	85 Perte de la commande	105	65 Perte de la commande	105

[Texte]

APPENDIX W

CANADIAN WESTINGHOUSE COMPANY
LIMITEDW. J. Cheesman
President

November 11, 1968

Mr. Gaston Clermont, M.P.
Chairman
Standing Committee on Finance,
Trade and Economic Affairs
House of Commons
Ottawa, Ontario

Dear Mr. Clermont:

Brief Respecting the
White Paper on Anti-Dumping

Canadian Westinghouse Company Limited is engaged in the design and production of a wide range of Electrical and Mechanical products for sale in the Canadian market and more than sixty foreign countries.

In 1967 this Company directly employed in Canada the skills of over 10,000 people, with a payroll in excess of $67 million. Sales last year were about $200 million representing almost ten percent of the entire Canadian electrical manufacturing industry.

I am please to have this opportunity to make the attached submission to your Committee.

Yours very truly,

attach.

W. J. Cheesman
November 11, 1968

CANADA'S PROPOSED NEW ANTI-DUMPING LAW
A SUBMISSION TO
THE HOUSE OF COMMONS
STANDING COMMITTEE
ON FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS
BY CANADIAN WESTINGHOUSE
COMPANY LTD.

First In the interest of brevity and to minimize repetition the Company supports

[Interprétation]

APPENDICE W

Canadian Westinghouse
Company Limited
W. J. Cheesman, président

Le 11 novembre 1968

M. Gaston Clermont, M.P.
Président du
Comité Permanent des finances, du commerce et des questions
économiques,
Chambre des Communes
Ottawa, Ontario.

Cher monsieur Clermont,

Mémoire concernant le
Livre Blanc sur l'Anti-Dumping

La Compagnie Canadian Westinghouse Company Limited est engagée dans la conception et la production d'une large variété de produits Électriques et mécaniques, destinés à la vente sur le marché canadien et dans plus de soixante pays étrangers.

En 1967 cette Compagnie a employé directement au Canada les aptitudes de plus de 10,000 personnes, pour un montant de salaires dépassant $67 millions. Les ventes, au cours de l'année dernière, ont atteint approximativement $200 millions, ce qui représente près de dix pourcent de la totalité de l'industrie canadienne de fabrication de produits électriques.

Je suis heureux d'avoir l'occasion de présenter, à votre comité, le mémoire ci-joint.

Je vous prie de croire à l'expression de mes respectueuses salutations.
Pièce jointe

W. J. Cheesman
Le 11 novembre 1968

PROPOSITION DE NOUVELLE LOI
CANADIENNE SUR ANTI-DUMPING
MÉMOIRE PRÉSENTÉ AU
COMITÉ PERMANENT DES FINANCES
DU COMMERCE ET DES QUESTIONS ÉCONOMIQUES
PAR
CANADIAN WESTINGHOUSE
COMPANY LIMITED

Premièrement Dans l'intérêt de la brièveté et pour tenir les répétitions au minimum, la the submission to your Committee prepared by the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association, of which it is a member.

[Text]

Second The Company has been, and hopes to continue to be, a profitable part of the electrical manufacturing industry and Canadian secondary industry and will develop and follow policies of growth providing the business climate in Canada is one that is conducive to confidence in the future of this industry. One essential element of this confidence must be the attitude of Government to foreign dumping into Canada.

Third The proposed Anti-Dumping Act appears to meet the needs of Canadian production businesses on the one hand and yet provides Canadian customers with adequate assurance that Canadian production of like goods will be competitive. Therefore, we ask that the current problem of injurious dump competition in several production segments of the industry be corrected through prompt and vigorous action by Government administrative departments and by the Tribunal as quickly as possible after the proposed Act becomes law.

Fourth The Company has been, and is currently, an employer of a large and varied group of skills in design, manufacturing, marketing and management. The mix of these skills is constantly changing as technological changes to meet the needs of customers are foreseen. Only with an environment conducive to growth in new products will there be a steady demand, let alone an increase in demand, for the more highly educated people about to enter Canada's work force. The Company submits that unless this industry, and secondary industry in general, is accorded adequate support under this proposed Act, there will be no incentive to take the financial risks inherent in developing new products and thus establishing increased opportunity for all kinds of new skilled employment for Canadians.

Fifth There has been a great deal said about the "efficiency" and the "productivity" of secondary industry. While the Company agrees that there is an apparent productivity gap between Canada and the U.S. for second-

[Interpretation]

Compagnie soutient le mémoire présenté à votre Comité par l'Association Canadienne des Fabricants de Matériel Electrique, dont elle est membre.

Deuxièmement La Compagnie est, et espère continuer à être, un élément profitable de l'industrie de fabrication de matériel électrique et de l'industrie secondaire canadienne et entend mettre au point et suivre des politiques d'expansion, dans la mesure où le climat des affaires, au Canada, est tel qu'il engendre la confiance dans le futur de cette industrie. Un facteur essentiel de cette confiance doit être l'attitude du Gouvernement envers le dumping étranger au Canada.

Troisièmement Le Projet de Loi Anti-Dumping semble, d'une part, répondre aux besoins des entreprises canadiennes de production et donner, de plus, à la clientèle canadienne une assurance suffisante que la production canadienne de marchandises semblables sera compétitive. Par conséquent, nous demandons que le problème actuel de la concurrence préjudiciable, qu'entraînent les pratiques de dumping dans plusieurs segments de production de l'industrie, soit résolu par une action prompte et vigoureuse de la part des services Gouvernementaux et du Tribunal, aussi rapidement que possible après l'entrée en vigueur de la loi proposée.

Quatrièmement La Compagnie a été, et est toujours, l'employeur d'une large variété de spécialités techniques dans tous les domaines de conception, de fabrication, de commercialisation et de gestion. L'amalgame de ces spécialités techniques se modifie continuellement au fur et à mesure que les changements technologiques, destinés à répondre aux besoins de la clientèle, sont prévus. Uniquement dans une atmosphère favorable à l'expansion des nouveaux produits, y aura-t-il une demande stable, sinon une augmentation de la demande, pour les personnes de niveau d'instruction supérieur qui s'apprêtent à entrer sur le marché canadien du travail. La Compagnie émet l'opinion qu'à moins que cette industrie, ainsi que l'industrie secondaire en général, se voit accorder un soutien adéquat en vertu de ce projet de loi, il n'y aura aucun intérêt à prendre les risques financiers qui sont inhérents à la mise au point des nouveaux produits et, par là même, à élargir, pour les Canadiens, l'accès à de nouveaux emplois spécialisés.

Cinquièmement Il a été dit beaucoup de choses au sujet du «rendement» et de la «productivité» de l'industrie secondaire. Bien que la Compagnie convienne qu'il existe une différence apparente de productivité entre le ary manufacturing as a whole, there are many production segments of this industry where our studies have shown productivity to be equivalent to or higher than U.S. comparable production, providing relative price levels are factored into the comparison. We submit that in dealing with anti-dumping legislation and finding of injury to production, there is a need to recognize that growth in Canadian production through strong viable manufacturing enterprise is a major key to a sounder Canadian economy. In short, while this Act must honour commitments made by Canada to the GATT, it should also, and equally strongly, provide a commitment to Canadian production enterprises that injury to production caused by dumping will be prevented efficiently and promptly.

[Texte]

The company is prepared to appear before the Committee, at its pleasure, to discuss this Brief, or any matter required by the Committee, which may be helpful in its study of the proposed Anti-Dumping legislation.

[Interprétation]

Canada et les États-Unis, en ce qui concerne l'industrie secondaire de fabrication en général, il existe néanmoins de nombreux segments de production de cette industrie pour lesquels nos études ont révélé que la productivité se situait à un niveau égal ou supérieur à celle de la production comparable aux États-Unis, compte tenu des niveaux relatifs des prix. Nous estimons, qu'en ce qui concerne la législation anti-dumping et la détermination du préjudice à la production, il est nécessaire de reconnaître que l'expansion de la production canadienne, par l'intermédiaire d'une entreprise de fabrication forte et rentable, est un facteur essentiel à une économie canadienne plus saine. En bref, bien que cette loi doive honorer les engagements pris par le Canada vis-à-vis du GATT, elle doit également, et de manière tout aussi forte, constituer l'assurance, pour les entreprises canadiennes de production, que le préjudice causé par le dumping sera évité efficacement et promptement.

La Compagnie est prête à se présenter devant le Comité, à sa discrétion, pour discuter de ce mémoire ou de tout autre sujet que le Comité désirerait et qui pourrait lui être utile dans son étude de la législation Anti-Dumping proposée.

[Text]

APPENDIX X*CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY LIMITED

November 8, 1968

Mr. Gaston Clermont, Chairman,
Standing Committee on Finance, Trade,
and Economic Affairs,
House of Commons,
Ottawa, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Clermont:

We in Canadian General Electric Company would like to take advantage of the invitation to file a short statement with your Committee, relating to the White Paper on Anti-dumping.

Canadian General Electric Company Limited believes in the concept of fair and equitable international trade with the fewest possible hidden restrictions against the movement of goods across international borders. Thus our Company supports the work that is being done by the Government of Canada to promote international trade. Our success in the export market in recent years has reinforced our conviction that in many areas of the electrical industry we can match the productivity of competitors in other countries of the western world. It is in this perspective that we have reviewed with very great interest the Document tabled by the Honourable E. J. Benson, Minister of Finance, on September 20th. In our opinion, the proposals are consistent with the Code adopted by the major trading nations during the Kennedy Round negotiations and, at the same time, make provisions for the safeguarding of Canadian industry against those unfair practices which are condemned in Article VI of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Because of our experience in the export field we are very aware of the need of effective anti-dumping legislation to ensure a condition of open and fair competition in international trade. Protection against unfair international trading practices is a necessary condition to long-range planning and expansion and to the providing of wider employment opportunities by Canadian General Electric.

[Interpretation]

APPENDICE X*COMPAGNIE GÉNÉRALE ÉLECTRIQUE DU CANADA LIMITÉE

Le 8 novembre 1968

Monsieur Gaston Clermont
Président du Comité Permanent
des Affaires Financières,
Commerciales et Économiques
Chambre des Communes
Ottawa, Ontario.

Monsieur le Président,

Nous aimerions profiter de l'occasion offerte à la Canadian General Electric Company de déposer une courte déclaration auprès de votre Comité en ce qui concerne le Livre blanc sur l'antidumping.

La Canadian General Electric Company Limited est partisane d'un commerce international juste et équitable dont les restrictions dissimulées prises envers le mouvement de marchandises au-delà des frontières soient réduites au minimum. C'est pourquoi notre Compagnie est favorable au travail qu'accomplit le Gouvernement du Canada pour stimuler le commerce international. Les succès que nous avons remportés au cours de ces dernières années sur le marché des exportations, ont contribué à renforcer nos convictions. En effet, dans certains domaines de l'industrie électrique, nous pouvons faire face à la productivité des concurrents d'autres pays du monde occidental et c'est dans cet esprit que nous avons étudié, avec un immense intérêt, le document déposé par l'honorable E. J. Benson, ministre des Finances, le 20 septembre dernier. À notre avis, les projets sont conformes au code adopté par les grandes nations commerçantes pendant la période des négociations Kennedy et, en même temps, on y trouve les réserves nécessaires à la sauvegarde de l'industrie canadienne afin de la protéger contre les pratiques déloyales condamnées dans l'article VI de la Convention Générale sur les Tarifs et le Commerce.

Étant donné l'expérience que nous possédons dans le domaine de l'exportation, nous n'ignorons pas la nécessité pressante d'une loi antidumping efficace, apte à encourager une concurrence loyale en matière de commerce internationale. La protection contre les pratiques commerciales internationales déloyales est une condition nécessaire pour que Canadian General Electric puisse se livrer à l'exécution de son programme d'élaboration et

[Texte]

We are concerned that an emerging pattern of foreign competition, specifically in the heavy electrical equipment field, indicates that many of our foreign counterparts have excess production capacity. The utilization of this excess capacity and the need to liquidate fixed costs makes incremental volume profitable at virtually any price. This is particularly true in those countries which utilize tax structures and other devices to accomplish the dual purpose of stimulating exports and protecting their home industries. One such device is to encourage arrangements between domestic producers and government-owned utilities to make profitable the supply of equipment for export at prices substantially lower than those for similar equipment in the home market.

In the interests of fair play in international trade in the heavy electrical business, we therefore recommend that your Committee endorse the White Paper and that any Bill presented to Parliament should essentially contain all the recommendations.

If it is the desire of your Committee, we would be pleased to attend one of the regular hearings for further discussion.

Respectfully submitted,

J. H. Smith
President.

[Interprétation]

d'expansion à long terme, et à la création d'emplois nouveaux dans de plus amples proportions.

Nous n'ignorons pas l'aspect que prend actuellement la concurrence étrangère, particulièrement en ce qui concerne l'équipement électrique lourd, et nous savons aussi que nombreux sont nos concurrents étrangers qui ont outrepassé leur capacité de production. L'utilisation de cet excédent et la nécessité de liquider les frais fixes, rend l'accroissement du volume profitable et, virtuellement, à n'importe quel prix. Ceci est particulièrement vrai dans ceux des pays qui s'appuient sur les structures fiscales et autres principes pour atteindre un double objectif qui consiste d'une part à stimuler les exportations et d'autre part à protéger leur industrie nationale. Un de ces principes consiste à encourager les accords intervenus entre les producteurs nationaux et les entreprises de services publics, afin de rendre profitable la fourniture d'équipement pour l'exportation, à des prix substantiellement inférieurs à ceux d'un équipement semblable vendu sur le marché national.

Dans l'intérêt d'un commerce international loyal en ce qui concerne l'équipement électrique lourd, nous recommandons en conséquence, que votre Comité sanctionne le Livre blanc et que tout Bill présenté au Parlement contienne essentiellement toutes les recommandations.

Nous nous tenons à la disposition de votre Comité pour assister à l'une de ses sessions régulières afin de discuter plus amplement de la question.

Je demeure, monsieur le Président, respectueusement vôtre.

J. H. Smith
Président

This official bilingual edition contains the speeches as delivered in the English or French language in the left-hand column of each page of Evidence. The right-hand column of each page of Evidence utilizes the oral translations rendered by Simultaneous Interpreters with minor necessary revisions only. For the Minutes of Proceedings, the English text appears in the left-hand column and the French text or Translation on the right.

The purpose of this format is to make available the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence in both languages in the same edition.

This edition is available by subscription to the Queen's Printer.

Cette édition bilingue officielle présente les interventions faites en français ou en anglais dans la colonne de gauche de chaque page. D'autre part, dans la colonne de droite, on utilise la transcription in extenso de l'interprétation simultanée à laquelle n'ont été apportées que de légères modifications de style ou de grammaire. Le texte anglais des procès-verbaux apparaît dans la colonne de gauche et le texte français ou la traduction dans la colonne de droite.

Le but de cette formule est d'accélérer la publication des procès-verbaux et témoignages dans les deux langues dans la même édition.

Cette édition peut être obtenue de l'Imprimeur de la Reine.

Le Greffier de la Chambre,

ALISTAIR FRASER,

Clerk of the House.

OFFICIAL BILINGUAL ISSUE
(see panel on back cover)

HOUSE OF COMMONS

First Session

Twenty-eighth Parliament, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE
ON

FINANCE, TRADE
AND
ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE

No. 12

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1968

Respecting

White Paper on Anti-dumping

Witnesses:

Representing the Canadian Importers Association: Messrs. Murray E. Corlett, Q.C.; Karl Bald; K. G. Dixon; A. H. Behrens and A. T. Baylay. Representing the Electronics Industries Association of Canada: Messrs. R. A. Phillips; R. G. Sukloff; J. G. Sutherland; W. R. Longstaffe; E. J. Gareau. Representing the Society of the Plastics Industry of Canada: Messrs. E. G. Salmond; E. L. Littlejohn; L. Love; J. Mitchell. And also: M. A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise); R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister, and C. D. Arthur, International Economics Relation Division, both of the Department of Finance.

FASCICULE BILINGUE OFFICIEL
(voir au verso du fascicule)

CHAMBRE DES COMMUNES

Première session de la

vingt-huitième législature, 1968

COMITÉ PERMANENT
DES

FINANCES, DU COMMERCE
ET DES
QUESTIONS ÉCONOMIQUES

Président: M. Gaston Clermont

PROCÈS-VERBAUX ET TÉMOIGNAGES

N° 12

RÉUNION DU
MARDI 26 NOVEMBRE 1968

Concernant

Le Livre blanc sur l'antidumping

Témoins:

Représentant l'Association des importateurs canadiens: MM. Murray E. Corlett, c.r.; Karl Bald; K. G. Dixon; A. H. Behrens et A. T. Baylay. Représentant l'Electronics Industries Association of Canada: MM. R. A. Phillips; R. G. Sukloff; J. G. Sutherland; W. R. Longstaffe; E. J. Gareau. Représentant la Société des manufacturiers canadiens d'articles en matière plastique: MM. E. G. Salmond; E. L. Littlejohn; L. Love; J. Mitchell. Et aussi: M. A. R. Hind, sous-ministre adjoint, ministère du Revenu national (Douanes et Accise); M. R. Y. Grey, sous-ministre adjoint, et M. C. D. Arthur, Division des relations économiques internationales, tous deux du ministère des Finances.

ROGER DUHAMEL, F.R.S.C.
Queen's Printer and Controller of Stationery
Imprimeur de la reine et contrôleur de la papeterie
Ottawa, 1968

STANDING COMMITTEE ON FINANCE, TRADE
AND
ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

Chairman: Mr. Gaston Clermont

Vice-Chairman: Mr. Alastair Gillespie

and Messrs.

Blair,
Burton,
Comtois,
Danson,
Downey,
Énard,
Flemming,

Gauthier,
Gillespie,
Gray,
Hales,
Harkness,
Howard (Okanagan Boundary),

COMITÉ PERMANENT DE LA
FINANCE, DU COMMERCE
ET DES
QUESTIONS ÉCONOMIQUES

Président: M. Gaston Clermont

Vice-président: M. Alastair Gillespie

et MM.

Lambert (*Edmonton
West*),
Latulippe,
Portelance,
Roberts,
Saltsman,
Trudel—(20)

La secrétaire du comité,
Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

(Text)

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS

TUESDAY, November 26, 1968.
(18)

The Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs met at 11.08 a.m. this day, the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Clermont, Danson, Downey, Emard, Flemming, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Lambert (Edmonton West), Portelance, Roberts, Saltsman, Trudel—(13).

Also present: Mr. Ritchie.

In attendance: Representing the Canadian Importers Association: Messrs. Murray E. Corlett, Q.C., Legal Counsel; Karl Bald, President; Keith G. Dixon, General Manager; A. H. Behrens, and A. T. Baylay, Directors.

Also in attendance: From the Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise): Messrs. A. R. Hind, Assistant Deputy Minister; M. T. Keam, Director, Customs Appraisal Division; H. D. MacDermid, Chief, Valuation Section. From the Department of Finance: C. D. Arthur, International Economics Relation Division. From the Department of Industry: V. R. St. Louis, Office of Industrial Relations; From the Department of Trade and Commerce: C. J. Kelly, Office of Area Relations.

The Committee resumed consideration of the White Paper on Anti-Dumping.

The representatives of the Canadian Importers Association were called and introduced, and at the request of the Chairman, Mr. Corlett summarized the Association's brief.

The Committee studied the brief section by section and Messrs. Corlett, Bald, Baylay, Behrens, Dixon, Arthur and Hind answered questions.

The questioning having been concluded, the Chairman thanked the witnesses, who then withdrew.

(Traduction)

PROCÈS-VERBAUX

Le MARDI 26 novembre 1968
(18)

Le Comité permanent des finances, du commerce et des questions économiques se réunit ce matin à 11 h. 08, sous la présidence de M. Clermont.

Présents: MM. Clermont, Danson, Downey, Émard, Flemming, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Lambert (Edmonton-ouest), Portelance, Roberts, Saltsman, Trudel—(13).

Aussi présent: M. Ritchie.

Et aussi: De l'Association des importateurs canadiens: MM. Murray E. Corlett, c.r., conseiller juridique; Karl Bald, président; Keith G. Dixon, gérant général; A. H. Behrens et A. T. Baylay, directeurs.

Et aussi: Du ministère du Revenu national (Douanes et Accise): MM. A. R. Hind, sous-ministre adjoint; M. T. Keam, directeur, division de l'appréciation (douanes); H. D. MacDermid, chef de la section de l'évaluation. Du ministère des Finances: M. C. D. Arthur, division des relations économiques internationales. Du ministère de l'Industrie: M. V. R. St. Louis, bureau des relations industrielles; Du ministère du Commerce: M. C. J. Kelly, bureau des relations régionales.

Le Comité reprend l'examen du Livre blanc sur l'antidumping.

On présente les représentants de l'Association des importateurs canadiens et, à la demande du président, M. Corlett résume le mémoire de l'Association.

Le Comité étudie le mémoire, paragraphe par paragraphe, et MM. Corlett, Bald, Baylay, Behrens, Dixon, Arthur et Hind répondent aux questions.

L'interrogatoire terminé, le président remercie les témoins qui se retirent alors.

In accordance with the resolution of October 24, 1968, the brief of the Importers Association is attached as Appendix Y.

At 1.25 p.m., the Committee adjourned until 3.30 p.m. this afternoon.

AFTERNOON SITTING (19)

The Committee resumed at 3:45 p.m., the Chairman, Mr. Clermont, presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Clermont, Danson, Downey, Emard, Flemming, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Latulippe, Portelance, Saltsman, Trudel—(13).

In attendance: Representing the Electronics Industries Association of Canada: Messrs. R. A. Phillips, President and Chairman of the Board; R. G. Sukloff, Chairman of Tariff Advisory Committee; J. G. Sutherland, Vice-President and Chairman of Electronics Division; W. R. Longstaffe, Vice-Chairman, Components Division; E. J. Gareau, Electronic Tube and Semiconductor Committee; Cowan Harris, General Manager and Secretary.

Also in attendance: The same government officials as were present at the morning sitting.

The representatives of the Electronics Industries Association were called and introduced. At the request of the Chairman, Mr. Phillips made a brief statement summarizing the brief.

A general question period followed during which Messrs. Phillips, Longstaffe, Gareau, Sutherland, Sukloff, Hind and Arthur answered questions.

In accordance with the resolution of October 24, 1968, the brief of the Electronics Industries Association is attached as Appendix Z.

The questioning having been concluded, the Chairman thanked the witnesses who were permitted to retire.

At 6:15 p.m. the Committee adjourned until 8:00 p.m. this day.

En ce qui a trait à la résolution du 24 octobre 1968, le mémoire de Importers Association apparaît comme l'appendice Y.

A 1 h. 25 de l'après-midi, le Comité s'ajourne jusqu'à trois heures trente, ce même après-midi.

SÉANCE DE L'APRÈS-MIDI (19)

Le Comité se réunit cet après-midi à 3 h. 45 sous la présidence de M. Clermont.

Présents: MM. Clermont, Danson, Downey, Émard, Flemming, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Latulippe, Portelance, Saltsman, Trudel—(13).

Aussi présents: Représentant l'Electronics Industries Association of Canada: MM. R. A. Phillips, président et président du Conseil d'administration; R. G. Sukloff, président du comité consultatif sur les tarifs; J. G. Sutherland, vice-président et président de la division de l'électronique; W. R. Longstaffe, vice-président, division des pièces; E. J. Gareau, comité des tubes électroniques et des semi-conducteurs; Cowan Harris, gérant général et secrétaire.

Et aussi: Les mêmes hauts-fonctionnaires du gouvernement que ce matin.

Les représentants de l'Electronics Industries Association sont présentés aux membres du Comité, et, à la demande du président, M. Phillips parle compendieusement du mémoire de son association.

Suit une période générale de questions au cours de laquelle, MM. Phillips, Longstaffe, Gareau, Sutherland, Sukloff, Hind et Arthur répondent aux questions.

Conformément à la résolution du 24 octobre 1968, le mémoire de l'Association figurera en appendice. (Voir appendice Z).

Le président remercie ensuite les témoins qui se retirent.

A 6 h. 15 du soir, le Comité s'ajourne jusqu'à huit heures le même jour.

EVENING SITTING
(20)

The Committee resumed at 8:14 p.m., the Chairman, Mr. Clermont presiding.

Members present: Messrs. Clermont, Danson, Downey, Émard, Flemming, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton West), Latulippe, Portelance, Trudel—(13).

In attendance: Representing the Society of the Plastics Industry of Canada: Messrs. E. G. Salmond, Manager; E. L. Littlejohn, Chairman of the Board; L. Love, Midland Industries Ltd.; John Mitchell, Dupont of Canada Ltd.

Also in attendance: The same government officials as at the morning and afternoon sittings except that Mr. R. Y. Grey, Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance, replaced Mr. Arthur.

The representatives of the Society of the Plastics Industry were introduced by the Chairman and Mr. Salmond made a brief opening statement.

During the questioning which followed, Messrs. Salmond, Mitchell, Love, Littlejohn, Grey and Hind answered questions. The Society's brief is attached hereto as Appendix AA.

The questioning having been concluded, the Chairman thanked the witnesses who then withdrew.

At 9:30 p.m. the Committee adjourned until 9:30 a.m. on Thursday, November 28, 1968.

SÉANCE DU SOIR
(20)

Le Comité reprend ses travaux à 8 h. 14 du soir, sous la présidence de M. Clermont.

Présents: MM. Clermont, Danson, Downey, Émard, Flemming, Gillespie, Gray, Hales, Harkness, Lambert (Edmonton-ouest), Latulippe, Portelance, Trudel—(13).

Aussi présents: Représentant la Société des manufacturiers canadiens d'articles en matière plastique: MM. E. G. Salmond, gérant; E. L. Littlejohn, président du conseil d'administration; L. Love, Midland Industries Ltd.; John Mitchell, Dupont du Canada.

Et aussi: Les mêmes hauts fonctionnaires du gouvernement que ce matin et cet après-midi, sauf que M. R. Y. Grey, sous-ministre adjoint des Finances, remplace M. Arthur.

Le président présente les représentants de la Société des manufacturiers canadiens d'articles en matière plastique et M. Salmond fait un bref exposé.

Suit un période de questions, au cours de laquelle MM. Salmond, Mitchell, Love, Littlejohn, Grey et Hind répondent à des questions. Le mémoire de la Société figure à l'appendice AA.

L'interrogatoire terminé, le président remercie les témoins qui se retirent alors.

A 9 h. 30 du soir, le Comité s'ajourne jusqu'à 9 h. 30 du matin, le jeudi 28 novembre 1968.

La secrétaire du Comité,
Dorothy F. Ballantine,
Clerk of the Committee.

[Text]

EVIDENCE

(Recorded by Electronic Apparatus)

Tuesday, November 26, 1968.

● 1107

The Chairman: Gentlemen, before we proceed with the submission before us, may I say I received an invitation from the Minister of Trade and Commerce to visit their headquarters. The day suggested is next week and I have accepted the invitation on your behalf. However, no definite date has been settled because it depends on when we finish with the White Paper. Yes, Mr. Lambert?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, might I suggest that we put first things first. We have a terribly close deadline with regard to the report on this particular matter. I am also terribly involved with Procedures of the House Committee because it is also close to the deadline and they are all next week so...

The Chairman: But your deadline for procedure is not December 1?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Yes, but do not worry about it because there are a number of other things.

The Chairman: I am not worried because there is no definite date Mr. Lambert, but I thought the members will enjoy such a visit.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Could we postpone it until some time after December 10?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, I would prefer Mr. Lambert's suggestion. I would think it would be very useful for us to have a chance to visit the headquarters of the Department of Trade and Commerce and have informal meetings with some of the top people there. However, I think we should defer this until we complete our consideration of the White Paper.

[Interpretation]

TÉMOIGNAGES

(Enregistrement électronique)

[Interprétation]

Le président: Messieurs, avant que nous ne passions à l'étude des mémoires qui nous sont présentés, je dois vous dire que le ministre du Commerce nous a invités à aller visiter leur bureau central la semaine prochaine, et que j'ai accepté l'invitation en votre nom. Toutefois, aucune date précise n'a été fixée, car tout dépendra du moment auquel nous finirons d'étudier le Livre blanc. Oui, monsieur Lambert?

M. Lambert: Monsieur le président, il me semble que nous devrions commencer par ce qui est le plus important. La date limite fixée pour la présentation de notre rapport sur cette question particulière est extrêmement proche. Je suis aussi extrêmement occupé par le Comité de la procédure de la Chambre, pour lequel la date limite est également proche, et tout cela est fixé pour la semaine prochaine, donc...

Le président: Mais, la date limite fixée pour le Comité de la procédure n'est-elle pas le 1<sup>er</sup> décembre?

M. Lambert: Si, mais cela ne fait rien, car nous avons pas mal d'autres choses à faire.

Le président: Je ne m'inquiète pas parce qu'il n'y a pas de date précise pour cette visite, monsieur Lambert, mais j'ai pensé que les membres seraient heureux d'aller faire cette petite visite.

M. Lambert: Pourrions-nous remettre cela à une date postérieure au 10 décembre?

M. Gray: Monsieur le président, je suis de l'avis de M. Lambert. Je pense qu'il nous serait très utile d'aller visiter le bureau du ministre du Commerce et de nous entretenir avec certains de leurs fonctionnaires supérieurs. Mais il me semble que nous devrions attendre d'en avoir fini avec notre examen du Livre blanc.

[Text]

The Chairman: Thank you Mr. Gray. Any other comments gentlemen on that proposed visit to the headquarters of the Department of Trade and Commerce? If not, gentlemen, we have before us the submission from the Canadian Importers Association Inc. I have on my right, Mr. Murray E. Corlett, Q.C., Legal Counsel and I will ask him to introduce the other members of the delegation.

Mr. Murray E. Corlett Q.C. (Legal Counsel): Thank you Mr. Chairman. On my immediate right is the President of the Canadian Importers Association, Mr. Karl Bald; on his right is Mr. Keith Dixon who is General Manager of the Association and on Mr. Dixon's right is Mr. A. H. Behrens, a Director of the Association and around the corner, Mr. A. T. Baylay, a Director of the Association.

The Chairman: It is the practice Mr. Corlett, that the head of the delegation or somebody from the delegation make a summary of their brief before the members of the Committee ask questions of the representatives. Mr. Corlett.

• 1110

Mr. Corlett: Mr. Chairman, I think the members of the Committee will have received copies of the written representations that we have made. Basically, the Canadian Importers Association is the national association of importers generally in Canada and the present membership is somewhere in the neighbourhood of 640 members.

The Association membership is divided quite evenly amongst three general categories of members. First, there are those engaged in importing activities entirely, straight importers, in other words.

The second category would comprise Canadian manufacturers, who in the course of their business, have to import components and materials and the third category of membership is made up of what I might term service members; firms that service those engaged in the import trades such as the chartered banks, transportation companies, customs brokers, warehousing organizations and that type of group.

Now, I might say that we want to thank the members of the Committee for allowing us to present our views here today because we know that you are operating under—as I would term it—very crowded schedule.

The policy of this Association of course, as the name would suggest, is one that has always advocated freer trade and for many years the Association on occasion has had an opportunity to object to certain non-tariff

[Interpretation]

Le président: Merci, monsieur Gray. Messieurs, avez-vous d'autres observations à faire au sujet de cette visite au bureau du ministère du Commerce? Sinon, messieurs, nous allons passer à l'étude du mémoire de l'Association des importateurs canadiens. J'ai à ma droite M. Murray E. Corlett, avocat-conseil, et je vais lui demander de présenter les autres membres de sa délégation.

M. Murray E. Corlett, c.r., avocat-conseil: Merci, monsieur le président. Tout de suite à ma droite, le président de l'Association des importateurs canadiens, M. Karl Bald; à sa droite, M. Keith Dixon, directeur général de l'Association; à la droite de M. Dixon, M. A. H. Behrens, membre du conseil d'administration; et, au coin, M. A. T. Baylay, lui aussi membre du conseil d'administration.

Le président: Monsieur Corlett, il est d'usage que le chef de la délégation, ou l'un des membres, résume le mémoire avant que les membres du Comité ne posent des questions aux représentants. Monsieur Corlett.

M. Corlett: Monsieur le président, je pense que les membres du Comité ont déjà reçu un exemplaire de notre mémoire. Pour commencer, l'Association des importateurs canadiens est l'association nationale des importateurs en général au Canada. Nous avons environ 640 adhérents, qui se répartissent de façon assez égale entre trois catégories générales. D'abord, ceux qui s'occupent uniquement d'importation, autrement dit, les importateurs à proprement parler. La deuxième catégorie est celle des fabricants canadiens qui, pour leur travail, doivent importer des matériaux et des pièces détachées. Quant à la troisième catégorie, elle se compose des groupes qui s'occupent des services au commerce d'importation—par exemple, les banques privilégiées, les compagnies de transport, les agents en douanes, les entreprises d'entreposage, etc.

J'aimerais dire maintenant que nous tenons à remercier les membres du Comité de nous donner cette occasion de présenter nos idées ici aujourd'hui. Vous avez un programme très chargé. La politique de notre association a toujours été, bien sûr, comme le suggère son nom, d'encourager une expansion du libre échange, et, par conséquent, nous avons eu parfois l'occasion, depuis bien des années, de nous opposer à certaines barrières non taribarriers. One of the most notable of these of course was the automatic dumping feature of the Canadian customs tariff law.

[Texte]

Therefore when Canada became signatory to the International Code on Anti-dumping policies in 1967, such a step on the part of the Canadian government was received with unanimous approval by the members of the Association and naturally we are pleased to see that Canada is now, with this current anti-dumping bill attempting to implement its obligations under the wider international agreement.

Generally-speaking we wish to go on record as saying that this Association approves of the steps that the government is taking with reference to this anti-dumping bill. We recognize of course that this is something new for Canada, and certainly it will be new and more onerous for the Canadian customs administration. We feel that other countries have grappled with this problem in the past, notably the United States, and we see no reason why with the calibre of personnel in the Department of National Revenue and the Department of Finance that they cannot do the same thing. Therefore we welcome what the government is doing at the present time.

However, I suppose the purpose of our being here now is to indicate or set forth certain reservations that we have, as an Association, to certain provisions that appear in the anti-dumping bill. They are set out in some detail in our submission and I do not propose to take the time of the Committee to go over every point that is set forth. I would highlight the reservations that we have to the following.

● 1115

First of all, clause 37 of the anti-dumping Bill is not technically speaking part of the anti-dumping Bill, it is a consequential amendment arising from the introduction of an anti-dumping bill and will involve repeal of certain valuation provisions presently contained in the Customs Act and it will introduce a new provision in section 6 of the Customs Tariff Act which, as the members know, is the dumping duty section presently in the Customs Tariff Act. However, the basis of the new provision to be known as section 6, subsection 1 (a) of the Customs Tariff Act is to impose a surtax.

Our feeling is that a surtax, after all, is a tax on goods. Although we admit, if Parliament in its wisdom decides to delegate the fares. L'exemple le plus frappant en a été, bien sûr, l'aspect dumping automatique de la loi du Canada sur le tarif douanier.

[Interprétation]

Lorsque le Canada est devenu signataire du code international de 1967, une pareille mesure prise par le gouvernement a été accueillie favorablement par l'Association unanime et nous sommes heureux de voir que notre pays, avec l'actuel projet de loi sur l'antidumping, fait un effort pour remplir ses obligations dans le cadre élargi de l'accord international.

Plus généralement, nous voudrions qu'on note que notre association approuve l'action entreprise par le gouvernement quant à ce projet de loi sur l'antidumping. Nous admettons certes que c'est une chose nouvelle pour le Canada, qui alourdira la tâche de l'administration des douanes. Mais si d'autres pays, notamment les États-Unis, se sont colletés autrefois avec ce problème, pourquoi le nôtre, qui dispose, au ministère du Revenu national et à celui des Finances, d'un personnel de qualité, ne pourrait-il en faire autant? Nous approuvons par conséquent l'attitude du gouvernement canadien.

Notre but, en venant ici, est de faire connaître les réserves que nous faisons, en tant qu'association sur certaines dispositions du projet de loi sur l'antidumping. Nous les avons exprimées en détail dans notre mémoire. Je n'ai pas l'intention de faire perdre du temps au Comité pour expliquer tous les points exposés dans le mémoire.

Cependant, je voudrais en tirer les idées principales et vous parler des réserves que nous faisons sur ces dispositions. D'abord, à l'article 37 du projet de loi sur l'antidumping—et cela ne fait pas partie du projet de loi comme tel, car c'est une modification consécutive au Bill. Cependant, celle-ci entraînera l'abrogation de certaines dispositions qui font présentement partie de la Loi sur les douanes, et ajoutera une nouvelle disposition à l'article 6 de la Loi sur les douanes. Comme vous le savez, l'article sur les droits antidumping se trouve actuellement dans la Loi sur les douanes. Cette nouvelle disposition, l'article (6) (i) (a) de la Loi sur les douanes, imposerait une surtaxe.

Nous sommes d'avis qu'une surtaxe est une taxe sur les marchandises, mais nous croyons que, si le Parlement délègue à l'exécutif, right to impose this tax on the executive, which is the Governor in Council, what Parliament wishes, of course, will have to be met. However, it has always been our view when it comes to imposing what is a tax affecting citizens of the country that the tax wherever possible should be imposed by Parliament itself.

[Text]

It is our submission that better parliamentary practice requires that the tax, in an endeavour to spell out the rate in some manner, be expressed in the statute itself rather than leaving it wide open. I know that we all have respect for the government administrators, but I think we have to take the position that once this becomes part of the law in Canada it is going to remain with us for a long time.

What is there to prevent, say, in 25 years, more unscrupulous administrators imposing a frightfully arbitrary taxation provision, which as we see it, they would have the right to do, as section 6(1)(a) contained in clause 37 of the Bill is presently worded.

Our second query relates of course to the time limit, namely, this surtax. I might say we know why there has to be provision for a surtax and that the government point of view can be justified under Article XIX of GATT. We do not quarrel with that one bit. However, with respect to this 180-day limitation period members will note that the new provision goes on to say that 180 days will be the limit, unless in the meantime Parliament approves the executive order imposing a surtax at a certain level.

It is our submission, if there is no other way around the wording that has been chosen, at least Parliament should be given some control and should be allowed by a resolution, or whatever technique is acceptable in parliamentary practice, to not only have the right to approve what has been done but also to annul it.

I cite in the brief two examples of emergency statutes, one arising as a result of World War II and the other as a result of the Korean incident, where of necessity the government had to move fast and by executive do rather extraordinary things. However, Parliament retained some modicum of control in that they were allowed either to approve what had been done or to annul it. As clause 37 is worded there is only provision for approval by Parliament.

In other words, Parliament under the present language as we see it appears to have sort of abdicated its right to annul something that has been done. Now I have mentioned that, I am not going to pursue it any further, Mr. Chairman.

[Interpretation]

c'est-à-dire au gouverneur en conseil, le droit d'imposer cette taxe, les volontés du Parlement doivent être respectées. Nous croyons tout de même que, lorsqu'il s'agit d'imposer une taxe qui affecte les citoyens d'un pays, cette taxe, dans la mesure du possible doit être imposée par le Parlement lui-même. Nous pensons que ce serait une meilleure pratique parlementaire que cette taxe soit définie dans la Loi elle-même, en ce qui concerne les taux, au lieu de laisser la question en suspens. Nous respectons les administrateurs du gouvernement mais nous nous devons de ne pas oublier que, lorsque celle-ci fera partie de la loi canadienne, elle y restera longtemps.

Qu'est-ce qui empêcherait, disons dans 25 ans, un administrateur sans scrupules d'imposer une surtaxe terriblement arbitraire? Nous croyons que l'article 37 du projet de loi, au paragraphe 6 (1) (a) tel qu'il est rédigé actuellement, lui permettrait nettement de le faire.

Notre deuxième point se rattache au délai de cette surtaxe. Nous savons bien pourquoi le gouvernement doit imposer une surtaxe, ce que justifie l'article 19 du GATT. Nous n'avons aucune objection à cela. Cependant, il y a une limite de 180 jours, mais les membres voudront bien noter que la nouvelle disposition prévoit que la période de 180 jours sera la limite, à moins que, dans l'intervalle, le Parlement approuve le décret-loi imposant une surtaxe à un certain niveau.

Nous prétendons que, s'il n'y a pas d'autres manières de rédiger cette loi, le Parlement devrait au moins avoir un certain contrôle, et, au moyen d'une résolution ou par une autre pratique parlementaire quelconque, se réserver le droit, non seulement d'approuver ce qui se fait, mais aussi de l'abroger.

Nous citons dans notre mémoire deux exemples de mesures d'urgence: une qui a été prise à la suite de la Deuxième Guerre mondiale, l'autre à la suite de la guerre de Corée où le gouvernement a dû nécessairement agir avec rapidité et l'exécutif faire des choses extraordinaires; mais le Parlement a conservé un certain contrôle puisqu'il avait le droit, soit d'approuver ce qui avait été fait, soit de l'abroger. D'après l'article 37, le Parlement ne peut qu'approuver les mesures. Le Parlement semble, d'après la terminologie de l'article, avoir renoncé à son droit d'annuler une chose qui a déjà été faite. Cela dit, je ne pousserai pas l'affaire plus loin, monsieur le président.

[Texte]

The second point by way of reservation that we would draw to the attention of the Committee is the matter of ministerial discretion. This, of course, always has been a point in issue. Members will remember that the old wartime Income Tax Act was riddled with instances of ministerial discretion. Largely as a result of that the present Income Tax Act eliminates the presence of ministerial discretion although instances are creeping back in as the years go by. However, as an illustration, the authors of the recent Carter Report took the view that—I have cited a passage from Volume 3 of their Report—unless it is absolutely imperative ministerial discretion should not be used. We have to be realistic, and we know there will be instances of ministerial discretion. However, where it is absolutely necessary it is our view that it should be controlled with certain safeguards. Perhaps I can illustrate one particular view...

• 1120

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): You can go from this decision to the appeal Tribunal, the Anti-dumping Tribunal, in fact you have to go to the Anti-dumping Tribunal.

Mr. Corlett: Let me refer you to...

The Chairman: I think Mr. Corlett, if we begin questioning—all right, you may reply to Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Corlett: I thought perhaps I could do it more easily, and Mr. Lambert would see what is going through our minds, if I referred to clause 9, subclause (5) of the proposed anti-dumping Bill. In cases of exports made from state-trading countries, there are instances of what I call ministerial discretion. The very end of subclause (5) stipulates that certain enumerated factors

"shall be determined in such manner as the Minister prescribes".

I am not saying that something like this does not have to appear in the Bill. However, we as an association would like to have certain standards that the Minister would apply in making his prescription set forth either in the statute or in the regulations.

Let me illustrate perhaps pointing up the apprehension we have. Mr. Grey of the Department of Finance when he appeared before this Committee on October 24, as reported at page 19 of the printed Proceed-

[Interprétation]

La deuxième réserve que nous voulons signaler au Comité concerne le pouvoir discrétionnaire du ministre. C'est un point toujours critique. On se souviendra de l'ancienne loi sur la taxe de guerre qui a fait surgir beaucoup de questions à ce sujet. En conséquence, la nouvelle loi de l'impôt sur le revenu a fait disparaître ce pouvoir, même si on le retrouve ici et là depuis.

Pour illustrer notre point de vue, je mentionnerais le rapport Carter récemment publié. On y dit ceci; au volume III:

A moins que ce ne soit absolument nécessaire, on ne doit pas avoir recours au pouvoir discrétionnaire du ministre.

Il faut être réaliste et accepter que, lorsque cela est absolument nécessaire, on y ait recours. Nous pensons, cependant, que ce pouvoir doit être contrôlé au moyen de certaines garanties.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-ouest): On peut en appeler au Tribunal antidumping; de fait, on doit en appeler au Tribunal.

M. Corlett: Permettez-moi de vous renvoyer au...

Le président: Nous pouvons commencer tout de suite l'interrogatoire, monsieur Corlett... Très bien, vous pouvez répondre à M. Lambert.

M. Corlett: J'ai pensé qu'il vous serait plus facile de nous comprendre en vous reportant à l'article 9, paragraphe 5, du projet de loi sur l'antidumping. Lorsque les marchandises proviennent de pays où l'État contrôle les exportations, on a parfois recours au pouvoir discrétionnaire du ministre, parce que le paragraphe 5, après avoir énuméré certains facteurs, dit que la valeur normale des marchandises.

...doit être déterminée de la manière que prescrit le Ministre.

Je ne veux pas dire que quelque chose de la sorte ne doit pas faire partie du projet de loi, mais, en tant qu'association, nous aimerions que certaines normes, que le ministre appliquerait en faisant ses prescriptions, soient définies dans la loi ou dans les règlements. Je vous donne un exemple du genre de crainte que nous avons. Lorsque M. Grey, du ministère des Finances, a comparu devant ce Comité, le 24 octobre (page 19 du compte rendu), il a traité de cette question. Au der-ings, dealt with this issue. In the last paragraph at the bottom of the lefthand column he stated:

[Text]

In the case of goods that are exported to Canada from a country whose economy is controlled by the state, a so-called state trading country, it is contemplated that the normal value—the value of the goods when sold for consumption in the exporting country—is to be determined in the manner prescribed by the Minister. Accordingly it will be possible to continue the present practice of establishing values for imports from such sources by reference to the values at which like goods are sold in neighbouring free market countries under normal conditions.

We know that practice exists. As far as we know that is so and I think that seems a reasonable approach. However, our point is that there is nothing in the language used in subclause (5) of clause 9 which says that the Minister has to follow that standard.

In other words he might decide to choose some other country, not the nearest open market country. Of course it is a fact, I think, that did happen in the early days of section 38(d) of the Customs Act.

I am thinking of certain cotton fabrics originating from Mainland China in 1959. As I remember it, the United States was chosen as the third country and importers, of course, felt that perhaps Japan would have been the better country because it was the nearer one. Over a period of a couple of years, as I remember it, eventually a switch was made to Japan. Our point is that there is nothing in the language of the statute which says that the Minister in some future year cannot depart from what Mr. Grey in his testimony states is the sort of internationally accepted practice.

This is what I had in mind, Mr. Lambert. It is merely a suggestion that it might be possible to spell out certain standards which would assist the Minister in determining how he would prescribe in a particular situation.

In our submission, which of course was begun before Mr. Grey was good enough to submit a draft of the regulations relating to clauses 9 and 10 of the Bill, we of course, recognize the difficulty of producing the regulations. They will play a big role, I believe, in the administration of this act. Normally regulations cannot be publicized until the enacting statute is made part of the law of the land.

• 1125

However, we did note that Mr. Grey stated on page 64 of the testimony that the drafts-

[Interpretation]

nier paragraphe, au bas de la colonne de gauche de la page 19, il dit:

Dans le cas de marchandises qui sont exportées au Canada en provenance d'un pays dont l'économie est contrôlée par l'État, un pays où c'est l'État qui commerce, comme on dit, on songe à établir la valeur normale (la valeur des marchandises vendues pour consommation dans le pays exportateur) de la manière prescrite par le ministre. C'est pourquoi il nous sera possible de continuer à établir les valeurs des importations de ces sources en nous reportant aux valeurs auxquelles de telles marchandises sont vendues dans les pays voisins à marché libre, dans des conditions normales.

Cette pratique existe et nous le savons. Je pense que c'est une façon raisonnable d'agir, mais il n'y a rien dans la terminologie du paragraphe 5 de l'article 9 qui dit que le ministre doit se conformer à ces normes. Celui-ci pourrait choisir n'importe quel pays, et non pas un pays voisin à marché libre. Et je pense que cela s'est produit au début, lorsque l'article 38 paragraphe d) de la Loi sur les douanes était appliqué. Je prends l'exemple de certaines cotonnades importées de la Chine continentale en 1959. Si j'ai bonne mémoire, les États-Unis ont été choisis comme troisième pays, et les importateurs, bien sûr, ont pensé que le Japon aurait été un meilleur choix, vu sa proximité. Puis, environ deux ans plus tard, on a utilisé le prix japonais comme point de comparaison. Nous insistons sur le fait que, dans la Loi, il n'y a rien qui dit que le ministre ne pourrait pas, à un moment donné, s'éloigner de ce que M. Grey a défini comme étant une pratique mondiale-ment reconnue.

Voilà à quoi je pensais, monsieur Lambert. Je voulais simplement dire qu'il serait peut-être possible d'établir certaines normes qui aideraient le ministre à prendre une décision dans certains cas particuliers.

Dans notre mémoire, rédigé, bien sûr, avant que M. Grey ne soumette un projet de Règlement sur les articles 9 et 10 du projet de loi, nous reconnaissons qu'il est difficile d'élaborer ce Règlement qui jouera un grand rôle dans l'application de la loi. Normalement, on ne peut pas publier le Règlement avant que la loi ne soit adoptée et ne fasse partie de la loi du pays. Mais M. Grey a dit, à la page 64 de son témoignage, que le législateur avait décidé qu'il serait nécessaire d'ajouter un nouvel article pour la détermination de la men had decided it was necessary to add a new clause covering determination of normal value of goods in connection with branded products, as I remember it, and that they would be working on it.

[Texte]

I presume they will have other revisions or new clauses to add. So this is something to come in the future. Then, of course, there are regulations, not many but a number of regulations, that will have to be published eventually relating to certain clauses of the anti-dumping Bill other than clauses 9 and 10. If I remember correctly, Mr. Grey stated that some of them had not been drafted. However, we realize all of this will take time.

We would hope eventually when it is all completed, and it is possible for the Department of National Revenue to act under the new law, that some method might be devised whereby publicity would be given and facilities would be made available to those who had some contribution to make concerning the feasibility under the Bill or under the regulations of what still had to be published.

The next reservation we made was on the matter of definition of injury. We realize that it is not possible to have an all-embracing definition of industry, but it did appear to us that in Article 3 of the Code certain criteria were set forth which presumably would be for the guidance of the injury Tribunal that will be created. We query why no attempt, as far as we can see, has been made to put the contents of Article 3 into a section of the Code. Now it may well be just impossible to do that.

However, we suggest as an alternative the definition of industry appearing in Article 4(a) of the Code which has been adapted by reference in the proposed statute in clause 16(4). We felt it might be feasible to have a provision whereby the criteria to be used in determining injury, and what should not be considered in determining injury, be adopted by reference in the Bill, as a guide to those who will have to make that determination.

Clause 15(2) of the proposed Bill seems to deal with a situation where the government at the time of its investigation, and after the making of the preliminary determination has collected what might eventually be excess provisional duty, and there is a provision that the excess amount will be returned to the importer.

I do not know how often that would happen but we felt as a matter of principle if this should happen that the excess amount should valeur normale des marchandises, en ce qui concerne les produits de marque.

[Interprétation]

Je présume qu'ils auront d'autres modifications à faire ou d'autres articles à ajouter. C'est une chose qui se fera plus tard. Il y a aussi un certain nombre de règlements qui devront être publiés à l'égard de certains articles du projet de loi sur l'antidumping, en plus des article 9 et 10 et, si je me souviens bien, M. Grey a dit qu'on n'avait pas encore rédigé quelques-uns de ces articles. Nous comprenons bien que tout cela prend du temps, mais nous espérons qu'en fin de compte, lorsque tout sera terminé, et que le ministère du Revenu national pourra agir en vertu de la nouvelle loi, on trouvera un moyen de publier ces règlements et qu'on donnera l'occasion de s'exprimer à ceux qui ont quelque chose à dire sur ce qu'il est encore possible de publier en vertu du projet de loi ou des règlements.

Nous faisons une autre réserve sur la définition du «préjudice». Nous comprenons bien qu'il n'est pas possible de faire une définition globale de la «production» mais, à l'article 3 du Code, semble-t-il, on expose des critères qui serviront, je présume, à aider le Tribunal dans sa décision sur le préjudice. Nous nous demandons pourquoi on n'a pas essayé d'inclure le contenu de l'article 3 dans un article du Code. Il est peut-être impossible de le faire, maintenant, mais nous proposons, en retour, la définition du mot «production» qui figure à l'article 4 a) du Code, adopté relativement à l'article 16, paragraphe 4), du projet de loi.

Nous avons pensé qu'il serait peut-être possible d'inclure dans le projet de loi une disposition définissant les critères qui doivent déterminer s'il y a un préjudice, ou non, pour la gouverne de ceux qui devront faire cette détermination.

L'article 15(2) du projet de loi traite d'un cas où le gouvernement, au moment de l'étude du bill et après la prise de décision préliminaire, avait recueilli ce qui pourrait être des droits de douane provisoires excédentaires, et il semble que la somme supplémentaire sera remise à l'importateur. Je ne sais pas si cela se produira souvent, mais nous avons pensé que pour une question de principe, si cela se produit, la somme supplémentaire ou excédentaire devrait être retournée avec l'intérêt qui s'y ajoute. Alors au lieu be returned with interest. Rather than stating a fixed rate of interest as was common in the old type of statute I notice that the modern trend is to leave it to the Governor in Council to fix the rate by regulation. There have been such instances in the recent farm lending bills that have been before Parliament.

[Text]

• 1130

There is one provision, I think, that does cause us some concern, and I do not think, from my reading of the Proceedings to date plus what I have read in the press on the Proceedings which I have not yet received, that we are alone on our concern which relates to this Panel of Deputy Ministers contained in clause 30 of the Bill. Based on the evidence that has been given by the representatives of the Departments of Finance and National Revenue up to November 7, we fail to see any convincing reason given on why this Panel has to exist.

Mr. Grey did state the first day he was testifying that this is—I quote Page 20 of the Proceedings—“a rather novel procedure”. In our opinion it certainly is. There is a mandatory obligation on the part of the Tribunal to consult with a committee of deputy ministers. In fact they need not be deputy ministers, the deputy minister has the right to appoint some junior to act as his nominee and the tribunal is obligated to consult. Then the clause goes on to say that having consulted the tribunal is not under an obligation to take the advice given by the committee.

Our query is that we would not want anything to happen which would tend to detract from the independence of the members of the Tribunal. We are assuming that the members will be persons of integrity, intelligence and good judgment. It is our submission that there is already a provision in clause 30—I am sorry, in clause 26(2)—which makes the use of clause 30 needless. I would refer you to Page 84 of the White Paper, the last phrase of subclause (2) which reads:

...and the Tribunal may obtain the advice and assistance of any agency or department of the Government of Canada.

In other words the members of the Tribunal will, I am sure, seek whatever assistance they need from any of these government departments. I am sure this is what will happen.

As far as I am aware there is no comparable provision to clause 30 in the Tariff Board Act, and the present Tariff Board has been d'avoir un taux d'intérêt fixe comme l'indiquaient les anciennes lois, je vois que maintenant, on s'en remet à la discrétion du gouverneur en conseil. Il s'est produit des cas semblables dans les récents projets de loi sur le prêt agricole présentés au Parlement.

[Interpretation]

Il y a une autre disposition qui nous préoccupe et nous ne sommes pas les seuls, car j'ai lu les procès-verbaux jusqu'ici, j'ai lu les comptes rendus des journaux sur ces procès-verbaux, que je n'ai d'ailleurs pas encore reçus. Elle a trait à cette Commission de sous-ministres. Il s'agit de l'article 30 du bill. D'après le témoignage qui a été porté par les représentants des ministères des Finances et du Revenu national, le 7 novembre, aucune des raisons invoquées ne nous a prouvé pourquoi cette Commission doit exister.

M. Grey a dit, au cours de son premier témoignage, page 20 du procès-verbal, que c'est «une procédure plutôt nouvelle». Et à notre avis, c'est vrai. Il semble y avoir une obligation de la part du Tribunal pour consulter un Comité consultatif de sous-ministres. De fait, ils n'ont pas besoin d'être sous-ministres, car le sous-ministre peut déléguer un subalterne pour le représenter, et le Tribunal est obligé de le consulter. L'article dit ensuite qu'après consultation, le Tribunal n'est pas tenu de suivre les conseils donnés par le Comité.

Voici ce que nous voulons savoir: nous ne voulons pas qu'il se produise quoi que ce soit qui diminuerait l'indépendance des membres du Tribunal; nous supposons que les membres seront intègres, intelligents, et exerceront un bon jugement. Alors, nous pensons que, comme il existe déjà une disposition à l'article 30, ou plutôt je me trompe, je parle de l'article 26 (2), qui rend ce paragraphe de l'article 30 inutile. Je vous prierais de vous reporter à la dernière phrase du paragraphe (2), à la page 84 du Livre blanc, et qui se lit comme il suit:

...le Tribunal peut obtenir les conseils et l'aide de tout organisme, ministère ou département du gouvernement du Canada.

En d'autres termes, je suis sûr que les membres du Tribunal demanderont tous les conseils dont ils ont besoin des ministères du gouvernement et c'est ce qui arrivera.

Pour autant que je sache, il n'y a pas de disposition semblable à celle de l'article 30 dans la Loi sur le tarif douanier, et la préoperating for almost 38 years. I believe there is ample evidence to indicate that the Board, where they have to in order to come to a decision, can go outside what they gather at public hearings. I noticed in the most recent Tariff Board Reference No. 134, that the Board expressly stated they ascertained information on their own.

[Texte]

Clause 26(2) authorizes the Tribunal to seek assistance from any agency or department of the Government of Canada. That being so we query why it is necessary to have clause 30 at all. As an alternative, although it would be a second best from our point of view, we would suggest that the mandatory verb "shall" be changed to "may". In other words subclause (1) of clause 30 would read:

The Tribunal may ...

...consult the named officials of the Department.

Another provision that has caused the Association some concern relates to clause 33(2), and the introduction of this doctrine, which I think Mr. Grey referred to in his testimony at one point as the doctrine of following the goods, in so far as the levying of an anti-dumping duty is concerned.

• 1135

It is our feeling if we understand this proposed provision correctly, the Minister may, if he does not get the amount of the dumping duty from the importer within 30 days, levy the amount of the dumping duty against those goods even though at that time they are legally the property of some innocent third party purchaser. It is our feeling that this actually will constitute a new non-tariff type of barrier.

In other words we feel it is placing too heavy a responsibility on an innocent third party purchaser. Not only that, it is our view if this becomes part of the law that it will necessitate the Department of National Revenue setting up a new division. We are satisfied that where substantial sums of money are involved no Canadian purchaser would want to assume the responsibility of acquiring those goods if at a later time he is going to be made liable for the dumping duty.

I submit that view is not farfetched because in another branch of the law this has been going on in Ontario for years. Under the Ontario Corporations Tax Act there is a provision whereby the Ontario authorities have a lien right against all property owned by a sente Commission sur le tarif existe depuis près de trente-huit ans. Je pense qu'on a prouvé suffisamment que la Commission, lorsqu'elle doit le faire pour prendre une décision, peut aller chercher des conseils à l'extérieur et peut tenir des audiences publiques. Dans le dernier rapport sur le tarif, au n° 134, la Commission l'a exprimé bien clairement. Elle se renseigne par elle-même.

[Interprétation]

L'article 26 (2) permet au Tribunal de demander de l'aide de tout organisme ou ministère du gouvernement du Canada. Alors, nous voulons savoir pourquoi nous avons l'article 30. Ou encore, —il y a une autre possibilité,—ce serait un deuxième choix par ordre d'importance. Au lieu d'utiliser un verbe qui oblige, on pourrait le changer en remplaçant «doit» par «peut» en d'autres termes, le paragraphe (1) de l'article 30 se lirait comme il suit:

Le Tribunal peut...

...demander l'avis des représentants officiels énumérés.

Il y a une autre disposition aussi qui nous a préoccupés. Il s'agit du paragraphe (2) de l'article 33. C'est l'introduction d'une doctrine dont M. Grey a parlé dans son témoignage, c'est-à-dire la demande d'un droit antidumping à un acheteur subséquent. Nous sommes d'avis, si nous comprenons bien cette disposition, que le ministre, s'il ne reçoit pas la somme des frais de dumping de l'importateur dans les 30 jours, peut prélever la somme des droits de dumping sur ses marchandises, même si à ce moment-là, les marchandises appartiennent légalement à une troisième partie qui est innocente. Nous pensons que cela constituera vraiment une barrière de type non tarifaire.

Par ailleurs, nous croyons que ces responsabilités seront trop lourdes pour une troisième partie qui est innocente, un acheteur innocent, en somme. Alors, si cela fait partie de la loi, le ministère du Revenu national devra créer une nouvelle division. Lorsqu'il y a des sommes d'argent importantes en cause, nous sommes convaincus que nul acheteur canadien ne voudrait acquérir ces marchandises si par la suite on peut le rendre responsable des droits de dumping.

Cette affirmation n'est pas tirée par les cheveux car nous savons que, dans un autre domaine de loi, cela s'est fait en Ontario pendant des années. Selon la Loi de l'impôt des corporations en Ontario, il semble que les autorités provinciales ont un droit de rétentaxpayer including real property. So when a lawyer in Ontario today searches the title to a piece of property, going back 40 years as he is required, and finds that on the title at certain times were joint stock companies subject to Ontario corporations tax, before he is in a position to certify the title to his client, he will write to the Corporations Tax Branch at Queen's Park in Toronto and obtain a certificate or an assurance that the Ontario Corporations Tax Branch are not claiming any lien against the designated piece of property relating to a particular company up to a certain date.

[Text]

I daresay this branch of the Corporations Tax Office must receive over one hundred inquiries a day and from my experience replies are received usually within a week. I submit this is what could easily happen in so far as Canadian customs is concerned. Otherwise, in sizeable purchases who would want to assume the possible risk?

I think, Mr. Chairman, that covers...

The Chairman: Gentlemen, before allowing other comments, as I mentioned earlier, usually members of the delegation make comments. The members of the Committee have received your brief two or three days ahead of time, and they have had time to go through it. However, I will allow a few more remarks.

Mr. A. T. Baylay (Canadian Importers Association): Mr. Corlett, did you perhaps neglect to mention in passing clauses 5 and 6?

The Chairman: Mr. Baylay, I am sure members are familiar with your brief and they will direct questions to you gentlemen. If I permit further remarks there may be duplication or triplication. However, I have no objection if Mr. Corlett wants to make comments on clauses 5 and 6.

Mr. Corlett: I think, perhaps, Mr. Chairman, I have spoken long enough. If there is time available later I am sure the matter will come up at some point.

The Chairman: It is my intention to call the paragraphs. Gentlemen, as you are aware this brief covers different clauses of the White Paper, and I will receive questions on the first part dealing with surtax. This relates to clause 37 on Page 96 of the White Paper.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Chairman, might it not be better to get some tion sur toutes les propriétés qui appartiennent aux contribuables, y compris les biens-fonds. Alors lorsqu'un avocat ontarien demande le titre d'une propriété, qui remonte à 40 ans, s'il se rend compte que sur le titre il y a déjà eu des sociétés conjointes assujetties à l'impôt des corporations, alors, avant de remettre le titre à son client, il doit écrire à Queen's Park, à la Direction de l'impôt et obtenir un certificat ou une assurance établissant que la Direction de l'impôt sur les corporations de l'Ontario ne réclamera aucun droit de rétention relatif à une société particulière après telle ou telle date.

[Interpretation]

Cette direction du Bureau de l'impôt des corporations doit recevoir plus d'une centaine de demandes par jour, j'en suis sûr, et y répond en moins d'une semaine. La même chose pourrait probablement se produire pour les douanes canadiennes. Autrement, pour des achats importants, qui voudrait courir ce risque éventuel?

Monsieur le président, je pense que cela couvre notre mémoire.

Le président: Messieurs, avant d'entendre d'autres commentaires, comme je l'ai dit plus tôt, les représentants des délégations peuvent faire leurs commentaires. Les membres du Comité ont reçu les mémoires il y a quelques jours et ils ont eu le temps de les lire. Toutefois, je permettrai quelques autres observations.

M. Baylay (Association canadienne des importateurs): Par votre entremise, monsieur le président, je voudrais demander à M. Corlett s'il n'a pas oublié de mentionner en passant les articles 5 et 6.

Le président: Monsieur Baylay, je suis sûr que les députés connaissent le mémoire, et ils vont poseront des questions, messieurs. Si je permets d'autres observations, il y aura peut-être des chevauchements. Mais je ne m'oppose pas à ce que vous commentiez les articles 5 et 6.

M. Corlett: Je pense que j'ai parlé assez longtemps. Je suis sûr qu'on soulèvera la question une autre fois.

Le président: J'ai l'intention d'en reparler.

Comme vous le savez, le mémoire est divisé en paragraphes et reprend plusieurs articles du Livre blanc. Donc, j'écouterai vos questions sur le premier point, c'est-à-dire la surtaxe, article 37, que vous retrouvez page 96 du Livre blanc.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Ne serait-il pas mieux d'avoir d'abord les commentaires comments from either Mr. Arthur or Mr. Hind first of all? I think this is the practice you had adopted at the beginning of our meetings.

[Texte]

The Chairman: Yes.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): This leaves the members in a position to judge the two sides of the question, rather than the members becoming advocates one way or another of a particular position.

The Chairman: You are right, Mr. Lambert. However, usually when Mr. Arthur or Mr. Hind have comments to make on statements they so indicate. Have you gentlemen any comments to make on the brief from the Association?

• 1140

Mr. C. D. Arthur (International Economic Relations Division, Department of Finance): Mr. Chairman, I think it would probably be appropriate to deal with the various suggestions made by the Association as they appear in their brief. As you mentioned, the first relates to the surtax, and we have dealt with this at some length in previous hearings.

The only point I would like to make at this time is that this is a carry forward of provisions that now exist in the Customs Act. The reason for this consequential amendment were suggestions by the other signatories to the GATT that the use of dumping duty for this purpose was not in keeping. Therefore the proposal contained in the White Paper is that where previously dumping duty was assessed against injurious non-dump imports in future this will be in the form of a surtax.

The other point I would make, Mr. Chairman, is that under the existing legislation the arbitrary valuation is determined by the Governor in Council and continues to apply without limitation. Under the proposed amendment there are 180 days during which time, or at the end of which time, it can only be continued by an Act of Parliament. I think in part, at least, this does meet the point raised by the Association. Those are the only comments I wish to make on this part of the brief.

The Chairman: Mr. Hind, have you any comments to make on the surtax?

Mr. A. R. Hind (Assistant Deputy Minister, Department of National Revenue (Customs and Excise)): Mr. Chairman, between Mr.

[Interprétation]

de M. Arthur ou de M. Hind? Je pense que c'est la pratique que vous aviez adoptée au début de nos réunions.

Le président: Oui.

M. Lambert (Edmonton-Ouest): Ensuite, les députés peuvent juger de la question. On peut donc juger les deux côtés de la médaille. On ne se fait pas les avocats de la défense ou de la Couronne de cette façon-là.

Le président: Vous avez raison, monsieur Lambert. Si MM. Arthur ou Hind ont des commentaires à faire sur les déclarations, ils le font ordinairement savoir. Messieurs, avez-vous des commentaires à faire sur le mémoire présenté par l'Association canadienne des importateurs?

M. C. D. Arthur (Division des relations économiques internationales, ministère des Finances): Je pense qu'il conviendrait, monsieur le président, d'étudier les différentes suggestions qui viennent d'être faites par l'Association. On en parle dans le mémoire. La première se rattache à la surtaxe. Nous en avons déjà parlé longuement au cours d'autres audiences.

Il n'y a qu'une chose que je voudrais dire maintenant. C'est un report des dispositions qui existent à l'heure actuelle dans la Loi sur les douanes. Cette modification résultante vient des suggestions faites par les autres pays signataires du GATT, voulant que le droit de dumping à cette fin ne se tienne pas avec le reste. Dans la proposition du Livre blanc, on dit que le droit antidumping qui était appliqué auparavant sur les importations préjudiciables ne faisant pas l'objet d'un dumping, sera désormais payé sous forme de surtaxe.

Il y a une autre question que je voudrais faire ressortir, monsieur le président. Conformément à la Loi actuelle, l'évaluation arbitraire des marchandises est déterminée, fixée par le gouverneur en conseil et continue à s'appliquer sans restriction. Conformément à la modification proposée, il y a un délai de 180 jours à la fin duquel la proposition devient sans effet à moins que le Parlement ne l'ait approuvée avant cette date. En partie, cela répond à l'argument de l'Association. C'est tout ce que j'ai à dire pour l'instant.

Le président: Monsieur Hind, avez-vous des commentaires à faire sur la surtaxe?

M. A. R. Hind (Sous-ministre adjoint (Douanes et Accise), ministère du Revenu national): Je pense que M. Corlett et M. Arthur

[Text]

Corlett and Mr. Arthur I believe the situation has been well covered. However, I am prepared to answer any questions that might be asked.

The Chairman: Gentlemen of the Association, have you any comments to make on Mr. Arthur's remarks?

Mr. Corlett: I have only one comment, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate what Mr. Arthur has said, he indicated there was a time limit of 180 days and then unless Parliament approved, the matter would lapse. However, what is in the proposed legislation that would prevent the executive from starting another 180-day period shortly after the expiration of the first?

Mr. Gray: Mr. Chairman, it would seem to me that before they could propose a surtax for another 180-day period the requirements of the statute would have to be complied with.

Mr. Corlett: Yes, Mr. Gray, I well realize that, but the decision on whether or not there is injury in connection with non-dumped goods of necessity would have to originate with the Minister of Finance who recommends to the Governor in Council.

Mr. Gray: If I understood Mr. Arthur correctly, under the present provisions the Order in Council runs indefinitely until it is revoked by the Governor in Council. Surely what is being proposed, if your submission is correct, is an improvement. At the present time the Order in Council runs for an indefinite period unless and until the Governor in Council decides to revoke it. Under the proposed legislation the Order in Council cannot have a life of more than 180 days unless specifically approved by Parliament.

• 1145

The Chairman: Yes, Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Parliament has set up a Committee on Delegated Legislation and I think you will find that this Committee intends to function and the government wants to see it function. Orders in Council of this type would then come under scrutiny by this Parliamentary Committee whereas under the present legislation the Orders in Council are passed and left open-ended as to their termination. I think you could see if one were passed covering a period of 180 days and as you rightfully said under the proposed Bill on the 183rd day another ont couvert la question. Toutefois, je répondrai à vos questions, le cas échéant.

[Interpretation]

Le président: Messieurs de l'Association des importateurs, avez-vous des commentaires à faire sur les observations de M. Arthur?

M. Corlett: Je n'ai qu'un commentaire, monsieur le président. J'apprécie ce que M. Arthur vient de dire. Il a dit qu'il y avait une période limite de 180 jours et ensuite, s'il n'y a pas l'approbation du Parlement, la question sera en suspens. Mais, dans la Loi proposée, on empêche une nouvelle période de 180 jours, après l'expiration de la première.

M. Gray: Monsieur le président, je pense qu'avant d'imposer une surtaxe pour une autre période de 180 jours, les conditions de la Loi devront être remplies.

M. Corlett: Oui, je m'en rends compte. Mais la décision pour savoir s'il y a préjudices au sujet des produits qui ne sont pas du dumping, doit être prise par le ministère des Finances qui fait ses recommandations au gouverneur en conseil.

M. Gray: Selon la loi actuelle, le décret du Conseil continue indéfiniment, à moins que le gouverneur en conseil ne le révoque. Il faut donc qu'il soit révoqué. Si vous avez raison, on veut plutôt vous demander une amélioration de la loi. Dans la loi proposée, le décret ne peut pas durer plus longtemps que 180 jours, à moins d'un ordre contraire du Parlement.

Le président: Monsieur Bald. Oui, Monsieur Lambert?

M. Lambert (Edmonton-ouest): Je voudrais ajouter un mot. Comme le Parlement a mis sur pied ce comité, on verra que le comité a l'intention de fonctionner et que le gouvernement voudra qu'il fonctionne. Alors les décrets du Conseil de ce genre seront étudiés par le comité parlementaire. Selon la Loi actuelle, il y a une porte ouverte. Vous pouvez vous rendre compte que, s'il y a un délai de 180 jours, conformément à la Loi, on peut dire que, le 183<sup>e</sup> jour, on peut recommencer une nouvelle période de 180 jours. Toutefois, il faudrait se justifier devant le comité.

[Texte]

one could be made to carry on for another 180 days, that second one would have to be presented in due course before this Committee with a justification. You would, then, have an examination. However, I will want to discuss this with you later.

Mr. K. Bald (President, Canadian Importers Association): Mr. Chairman, Mr. Gray commented that this was an improvement over the old regulations with which we quite agree, but the fact that it is an improvement does not mean that we should compromise on something which we think is badly stated.

Mr. Gray: Of course, if you got right down to it, you probably are not sympathetic at all to the existence of this kind of a provision.

Mr. Corlett: Mr. Gray, I do not think I would be prepared to go that far nor do I think any of my colleagues would. I would like to state again that in principle Canadian importers will subscribe to this new Anti-Dumping Bill, and therefore, this Association, as such, is in support of what the government is doing.

These points came to our attention as we went through the proposed Bill, but I must be fair about this. If the government, for the sake of argument, said they did not care one bit about what we, the Association, said about surtax, we would not say that we thought it was a bad Bill because, on balance, it is a good Bill.

Mr. Gray: Of course, we should make clear that the clauses with respect to the surtax are really consequential amendments designed to put this aspect of import regulation into the Customs Tariff instead of it being part of the proposed Anti-Dumping Bill because it applies to a somewhat different situation, at least technically, than dumping.

Mr. Corlett: I quite appreciate that. We merely commented on it because it appeared as a clause of the proposed Anti-dumping legislation although, admittedly, it is a consequential amendment.

Mr. Gray: I think it is quite proper for you to give us your views and they are much appreciated.

The Chairman: Gentlemen, both you who are on the delegation as well as the members of the Committee, in order to assist our technicians, when you want to ask a supplementary question would you please raise your hand. They cannot see you when they are downstairs.

[Interprétation]

Il faut qu'il y ait une enquête. J'en reparlerai avec vous plus tard.

M. Bald: Monsieur Gray a dit que c'était une amélioration sur l'ancien règlement. Nous sommes d'accord. Même si c'est une amélioration, cela ne veut pas dire qu'il faut un compromis sur quelque chose qui est déclaré de travers.

M. Gray: Vous n'êtes peut-être pas sympathique à ce genre de dispositions.

